§ 2151.01 Construction; purpose.

The sections in Chapter 2151. of the Revised Code, with the exception of those sections providing for the criminal prosecution of adults, shall be liberally interpreted and construed so as to effectuate the following purposes:

(A) To provide for the care, protection, and mental and physical development of children subject to Chapter 2151. of the Revised Code, whenever possible, in a family environment, separating the child from the child's parents only when necessary for the child's welfare or in the interests of public safety;

(B) To provide judicial procedures through which Chapters 2151. and 2152. of the Revised Code are executed and enforced, and in which the parties are assured of a fair hearing, and their constitutional and other legal rights are recognized and enforced.

HISTORY: 133 v H 320 (Eff 11-19-69); 148 v S 179, § 3. Eff 1-1-2002.

Not analogous to former RC § 2151.01 (GC § 1639-1; 117 v 520; 121 v 557; Bureau of Code Revision, 10-1-53), repealed, 133 v H 320. For an analogous provision to former RC § 2151.01, see now RC § 2151.01.1.

The effective date is set by section 5 of SB 179.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

INDEX

- Generally
Termination of parental rights

Generally

- A juvenile court proceeding is a civil action: In re Anderson, 92 Ohio St. 3d 63, 748 N.E.2d 67, 2001 Ohio 131, (2001).

Termination of parental rights

RC § 2151.419(A)(1) does not apply in a hearing on a motion for permanent custody filed pursuant to RC § 2151.413. However, except for some narrowly defined statutory exceptions, the state must still make reasonable efforts to reunify the family during the child custody proceedings prior to the termination of parental rights. If the agency has not established that reasonable efforts have been made prior to the hearing on a motion for permanent custody, then it must demonstrate such efforts at that time: In re C.F., 113 Ohio St. 3d 73, 862 N.E.2d 816, 2007 Ohio 1104, (2007).

(1) "Juvenile court" means whichever of the following is applicable that has jurisdiction under this chapter and Chapter 2152. of the Revised Code:

(a) The division of the court of common pleas specified in section 2101.022 [2101.02.2] or 2301.03 of the Revised Code as having jurisdiction under this chapter and Chapter 2152. of the Revised Code or as being the juvenile division or the juvenile division combined with one or more other divisions;

(b) The juvenile court of Cuyahoga county or Hamilton county that is separately and independently created by section 2151.08 or Chapter 2153. of the Revised Code and that has jurisdiction under this chapter and Chapter 2152. of the Revised Code;

(c) If division (A)(1)(a) or (b) of this section does not apply, the probate division of the court of common pleas.

(2) "Juvenile judge" means a judge of a court having jurisdiction under this chapter.

(3) "Private child placing agency" means any association, as defined in section 5103.02 of the Revised Code, that is certified under section 5103.03 of the Revised Code to accept temporary, permanent, or legal custody of children and place the children for either foster care or adoption.

(4) "Private noncustodial agency" means any person, organization, association, or society certified by the department of job and family services that does not accept temporary or permanent legal custody of children, that is privately operated in this state, and that does one or more of the following:

(a) Receives and cares for children for two or more consecutive weeks;

(b) Participates in the placement of children in certified foster homes;

(c) Provides adoption services in conjunction with a public children services agency or private child placing agency.

(B) As used in this chapter:

(1) "Adequate parental care" means the provision by a child's parent or parents, guardian, or custodian of adequate food, clothing, and shelter to ensure the child's health and physical safety and the provision by a child's parent or parents of specialized services warranted by the child's physical or mental needs.

(2) "Adult" means an individual who is eighteen years of age or older.

(3) "Agreement for temporary custody" means a voluntary agreement authorized by section 5103.15 of the Revised Code that transfers the temporary custody of a child to a public children services agency or a private child placing agency.

(4) "Certified foster home" means a foster home, as defined in section 5103.02 of the Revised Code, certified under section 5103.03 of the Revised Code.

(5) "Child" means a person who is under eighteen years of age, except that the juvenile court has jurisdiction over any person who is adjudicated an unruly child prior to attaining eighteen years of age until the person attains twenty-one years of age, and, for purposes of that jurisdiction related to that adjudication, a person who is so adjudicated an unruly child shall be deemed a "child" until the person attains twenty-one years of age.

(6) "Child day camp," "child care," "child day-care center," "part-time child day-care center," "type A family day-care home," "certified type B family day-care home," "type B home," "administrator of a child day-care center," "administrator of a type A family day-care home," "in-home aide," and "authorized provider" have the same meanings as in section 5104.01 of the Revised Code.

(7) "Child care provider" means an individual who is a child-care staff member or administrator of a child day-care center, a type A family day-care home, or a type B family day-care home, or an in-home aide or an individual who is licensed, is regulated, is approved, operates under the direction of, or otherwise is certified by the department of job and family services, department of mental retardation and developmental disabilities, or the early childhood programs of the department of education.

(8) "Chronic truant" has the same meaning as in section 2152.02 of the Revised Code.

(9) "Commit" means to vest custody as ordered by the court.

(10) "Counseling" includes both of the following:

(a) General counseling services performed by a public children services agency or shelter for victims of domestic violence to assist a child, a child's parents, and a child's siblings in alleviating identified problems that may cause or have caused the child to be an abused, neglected, or dependent child.

(b) Psychiatric or psychological therapeutic counseling services provided to correct or alleviate any mental or emotional illness or disorder and performed by a licensed psychiatrist, licensed psychologist, or a person licensed under Chapter 4757. of the Revised Code to engage in social work or professional counseling.

(11) "Custodian" means a person who has legal custody of a child or a public children services agency or private child placing agency that has permanent, temporary, or legal custody of a child.

(12) "Delinquent child" has the same meaning as in section 2152.02 of the Revised Code.

(13) "Detention" means the temporary care of children pending court adjudication or disposition, or execution of a court order, in a public or private facility designed to physically restrict the movement and activities of children.

(14) "Developmental disability" has the same meaning as in section 5123.01 of the Revised Code.

(15) "Foster caregiver" has the same meaning as in section 5103.02 of the Revised Code.

(16) "Guardian" means a person, association, or corporation that is granted authority by a probate court pursuant to Chapter 2111. of the Revised Code to exercise parental rights over a child to the extent provided in the court's order and subject to the residual parental rights of the child's parents.

(17) "Habitual truant" means any child of compulsory school age who is absent without legitimate excuse for absence from the public school the child is supposed to attend for five or more consecutive school days, seven or more school days in one school month, or twelve or more school days in a school year.

(18) "Juvenile traffic offender" has the same meaning as in section 2152.02 of the Revised Code.

(19) "Legal custody" means a legal status that vests in the custodian the right to have physical care and control of the child and to determine where and with whom the child shall live, and the right and duty to protect, train, and discipline the child and to provide the child with food, shelter, education, and medical care, all subject to any residual parental rights, privileges, and responsibilities. An individual granted legal custody shall exercise the rights and responsibilities personally unless otherwise authorized by any section of the Revised Code or by the court.

(20) A "legitimate excuse for absence from the public school the child is supposed to attend" includes, but is not limited to, any of the following:

(a) The fact that the child in question has enrolled in and is attending another public or nonpublic school in this or another state;

(b) The fact that the child in question is excused from attendance at school for any of the reasons specified in section 3321.04 of the Revised Code;

(c) The fact that the child in question has received an age and schooling certificate in accordance with section 3331.01 of the Revised Code.

(21) "Mental illness" and "mentally ill person subject to hospitalization by court order" have the same meanings as in section 5122.01 of the Revised Code.

(22) "Mental injury" means any behavioral, cognitive, emotional, or mental disorder in a child caused by an act or omission that is described in section 2919.22 of the Revised Code and is committed by the parent or other person responsible for the child's care.

(23) "Mentally retarded person" has the same meaning as in section 5123.01 of the Revised Code.

(24) "Nonsecure care, supervision, or training" means care, supervision, or training of a child in a facility that does not confine or prevent movement of the child within the facility or from the facility.

(25) "Of compulsory school age" has the same meaning as in section 3321.01 of the Revised Code.

(26) "Organization" means any institution, public, semipublic, or private, and any private association, society, or agency located or operating in the state, incorporated or unincorporated, having among its functions the furnishing of protective services or care for children, or the placement of children in certified foster homes or elsewhere.

(27) "Out-of-home care" means detention facilities, shelter facilities, certified children's crisis care facilities, certified foster homes, placement in a prospective adoptive home prior to the issuance of a final decree of adoption, organizations, certified organizations, child day-care centers, type A family day-care homes, child care provided by type B family day-care home providers and by in-home aides, group home providers, group homes, institutions, state institutions, residential facilities, residential care facilities, residential camps, day camps, public schools, chartered nonpublic schools, educational service centers, hospitals, and medical clinics that are responsible for the care, physical custody, or control of children.

(28) "Out-of-home care child abuse" means any of the following when committed by a person responsible for the care of a child in out-of-home care:

(a) Engaging in sexual activity with a child in the person's care;

(b) Denial to a child, as a means of punishment, of proper or necessary subsistence, education, medical care, or other care necessary for a child's health;

(c) Use of restraint procedures on a child that cause injury or pain;

(d) Administration of prescription drugs or psychotropic medication to the child without the written approval and ongoing supervision of a licensed physician;

(e) Commission of any act, other than by accidental means, that results in any injury to or death of the child in out-of-home care or commission of any act by accidental means that results in an injury to or death of a child in out-of-home care and that is at variance with the history given of the injury or death.

(29) "Out-of-home care child neglect" means any of the following when committed by a person responsible for the care of a child in out-of-home care:

(a) Failure to provide reasonable supervision according to the standards of care appropriate to the age, mental and physical condition, or other special needs of the child;

(b) Failure to provide reasonable supervision according to the standards of care appropriate to the age, mental and physical condition, or other special needs of the child, that results in sexual or physical abuse of the child by any person;

(c) Failure to develop a process for all of the following:

(i) Administration of prescription drugs or psychotropic drugs for the child;

(ii) Assuring that the instructions of the licensed physician who prescribed a drug for the child are followed;

(iii) Reporting to the licensed physician who prescribed the drug all unfavorable or dangerous side effects from the use of the drug.

(d) Failure to provide proper or necessary subsistence, education, medical care, or other individualized care necessary for the health or well-being of the child;

(e) Confinement of the child to a locked room without monitoring by staff;

(f) Failure to provide ongoing security for all prescription and nonprescription medication;

(g) Isolation of a child for a period of time when there is substantial risk that the isolation, if continued, will impair or retard the mental health or physical well-being of the child.

(30) "Permanent custody" means a legal status that vests in a public children services agency or a private child placing agency, all parental rights, duties, and obligations, including the right to consent to adoption, and divests the natural parents or adoptive parents of all parental rights, privileges, and obligations, including all residual rights and obligations.

(31) "Permanent surrender" means the act of the parents or, if a child has only one parent, of the parent of a child, by a voluntary agreement authorized by section 5103.15 of the Revised Code, to transfer the permanent custody of the child to a public children services agency or a private child placing agency.

(32) "Person" means an individual, association, corporation, or partnership and the state or any of its political subdivisions, departments, or agencies.

(33) "Person responsible for a child's care in out-of-home care" means any of the following:

(a) Any foster caregiver, in-home aide, or provider;

(b) Any administrator, employee, or agent of any of the following: a public or private detention facility; shelter facility; certified children's crisis care facility; organization; certified organization; child day-care center; type A family day-care home; certified type B family day-care home; group home; institution; state institution; residential facility; residential care facility; residential camp; day camp; school district; community school; chartered non-public school; educational service center; hospital; or medical clinic;

(c) Any person who supervises or coaches children as part of an extracurricular activity sponsored by a school district, public school, or chartered nonpublic school;

(d) Any other person who performs a similar function with respect to, or has a similar relationship to, children.

(34) "Physically impaired" means having one or more of the following conditions that substantially limit one or more of an individual's major life activities, including self-care, receptive and expressive language, learning, mobility, and self-direction:

(a) A substantial impairment of vision, speech, or hearing;

(b) A congenital orthopedic impairment;

(c) An orthopedic impairment caused by disease, rheumatic fever or any other similar chronic or acute health problem, or amputation or another similar cause.

(35) "Placement for adoption" means the arrangement by a public children services agency or a private child placing agency with a person for the care and adoption by that person of a child of whom the agency has permanent custody.

(36) "Placement in foster care" means the arrangement by a public children services agency or a private child placing agency for the out-of-home care of a child of whom the agency has temporary custody or permanent custody.

(37) "Planned permanent living arrangement" means an order of a juvenile court pursuant to which both of the following apply:

(a) The court gives legal custody of a child to a public children services agency or a private child placing agency without the termination of parental rights.

(b) The order permits the agency to make an appropriate placement of the child and to enter into a written agreement with a foster care provider or with another person or agency with whom the child is placed.

(38) "Practice of social work" and "practice of professional counseling" have the same meanings as in section 4757.01 of the Revised Code.

(39) "Sanction, service, or condition" means a sanction, service, or condition created by court order following an adjudication that a child is an unruly child that is described in division (A)(4) of section 2152.19 of the Revised Code.

(40) "Protective supervision" means an order of disposition pursuant to which the court permits an abused, neglected, dependent, or unruly child to remain in the custody of the child's parents, guardian, or custodian and stay in the child's home, subject to any conditions and limitations upon the child, the child's parents, guardian, or custodian, or any other person that the court prescribes, including supervision as directed by the court for the protection of the child.

(41) "Psychiatrist" has the same meaning as in section 5122.01 of the Revised Code.

(42) "Psychologist" has the same meaning as in section 4732.01 of the Revised Code.

(43) "Residential camp" means a program in which the care, physical custody, or control of children is accepted overnight for recreational or recreational and educational purposes.

(44) "Residential care facility" means an institution, residence, or facility that is licensed by the department of mental health under section 5119.22 of the Revised Code and that provides care for a child.

(45) "Residential facility" means a home or facility that is licensed by the department of mental retardation and developmental disabilities under section 5123.19 of the Revised Code and in which a child with a developmental disability resides.

(46) "Residual parental rights, privileges, and responsibilities" means those rights, privileges, and responsibilities remaining with the natural parent after the transfer of legal custody of the child, including, but not necessarily limited to, the privilege of reasonable visitation, consent to adoption, the privilege to determine the child's religious affiliation, and the responsibility for support.

(47) "School day" means the school day established by the state board of education pursuant to section 3313.48 of the Revised Code.

(48) "School month" and "school year" have the same meanings as in section 3313.62 of the Revised Code.

(49) "Secure correctional facility" means a facility under the direction of the department of youth services that is designed to physically restrict the movement and activities of children and used for the placement of children after adjudication and disposition.

(50) "Sexual activity" has the same meaning as in section 2907.01 of the Revised Code.

(51) "Shelter" means the temporary care of children in physically unrestricted facilities pending court adjudication or disposition.

(52) "Shelter for victims of domestic violence" has the same meaning as in section 3113.33 of the Revised Code.

(53) "Temporary custody" means legal custody of a child who is removed from the child's home, which custody may be terminated at any time at the discretion of the court or, if the legal custody is granted in an agreement for temporary custody, by the person who executed the agreement.

(C) For the purposes of this chapter, a child shall be presumed abandoned when the parents of the child have failed to visit or maintain contact with the child for more than ninety days, regardless of whether the parents resume contact with the child after that period of ninety days.

The provisions of § 7 of 151 v S 238 read as follows:

SECTION 7. Section 2151.011 of the Revised Code is presented in this act as a composite of the section as amended by both Am. Sub. ° ° ° The General Assembly, applying the principle stated in division (B) of section 1.52 of the Revised Code that amendments are to be harmonized if reasonably capable of simultaneous operation, finds that the composites are the resulting version of the sections in effect prior to the effective dates of the sections as presented in this act.

Analagous to former RC § 2151.01.1 (133 v H 320; 138 v H 695; 139 v H 440; 140 v S 210; 141 v H 428; 142 v H 399; 142 v S 89), repealed, 142 v H 403, § 2, eff 1-1-89.

Effect of Amendments

151 v S 238, effective September 21, 2006, in (B)(27), inserted "certified children's crisis care facilities"; inserted (B)(32) and redesignated the remaining subdivisions accordingly; and, in (B)(33)(b), inserted "certified children's crisis care facility".

150 v H 11, effective May 18, 2005, in (B)(6), (7), and (27), substituted "child care" for "child day-care".

150 v H 106, effective September 16, 2004, in (B)(27), inserted "public schools, chartered nonpublic schools, educational service centers"; in (B)(32)(b), inserted "school district; community school; chartered nonpublic school; educational service center"; and inserted (B)(32)(c) and redesignated former (B)(32)(c) as (d).

Publisher's Note:

The amendment of (B)(47) and (48) of RC § 2151.011 by 151 v S 311 was disapproved by the Governor.

Abandoned child

Agency's motion for permanent court commitment under RC § 2151.414 was properly granted as the mother had abandoned the child, as defined in RC § 2151.011(C), in that she had no contact with the child for more than ninety days. The fact that the mother later resumed contact with the child after the period of abandonment was immaterial, and the mother's attempt to justify the abandonment with her contention that she was working on her sobriety was insufficient justification for maintaining no contact with the child. In re D.P., 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1550, 2007 Ohio 1703, (2007).

Situations may exist in which abandonment, for permanent custody determinations can be established without the passage of 90 days. However, before a department of children's services initiates a motion for permanent custody on the grounds of presumed abandonment, 90 days must have passed without visit or contact before such motion can be initiated. In re Scullion Children, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 888, 2007 Ohio 929, (Mar. 2, 2007).

Although the trial court's finding of abandonment was against the manifest weight of the evidence, since 90 days had not passed without visit or contact by the mother before the motion was filed, the determination of permanent custody of the children with the agency did not require reversal because the trial court found an alternate, independent ground for terminating parental rights in that the children could not, or should not, be placed with either parent. In re Scullion Children, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 888, 2007 Ohio 929, (Mar. 2, 2007).

Termination of a father's parental rights was proper on the ground that the father's son had been in the permanent custody of the agency for 12 months out of a consecutive 22-month period. Thus, the fact that the evidence did not support a finding of abandonment under RC § 2151.011(C), in that the caseworker and the foster mother testified that the father made one telephone call to the son during his three-month absence, did not require reversal of the permanent custody order. In re J. N., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2410, 2006 Ohio 2557, (2006).

There was clear and convincing evidence to support the trial court's determination that a father's child was neglected and dependent pursuant to RC §§ 2151.03 and 2151.04, as his evidence did not establish that he had maintained contact with the child or that he had provided support for her, and testimony from multiple other witnesses indicated that he in fact did not provide support and had failed to maintain regular visitation or communication with the child. The child was presumed abandoned under RC § 2151.011(C) where the father failed to maintain contact or visit the child for more than 90 days. In re Miajanigue W, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6271, 2006 Ohio 6295, (2006).

Mother waived her claim that RC § 2151.011(C) was unconstitutional on its face and as applied as she raised the claim for the first time on appeal. In re Maxwell, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 472, 2006 Ohio 527, (2006).

Termination of a mother's parental rights was warranted since the mother had abandoned her daughter under RC § 2151.011(C), in that she failed to maintain contact with her for more than 90 days. In re M. R., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2406, 2006 Ohio 2558, (2006).

Mother had abandoned her children where she failed to visit them for a period lasting over six months. In re Donell F., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3806, 2005 Ohio 4175, (2005).

Because both prongs of the permanent custody test were satisfied, the trial court properly terminated the mother's parental rights and placed the child in the permanent custody of the agency, pursuant to RC § 2151.414. The fact that the mother had not visited the child for more than eight months was sufficient to support a presumptive finding of abandonment, under RC § 2151.011(C), and the evidence demonstrated that the mother kept moving and did not inform the agency of her whereabouts. In re B. C. M., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 1735, 2005 Ohio 1818, (2005).

Trial court's determination that parents' rights in their minor son should be terminated, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(E), was supported by the evidence that the parents continuously and repeatedly failed to substantially remedy the conditions that caused their son to be placed outside of the home, that the parents showed a lack of commitment toward the child, and that the father abandoned him by failing to see him for more than a year and a half, pursuant to RC § 2151.011(C); only one of the factors of RC § 2151.414(E) was necessary for the determination that the child could not and should not be placed with his parents. In re B.L., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 1136, 2005 Ohio 1151, (2005), writ of certiorari denied by 546 U.S. 945, 126 S. Ct. 443, 163 L. Ed. 2d 337, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 7453, 74 U.S.L.W. 3229 (2005).

Trial court properly found that three children were abandoned and could not be placed with their mother within a reasonable time where the mother had not had contact with the children for a nine-month period, which was well beyond the statutory 90-day period, and the mother failed to rebut the presumption of abandonment; the trial court was not required to show that the children were in a child services board's custody for 12 or more months of a consecutive 22-month period. In re Phillips, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3453, 2005 Ohio 3774, (2005).

Children were presumed abandoned as their mother did not attempt to have any contact with them from April 9, 2002 until March 4, 2003. In re Culp, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3469, 2005 Ohio 3764, (2005).

Trial court was within its discretion in finding under RC §§ 2151.011(C) and 2151.414(B)(1)(b) that the child was abandoned due to the lack of visitation during the father's period of incarceration; the father conceded in his brief that he did not have contact with the child for more than 90 days. In re Wright, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 960, 2004 Ohio 1094, (2004).

Trial court did not err in finding that a child was abandoned where the parents had not visited with or sent cards or gifts to the child for the 15 months he had been in the agency's temporary care, where the agency mailed calendars to the parents listing the dates available for visitation, but the parents did not respond and where the father stopped by the agency once during this period and called by telephone three times, but did not inquire or arrange any visits. In re L.D., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 3655, 2004 Ohio 4000, (2004).

As a father failed to visit or communicate with his child for 90 days, and the trial court found that a family services agency did not interfere with his attempts at visitation, the father failed to present any evidence which would rebut the presumption of abandonment, as contained in RC § 2151.011(C); therefore, the trial court properly found he had abandoned the child. In re Cravens, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2109, 2004 Ohio 2356, (2004).

Termination of a mother's parental right was proper where the child was with child services for 12 or more months; the record showed the mother had abandoned the child and the mother's parental rights to a son been previously terminated. In re Cornell, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4504, 2003 Ohio 5007, (2003).

The children were presumptively abandoned where the mother did not visit them for more than ninety days while they were in foster care. Thus the agency was not required to prove that it made sufficient reunification efforts: In re Starkey, 150 Ohio App. 3d 612, 782 N.E.2d 665, 2002 Ohio 6892, (2002).

Adequate parental care

There was insufficient evidence to support a juvenile court's findings that children were neglected or dependent based on an incident where their mother had appeared intoxicated as a chaperone for a school field trip taken by one of the children. The mother had made arrangements for the children to have been cared for by their grandmother, and the appellate court found that the family services department failed to present clear and convincing proof that the children lacked adequate parental care, as there was no showing that either child was ever deprived of adequate food or clothing, the children were never subjected to the mother's sole parental supervision on the day of the field trip, and there was no showing that the mother's problems with substance abuse were such that it deprived her children of adequate or proper parental care. In re C.M., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2041, 2004 Ohio 2294, (2004).

Where a home had no electricity, the children lacked food and/or supervision, and where the mother refused to accept help or follow advice, the children were neglected pursuant to RC §§ 2151.03(A)(2), 2151.011(B)(1), and 2151.05; therefore, the RC § 2151.35(A) determination of neglect was proper. In re Browne Children, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3293, 2003 Ohio 3637, (2003).

Adoption

Where permanent custody had already been granted to an agency, the juvenile court's grant of legal custody to parties who were ineligible to adopt thwarted the children's right to an expeditious adoption: In re Hitchcock, 120 Ohio App. 3d 88, 696 N.E.2d 1090 (1996).

Revised Code § 2151.01.1(B)(12) provides that the grant of permanent custody divests the parents of all rights, including residual rights: In re Palmer, 12 Ohio St. 3d 194, 12 Ohio B. 259, 465 N.E.2d 1312 (1984).

Child, prior law

Under former RC § 2151.01.1, a child could have reached eighteen at the time of disposition, but still be deemed a child: In re Hennessey, 146 Ohio App. 3d 743, 768 N.E.2d 663, 2001 Ohio 2267, (2001).

Child support

Where a divorced and remarried custodial parent leaves a child in the actual custody of the stepparent, the child support obligor may be required to make support payments directly to the stepparent: Palmer v. Harrold, 101 Ohio App. 3d 732, 656 N.E.2d 708 (1995).

Revised Code §§ 2151.01.1 and 2151.36 authorize an order requiring the parents to pay the costs of the child's support up to age twenty-one: In re Hinko, 84 Ohio App. 3d 89, 616 N.E.2d 515 (1992).

County child services board

When a county children services board has temporary care and custody of a child who resides in a residential care facility operated by the board, that board has legal custody of the child and, pursuant to RC § 2151.01.1(B)(9), has the right and duty to provide the child with education, subject to any residual parental rights, privileges, and responsibilities; the board cannot, however, select for the child a school district other than the district in which the residential care facility is located: OAG No. 94-070 (1994).

Criminal law time for trial

The time limits provided in RC § 2945.71 et seq. do not apply to juvenile court proceedings: In re Washburn, 70 Ohio App. 3d 178, 590 N.E.2d 855 (1990).

Custody award to nonparent

Trial court's grant of legal custody pursuant to RC § 2151.011(B)(19) to grandparents was supported by the evidence and was in the best interests of the parents' children, as the children were flourishing and happy while living with their grandparents and the parents had failed to make progress in their reunification plans. In re Hill Children, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1574, 2007 Ohio 1727, (Apr. 11, 2007).

Award of legal custody of a child does not divest parents of their residual parental rights, privileges, and responsibilities. Juvenile court adjudication of abuse, neglect, or dependency is a determination about the care and condition of a child and implicitly involves a determination of the unsuitability of the child's custodial and/or noncustodial parents. When a juvenile court adjudicates a child to be abused, neglected, or dependent, it has no duty to make a separate finding at the dispositional hearing that a noncustodial parent is unsuitable before awarding legal custody to a nonparent: In re C.R., 108 Ohio St. 3d 369, 843 N.E.2d 1188, 2006 Ohio 1191, (2006).

Award of legal custody to the maternal grandparents did not divest the mother of her residual parental rights. The evidence supported the court's finding that awarding custody to the mother would be detrimental to the children: In re Sean T., 164 Ohio App. 3d 218 (2005).

Awarding custody of the child to the grandmother was proper because both parents were low-functioning and the mother had anger control problems and lacked parenting skills. In re Haywood, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3217, 2003 Ohio 3518, (2003).

Where a child's best interests under R.C. § 2151.42 were served by granting legal custody under R.C. § 2151.011(B)(19) to the child's relatives due to the mother's mental and/or physical condition pursuant to R.C. § 2151.04(B), the mother's unsuitability was implicit and a separate finding was not required; reasonable efforts to promote a reunification plan were made. In re Reeher, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3152, 2003 Ohio 3470, (2003).

Detention

The breaking of detention as prohibited by RC § 2921.34(A) is the termination of the status of being in legal custody, either with or without the use of force, and when it is done purposely the offense of escape has been committed. For purposes of RC § 2921.34, the controlling definition of "detention" is found in RC § 2921.01(E) not RC § 2151.01.1(R)(3). "Probation" or "protective supervision" includes legal custody: State v. Smith, 29 Ohio App. 3d 194, 29 Ohio B. 237, 504 N.E.2d 1121 (1985).

Foster home, parents

Juvenile court's decision to award permanent legal custody of a nephew to his foster parents was not against the weight of the evidence, even though his aunt and uncle (relatives) sought placement of him the day that he was removed from his parents and would provide a caring, suitable home, as the nephew had a strong bond with his foster parents who had cared for him since he was 10 weeks old; the relatives had spent 18 hours with the nephew and a transition to their family could not reasonably be achieved without potentially serious emotional harm to the nephew. In re Halstead, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 902, 2005 Ohio 403, (2004).

A foster home is not an educational facility within the meaning of RC § 2151.35.7, and the section has no application to a foster home: OAG No. 70-166 (1970).

Jurisdiction

Juvenile court's subject matter jurisdiction in a juvenile delinquency case was established under RC §§ 2151.23(A)(1), 2151.011(B)(5), and 2152.02(F)(1) because the complaint alleged appellant was a delinquent child. In re C.W., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3579, 2005 Ohio 3905, (2005).

Once defendant was properly bound over, the court of common pleas had jurisdiction over the proceedings against defendant; moreover, following the bindover, defendant was no longer a "child" within the meaning of the statutes conferring jurisdiction on the juvenile court over cases involving children, former RC §§ 2151.23(A) and 2151.011(B)(5)(e). State v. Burrell, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 50, 2005 Ohio 34, (2005).

Where the 1997 amendments to RC §§ 2151.23(I) and 2151.011 made defendant's age upon apprehension the touchstone for determining jurisdiction, there were no constitutional violations in trying defendant as an adult for an offense committed while defendant was a juvenile. State v. Schaar, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1459, 2004 Ohio 1631, (2004).

A juvenile court retains jurisdiction over a person who was under the age of eighteen years at the time that he allegedly committed delinquency offenses, and over the age of twenty-one years before the adjudicatory and dispositional hearings were conducted on the delinquency complaints: In re J.B., 71 Ohio Misc. 2d 63, 654 N.E.2d 216 (CP 1995).

A juvenile court does not have jurisdiction over a delinquency complaint where the alleged offender has reached the age of 21 before the charge was brought and the acts occurred before the offender reached 15: In re C., 61 Ohio Misc. 2d 610, 580 N.E.2d 1182 (CP 1991).

Revised Code § 2151.01.1(B)(1) provides for a statutory definition of a "child" which includes any person who violates any law whether federal, state or municipal ordinance prior to attaining eighteen years of age irrespective of his age at the time the complaint is filed or hearing had thereon: In re Cox, 36 Ohio App. 2d 65, 65 Ohio Op. 2d 51, 301 N.E.2d 907 (1973).

Where a child, as defined by RC § 2151.01.1(B)(1), who has been adjudicated a delinquent, leaves the jurisdiction of the juvenile court so that such court can not dispose of his case until he is over twenty-one years of age, he is an adult within the meaning of RC § 2151.01.1: In re Cox, 36 Ohio App. 2d 65, 65 Ohio Op. 2d 51, 301 N.E.2d 907 (1973).

A child of kindergarten age is included within the meaning of the word "child" as it is used in RC § 2151.35.7: OAG No. 72-099 (1972).

Permanent custody

The meaning of the term "permanent custody" as used in RC § 2151.16(B) is the same as defined in RC § 2151.01.1(B)(12)

(now (30)), and thus legal transfer of permanent custody of a child to a board or county department that has assumed the administration of child welfare is contingent upon consent to the transfer by the Juvenile Court: Angle v. Children's Services Div., 63 Ohio St. 2d 227, 17 Ohio Op. 3d 140, 407 N.E.2d 524 (1980).

When a court places an abused, neglected or dependent child in the permanent custody of a children's services board thereby divesting the natural parents of all parental rights and privileges, the board has no duty to involve the natural parents in decisions concerning the provision or assistance in the acquisition of family planning information or contraceptive devices for the child: OAG No. 83-088 (1983).

School district

For purposes of RC § 3313.64, "legal or permanent custody" may be established by a court order, or by evidence of the transfer of temporary custody without a court order in accordance with RC § 5103.15. The temporary placement of a child with persons related by blood or marriage in accordance with RC § 5103.16(A) does not affect the legal custody of the child for purposes of RC § 3313.64(B)(2)(a). A notarized statement that is prepared by the court-designated custodial parent and purports to grant temporary custody of a child to a relative is not an "agreement for temporary custody," as that term is defined in RC § 2151.01.1(B)(17), and does not operate to transfer legal custody for purposes of RC § 3313.64(B)(2)(a). (1994 OAG No. 94-033 (syllabus, paragraph 2), overruled in part): OAG No. 95-032 (1995).

Temporary custody

When, after children were removed from the custody of their mother, who had been their residential parent, and placed with their fathers, an agency retained temporary legal custody of the children, the statutory framework pursuant to which this occurred did not violate the fathers' rights to substantive due process because (1) the fathers were not permanently divested of the right to raise the children, so the standard applicable to an award of permanent custody, under RC § 2151.011(B)(30), did not apply to this award of temporary custody, under RC § 2151.011(B)(19), (2) the state had a compelling interest in removing abused, neglected, and dependent children from their homes, and (3) the procedure employed to determine the temporary custody of these children was narrowly tailored to serve that interest. In re B. C., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3197, 2006 Ohio 3286, (2006).

Zoning

Pursuant to RC § 2151.41.8, a home that constitutes a "foster home" or "family foster home," as those terms are defined in RC § 2151.01.1(B), is a permitted use in all zoning districts in which residential uses are permitted, and no township zoning regulation may require a conditional permit or any other special exception certification for any such home: OAG No. 96-009 (1996).

This section concerned delinquent child defined.

The effective date is set by section 5 of SB 179.

[§ 2151.02.1] § 2151.021 Repealed, 148 v S 179, § 4 [127 v 547; 133 v H 320; 139 v H 707]. Eff 1-1-2002.

This section concerned juvenile traffic offender defined.

[§ 2151.02.2] § 2151.022 Unruly child defined.

As used in this chapter, "unruly child" includes any of the following:

(A) Any child who does not submit to the reasonable control of the child's parents, teachers, guardian, or custodian, by reason of being wayward or habitually disobedient;

(B) Any child who is an habitual truant from school and who previously has not been adjudicated an unruly child for being an habitual truant;

(C) Any child who behaves in a manner as to injure or endanger the child's own health or morals or the health or morals of others;

(D) Any child who violates a law, other than division (C) of section 2907.39, division (A) of section 2923.211 [2923.21.1], division (C)(1) or (D) of section 2925.55, or section 2151.87 of the Revised Code, that is applicable only to a child.

HISTORY: 133 v H 320 (Eff 11-19-69); 146 v H 4 (Eff 11-9-95); 148 v S 181 (Eff 9-4-2000); 148 v S 218 (Eff 3-15-2001); 148 v S 179, § 3. Eff 1-1-2002; 151 v S 53, § 1, eff. 5-17-06; 151 v H 23, § 1, eff. 8-17-06.

The provisions of § 4 of 151 v H 23 read as follows:

SECTION 4. Section 303.02 of the Revised Code is presented in this act as a composite of the section as amended by both Sub. H.B. 411 and Am. Sub. S.B. 18 of the 125th General Assembly. Section 519.02 of the Revised Code is presented in this act as a composite of the section as amended by both Sub. H.B. 411 and Am. Sub. S.B. 18 of the 125th General Assembly. Section 2151.022 of the Revised Code is presented in this act as a composite of the section as amended by both Am. Sub. S.B. 179 and Sub. S.B. 218 of the 123rd General Assembly. The General Assembly, applying the principle stated in division (B) of section 1.52 of the Revised Code that amendments are to be harmonized if reasonably capable of simultaneous operation, finds that the composite is the resulting version of the section in effect prior to the effective date of the section as presented in this act.

The provisions of § 3 of 151 v S 53 read as follows:

SECTION 3. Section 2151.022 of the Revised Code is presented in this act as a composite of the section as amended by both Am. Sub. S.B. 179 and Sub. S.B. 218 of the 123rd General Assembly. The General Assembly, applying the principle stated in division (B) of section 1.52 of the Revised Code that amendments are to be harmonized if reasonably capable of simultaneous operation, finds that the composite is the resulting version of the section in effect prior to the effective date of the section as presented in this act.

The effective date is set by section 5 of SB 179.

Effect of Amendments

151 v H 23, effective August 17, 2006, in (D), inserted "division (C) of section 2907.39".

151 v S 53, effective May 17, 2006, in (D), inserted "division (C)(1) or (D) of section 2925.55".

Comment, Legislative Service Commission

Section 2151.022 of the Revised Code is amended by Am. Sub. H.B. 23 and Am. Sub. S.B. 53 of the 126th General Assembly. Comparison of these amendments in pursuance of section 1.52 of the Revised Code discloses that they are not irreconcilable so that they are required by that section to be harmonized to give effect to each amendment.

Sections * * * and 2151.36 of the Revised Code are amended by this act [Am. Sub. S.B. 179] and also by Am. Sub. S.B. 180, both of the 123rd General Assembly. Sections 2151.022, 2151.27, and 2151.28 of the Revised Code are amended by this act [Am. Sub. S.B. 179] and also by Sub. S.B. 218, both of the 123rd General Assembly. Section 2151.35 (versions effective April 9, 2001 and January 1, 2002) of the Revised Code is amended by this act [Am. Sub. S.B. 179] and also by Sub. S.B. 218, both of the 123rd General Assembly. Section 2151.141 of the Revised Code is amended by this act [Am. Sub. S.B. 179] and also by Sub. H.B. 412, both of the 123rd General Assembly. Section 2151.23 (effective January 1, 2001) of the Revised Code is amended by this act [Am. Sub. S.B. 179] and also by Am. Sub. S.B. 180 and

Sub. S.B. 218, all of the 123rd General Assembly. * * * Comparison of these amendments in pursuance of section 1.52 of the Revised Code discloses that they are not irreconcilable so that they are required by that section to be harmonized to give effect to each amendment.

Constitutionality

Revised Code §§ 2151.02.2 and 2919.24 are not unconstitutional vague or overbroad: In re Popovich, 1993 Ohio App. LEXIS 498 (7th Dist. 1993).

Generally

The definition of unruly child does not include a teenager who engages in one isolated act of premarital sex, denied harm, and acknowledged consent: In re Preston, 1993 Ohio App. LEXIS 272 (5th Dist. 1993).

The court abused its discretion by amending a complaint charging a violation of RC § 4301.63.2 at the end of trial and finding the juvenile to be "unruly" instead. A juvenile's mere presence at a party where other juveniles are consuming alcohol is not proof of unruliness: State v. Aller, 82 Ohio App. 3d 9, 610 N.E.2d 1170 (1992).

Strip poker, at least to the extent of a player being required to strip naked, is an unruly activity among three children aged fourteen to sixteen: State v. Ellis, 64 Ohio App. 3d 158, 580 N.E.2d 1112 (1989).

Although a sixteen-year-old boy having carnal knowledge of a female under sixteen years of age cannot be held delinquent for violating former RC § 2905.03, since the statute specifically identifies the class of persons who are criminally liable for statutory rape as being eighteen years of age or over, the court may find said juvenile to be an unruly boy by "deporting himself so as to injure or endanger the health or morals of himself or others": In re J. P., 32 Ohio Misc. 5, 61 Ohio Op. 2d 24, 287 N.E.2d 926 (CP 1972).

Children services agencies

A county children services agency to which an unruly child is committed has no right of appeal because it is not a "party" to the proceeding, as defined in JuvR 2(16): In re Blakey, 65 Ohio App. 3d 341, 583 N.E.2d 1343 (1989).

Contributing to unruliness

Evidence was sufficient to support defendant's conviction of contributing to the unruliness of a child, including the required mental state of recklessness, where: (1) defendant made sexual contact with the minor female child, (2) he observed her enter the living room, (3) when he awoke from sleeping in a chair, he lay down next to the couch, (4) before long, he approached the female on the couch and engaged in sexual contact with her for 15 to 20 minutes, and (5) voluntary intoxication was not a defense. State v. Fusillo, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 5635, 2005 Ohio 6289, (Nov. 25, 2005).

Delinquency charge

Where a juvenile was charged with delinquency, the court did not err by finding that unruliness was a lesser included offense and then amending the complaint accordingly: In re Felton, 124 Ohio App. 3d 500, 706 N.E.2d 809 (1997).

Dismissal of complaint

In a father's action alleging that his daughter was an unruly child under RC § 2151.022, the juvenile court's dismissal of the complaint on the ground that it was improvidently filed, in that the complaint was filed as the result of pending litigation between the father and the mother regarding a change of custody of the daughter, was an exercise of the juvenile court's discretion under Ohio R. Juv. P. 9(A) to decide whether to commence juvenile court proceedings. In re Brant, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 5889, 2005 Ohio 6577, (Dec. 9, 2005).

Runaway juveniles

In accordance with RC § 5119.64, et seq., juvenile runaways who are apprehended by law enforcement officials may not be placed in juvenile detention facilities even though suitable shelter is unavailable. However, if such a youth is determined to be a delinquent child as defined in RC § 2151.02, an unruly child as defined in RC § 2151.02.2, or a juvenile traffic offender as defined in RC § 2151.02.1, he may be processed through the juvenile justice system and placed in a juvenile detention facility. A law enforcement official may hold a runaway juvenile against his will, provided his detention or care is required to protect the person or property of others or those of the child, or because the child may abscond or be removed from the jurisdiction of the court, or because he has no parents, guardian or custodian or other person able to provide supervision and care for him: OAG No. 77-063 (1977).

(A) As used in this chapter, "neglected child" includes any child:

- (1) Who is abandoned by the child's parents, guardian, or custodian;
- (2) Who lacks adequate parental care because of the faults or habits of the child's parents, guardian, or custodian;
- (3) Whose parents, guardian, or custodian neglects the child or refuses to provide proper or necessary subsistence, education, medical or surgical care or treatment, or other care necessary for the child's health, morals, or well being;
- (4) Whose parents, guardian, or custodian neglects the child or refuses to provide the special care made necessary by the child's mental condition;
- (5) Whose parents, legal guardian, or custodian have placed or attempted to place the child in violation of sections 5103.16 and 5103.17 of the Revised Code;
- (6) Who, because of the omission of the child's parents, guardian, or custodian, suffers physical or mental injury that harms or threatens to harm the child's health or welfare;
- (7) Who is subjected to out-of-home care child neglect.

(B) Nothing in this chapter shall be construed as subjecting a parent, guardian, or custodian of a child to criminal liability when, solely in the practice of religious beliefs, the parent, guardian, or custodian fails to provide adequate medical or surgical care or treatment for the child. This division does not abrogate or limit any person's responsibility under section 2151.421 [2151.42.1] of the Revised Code to report child abuse that is known or reasonably suspected or believed to have occurred, child neglect that is known or reasonably suspected or believed to have occurred, and children who are known to face or are reasonably suspected or believed to be facing a threat of suffering abuse or neglect and does not preclude any exercise of the authority of the state, any political subdivision, or any court to ensure that medical or surgical care or treatment is provided to a child when the child's health requires the provision of medical or surgical care or treatment.

Constitutionality

Children, through their father, had standing to challenge the constitutionality of the spiritual/religious exemption of RC § 2919.22 where the threatened injury was real (several children had already died who were denied appropriate medical care due to their parent's religious beliefs), that absent the exemption the statute would protect them, and the threatened injury would cease if the statute were found unconstitutional: Children's Healthcare is a Legal Duty v. Deters, 894 F. Supp. 1129 (1995).

The Eleventh Amendment does not bar a suit to have RC § 2919.22 found unconstitutional because the suit sought to prospective declaratory relief: Children's Healthcare is a Legal Duty v. Deters, 894 F. Supp. 1129 (1995).

Generally

Where a home had no electricity, the children lacked food and/or supervision, and where the mother refused to accept help or follow advice, the children were neglected pursuant to RC §§ 2151.03(A)(2), 2151.011(B)(1), and 2151.05; therefore, the RC § 2151.35(A) determination of neglect was proper. In re Browne Children, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3293, 2003 Ohio 3637, (2003).

Trial court's neglect finding was affirmed, where the mother was at fault for failing to provide an adequate and sanitary home and food for the child, she failed to comply with medical orders and recommendations concerning the child's hip dislocation, neither the child's mother or grandmother did anything to remedy the lack of care the child received but instead was resistant to the services offered, the child was underweight and failed to thrive, and once the child was removed from the home and placed into foster care, the child immediately began to gain weight and thrive. In re Goff, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 1663, 2003 Ohio 1744, (2003).

In actions brought pursuant to RC §§ 2151.27 and 2151.03, the state's primary objective is not to decide conflicting claims to custody; its objective is to determine if a child is receiving proper parental care, and if that care is being provided by a relative pursuant to an agreement initiated by the child's parent, then the child is not a neglected child: In re Reese, 4 Ohio App. 3d 59, 4 Ohio B. 109, 446 N.E.2d 482 (1982).

Unlike a finding of neglect under RC § 2151.03, which requires proof that the parents were willfully at fault in abandoning or neglecting the children or refusing to perform their parental duties, a finding of dependency under RC § 2151.04 must be grounded on whether the children are receiving proper care and support. The focus is on the condition of the children, not the fault of the parents: In re Bibb, 70 Ohio App. 2d 117, 24 Ohio Op. 3d 159, 435 N.E.2d 96 (1980).

The crux of a neglect action is the commission of culpable acts by the parents of the child: In re Infant East, 32 Ohio Misc. 65, 61 Ohio Op. 2d 38, 288 N.E.2d 343 (CP 1972).

Before the court may consider what disposition should be made of children for their best interest and welfare, there must first be an adjudication that said children are neglected or dependent: In re Burkhart, 15 Ohio Misc. 170, 44 Ohio Op. 2d 329, 239 N.E.2d 772 (JC 1968).

In determining whether the condition or environment of a child is such as to warrant the state, in the interests of the child, in assuming his guardianship, the primary consideration should be the welfare of the child: In re Douglas, 82 Ohio L. Ab. 170, 11 Ohio Op. 2d 340, 164 N.E.2d 475 (JC 1959).

To constitute "abandonment" of a child, under subdivision (A) of this section, there must be a willful leaving of a child by his parent, with an intention of causing perpetual separation; and to constitute "neglect," under subdivision (C) of said section, there must be a willful or indifferent disregard of the duty owed by a parent to his child: In re Kronjaeger, 166 Ohio St. 172, 1 Ohio Op. 2d 459, 140 N.E.2d 773 (1957).

The determination of the lack of proper parental care because of the faults or habits of a parent as a basis for a finding that a child is neglected under subdivision (B) of this section, must be made as of the time of the hearing on the charge of neglect: In re Kronjaeger, 166 Ohio St. 172, 1 Ohio Op. 2d 459, 140 N.E.2d 773 (1957).

Under the provisions of GC § 1639-3 (RC § 2151.03), a "neglected child" is a child "who lacks proper parental care by reason of the faults or habits of its parents," and, under the provisions of GC § 1639-4 (RC § 2151.04), a "dependent child" is a child "whose condition or environment is such as to warrant the state, in the interests of the child, in assuming its guardianship": State v. Griffin, 93 Ohio App. 299, 51 Ohio Op. 47, 106 N.E.2d 668 (1952).

Abandonment

The mere placing of minor children in a children's home by a parent does not, of itself, constitute evidence of relinquishment of the right to custody or abandonment of such minor children: Gallagher v. Gallagher, 115 Ohio App. 453, 21 Ohio Op. 2d 74, 185 N.E.2d 571 (1962).

Adoption, placement for

The fact that the mother initially gave up her child for the purpose of adoption does not constitute such rejection of the child as to warrant a finding that the child is a neglected child: In re Robert O., 95 Ohio L. Ab. 101, 28 Ohio Op. 2d 165, 199 N.E.2d 765 (JC 1964).

Where the evidence shows that the mother gave her illegitimate child good care while he was with her prior to his placement in the prospective adoption home, and that the placement was prompted by considerations other than the mother's desire to be relieved of the child's care, the child is not a neglected child: In re Robert O., 95 Ohio L. Ab. 101, 28 Ohio Op. 2d 165, 199 N.E.2d 765 (JC 1964).

Appeal

An order of the juvenile court made pursuant to a finding that children are "neglected" children within the meaning of this section, and committing said children to the permanent custody of a child welfare board for the purpose of placing them for adoption is a final appealable order under OConst art IV, § 6: In re Masters, 165 Ohio St. 503, 60 Ohio Op. 474, 137 N.E.2d 752 (1956).

Burden of proof

Findings of neglect and dependency were not supported by clear and convincing evidence. The testimony concerning domestic violence between the parents was conflicting: In re Alexander C., 164 Ohio App. 3d 540, 843 N.E.2d 211, 2005 Ohio 6134, (2005).

The burden of persuasion on a county children services board in a "neglected child" proceeding pursuant to RC § 2151.03(B) is to show by clear and convincing evidence that the child is neglected. If the county children services board fails to meet that burden, the complaint must be dismissed: In re Wall, 60 Ohio App. 3d 6, 572 N.E.2d 248 (1989).

Confinement of parent

Evidence of the confinement of a mother of minor children in a state hospital by reason of mental illness, during which confinement she had no funds with which to support the children and during which she was unaware of their whereabouts, is not sufficient evidence to support a finding by the juvenile court that such children are "neglected" within the meaning of this section: In re Masters, 165 Ohio St. 503, 60 Ohio Op. 474, 137 N.E.2d 752 (1956).

Dismissal of complaint

Trial court properly dismissed a husband's complaint, pursuant to Ohio R. Civ. P. 12, alleging neglect and dependency on behalf of his children because the complaint alleged prospective and conclusory allegations, which were insufficient to support a claim under RC § 2151.27; it was noted that a claim that the children were not performing at appropriate age levels did not fall within the definition of dependency, pursuant to RC § 2151.04, neglect, pursuant to RC § 2151.03, or abuse, pursuant to RC § 2151.031. Louck v. Louck, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5328, 2003 Ohio 5999, (2003).

Evidence insufficient

There was insufficient evidence to support a juvenile court's findings that children were neglected or dependent based on an incident where their mother had appeared intoxicated as a chaperone for a school field trip taken by one of the children. The mother had made arrangements for the children to have been cared for by their grandmother, and the appellate court found that the family services department failed to present clear and convincing proof that the children lacked adequate parental care, as there was no showing that either child was ever deprived of adequate food or clothing, the children were never subjected to the mother's sole parental supervision on the day of the field trip, and there was no showing that the mother's problems with substance abuse were such that it deprived her children of adequate or proper parental care. In re C.M., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2041, 2004 Ohio 2294, (2004).

Evidence sufficient

Neglect finding was supported by sufficient evidence as it was premised on a lack of parental supervision appropriate for infants and toddlers, as observed by hospital and agency personnel over a period of five to six weeks. The parents seemed unable to recognize the problem, which indicated that, without intervention, the problem was likely to continue. In re Corey, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1837, 2006 Ohio 2013, (2006).

There was clear and convincing evidence to support the trial court's determination that a father's child was neglected and dependent pursuant to RC §§ 2151.03 and 2151.04, as his evidence did not establish that he had maintained contact with the child or that he had provided support for her, and testimony from multiple other witnesses indicated that he in fact did not provide support and had failed to maintain regular visitation or communication with the child. The child was presumed abandoned under RC § 2151.011(C) where the father failed to maintain contact or visit the child for more than 90 days. In re Miajanique W, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6271, 2006 Ohio 6295, (2006).

Trial court's finding that children were neglected, pursuant to RC § 2151.03(A)(2), and dependent, pursuant to RC § 2151.04(C), was supported by clear and convincing evidence and was not against the manifest weight of the evidence by virtue of the testimony of the patrons and employees of a library, along with the testimony of a neighbor and a police officer regarding the discipline of the mother's four minor children. In re Lloyd, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2272, 2005 Ohio 2379, (2005).

Evidence supported the finding that the children were neglected, as defined by RC § 2151.03, because there was testimony that the father provided no support and refused to participate in services, the mother lacked adequate parenting skills, and the mother insisted on continuing in a physically abusive relationship. In re Malaya H., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 6309, 2005 Ohio 7010, (2005).

Evidence that the residence in which the subject children lived had a strong odor of urine and feces, that several piles of animal feces were observed on the floor of the residence, and that the fathers of two of the children provided clear and convincing evidence that the children were neglected, under RC § 2151.03(A)(2). In re Lloyd, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2273, 2005 Ohio 2380, (2005).

Finding under RC § 2151.414(E)(3), that the mother committed abuse as described in RC § 2151.03, was supported by clear and convincing evidence because, after one of her 11-month-old twins had been abused by violent shaking, the mother did not seek medical help for the children until the agency intervened and because the child had suffered previous physical abuse. In re Mark B., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 1209, 2005 Ohio 1220, (2005).

Record contained sufficient, competent and credible evidence to demonstrate the mother's children were left in the care of an unsuitable babysitter, which resulted in her two-year-old daughter wandering naked through the streets and her six week old son not receiving his medication. That was sufficient to permit the trial court to conclude the children were neglected. In re Bierley, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 301, 2005 Ohio 331, (2005).

The children were clearly "neglected" where they and their home were continually filthy and they lacked appropriate supervision: In re Meyer, 98 Ohio App. 3d 189, 648 N.E.2d 52 (1994).

Jurisdiction

Where a neglected-child proceeding is instituted in the juvenile court, pursuant to this section by a parent of such child, and a divorce action is later instituted by such parent, the juvenile court has exclusive original jurisdiction to determine whether the child is neglected, the power to determine his custody and the authority to place the child with a relative: In re Small, 114 Ohio App. 248, 19 Ohio Op. 2d 128, 181 N.E.2d 503 (1960).

Lack of adequate care

Revised Code § 2151.03(A)(2) requires some showing that parents, a guardian or a custodian is at fault before a finding of a lack of adequate care can be made: In re Riddle, 79 Ohio St. 3d 259, 680 N.E.2d 1227, 1997 Ohio 391, (1997).

Leaving children basically unattended with a loaded, unsecured gun is sufficient to support a finding of neglect and dependency: Skeen v. Gullett, 1994 Ohio App. LEXIS 2746 (1994).

Lack of proper parental care

In a proceeding in the juvenile court, instituted by the filing of a complaint under the provisions of RC § 2151.27, a finding by the court that a child is "neglected," in that it "lacked proper parental care because of the faults and habits of his parents" (RC § 2151.03[B]), and "dependent," in that its "condition and environment... is such as to warrant the court... in assuming his guardianship" (RC § 2151.04[C]), must be based on evidence with respect to whether the child was receiving proper parental care in a proper environment in its home at the time of the hearing: In re Minton, 112 Ohio App. 361, 16 Ohio Op. 2d 283, 176 N.E.2d 252 (1960).

Every child is entitled, as a minimum, to have two parents living together in reasonable harmony with the child and with each other, and parents who are selfish and childish far beyond any reasonable limits, and whose ideas of proper upbringing are to tell their children how vile the other parent has been, are "neglecting" or refusing to provide the children with the care necessary for their morals or well-being: In re Douglas, 82 Ohio L. Ab. 170, 11 Ohio Op. 2d 340, 164 N.E.2d 475 (JC 1959).

Dependency and neglect action was rendered moot when the child died: In re L.W., 168 Ohio App. 3d 613, 861 N.E.2d 546, 2006 Ohio 644, (2006).

Neglect caused by third party

Because infant plaintiffs were not denied their right to "necessary subsistence" by department store's ban on breast-feeding in public areas, store did not cause them to become neglected children: Derungs v. Wal-Mart Stores, 162 F. Supp. 2d 861 (2001).

Neglect per se

It constitutes neglect per se to allow a six-year-old child to be left alone for two entire days per week on a regular basis and to be regularly left at other times under the supervision of an eight-year-old sibling: In re Zeiser, 133 Ohio App. 3d 338, 728 N.E.2d 10 (1999).

Parent's relationship with another adult

A child is not necessarily neglected or dependent merely because the child's mother lives with a man who is not her legal spouse. In the absence of evidence showing a detrimental impact upon the child, the relationship does not warrant the state in removing the child from parental custody in the best interest of that child: In re Burrell, 58 Ohio St. 2d 37, 12 Ohio Op. 3d 43, 388 N.E.2d 738 (1979).

Pleadings

An allegation in a motion filed in juvenile court seeking to have that court “determine and award the future care and custody” of a child, that “neither parent is a suitable person to have the care and custody of said child,” does not constitute a charge that such child is “neglected” (RC § 2151.03) or “dependent” (RC § 2151.04) and is not sufficiently definite to constitute the “complaint” necessitated by RC § 2151.27: Welfare Board v. Parker, 7 Ohio App. 2d 79, 36 Ohio Op. 2d 162, 218 N.E.2d 757 (1964).

Prosecution for contributing to neglect

In a prosecution for contributing to the neglect or dependency of a minor child, the record of a separate proceeding adjudicating the child to be a neglected and dependent child, and the testimony of the child’s mother that she and the defendant engaged in acts of illicit sexual relations in the presence of the child, is sufficient competent evidence to prove the child to be a neglected or dependent child within the meaning of GC § 1639-45 (now RC §§ 2151.03 and 2151.04): State v. Griffin, 93 Ohio App. 299, 51 Ohio Op. 47, 106 N.E.2d 668 (1952).

Race

The interracial marriage of the mother of an illegitimate child to a black man in no way affects her right to custody of the child and does not support the putative father’s neglect complaint brought under RC § 2151.03: In re Brenda H., 37 Ohio Misc. 123, 66 Ohio Op. 2d 178, 305 N.E.2d 815 (CP 1973).

Stale evidence

Where neglect and dependency existed at the time of the filing of the complaint, but said cause was not prosecuted further until more than four years afterwards and the conditions of the parents had changed sufficiently that evidence was lacking to establish neglect or dependency at the time of the hearing, said complaint must be dismissed: In re Burkhart, 15 Ohio Misc. 170, 44 Ohio Op. 2d 329, 239 N.E.2d 772 (JC 1968).

Stepparents

Where a county children services board alleges that a child is a “neglected child” pursuant to RC § 2151.03(B) because of the alleged faults or habits of the child’s stepmother, the court need not determine if the phrase “parents, guardian, or custodian” includes stepmothers where the stepmother was never a party to the action: In re Wall, 60 Ohio App. 3d 6, 572 N.E.2d 248 (1989).

Vaccination

Where the father of a minor child endeavors to send such child to a proper public school but, pursuant to a valid regulation of the board of education, such child is excluded from the public school because he has not been vaccinated, and where there is no showing that the father had done anything to prevent the vaccination of such child, such child is not a neglected child within the meaning of this section: State v. Dunham, 154 Ohio St. 63, 42 Ohio Op. 133, 93 N.E.2d 286 (1950).

Voluntary placement with relatives

Children were not dependent or neglected where the parent with custody voluntarily placed them with relatives, pursuant to an informal agreement, prior to the involvement of DJFS, and the children were receiving proper care from the relatives: In re Stoll, 165 Ohio App. 3d 226, 845 N.E.2d 581, 2006 Ohio 346, (2006).

Trial court erred when it found the children neglected, pursuant to RC § 2151.03(A)(2), because the mother had voluntarily relinquished custody of her children to her parents before going into drug rehabilitation and thus, an informal agreement could have been inferred regarding care for the children. In re Stoll, 165 Ohio App. 3d 226, 845 N.E.2d 581, 2006 Ohio 346, (2006).

As used in this chapter, an “abused child” includes any child who:

(A) Is the victim of “sexual activity” as defined under Chapter 2907, of the Revised Code, where such activity would constitute an offense under that chapter, except that the court need not find that any person has been convicted of the offense in order to find that the child is an abused child;

(B) Is endangered as defined in section 2919.22 of the Revised Code, except that the court need not find that any person has been convicted under that section in order to find that the child is an abused child;

(C) Exhibits evidence of any physical or mental injury or death, inflicted other than by accidental means, or an injury or death which is at variance with the history given of it. Except as provided in division (D) of this section, a child exhibiting evidence of corporal punishment or other physical disciplinary measure by a parent, guardian, custodian, person having custody or control, or person in loco parentis of a child is not an abused child under this division if the measure is not prohibited under section 2919.22 of the Revised Code.

(D) Because of the acts of his parents, guardian, or custodian, suffers physical or mental injury that harms or threatens to harm the child’s health or welfare.

(E) Is subjected to out-of-home care child abuse.

HISTORY: 136 v H 85 (Eff 11-28-75); 142 v S 89 (Eff 1-1-89); 143 v H 257. Eff 8-3-89.

Generally

During the adjudicatory phase of the proceedings to determine whether a child is an "abused child," the trial court does not have to find any fault on the part of a parent, guardian or custodian in order to conclude that the child is "abused" pursuant to RC § 2151.03.1. All that is necessary is that the child be a victim, regardless of who is responsible for the abuse: In re Pitts, 38 Ohio App. 3d 1, 525 N.E.2d 814 (1987).

Battered child syndrome

Expert testimony on battered child syndrome is admissible when it is relevant and meets the requirements of EvR 702: State v. Nemeth, 82 Ohio St. 3d 202, 694 N.E.2d 1332, 1998 Ohio 376, (1998).

Child no longer living with abuser

Child who was found abused under RC § 2151.031(D) was not to be found not abused just because the child no longer lived with the stepfather, who was abusive person. In re Youngerman, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4866, 2003 Ohio 5397, (2003).

Corporal punishment

Based on the testimony of one of the children's teachers that the child had claimed that the mother had hit her with a clothes hanger, the trial court's finding that the child was an abused child, under RC § 2151.031(D), was supported by the evidence. In re Malaya H., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 6309, 2005 Ohio 7010, (2005).

Swatting a nine-year-old with a paddle did not constitute "abuse": Clark v. Clark, 114 Ohio App. 3d 558, 683 N.E.2d 800 (1996).

An eight-year-old child may be found to be "abused" where a whipping results in severe bruising: In re Schuerman, 74 Ohio App. 3d 528, 599 N.E.2d 728 (1991).

Striking a child with a belt is not per se abusive. The court must consider such circumstances as the age of the child, her response to non-corporal punishment in the past, and the behavior being punished: In re Bretz, 1990 Ohio App. LEXIS 5685 (1990).

Dismissal of complaint

Trial court properly dismissed a husband's complaint, pursuant to Ohio R. Civ. P. 12, alleging neglect and dependency on behalf of his children because the complaint alleged prospective and conclusory allegations, which were insufficient to support a claim under RC § 2151.27; it was noted that a claim that the children were not performing at appropriate age levels did not fall within the definition of dependency, pursuant to RC § 2151.04, neglect, pursuant to RC § 2151.03, or abuse, pursuant to RC § 2151.031. Louck v. Louck, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5328, 2003 Ohio 5999, (2003).

Domestic violence protection order

Trial court's judgment issuing a civil protection order against a father prohibiting the father to have contact with his minor child was not against the manifest weight of the evidence because statements made by the child to her mother, grandmother, babysitter, and social worker indicating that she had been sexually abused and naming the father as the perpetrator constituted evidence that the child was a victim of domestic violence under RC § 3113.31(A)(1)(c) as an abused child under RC § 2151.031(A) and justified the trial court's grant of a protection order. Ross v. Ross, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5256, 2006 Ohio 5274, (2006).

Sworn allegations constituted good cause for issuing a temporary protection order as: (1) when the father filed the petition for the protection order, he provided the court with a copy of his driver's license and a signed affidavit swearing that the information he provided in the petition was true, complete, and accurate to the best of his knowledge, and (2) the father's sworn statement was that his children were in immediate and present danger of harm or abuse because a mother was bringing them around a stepbrother, who had just done something to the father's daughter that she would only divulge in a court of law. Ferris v. Ferris, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 790, 2006 Ohio 878, (2006).

Where the trial court issued a domestic violence civil protection order against the father that included the child within its scope based on the determination that the child was subjected to domestic violence under RC § 3113.31(A)(1)(c) due to the father's alleged mental abuse of the child under RC § 2151.031(D), the trial court did not commit plain error; although the inclusion of the child in a civil protection order was based upon allegedly hearsay testimony that the magistrate determined was not hearsay under Ohio R. Evid. 801, the admission of the testimony, if erroneous, was not an obvious defect in the proceeding, considering the threats uttered against the mother in the child's presence and the fact that the protection order allowed the father supervised visitation with the son. Lang v. Lang, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1772, 2004 Ohio 2035, (2004).

Entry of civil protection order prohibiting a parent from contacting her three minor children was proper because she had abused them by permitting truancy, seeking excessive and unnecessary medical treatment for them, disseminating inappropriate literature attacking their father, and disclosing harmful and damaging information about them. Schottenstein v. Schottenstein, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4526, 2003 Ohio 5032, (2003).

Drugs

When a newborn child's toxicology screen yields a positive result for an illegal drug due to prenatal maternal drug abuse, the newborn is, for purposes of RC § 2151.03.1(D), per se an abused child: In re Blackshear, 90 Ohio St. 3d 197, 736 N.E.2d 462, 2000 Ohio 173, (2000).

A child who is born addicted to heroin falls within the class of children RC § 2151.03.1 was designed to protect. It is from the point of viability that the state has an interest in the "child's" care, protection and development. A mother creates a substantial risk to the health or safety of the child by using heroin regularly during pregnancy: In re Ruiz, 27 Ohio Misc. 2d 31, 27 Ohio B. 350, 500 N.E.2d 935 (JC 1986).

Evidence insufficient

There was insufficient evidence to support a juvenile court's findings that children were neglected or dependent based on an incident where their mother had appeared intoxicated as a chaperone for a school field trip taken by one of the children. The mother had made arrangements for the children to have been cared for by their grandmother, and the appellate court found that the family services department failed to present clear and convincing proof that the children lacked adequate parental care, as there was no showing that either child was ever deprived of adequate food or clothing, the children were never subjected to the mother's sole parental supervision on the day of the field trip, and there was no showing that the mother's problems with substance abuse were such that it deprived her children of adequate or proper parental care. In re C.M., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2041, 2004 Ohio 2294, (2004).

Weight of the evidence supported the trial court's determination that a father's minor child was an abused and dependent child pursuant to RC §§ 2151.031 and 2151.04(C), as she was a credible witness who testified that her father beat her with an extension cord and that he touched her "private parts"; although there was no physical evidence, such would have only strengthened the child's testimony but the lack of it did not require a conclusion that she was not credible where there was clear and convincing evidence to support the findings pursuant to Ohio R. Juv. P. 29(E)(4). In re A. R., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1444, 2006 Ohio 1548, (2006).

Trial court's finding that a mother committed an act of domestic violence was not against the manifest weight of the evidence where: (1) a witness from children services spoke with a daughter about the allegations of abuse and recommended that the children be protected from a stepbrother until a criminal investigation could be completed, (2) the daughter confided in her father that the stepbrother had done something to her and that the daughter was afraid her brother and sister would be harmed as well, (3) the mother was not willing to face the fact that the stepbrother had a problem, and (4) when questioned about the stepbrother by the trial court, the mother indicated that she was not aware of any problem and that she was suspicious because of the timing of the allegations. Ferris v. Ferris, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 790, 2006 Ohio 878, (2006).

There was clear and convincing evidence under RC § 2151.35(A) to support a finding by a magistrate, which was adopted by the trial court, that a mother's children were abused and dependent, pursuant to RC §§ 2151.031(B) and (C), and 2151.04(D), respectively, where there was expert testimony that the mother's 19-day-old child had abusive grab marks, and the mother admitted that she may have caused those marks when she grabbed her child. The weight to be given to the evidence and the credibility of the witnesses are issues for the trier of fact. In re Butcher, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3510, 2005 Ohio 3816, (2005).

Adjudications of abuse and dependence were affirmed because the uncontested expert testimony that a child's injury was not accidental and that disciplinary methods used on the child were concerning was sufficient to support a finding that the youngest child was abused and the oldest child was dependent as defined by RC § 2151.031 by clear and convincing evidence under Ohio R. Juv. P. 29(E)(4). In re Anthony, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5075, 2003 Ohio 5712, (2003).

Appeals court found no plain error in findings that father's stepchild was abused under RC § 2151.031(D) and child was dependent under RC § 2151.04(D) and children's placement with their mother with children's board services; there was clear and convincing evidence, based upon testimony of social workers, children, and father, and based upon his agreement, of the father's verbal and physical abuse of the children. In re Youngerman, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4866, 2003 Ohio 5397, (2003).

Appeals court affirmed a termination of parental rights to one child adjudicated as abused under RC § 2151.031 and one adjudicated as dependent under RC § 2151.04 where substantial evidence, including the mother's abuse, alcohol use, and encouragement of theft, supported the trial court's best interest findings under RC § 2151.414(D). In re Large, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4772, 2003 Ohio 5275, (2003).

Expert testimony generally

Magistrate did not err by concluding that the children's services board failed to establish, by clear and convincing evidence, that the younger child exhibited evidence of any physical injury for a determination of abuse. The testimony of the board's medical expert was not based on facts perceived by her and, even if the expert's testimony had been properly admitted, her testimony, standing alone, did not satisfy the standard of reasonable medical certainty. In re Vecchia, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6035, 2006 Ohio 6095, (2006).

Physical or mental harm

Trial court erred by denying defendant's Ohio R. Crim. P. 29(A) motion for acquittal because the State failed to establish that defendant had caused, or attempted to cause, physical harm to her children for the child endangering and domestic violence convictions under RC § 2919.22(B)(1) and RC § 2919.25(A). The only evidence about how the child was bruised was the children's statements to the police that their mother had struck them, however, the record did not disclose any circumstances which might have rendered those hearsay statements admissible. City of Newburgh Heights v. Cole, 166 Ohio App. 3d 826, 853 N.E.2d 689, 2006 Ohio 2463, (2006).

There was sufficient evidence to support each element of child endangering, RC § 2919.22(B)(1), as it was shown that defendant recklessly caused serious physical harm to the 11-month old child of his girlfriend. From the evidence it was reasonable to infer that the child was injured while he was in sole custody of defendant because expert medical testimony established that after suffering the break of his femur bone, the child would not have made any attempt to put weight on his leg. State v. Villarreal, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 1820, 2005 Ohio 1924, (2005).

Minor child properly was adjudicated as having suffered "serious physical harm" despite the child's happy disposition where the trial court had photographs of the child's bruised body, a physician's affidavit opining that the child was abused, and medical records indicating extensive bruising. In re K.B., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3402, 2003 Ohio 3784, (2003).

(A) Who is homeless or destitute or without adequate parental care, through no fault of the child's parents, guardian, or custodian;

(B) Who lacks adequate parental care by reason of the mental or physical condition of the child's parents, guardian, or custodian;

(C) Whose condition or environment is such as to warrant the state, in the interests of the child, in assuming the child's guardianship;

(D) To whom both of the following apply:

(1) The child is residing in a household in which a parent, guardian, custodian, or other member of the household committed an act that was the basis for an adjudication that a sibling of the child or any other child who resides in the household is an abused, neglected, or dependent child.

(2) Because of the circumstances surrounding the abuse, neglect, or dependency of the sibling or other child and the other conditions in the household of the child, the child is in danger of being abused or neglected by that parent, guardian, custodian, or member of the household.

Constitutionality

Court rejected a mother's contention that interpreting RC § 2151.04(D) to permit a child to be found prospectively dependent once a child was returned to the parents' home was an unconstitutional violation of the mother's fundamental liberty interest in raising a child because, beyond broadly reciting the legal theory, the mother failed to allege sufficient facts to demonstrate how the juvenile court's application of § 2105.04 infringed upon her parenting choices and protected freedoms. In re W.C., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2767, 2005 Ohio 2968, (2005).

Revised Code § 2151.04(C) is not unconstitutionally vague: Davis v. Trumbull Cty. Children Serv. Bd., 24 Ohio App. 3d 180, 24 Ohio B. 270, 493 N.E.2d 1011 (1985).

Revised Code § 2151.04(C) which provides in pertinent part that a dependent child includes any child "whose condition or environment is such as to warrant the state, in the interests of the child, in assuming his guardianship" does not violate the due process requirement of the fourteenth amendment: Leshner v. Lavrich, 632 F. Supp. 77 (N.D. Ohio 1984).

Neither RC § 2151.04 nor RC § 2151.35.3 is unconstitutionally broad or vague: In re Williams, 7 Ohio App. 3d 324, 7 Ohio B. 421, 455 N.E.2d 1027 (1982).

Generally

Determination that a child was dependent required no showing of fault on the parent's part, as the focus was on the child's condition or environment, and whether the child was without adequate care or support, but a court could consider a parent's conduct insofar as it formed part of the child's environment, and, while the child's present "condition or environment" was the focus of a dependency determination, the law did not require the court to experiment with the child's welfare to see if the child would suffer great detriment or harm. In re S.J.J., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6318, 2006 Ohio 6354, (2006).

In determining whether a child was dependent, the focus was on the condition of the child and whether he or she was receiving proper care and support, and the conduct of the parents was relevant only insofar as it formed a part of the child's environment and was significant only if it had a detrimental impact on the child. In re Chancey, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5056, 2006 Ohio 5156, (2006).

Trial court improperly awarded permanent custody (RC § 2151.414 and RC § 2151.353) to the agency without first adjudicating the child dependent. The evidence introduced at the temporary emergency custody hearing did not support a dependency determination and no subsequent hearing was held to determine dependency. In re Nibert, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2641, 2005 Ohio 2797, (2005).

To be deemed a dependent child, he or she must be homeless or destitute or without proper care or support: In re Tikyra A., 103 Ohio App. 3d 452, 659 N.E.2d 867 (1995).

The focus of a charge that a child is dependent under RC § 2151.04(C) is on the child and his conditions, and not on the faults of the parents: In re Bishop, 36 Ohio App. 3d 123, 521 N.E.2d 838 (1987).

The determination of whether a child is dependent under RC § 2151.04 must be made as of the time of the hearing on the complaint: In re Bishop, 36 Ohio App. 3d 123, 521 N.E.2d 838 (1987).

The court may award custody to neither parent where it finds that one parent is preoccupied with religious fanaticism and the other parent is emotionally unstable: Birch v. Birch, 11 Ohio St. 3d 85, 11 Ohio B. 327, 463 N.E.2d 1254 (1984).

Unlike a finding of neglect under RC § 2151.03, which requires proof that the parents were willfully at fault in abandoning or neglecting the children or refusing to perform their parental duties, a finding of dependency under RC § 2151.04 must be grounded on whether the children are receiving proper care and support. The focus is on the condition of the children, not the fault of the parents: In re Bibb, 70 Ohio App. 2d 117, 24 Ohio Op. 3d 159, 435 N.E.2d 96 (1980).

A parent's primary rights to the care and custody of a child are rights that must be protected, and parental custody will be terminated only when necessary for the mental and physical development of the child: In re Bibb, 70 Ohio App. 2d 117, 24 Ohio Op. 3d 159, 435 N.E.2d 96 (1980).

Once a child has been found to be "dependent" as defined in RC § 2151.04, the "best interests" of the child are the primary consideration in determining whether an award of permanent custody is justified pursuant to RC § 2151.35.3(D): In re Cunningham, 59 Ohio St. 2d 100, 13 Ohio Op. 3d 78, 391 N.E.2d 1034 (1979).

The issue of whether a child is dependent is to be determined as of about the date specified in the complaint and does not have to include the time of the hearing: In re Baby Girl S., 32 Ohio Misc. 217, 61 Ohio Op. 2d 439, 290 N.E.2d 925 (CP 1972).

The unfitness of the mother may be a factor in adjudging that the child's condition or environment is such as to warrant the state in the interest of the child in assuming his guardianship: In re Infant East, 32 Ohio Misc. 65, 61 Ohio Op. 2d 38, 288 N.E.2d 343 (CP 1972).

The crux of a dependency action is the condition or environment of the child, not the culpable acts of the parents: In re Infant East, 32 Ohio Misc. 65, 61 Ohio Op. 2d 38, 288 N.E.2d 343 (CP 1972).

In a dependency action, where the child's condition or environment warrant it, the child may be removed from the custody of the mother and it is not necessary that she first be given the opportunity to prove that she can properly care for said child: In re Infant East, 32 Ohio Misc. 65, 61 Ohio Op. 2d 38, 288 N.E.2d 343 (CP 1972).

A judicial determination that a child is "dependent" pursuant to this section, must be based on evidence as to conditions at the time of the hearing held therefor: In re Darst, 117 Ohio App. 374, 24 Ohio Op. 2d 144, 192 N.E.2d 287 (1963).

Children whose parents are adulterous, childish, selfish, who speak vilely of each other to the children, and who allow a close association between the children and vicious, criminal and immoral persons, are dependent children: In re Douglas, 82 Ohio L. Ab. 170, 11 Ohio Op. 2d 340, 164 N.E.2d 475 (JC 1959).

Abuse of another child

Trial court's determination that a child was dependent pursuant to RC § 2151.04(D) was proper where a sibling of the child had been adjudicated as abused, as there was no requirement that the sibling had to currently reside in the household for purposes of § 2151.04(D). Accordingly, as the child's parent had previously committed an act of abuse against a sibling of the child, the situation was within § 2151.04(D)(1), even though that sibling had been placed in a permanent planned living arrangement and had never returned home. In re E. R., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4745, 2006 Ohio 4816, (2006).

A child may be found to be “dependent” where another child in the same household has been abused and there is a danger that the dependent child will also be abused: In re Schuerman, 74 Ohio App. 3d 528, 599 N.E.2d 728 (1991).

Adoption

Where an adopting parent demands the child and is able to provide a good home, such child is not destitute or homeless so as to constitute it a dependent child within the purview of GC § 1639-4 (RC § 2151.04): In re Duncan, 62 Ohio L. Ab. 173, 107 N.E.2d 256 (App 1951).

The mere fact that a mother desires to place her baby for adoption is not enough to constitute dependency: In re Hobson, 44 Ohio L. Ab. 86, 62 N.E.2d 510 (App 1945).

Burden of proof

Clear and convincing evidence supported the determination that a father's 13-year-old daughter was a dependent child pursuant to RC § 2151.04(C), as she lived with the father's former neighbors for a while but they filed an unruly-child complaint against her and did not want her to return to their home. The mother had limited contact with the child, the father did not feel that he could manage her, and there was evidence that she was difficult, struggled with continual incontinence, lied, stayed out beyond her curfew, and stole tobacco products, such that there was no one who provided her with the proper care and support. In re Myers, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1483, 2007 Ohio 1631, (Apr. 9, 2007).

Findings of neglect and dependency were not supported by clear and convincing evidence. The testimony concerning domestic violence between the parents was conflicting: In re Alexander C., 164 Ohio App. 3d 540, 843 N.E.2d 211, 2005 Ohio 6134, (2005).

The fact of dependency must be proved by clear and convincing evidence: In re Bishop, 36 Ohio App. 3d 123, 521 N.E.2d 838 (1987).

The fact of dependency must be proved by clear and convincing evidence, RC § 2151.35: In re Bibb, 70 Ohio App. 2d 117, 24 Ohio Op. 3d 159, 435 N.E.2d 96 (1980).

Care by relatives other than parents

Because the mother voluntarily relinquished custody of the children prior to any involvement by the children's services agency, the trial court erred in finding that the children were dependent. The children did not lack proper care and support, pursuant to RC § 2151.04(B), because the maternal grandparents provided proper care and support, and their condition and environment were adequate, pursuant to RC § 2151.04(C), also due to the care provided by the grandparents. In re Stoll, 165 Ohio App. 3d 226, 845 N.E.2d 581, 2006 Ohio 346, (2006).

Children were not dependent or neglected where the parent with custody voluntarily placed them with relatives, pursuant to an informal agreement, prior to the involvement of DJFS, and the children were receiving proper care from the relatives: In re Stoll, 165 Ohio App. 3d 226, 845 N.E.2d 581, 2006 Ohio 346, (2006).

The state's interest under this section arises only if there is no one meeting the obligations of care, support and custody which are owed to a child by a parent. The fact that relatives other than a parent are providing such care and support is immaterial to the determination of whether a child is a “dependent child” within the purview of such section: In re Darst, 117 Ohio App. 374, 24 Ohio Op. 2d 144, 192 N.E.2d 287 (1963).

Child of minor parent

It was not plain error for a magistrate to have accepted the consent of a mother, who was an “unemancipated incompetent minor,” to a disposition of legal custody of her child, as the child was declared dependent pursuant to RC § 2151.04, and accordingly, the trial court had the right to make an award of legal custody with or without the mother's consent, pursuant to RC § 2151.353. In re H.B., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1969, 2006 Ohio 2124, (2006).

Upon a showing that a fifteen-year-old mother has a substantial record of delinquency, that her family situation is financially and emotionally unstable, and that a report of a psychologist suggests a poor prognosis for her success in the role of a mother, the court may grant a permanent change of custody of the three-day-old infant under this section on the grounds of dependency, although the mother has not had physical custody of the child: In re Turner, 12 Ohio Misc. 171, 41 Ohio Op. 2d 264, 231 N.E.2d 502 (CP 1967).

Child removed after birth

When a child was removed from the hospital shortly after birth, the child was properly found to be dependent by clear and convincing evidence, under RC §§ 2151.04(D) and 2151.35(A), even though she had not actually lived in a household in which another child was found to have been abused or neglected, because there was evidence that had the child not been removed from the hospital, the child would have lived in a home in which her half sibling was found to be abused, due to Munchausen's Syndrome by proxy, her siblings were found to be dependent, and her parents refused to acknowledge the problem which caused the finding that the half sibling was abused, indicating that there continued to be a risk to the child if she was placed in that home. In re Hortsmann, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2089, 2005 Ohio 2168, (2005).

Where the state can show, by clear and convincing evidence, that the “condition” or “environment” into which a newborn baby would enter would be threatening to the health and safety of the child, the state may intervene and have the child declared a “dependent child” pursuant to RC § 2151.04(C): In re Campbell, 13 Ohio App. 3d 34, 13 Ohio B. 36, 468 N.E.2d 93 (1983).

As to the mother who was physically, emotionally and financially unable to care and provide for her infant child, the court held the child to be a dependent child, and the fact that the mother has not had the child in her physical custody and control does not preclude the court from a finding of dependency: In re Baby Girl S., 32 Ohio Misc. 217, 61 Ohio Op. 2d 439, 290 N.E.2d 925 (CP 1972).

Consent to finding of dependency

No person or parent can give their consent to a finding of “dependency” for a child, but the requirements of GC § 1639-4, which defines a dependent child, must be found to exist: In re Hobson, 44 Ohio L. Ab. 86, 62 N.E.2d 510 (App 1945).

Contract for care of child

A child who is receiving proper care pursuant to an arrangement initiated by a parent with a caregiver is not dependent under RC § 2151.04(A): In re Riddle, 79 Ohio St. 3d 259, 680 N.E.2d 1227, 1997 Ohio 391, (1997).

Corporal punishment

The court found that a child was a dependent child as a result of the method by which parent and live-in companion administered corporal punishment: In re Jandrew, 1997 Ohio App. LEXIS 5999 (4th Dist. 1997).

Death of child

Dependency and neglect action was rendered moot when the child died: In re L.W., 168 Ohio App. 3d 613, 861 N.E.2d 546, 2006 Ohio 644, (2006).

Court of common pleas, juvenile division, erred when it determined that the court lacked jurisdiction to adjudicate the issue of abuse when the child was deceased; the technicality of death did not rob children of statutory protection as the statutory protections afforded siblings extended to afterborn children; the law is clear that, pursuant to RC § 2151.01 and .04, the code shall be construed liberally to ensure that the judicial procedures in RC § 2151 and RC § 2152 are executed and enforced. In re Darling, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 6640, 2003 Ohio 7184, (2003).

Trial court properly dismissed a husband's complaint, pursuant to Ohio R. Civ. P. 12, alleging neglect and dependency on behalf of his children because the complaint alleged prospective and conclusory allegations, which were insufficient to support a claim under RC § 2151.27; it was noted that a claim that the children were not performing at appropriate age levels did not fall within the definition of dependency pursuant to RC § 2151.04, neglect pursuant to RC § 2151.03, or abuse pursuant to RC § 2151.031.

Louck v. Louck, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5328, 2003 Ohio 5999, (2003).

Evidence generally

In a dependency proceeding pursuant to RC § 2151.04(D), the trial court's admission of a document that purported to be a copy of a judgment from another court was proper, as it was authenticated under Evid. R. 901(B)(7) for purposes of showing abuse by the mother of another sibling and that the child had been previously adjudicated dependent, and any error was harmless because the mother testified to the substance thereof. In re E. R., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4745, 2006 Ohio 4816, (2006).

Clear and convincing evidence did not support an adjudication of a child as dependent where harm to the child could not be inferred from the mother's failure to abide by protective orders. A child services agency presented no evidence showing how the mother's failure to comply with the protective orders was harmful to the child. In re Walling, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 729, 2006 Ohio 810, (2006).

Trial court's finding that appellants' son was a dependent child under RC § 2151.04 on the ground that appellants had failed to remedy the conditions which led to the son's removal and awarding permanent custody of the son to the family services agency under RC § 2151.353 was unsupported by clear and convincing evidence because the information relied upon was either inconclusive or related to a time period seventeen months to three years prior to the son's birth when the parents two daughters were permanently removed from their custody. No current evidence or testimony was presented to provide any further explanation as to why the son should be deemed dependent. The trial court's dependency determination was based solely on the fact that appellants had previously lost custody of the first two children and on information which was not relative to the parents' unfitness at the time that the son was removed. In re Nicholas P., 169 Ohio App. 3d 570, 863 N.E.2d 1102, 2006 Ohio 6213, (2006).

Even if it was determined that the trial court erroneously admitted hearsay statements from a father's daughter pursuant to Ohio R. Evid. 802 regarding incidents that occurred while she lived in his home, there was still sufficient other evidence to support the trial court's determination that she was a dependent child pursuant to RC § 2151.04(C); accordingly, the dependency determination withstood challenge under the asserted evidentiary basis. In re Myers, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1483, 2007 Ohio 1631, (Apr. 9, 2007).

Dependency finding was supported by sufficient evidence because the parents difficulty in understanding the level of supervision appropriate for their children, a requisite for providing them a safe environment, was established by the testimony of the hospital and agency personnel. That evidence, alone, was of sufficient quantity and quality to defeat any manifest weight challenge to the finding of dependency. In re Corey, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1837, 2006 Ohio 2013, (2006).

There was no error in the dependency finding, pursuant to RC § 2151.04(C), because the record was replete with attempts by the agency to find the mother for the purpose of eventually reuniting her with her sons, pursuant to RC § 2151.419(A)(1). The agency tried to contact the mother and tried to obtain interstate compact home studies of the various purported residences the mother had, but was unsuccessful. In re Elliott, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 669, 2006 Ohio 738, (2006).

Trial court did not err in finding the child to be dependent, pursuant to RC § 2151.04(D), because the trial court's decision was based upon present evidence that was sufficient to carry the burden of proof. The trial court found that it had taken permanent custody of three children of whom the mother and her violent boyfriend were the parents; despite the permanent removal of her children, the mother had not distanced herself enough from the boyfriend to ensure her own safety; the mother violated court orders, designed for her own protection, to continue her relationship with her boyfriend; the mother failed to complete any previous case plan in any significant way; and the mother had made almost no progress emotionally, psychologically, or intellectually. In re Bourne, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 340, 2006 Ohio 396, (2006).

Clear and convincing evidence, as required by RC § 2151.35(A)(1) and Ohio R. Juv. P. 29(E)(4), supported a trial court's decision that a child was dependent, under RC § 2151.04(B) and (C) because (1) the child's mother admitted that her mental state prevented her from adequately caring for the child, (2) she testified that the child's father was inconsistent in being willing to help her care for the child, (3) she testified the father's epilepsy caused him to "zone out" at times, (4) she accused the father of physically abusing the child but did not seek proper treatment for the child for weeks, (5) her claims of physical abuse, if true, showed the child suffered actual harm in the home and was not given appropriate treatment, and, if false, showed the mother's inability to make appropriate decisions about the child's care. In re S.J.J., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6318, 2006 Ohio 6354, (2006).

There was clear and convincing evidence to support the trial court's determination that a father's child was neglected and dependent pursuant to RC §§ 2151.03 and 2151.04, as his evidence did not establish that he had maintained contact with the child or that he had provided support for her, and testimony from multiple other witnesses indicated that he in fact did not provide support and had failed to maintain regular visitation or communication with the child. The child was presumed abandoned under RC § 2151.011(C) where the father failed to maintain contact or visit the child for more than 90 days. In re Miajanique W., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6271, 2006 Ohio 6295, (2006).

Child was properly adjudicated to be dependent, under RC § 2151.04(C), because her mother was a homeless crack addict who did not desire treatment for her addiction, and the child's father's provision of minimal food and shelter for the child did not mean the child was not dependent, as he admitted he could not control the child, as a result of which the child spent a great deal of time at a known drug house and engaged in sexual activity there. In re Chancey, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5056, 2006 Ohio 5156, (2006).

Clear and convincing evidence pursuant to RC § 2151.35 and Ohio R. Juv. P. 29(E)(4) supported a trial court's determination that a child was dependent pursuant to RC § 2151.04(C), as she was diagnosed with mental health issues, she had homicidal and suicidal tendencies, and had run away from home to avoid auditory hallucinations telling her to kill herself and her family; the parents' conduct adversely impacted the child and the severity of her condition, and it created a risk to her safety. In re E. R., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4745, 2006 Ohio 4816, (2006).

Permanent custody of mother's son was properly granted to a family services agency. The evidence showed that permanent custody of the mother's daughter had been granted to the agency shortly before the son's birth, and the record of the proceedings involving the son and the transcripts from the daughter's case supported the trial court's determinations under RC §§ 2151.04(D) and 2151.414(D). In re Lowther, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4732, 2006 Ohio 4838, (2006).

Permanent custody of a father's son was properly granted to agency under RC § 2151.414 since the evidence showed that permanent custody of the father's daughter had been granted to the agency shortly before the son's birth, and the case manager continued to emphasize ongoing concerns with the refusal of the father and the son's mother to see anything wrong with their behaviors. The record and the transcripts from the daughter's case supported the trial court's determinations under RC §§ 2151.04(D) and 2151.414(D) and the corresponding grant of permanent custody of the son to the agency. In re Lowther, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4731, 2006 Ohio 4837, (2006).

There was clear and convincing evidence that the children were dependent where they were left alone for a period of days, the home was dirty and unsanitary, and the children were probably programmed to say that they were being sexually abused by their stepfather. In re Colaner, 166 Ohio App. 3d 355, 850 N.E.2d 794, 2006 Ohio 2404, (2006).

Sufficient evidence supported the juvenile court's determination that the child was dependent, pursuant to RC § 2151.04(C), because the child's environment consisted of being in the care of the father, who had committed an extremely violent act against his fiancée, and who could not recall the details of the incident due to excessive alcohol consumption. Given the serious nature of the stabbing incident and the detrimental effect his behavior could have on the child, there was sufficient support for the juvenile court's conclusion that the child's environment warranted state intervention. In re A.P., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2551, 2006 Ohio 2717, (2006).

Finding that the children were dependent under RC § 2151.04(D) was supported by clear and convincing evidence, pursuant to RC § 2151.35(A), because the father punched the mother with a closed fist and threw her down the stairs, the mother told a police officer that the father physically abused her several times a month, and the evidence showed that the mother still had some level of relationship and interaction with the father, which in the past had led inevitably to alcohol usage and domestic violence, causing the removal of their other children from their custody. The same economic and home environment issues that imperiled the children's siblings were putting the children at issue in danger as well. In re G.S., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2389, 2006 Ohio 2530, (2006).

There was sufficient evidence to allow the trial court to find by clear and convincing evidence that the elements of RC § 2151.04(D)(1) were met for a finding that the child was dependent. The mother had substance abuse problems, mental problems, and used sex offenders as caregivers and the child's three siblings had been adjudicated abused, neglected, and dependent. In re C. M., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1752, 2006 Ohio 1908, (2006).

Weight of the evidence supported the trial court's determination that a father's minor child was an abused and dependent child pursuant to RC §§ 2151.031 and 2151.04(C), as she was a credible witness who testified that her father beat her with an extension cord and that he touched her "private parts"; although there was no physical evidence, such would have only strengthened the child's testimony but the lack of it did not require a conclusion that she was not credible where there was clear and convincing evidence to support the findings pursuant to Ohio R. Juv. P. 29(E)(4). In re A. R., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1444, 2006 Ohio 1548, (2006).

Child was properly adjudicated a dependent child under RC § 2151.04(D). Although the caseworker for the children services board had never observed the parents' home or their interactions with the week-old child prior to removal, the magistrate's finding that the child was dependent on the ground that the conditions of the household rendered the child in danger of being abused and neglected was not against the manifest weight of the evidence because the mother's parental rights to her other four children had been terminated, and the father had been convicted of child endangering, in that he had shaken a seven-month old child. The child was in danger of being abused, and the father's presence in the household constituted a condition in the household, which placed the child in danger. In re W.C., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2767, 2005 Ohio 2968, (2005).

There was clear and convincing evidence to support the dependency adjudications of both children, under RC § 2151.04, and they were not against the manifest weight of the evidence, because there were serious concerns as to whether the children were receiving adequate care. The older child was underweight, had chronic head-lice infestations, and missed a lot of school while the younger child was born premature, was underweight, and was not properly gaining weight, and both parents refused drug tests and there were reports of a drug lab in their home. In re F.S., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3734, 2005 Ohio 4085, (2005).

Testimony supported the finding that the son was dependent, pursuant to RC § 2151.04 because the father provided no support and refused to participate in services, the mother lacked adequate parenting skills, the mother insisted on continuing in a physically abusive relationship, and the grandmother could no longer care for the child. In re Malaya H., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 6309, 2005 Ohio 7010, (2005).

Evidence that the residence in which the subject children lived had a strong odor of urine and feces, that several piles of animal feces were observed on the floor of the residence, and that the fathers of two of the children provided clear and convincing evidence that the children were dependent, under RC

There was clear and convincing evidence under RC § 2151.35(A) to support a finding by a magistrate, which was adopted by the trial court, that a mother's children were abused and dependent, pursuant to RC §§ 2151.031(B) and (C), and 2151.04(D), respectively, where there was expert testimony that the mother's 19-day-old child had abusive grab marks, and the mother admitted that she may have caused those marks when she grabbed her child. The weight to be given to the evidence and the credibility of the witnesses are issues for the trier of fact. In re Butcher, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3510, 2005 Ohio 3816, (2005).

Trial court properly denied a mother's motion to dismiss a dependency hearing regarding her three minor children, as there was sufficient credible and competent evidence to support the conclusion that the children were dependent, pursuant to RC § 2151.04(C); the mother had suicidal and homicidal ideations, and although she had placed her children with adults who cared for them and who assisted the mother in providing parental care, those adults did not provide full-time parental care at the time alleged in the complaint. In re Ohm, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3245, 2005 Ohio 3500, (2005).

Trial court's finding that children were neglected, pursuant to RC § 2151.03(A)(2), and dependent, pursuant to RC § 2151.04(C), was supported by clear and convincing evidence and was not against the manifest weight of the evidence by virtue of the testimony of the patrons and employees of a library, along with the testimony of a neighbor and a police officer regarding the discipline of the mother's four minor children. In re Lloyd, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2272, 2005 Ohio 2379, (2005).

Mother's statements to mental health counselors that she had hurt her first daughter, had fantasies of causing more harm to that child, and did not want that child was sufficient to support the juvenile court's finding in the dependency proceeding that the first daughter and the a recently-born second daughter were "dependent children" whose custody should be changed. In re Hauenstein, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2550, 2004 Ohio 2915, (2004).

Where the mother had few financial resources, had been unable to find employment, did not get routine medical treatment for her children, depended upon others for her own maintenance and was on the verge of losing her residence, and psychological tests indicated a lack of efficacy and a lack of independence, there was sufficient evidence presented to the trial court from which it could find by clear and convincing evidence that the minor child was a dependent child. In re Barker, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5758, 2003 Ohio 6406, (2003).

Clear and convincing evidence showed that the minor children were dependent as defined in RC § 2151.04(B); the evidence showed the mother's failure to follow the treatment plan for her depression affected her parenting skills. In re Hurst, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4923, 2003 Ohio 5460, (2003).

Appeals court found no plain error in findings that father's stepchild was abused under RC § 2151.031(D) and child was dependent under RC § 2151.04(D) and children's placement with their mother with children's board services; there was clear and convincing evidence, based upon testimony of social workers, children, and father, and based upon his agreement, of the father's verbal and physical abuse of the children. In re Youngerman, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4866, 2003 Ohio 5397, (2003).

Where the parental rights of the mother and the father had been terminated as to two older siblings of the infant child at issue, and the evidence showed that the problems leading to that termination still existed, there was sufficient evidence to support a dependency finding as to the infant. In re D.B., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4028, 2003 Ohio 4526, (2003).

Juvenile court did not err by finding that a minor child living in an unstable and abusive environment was a dependent. In re Day, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3253, 2003 Ohio 3544, (2003).

Leaving children basically unattended with a loaded, unsecured gun is sufficient to support a finding of neglect and dependency: Skeen v. Gullett, 1994 Ohio App. LEXIS 2746 (1994).

Where the evidence shows that to return a child to her natural parent would be clearly detrimental to the child, such child is a "dependent child" under RC § 2151.04(C) and the court is authorized to commit the child permanently to the Children's Services Board under RC § 2151.35.3(D), even though the parent might be capable of giving proper care and support to other children: In re Justice, 59 Ohio App. 2d 78, 13 Ohio Op. 3d 139, 392 N.E.2d 897 (1978).

Finding of parental unsuitability

Where a child's best interests under RC § 2151.42 were served by granting legal custody under RC § 2151.011(B)(19) to the child's relatives due to the mother's mental and/or physical condition pursuant to RC § 2151.04(B), the mother's unsuitability was implicit and a separate finding was not required; reasonable efforts to promote a reunification plan were made. In re Reeher, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3152, 2003 Ohio 3470, (2003).

The requirement that a court first find a parent unsuitable before awarding legal custody of a child to a nonparent does not apply to dispositional hearings following an adjudication that the child is abused, dependent, or neglected: In re D.R., 153 Ohio App. 3d 156, 792 N.E.2d 203, 2003 Ohio 2852, (2003).

Finding a mother unfit to have custody of her child is not a necessary condition precedent to an adjudication that the child is dependent: In re Infant East, 32 Ohio Misc. 65, 61 Ohio Op. 2d 38, 288 N.E.2d 343 (CP 1972).

Habeas corpus

Habeas corpus was not available where a parent had adequate legal remedies for contesting a temporary custody order based on a finding of dependency: Rammage v. Saros, 97 Ohio St. 3d 430, 780 N.E.2d 278, 2002 Ohio 6669, (2002).

Jurisdiction

Grandmother's dependency petition and request for temporary custody of her grandchild pursuant to RC §§ 2151.27(A)(1) and 2151.04 was within the juvenile court's subject matter jurisdiction, as the grandmother qualified as "any person" pursuant to RC § 2151.27(A)(1), and RC §§ 2151.27(C) and 2151.353(A)(3) allowed her to seek custody. In re Brown, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3090, 2006 Ohio 3189, (2006).

Mental illness of parent

The court did not abuse its discretion in finding that appellant's twins were dependent where appellant was required as a condition of her release from a psychiatric hospital to reside with her mother, with whom the children also resided. It was clear that the dangers presented due to the risk of recurrence of their mother's psychotic features constituted a "condition or environment such as to warrant" state intervention on their behalf: In re Collins, 1995 Ohio App. LEXIS 5149 (9th Dist. 1995).

A minor child is correctly determined to be a "dependent" child when the record reveals clear and convincing evidence that the mother's mental illness, her repeated hospitalizations on account of such illness, and her persistent refusal to follow prescribed drug therapy interfere with her ability to provide proper care and support for the child pursuant to RC §§ 2151.04(B) and 2151.05: In re Brown, 60 Ohio App. 3d 136, 573 N.E.2d 1217 (1989).

Native Americans

Based on prior adjudications of abuse of a child's siblings and a continued threat to the child's safety, the child was properly deemed dependent under RC §§ 2151.04(D), 2151.35(A). Transfer to the Cherokee Nation pursuant to 25 U.S.C.S. §§ 1911(B), 1914 was not required where the Cherokee Nation merely asked for continued notification and the right to participate. In re Hortsman, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2091, 2005 Ohio 2172, (2005).

Parent's mental incapacity

Finding that the child was dependent was not against the manifest weight of the evidence because the mother suffered from a mental condition rendering her unable to adequately care for her son; she suffered from delusions in the form of hallucinations. She testified that she saw spirits and believed that people could be possessed by them, that the spirits could hurt her son by, for example, entering a body and slapping him or throwing things at him, and that, if a spirit possessed her son, her boyfriend would help her drive the spirit out of his body and that there would be some pain associated with the procedure. In re Anderson, — Ohio

App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1159, 2007 Ohio 1233, (Mar. 15, 2007).

Before a juvenile court can find that children are dependent in that they lack proper care because of the mental condition of their mother, it is necessary for the petitioner to produce not only evidence of the mother's mental incapacity, but also evidence showing that the children lacked proper care because of the mental incapacity: In re Larry and Scott H., 92 Ohio L. Ab. 436, 24 Ohio Op. 2d 334, 192 N.E.2d 683 (JC 1963).

Parent's relationship with another adult

A child is not necessarily neglected or dependent merely because the child's mother lives with a man who is not her legal spouse. In the absence of evidence showing a detrimental impact upon the child, the relationship does not warrant the state in removing the child from parental custody in the best interest of that child: In re Burrell, 58 Ohio St. 2d 37, 12 Ohio Op. 3d 43, 388 N.E.2d 738 (1979).

Pleadings

In an action in the juvenile court to determine that a child is a dependent child under GC § 1639-4 (RC § 2151.04), the complaint is sufficiently definite if there is an allegation of dependency (GC § 1639-23 [RC § 2151.27]): In re Duncan, 62 Ohio L. Ab. 173, 107 N.E.2d 256 (App 1951).

An affidavit charging that the accused contributed to the dependency of a minor child and acted in a way tending to cause such dependency, without charging that the minor was a dependent child as defined in this section, does not charge an offense under the laws of Ohio: State v. Krauss, 81 Ohio App. 453, 37 Ohio Op. 282, 80 N.E.2d 164 (1945).

Poverty

The court did not base its finding of dependency on the parents' poverty where it noted that they could have taken measures to improve living conditions: In re Brodbeck, 97 Ohio App. 3d 652, 647 N.E.2d 240 (1994).

Prospective dependency

Given the father's admitted violations of the no-contact order with the mother, the mother's revelations of domestic violence while pregnant with the child, and the parents' unremedied living circumstances despite extensive services, the adjudication of prospective dependency was supported by clear and convincing evidence. In re Melchizedek M., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2961, 2006 Ohio 3062, (2006).

Religion

The state may compel a juvenile to submit to medical treatment for a contagious and potentially life-threatening disease even though such treatment violates the juvenile's religious beliefs. A parent may be ordered to pay the costs of treatment: In re J.J., 64 Ohio App. 3d 806, 582 N.E.2d 1138 (1990).

The refusal of parents, for "religious reasons," to allow further medical treatment of their sick child may be the basis for finding the child to be a "dependent child" under RC § 2151.04(C): In re Willman, 24 Ohio App. 3d 191, 24 Ohio B. 313, 493 N.E.2d 1380 (1986).

Relinquishment of parental rights

The trial court does not err in adjudicating a child "dependent" pursuant to RC § 2151.04 when evidence adduced indicated that the mother had relinquished her parental rights by her execution of a permanent surrender, and the legal and natural father expressed no interest in raising the child: In re Luallen, 27 Ohio App. 3d 29, 27 Ohio B. 30, 499 N.E.2d 358 (1985).

Stipulation to dependency

While there was clear and convincing evidence to support a trial court's finding that a mother's children were dependent, the record also indicated that the mother stipulated that the children were dependent; thus, the mother could not object to the dependency finding on appeal. In re A.F., — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1509, 2007 Ohio 1646, (Apr. 9, 2007).

Termination of parental rights

Appeals court affirmed a termination of parental rights to one child adjudicated as abused under RC § 2151.031 and one adjudicated as dependent under RC § 2151.04 where substantial evidence, including the mother's abuse, alcohol use, and encouragement of theft, supported the trial court's best interest findings under RC § 2151.414(D). In re Large, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4772, 2003 Ohio 5275, (2003).

Once a child is adjudicated dependent, the best interests of the child become the trial court's primary concern when determining whether granting permanent custody is justified; the order to grant permanent custody of a minor child to the child services department was affirmed because the evidence supported the finding that a legally secure permanent placement could not be achieved without terminating the parents' custody. In re Riley, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3657, 2003 Ohio 4108, (2003).

Witness

Trial court did not violate a father's Fifth Amendment self-incrimination privilege when it allowed a county agency to call the father as a witness on cross-examination during the adjudicatory hearing of a dependency proceeding involving his daughter, pursuant to RC § 2151.04(C), as the trial court did not compel the father to answer any questions and he chose not to answer a single question or make any statement that would have incriminated him in a subsequent criminal proceeding. In re Myers, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1483, 2007 Ohio 1631, (Apr. 9, 2007).

§ 2151.05 Child without proper parental care.

Under sections 2151.01 to 2151.54 of the Revised Code, a child whose home is filthy and unsanitary; whose parents, stepparents, guardian, or custodian permit him to become dependent, neglected, abused, or delinquent; whose parents, stepparents, guardian, or custodian, when able, refuse or neglect to provide him with necessary care, support, medical attention, and educational facilities; or whose parents, stepparents, guardian, or custodian fail to subject such child to necessary discipline is without proper parental care or guardianship.

Mental illness of parent

Evidence sufficient

Where a home had no electricity, the children lacked food and/or supervision, and where the mother refused to accept help or follow advice, the children were neglected pursuant to RC §§ 2151.03(A)(2), 2151.011(B)(1), and 2151.05; therefore, the RC § 2151.35(A) determination of neglect was proper. In re Browne Children, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3293, 2003 Ohio 3637, (2003).

Mental illness of parent

A minor child is correctly determined to be a "dependent" child when the record reveals clear and convincing evidence that the mother's mental illness, her repeated hospitalizations on account of such illness, and her persistent refusal to follow prescribed drug therapy interfere with her ability to provide proper care and support for the child pursuant to RC §§ 2151.04(B) and 2151.05: In re Brown, 60 Ohio App. 3d 136, 573 N.E.2d 1217 (1989).

§ 2151.06 Residence or legal settlement.

Under sections 2151.01 to 2151.54, inclusive, of the Revised Code, a child has the same residence or legal settlement as his parents, legal guardian of his person, or his custodian who stands in the relation of loco parentis.

Generally
Child in custody of agency
Jurisdiction

Generally

Under this section, a child has, for the purposes of the sections enumerated therein, the same residence or legal settlement as his custodian who stands in the relation of loco parentis, and in such case a child may acquire a legal settlement otherwise than in accordance with the definition of legal settlement in RC § 5113.05: 1956 OAG No. 7008 (1956), (1956 OAG No. 6542, modified).

Child in custody of agency

Under JuvR 11, an order of transfer may only be to the county of the child's residence. A child is not deemed to have the same residence as his parents, pursuant to RC § 2151.06, where the child is in the custody of a public agency: In re Smith, 64 Ohio App. 3d 773, 582 N.E.2d 1117 (1990).

Jurisdiction

Where there is no existing award of custody of an orphaned minor resident of Ohio by a foreign court, the Probate Court of the county of such residence has jurisdiction, under RC § 2111.02 to appoint a guardian of the minor, irrespective of the fact that the domicile of such minor may be in another state: In re Fore, 168 Ohio St. 363, 56 Ohio Op. 337, 127 N.E.2d 1 (1958).

When a juvenile court exercising jurisdiction over a child under the provisions of GC § 1639-16 terminates such jurisdiction, said child by virtue of GC §§ 1639-6 and 3391-16 immediately acquires a legal settlement in the county of residence of the parents, surviving parent, sole parent, parent having custody awarded by a court having jurisdiction, or guardian of the person of such minor: 1953 OAG No. 2656 (1953).

[ESTABLISHMENT AND JURISDICTION]

§ 2151.07 Creation and powers of juvenile court; assignment of judges.

The juvenile court is a court of record within the court of common pleas. The juvenile court has and shall exercise the powers and jurisdiction conferred in Chapters 2151. and 2152. of the Revised Code.

Whenever the juvenile judge of the juvenile court is sick, is absent from the county, or is unable to attend court, or the volume of cases pending in court necessitates it, upon the request of the administrative juvenile judge, the presiding judge of the court of common pleas pursuant to division (DD) of section 2301.03 of the Revised Code shall assign a judge of any division of the court of common pleas of the county to act in the juvenile judge's place or in conjunction with the juvenile judge. If no judge of the court of common pleas is available for that purpose, the chief justice of the supreme court shall assign a judge of the court of common pleas, a juvenile judge, or a probate judge from a different county to act in the place of that juvenile judge or in conjunction with that juvenile judge. The assigned judge shall receive the compensation and expenses for so serving that is provided by law for judges assigned to hold court in courts of common pleas.

Authority of court

A juvenile court has authority to grant immunity under RC § 2945.44, even though there was not any criminal proceeding pending against the "grantee" of the immunity, and even though the grantee was not a witness at the time of the grant: In re Poth, 2 Ohio App. 3d 361, 2 Ohio B. 417, 442 N.E.2d 105 (1981).

The power to punish for contempt is an inherent power of the juvenile court: State v. Hershberger, 77 Ohio L. Ab. 487, 150 N.E.2d 671 (JC 1958).

All courts of record have an inherent common law power to enter, where proper, judgments nunc pro tunc: In re Howell, 74 Ohio L. Ab. 217, 140 N.E.2d 347 (JC 1956).

Compatibility of positions

The office of probate and juvenile judge is incompatible with the office of county court judge: 1957 OAG No. 880 (1957).

Compensation

A county auditor may legally pay to the probate judge presiding over the juvenile court of such county as provided by this section, such of the compensation provided for in SB No. 50 (122 v 390), which became effective during the judge's term, as will bring the probate judge's salary up to but not to exceed the salary of the common pleas judge of such county: 1949 OAG No. 304 (1949).

Under the provisions of SubSB No. 223 (122 v 444), and AmSB No. 50 (122 v 390), the probate judge of Columbiana county, who is also performing the functions of the judge of the juvenile court, can receive no additional salary or compensation during his present term of office: 1947 OAG No. 2159 (1947).

Jurisdiction

The grant of original jurisdiction, by RC § 2151.23(A)(3), to juvenile courts in habeas corpus actions involving the custody of minors is exclusive only as between juvenile courts and those courts given general habeas corpus jurisdiction by RC § 2725.02: In re Black, 36 Ohio St. 2d 124, 65 Ohio Op. 2d 308, 304 N.E.2d 394 (1973).

The juvenile court is a court of record and exercises the power and jurisdiction of such a court: State v. Hershberger, 77 Ohio L. Ab. 487, 150 N.E.2d 671 (JC 1958).

The juvenile court of Allen County, Ohio, by virtue of this section, is within the probate court and is presided over by the probate judge and is a court of record: In re Howell, 74 Ohio L. Ab. 217, 140 N.E.2d 347 (JC 1956).

No "separate and independent juvenile court" has ever been created in Lucas county, the tribunal authorized to administer the law relating to juveniles being the common pleas court, division of domestic relations, and not the "juvenile court": Burke v. Burke, 76 Ohio App. 431, 32 Ohio Op. 176, 64 N.E.2d 683 (1945).

After the effective date of the new juvenile court code, in all counties of Ohio not having a juvenile court or a court of common pleas, division of domestic relations, separately and independently created, established and functioning as such by law, all juvenile jurisdiction is reposed in a juvenile court within the probate court of such county to be presided over by the probate judge: 1937 OAG No. 871 (1937).

In Hamilton county, the powers and jurisdiction of the juvenile court as conferred by Chapters 2151. and 2152. of the Revised Code shall be exercised by the judge of the court of common pleas whose term begins on January 1, 1957, and that judge's successors and by the judge of the court of common pleas whose term begins on February 14, 1967, and that judge's successors as provided by section 2301.03 of the Revised Code. This conferral of powers and jurisdiction on the specified judges shall be deemed a creation of a separately and independently created and established juvenile court in Hamilton county, Ohio. The specified judges shall serve in each and every position where the statutes permit or require a juvenile judge to serve.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

Generally

Under RC §§ 2151.08 and 2151.12, the judge of the juvenile court of Hamilton county is not the clerk of his own court, when exercising the powers and jurisdictions conferred in RC §§ 2151.01 to 2151.54, inclusive, charged with keeping the records sought by the minor: State ex rel. Hibbard v. Hoffman, 101 Ohio App. 547, 1 Ohio Op. 2d 454, 137 N.E.2d 606 (1955).

§ 2151.09 Separate building and site may be purchased or leased.

Upon the advice and recommendation of the juvenile judge, the board of county commissioners may provide by purchase, lease, or otherwise a separate building and site to be known as "the juvenile court" at a convenient location within the county which shall be appropriately constructed, arranged, furnished, and maintained for the convenient and efficient transaction of the business of the court and all parts thereof and its employees, including adequate facilities to be used as laboratories, dispensaries, or clinics for the use of scientific specialists connected with the court.

HISTORY: GC § 1639-15; 117 v 520; Bureau of Code Revision. Eff 10-1-53.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

Authority and duties of commissioners

A board of county commissioners has a duty to appropriate funds requested by a juvenile court, so long as such funds are reasonable and necessary to the court's administration of its business, whether or not the program for which such funds are requested is a "traditional" juvenile court program. Opinion No. 2005-028 (2005).

The juvenile judge shall annually submit a written request for an appropriation to the board of county commissioners that shall set forth estimated administrative expenses of the juvenile court that the judge considers reasonably necessary for the operation of the court, including reasonably necessary expenses of the judge and such officers and employees as the judge may designate in attending conferences at which juvenile or welfare problems are discussed, and such sum each year as will provide for the maintenance and operation of the detention facility, the care, maintenance, education, and support of neglected, abused, dependent, and delinquent children, other than children eligible to participate in the Ohio works first program established under Chapter 5107, of the Revised Code, and for necessary orthopedic, surgical, and medical treatment, and special care as may be ordered by the court for any neglected, abused, dependent, or delinquent children. The board shall conduct a public hearing with respect to the written request submitted by the judge and shall appropriate such sum of money each year as it determines, after conducting the public hearing and considering the written request of the judge, is reasonably necessary to meet all the administrative expenses of the court. All disbursements from such appropriations shall be upon specifically itemized vouchers, certified to by the judge.

If the judge considers the appropriation made by the board pursuant to this section insufficient to meet all the administrative expenses of the court, the judge shall commence an action under Chapter 2731, of the Revised Code in the court of appeals for the judicial district for a determination of the duty of the board of county commissioners to appropriate the amount of money in dispute. The court of appeals shall give priority to the action filed by the juvenile judge over all cases pending on its docket. The burden shall be on the juvenile judge to prove that the appropriation requested is reasonably necessary to meet all administrative expenses of the court. If, prior to the filing of an action under Chapter 2731, of the Revised Code or during the pendency of the action, the judge exercises the judge's contempt power in order to obtain the sum of money in dispute, the judge shall not order the imprisonment of any member of the board of county commissioners notwithstanding sections 2705.02 to 2705.06 of the Revised Code.

Constitutionality

Revised Code § 2101.11(B), limiting the Ohio Supreme Court's jurisdiction in mandamus, is unconstitutional: State ex rel. Wilke v. Hamilton County Bd. of Comm'rs, 90 Ohio St. 3d 55, 734 N.E.2d 811, 2000 Ohio 13, (2000).

Revised Code § 2151.10, effective July 26, 1979, is an impermissible legislative encroachment upon the inherent powers of the judiciary, and is, therefore, unconstitutional: State ex rel. Johnston v. Taulbee, 66 Ohio St. 2d 417, 20 Ohio Op. 3d 361, 423 N.E.2d 80 (1981).

Generally

County commissioners must provide the funds requested by a probate court unless they can show that the requested funding is unreasonable and unnecessary: State ex rel. Morley v. Lordi, 72 Ohio St. 3d 510, 651 N.E.2d 937, 1995 Ohio 182, (1995).

It is presumed that a court's request for funding is reasonable and necessary for the proper administration of the court. Therefore, county commissioners must provide the funds requested by a court of common pleas unless they can show that the requested funding is unreasonable and unnecessary: State ex rel. Weaver v. Lake County Bd. of Comm'rs, 62 Ohio St. 3d 204, 580 N.E.2d 1090 (1991).

Under RC § 2151.10, it is the mandatory duty of the board of county commissioners to appropriate annually a sum of money sufficient to meet all the administrative expenses of the juvenile court of its county regardless of competing demands made upon such board by other branches of the county government: State ex rel. Milligan v. Freeman, 31 Ohio St. 2d 13, 60 Ohio Op. 2d 7, 285 N.E.2d 352 (1972).

By this section, the board of county commissioners is obligated to appropriate annually a sum of money sufficient to meet all the administrative expenses of the juvenile court of its county, including reasonable expenses of the judge and such officers and employees as he may designate in attending conferences: State ex rel. Ray v. South, 176 Ohio St. 241, 27 Ohio Op. 2d 133, 198 N.E.2d 919 (1964).

Under this section the juvenile court is the only "person or tribunal" empowered to incur obligations on behalf of the county for care and treatment of delinquent children: Cleveland v. Gorman, 87 Ohio App. 36, 42 Ohio Op. 278, 89 N.E.2d 605 (1949).

By the enactment of this section and GC § 1639-34 (RC § 2151.36) the legislature has granted to the juvenile court authority commensurate with its enlarged responsibility for the welfare of neglected, dependent or delinquent children. The court may obligate the county for the payment of expenses necessary to the proper discharge of its responsibility but it is not contemplated that such action will be taken where the welfare of such children is subserved adequately by their commitment to private or municipal institutions that voluntarily assume the expenses resulting therefrom: Cleveland v. Gorman, 87 Ohio App. 36, 42 Ohio Op. 278, 89 N.E.2d 605 (1949).

Under this section it is the duty of county commissioners to appropriate annually a sum of money sufficient to meet all the administrative expenses of the juvenile court in their county, inclusive of the salary and traveling expenses of a regularly appointed probation officer, and an action in mandamus will lie to compel the performance of such duty: State ex rel. Clarke v. Commissioners, 141 Ohio St. 16, 25 Ohio Op. 134, 46 N.E.2d 410 (1943).

Where, under division (B) of RC § 2151.35, a juvenile court commits a child to a specialized school in another state, the court, under RC § 2151.36, must itself pay expenses occasioned by the commitment and authorized by the court at the time of commitment, which expenses are paid out of funds appropriated to the court by the board of county commissioners under RC § 2151.10; and pursuant to RC § 2151.36, the court may order the parents, guardian, or person charged with the child's support to reimburse the court for such payments: 1962 OAG No. 2938 (1962).

Administrative expenses

Under the provisions of RC § 2151.10 determination of the necessary annual administrative expenses of the juvenile court lies solely within the sound discretion of the juvenile judge, and the board of county commissioners has no authority to substitute its judgment for that of the juvenile judge by appropriating an amount less than that requested: State ex rel. Foster v. Wittenberg, 16 Ohio St. 2d 89, 45 Ohio Op. 2d 442, 242 N.E.2d 884 (1968).

As used in RC §§ 2101.11 and 2151.10, "administrative expenses" of the juvenile and probate courts, respectively, include expenses of office equipment, stationery and supplies: State ex rel. Ray v. South, 176 Ohio St. 241, 27 Ohio Op. 2d 133, 198 N.E.2d 919 (1964).

The amount necessary for administrative expenses of the juvenile court lies in the sound discretion of the judge and not that of the board of county commissioners, and under the provisions of this section there is a mandatory duty on the board of county commissioners to appropriate the funds requested by a juvenile court judge for the operation of his court unless such request is for an amount which is so unreasonable as to constitute the request an abuse of discretion: State ex rel. Moorehead v. Reed, 177 Ohio St. 4, 28 Ohio Op. 2d 409, 201 N.E.2d 594 (1964).

Before moneys may be expended for administrative expenses, the county commissioners must find the necessity for such attendance and approve the expenditure of moneys so appropriated for such purpose: 1944 OAG No. 7006 (1944).

The provisions of this section and GC § 1639-18 (RC § 2151.13) are mandatory insofar as they refer to appropriations for compensation of a chief probation officer and the administrative expenses of the court; the county commissioners, therefore, must appropriate money for expenses authorized under this act from the date it becomes effective: 1937 OAG No. 1246 (1937).

Attendance at meetings etc.

A registration prepayment, approved by a board of county commissioners, which is made by a county officer, deputy or employee for a meeting of an association of county officers is an expense which may be reimbursed by the board of county commissioners under RC § 325.20, whether or not such authorized meeting is actually attended: 1964 OAG No. 760 (1964).

A board of county commissioners can only pass upon the reasonableness of expenses of a juvenile judge, or such officers or employees as he may designate, in attending conferences at which juvenile or welfare problems are discussed, provided that specifically itemized vouchers certified by the judge as stipulated in this section are submitted to the board of county commissioners: 1964 OAG No. 1296 (1964).

A board of county commissioners may make an allowance under RC § 325.20, for the expenses of a juvenile judge in attending the Ohio state and American bar association meetings and conventions, provided, there is some portion of these meetings devoted to discussion of juvenile or welfare problems: 1964 OAG No. 760 (1964).

Under this section, a juvenile judge and such officers and employees as he may designate may attend conferences at which juvenile or welfare problems are discussed without securing the approval of the board of county commissioners under RC § 325.20: 1964 OAG No. 1296 (1964).

Payment of the expenses of a juvenile judge, or such officers or employees as he designates, for attending conferences at which juvenile or welfare problems are discussed shall be upon the warrant of the county auditor pursuant to RC § 319.16, upon presentation of specifically itemized vouchers certified by the juvenile judge, as provided in this section, and allowed by the board of county commissioners: 1964 OAG No. 1296 (1964).

Authority of county commissioners

A board of county commissioners must provide the funds requested by a court of common pleas unless the board can show that the requested funding is unreasonable and unnecessary: State ex rel. Lake County Bd. of Comm'rs v. Hoose, 58 Ohio St. 3d 220, 569 N.E.2d 1046 (1991).

Mandamus will issue where the county commissioners fail to meet their burden of proving that the budget requests submitted for the probate and juvenile divisions of the court of common pleas were unreasonable and unnecessary: State ex rel. Rudes v. Rofkar, 15 Ohio St. 3d 69, 15 Ohio B. 163, 472 N.E.2d 354 (1984).

Under the provisions of RC § 2151.10, determination of the necessary annual administrative expenses of the juvenile court lies solely within the sound discretion of the juvenile court judge, and the board of county commissioners has no authority to substitute its judgment for that of the juvenile court judge by appropriating an amount less than that requested: State ex rel. Milligan v. Freeman, 31 Ohio St. 2d 13, 60 Ohio Op. 2d 7, 285 N.E.2d 352 (1972).

The provisions of this section are mandatory and it is the duty of the county commissioners to make appropriations for such purposes accordingly: State ex rel. Motter v. Atkinson, 146 Ohio St. 11, 31 Ohio Op. 472, 63 N.E.2d 440 (1945).

A board of county commissioners has no authority to approve or disapprove the travel expenses of a juvenile court judge. (1944 OAG No. 7006, p. 373, overruled; 1964 OAG No. 1296, p. 2-317, overruled to the extent it is inconsistent with this opinion): OAG No. 97-012 (1997).

The board of county commissioners is not authorized to dictate to the juvenile court the monthly or daily amount that will be expended for the support, care and maintenance of any child under the juvenile court's control: OAG No. 68-094 (1968).

Revised Code § 2151.10 imposes an absolute duty upon the board of county commissioners to appropriate an amount equal to that which is reasonably requested by a juvenile court judge, and that duty is unaffected by the availability or unavailability of unanticipated or unappropriated funds: OAG No. 68-094 (1968).

Authority of court

By attempting to usurp the legislative function of the county commissioners of conducting a budget hearing, the probate court judge acted in a patently and unambiguously unauthorized manner: State ex rel. Mahoning County Comm'rs v. Maloney, 100 Ohio St. 3d 248, 797 N.E.2d 1284, 2003 Ohio 5770, (2003).

A court's funding orders are presumed to be reasonable, and the county commissioners must rebut the presumption to justify noncompliance: State ex rel. Dellick v. Sherlock, 100 Ohio St. 3d 77, 796 N.E.2d 897, 2003 Ohio 5058, (2003).

When a board of county commissioners fails to appropriate funds under this section for the use of juvenile court in the maintenance and support of a dependent child, the juvenile court may not order the county auditor to issue a warrant for such purpose, as under RC § 5705.41, no expenditure of county funds may be made unless funds have been appropriated for that purpose; but the court may proceed against the board of county commissioners to compel it to appropriate the necessary funds: 1962 OAG No. 3489 (1962).

Under RC § 2151.35 a juvenile court may, upon finding that a child is neglected, dependent, or delinquent, commit the child to any person or institution meeting the requirements of RC §§ 5103.02 and 5103.03, even though a county child welfare board exists and could provide care and support for the child; and under this section, the board of county commissioners has a duty to appropriate each year such sum as will provide the court with necessary funds for the care, maintenance, education, and support of neglected, dependent and delinquent children: 1962 OAG No. 3489 (1962).

The authority of the juvenile court to expend public funds to publish and distribute pamphlets discussed: 1944 OAG No. 6877 (1944).

Child apprehended in another state

When a child charged with juvenile delinquency in this state is apprehended and detained by the officers of another state and such child is returned to this state without the issuance of a requisition by the governor, the fees charged by the officers of such other state for apprehending and detaining such child may be paid from the funds appropriated under this section for the care of delinquent children: 1956 OAG No. 7308 (1956).

Contempt

Regardless of statutory authorization, the judges of the courts of common pleas and their divisions have the inherent authority to determine in the first instance, in the exercise of sound discretion, the sum of money reasonable for the efficient operation of the court, and absent an abuse of discretion in the determination of such sum, may proceed either in contempt or mandamus to receive the necessary funding from their respective counties: State ex rel. Slaby v. Summit County Council, 7 Ohio App. 3d 199, 7 Ohio B. 258, 454 N.E.2d 1379 (1983).

When a judge undertakes to enforce his ex parte order, directing a board of county commissioners to purchase furnishings and equipment reasonably necessary for the proper and efficient operation of the court, by proceedings in contempt, the board has remedy by way of appeal only from the finding and order in the contempt proceedings: In re Furnishings for Courtroom Two, 66 Ohio St. 2d 427, 20 Ohio Op. 3d 367, 423 N.E.2d 86 (1981).

The county commissioners could not collaterally attack the court's appropriation request in an appeal from the judgment of contempt: In re Appropriation for 1979, 62 Ohio St. 2d 99, 16 Ohio Op. 3d 104, 403 N.E.2d 974 (1980).

Where the basic function of a court is impeded by a failure or refusal of the body responsible to provide a necessary appropriation, that court possesses the inherent power to order such appropriation and to enforce its order by contempt proceedings: State ex rel. Edwards v. Murray, 48 Ohio St. 2d 303, 2 Ohio Op. 3d 446, 358 N.E.2d 577 (1976).

Employee compensation

Mandamus action by court officials to secure the requested funding appropriation will be denied where the requested salary increases for court employees constitute an abuse of discretion: State ex rel. Britt v. Bd. of Franklin Cty. Commrs., 18 Ohio St. 3d 1, 18 Ohio B. 1, 480 N.E.2d 77 (1985).

The statutory limitation on appointee compensation, set forth in RC § 2101.11, may not validly be applied to the judge of the probate division of the court of common pleas when there has been no showing that the judge abused his discretion in establishing either the size or compensation ranges of his staff: State ex rel. Slaby v. Summit County Council, 7 Ohio App. 3d 199, 7 Ohio B. 258, 454 N.E.2d 1379 (1983).

Modification of budget request

A court may modify its budget request at any time if such modification is otherwise reasonable and necessary: State ex rel. Arbaugh v. Richland Cty. Bd. of Commrs., 14 Ohio St. 3d 5, 14 Ohio B. 311, 470 N.E.2d 880 (1984).

(A) Except as otherwise provided in this division, whenever a court of common pleas, division of domestic relations, exercises the powers and jurisdictions conferred in Chapters 2151. and 2152. of the Revised Code, the judge or judges of that division or, if applicable, the judge of that division who specifically is designated by section 2301.03 of the Revised Code as being responsible for administering sections 2151.13, 2151.16, 2151.17, 2151.18, and 2152.71 of the Revised Code shall be the clerk of the court for all records filed with the court pursuant to Chapter 2151. or 2152. of the Revised Code or pursuant to any other section of the Revised Code that requires documents to be filed with a juvenile judge or a juvenile court. If, in a division of domestic relations of a court of common pleas that exercises the powers and jurisdiction conferred in Chapters 2151. and 2152. of the Revised Code, the judge of the division, both judges in a two-judge division, or a majority of the judges in a division with three or more judges and the clerk of the court of common pleas agree in an agreement that is signed by the agreeing judge or judges and the clerk and entered into formally in the journal of the court, the clerk of courts of common pleas shall keep the records filed with the court pursuant to Chapter 2151. or 2152. of the Revised Code or pursuant to any other section of the Revised Code that requires documents to be filed with a juvenile judge or a juvenile court.

Whenever the juvenile judge, or a majority of the juvenile judges of a multi-judge juvenile division, of a court of common pleas, juvenile division, and the clerk of the court of common pleas agree in an agreement that is signed by the judge and the clerk and entered formally in the journal of the court, the clerks of courts of common pleas shall keep the records of those courts. In all other cases, the juvenile judge shall be the clerk of the judge's own court.

(B) In counties in which the juvenile judge is clerk of the judge's own court, before entering upon the duties of office as the clerk, the judge shall execute and file with the county treasurer a bond in a sum to be determined by the board of county commissioners, with sufficient surety to be approved by the board, conditioned for the faithful performance of duties as clerk. The bond shall be given for the benefit of the county, the state, or any person who may suffer loss by reason of a default in any of the conditions of the bond.

Judges

Generally

Because the Richland County court of common pleas, division of domestic relations, exercises the powers and jurisdiction of a juvenile court, the clerk of the Richland County court of common pleas is required by RC § 2151.12 to keep the juvenile court records: OAG No. 95-026 (1995).

Judges

Under RC §§ 2151.08 and 2151.12, the judge of the juvenile court of Hamilton county is not the clerk of his own court, when exercising the powers and jurisdictions conferred in RC § 2151.01 to 2151.54, inclusive, charged with keeping the records sought by such minor: State ex rel. Hibbard v. Hoffman, 101 Ohio App. 547, 1 Ohio Op. 2d 454, 137 N.E.2d 606 (1955).

The juvenile judge may appoint such bailiffs, probation officers, and other employees as are necessary and may designate their titles and fix their duties, compensation, and expense allowances. The juvenile court may by entry on its journal authorize any deputy clerk to administer oaths when necessary in the discharge of his duties. Such employees shall serve during the pleasure of the judge.

The compensation and expenses of all employees and the salary and expenses of the judge shall be paid in semimonthly installments by the county treasurer from the money appropriated for the operation of the court, upon the warrant of the county auditor, certified to by the judge.

The judge may require any employee to give bond in the sum of not less than one thousand dollars, conditioned for the honest and faithful performance of his duties. The sureties on such bonds shall be approved in the manner provided by section 2151.12 of the Revised Code. The judge shall not be personally liable for the default, misfeasance, or nonfeasance of any employee from whom a bond has been required.

Civil service generally

Under RC §§ 2301.03(1)(2) and 2151.13, juvenile court employees are unclassified: State ex rel. Hunter v. Summit County

Human Resource Comm'n, 81 Ohio St. 3d 450, 692 N.E.2d 185, 1998 Ohio 614, (1998).

A county visitor appointed from a civil service eligible list by a juvenile court judge may be dismissed at the latter's discretion in accordance with this section: State ex rel. Haskins v. Tyroler, 63 Ohio App. 88, 16 Ohio Op. 378, 25 N.E.2d 309 (1939), [affirmed, 137 Ohio St. 24, 17 Ohio Op. 335, 27 N.E.2d 931.]

A person employed within a juvenile court as chief probation officer and who also acts as county visitor for aid to dependent children serves under the provisions of this section, and is, therefore, within the unclassified civil service: 1939 OAG No. 1123 (1939).

The new juvenile court code expressly takes out of the classified service of the civil service the employees and officers mentioned in this section, all of whom must be appointed by the juvenile court judge and hold their positions subject to his pleasure: 1937 OAG No. 1190 (1937).

When two or more probation officers are appointed by the court, one of them must be known as chief probation officer: 1917 OAG vol. 1, p. 403 (1917).

Compatibility of positions

The position of county personnel officer is compatible with the position of court appointed volunteer of a juvenile court: OAG No. 91-067 (1991).

The offices of township trustee and juvenile probation officer are compatible: OAG No. 73-035 (1973).

The office of probation officer for the juvenile court and that of secret service officer for the prosecuting attorney are compatible and there is no legal reason why one individual may not serve in the two offices at the same time, providing that it is physically possible to properly attend to the duties of both: 1957 OAG No. 461 (1957).

In the event it is found physically possible for one person to hold both offices, there is no incompatibility in the offices of probation officer in the juvenile court, and executive secretary of the child welfare board, in the same county: 1951 OAG No. 961 (1951).

A deputy sheriff employed full time, as such, may not lawfully be employed as a probation officer of the juvenile court: 1949 OAG No. 1076 (1949), [1913 OAG No. 633 approved and followed].

The positions of probation officer of the juvenile court and relief administrator of a city are not in themselves incompatible: 1941 OAG No. 3410 (1941).

The offices of a member of the county board of education and probation officer are incompatible: 1933 OAG No. 1926 (1933).

The sheriff of a county may not be appointed or act as probation officer: 1918 OAG vol. 1, p. 120 (1918).

The superintendent of a detention home may also be appointed probation officer: 1918 OAG vol. 1, p. 145 (1918).

There is no statutory inhibition against the same person holding the position of humane officer and probation officer of the juvenile court: 1915 OAG vol. 1, p. 542 (1915).

Employment agreements

An administrative judge of the juvenile division of a court of common pleas is not authorized to enter into an employment agreement with employees of the court: Malone v. Court of Common Pleas, 45 Ohio St. 2d 245, 74 Ohio Op. 2d 413 (1976).

Expense allowance

A juvenile judge, acting under this section, may fix as the expense allowance of a bailiff, probation officer, or other employee appointed under this section a fixed sum to be paid periodically, provided that the amount paid shall never exceed the amount of actual compensable expense incurred in that period: 1958 OAG No. 2208 (1958).

Termination of employees

Where the code governed the employment of juvenile court employees, the court held that a county board of commissioners had no special relationship with a former juvenile corrections officer who was terminated for trading movie ticket booklets for items of lesser value, and therefore, it was not an appropriate defendant in the former employee's employment discrimination action. Burton v. Hamilton County Juvenile Court, — F. Supp. 2d —, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 39775 (S.D. Ohio Dec. 5, 2005), dismissed by 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 718 (S.D. Ohio Jan. 10, 2006).

The administrative judge of the juvenile division has the authority to terminate at will the employment of employees of a juvenile detention center: Abbott v. Stepanik, 64 Ohio App. 3d 719, 582 N.E.2d 1082 (1990).

§ 2151.14 Duties and powers of probation department; records; command assistance.

(A) The chief probation officer, under the direction of the juvenile judge, shall have charge of the work of the probation department. The department shall make any investigations that the judge directs, keep a written record of the investigations, and submit the record to the judge or deal with them as the judge directs. The department shall furnish to any person placed on community control a statement of the conditions of community control and shall instruct the person regarding them. The department shall keep informed concerning the conduct and condition of each person under its supervision and shall report on their conduct and condition to the judge as the judge directs. Each probation officer shall use all suitable methods to aid persons on community control and to bring about improvement in their conduct and condition. The department shall keep full records of its work, keep accurate and complete accounts of money collected from persons under its supervision, give receipts for the money, and make reports on the money as the judge directs.

(B) Except as provided in this division or in division (C) or (D) of this section, the reports and records of the department shall be considered confidential information and shall not be made public. If an officer is preparing pursuant to section 2947.06 or 2951.03 of the Revised Code or Criminal Rule 32.2 a presentence investigation report pertaining to a person, the department shall make available to the officer, for use in preparing the report, any reports and records it possesses regarding any adjudications of that person as a delinquent child or regarding the dispositions made relative to those adjudications. A probation officer may serve the process of the court within or without the county, make arrests without warrant upon reasonable information or upon view of the violation of this chapter or Chapter 2152. of the Revised Code, detain the person arrested pending the issuance of a warrant, and perform any other duties, incident to the office, that the judge directs. All sheriffs, deputy sheriffs, constables, marshals, deputy marshals, chiefs of police, municipal corporation and township police officers, and other peace officers shall render assistance to probation officers in the performance of their duties when requested to do so by any probation officer.

(C) When a complaint has been filed alleging that a child is delinquent by reason of having committed an act that would constitute a violation of section 2907.02, 2907.03, 2907.05, or 2907.06 of the Revised Code if committed by an adult and the arresting authority, a court, or a probation officer discovers that the child or a person whom the child caused to engage in sexual activity, as defined in section 2907.01 of the Revised Code, has a communicable disease, the arresting authority, court, or probation officer immediately shall notify the victim of the delinquent act of the nature of the disease.

(D)(1) In accordance with division (D)(2) of this section, subject to the limitation specified in division (D)(4)

of this section, and in connection with a disposition pursuant to section 2151.354 [2151.35.4] of the Revised Code when a child has been found to be an unruly child, a disposition pursuant to sections 2152.19 and 2152.20 of the Revised Code when a child has been found to be a delinquent child, or a disposition pursuant to sections 2152.20 and 2152.21 of the Revised Code when a child has been found to be a juvenile traffic offender, the court may issue an order requiring boards of education, governing bodies of chartered nonpublic schools, public children services agencies, private child placing agencies, probation departments, law enforcement agencies, and prosecuting attorneys that have records related to the child in question to provide copies of one or more specified records, or specified information in one or more specified records, that the individual or entity has with respect to the child to any of the following individuals or entities that request the records in accordance with division (D)(3)(a) of this section:

- (a) The child;
- (b) The attorney or guardian ad litem of the child;
- (c) A parent, guardian, or custodian of the child;
- (d) A prosecuting attorney;
- (e) A board of education of a public school district;
- (f) A probation department of a juvenile court;
- (g) A public children services agency or private child placing agency that has custody of the child, is providing services to the child or the child's family, or is preparing a social history or performing any other function for the juvenile court;

(h) The department of youth services when the department has custody of the child or is performing any services for the child that are required by the juvenile court or by statute;

(i) The individual in control of a juvenile detention or rehabilitation facility to which the child has been committed;

(j) An employee of the juvenile court that found the child to be an unruly child, a delinquent child, or a juvenile traffic offender;

(k) Any other entity that has custody of the child or is providing treatment, rehabilitation, or other services for the child pursuant to a court order, statutory requirement, or other arrangement.

(2) Any individual or entity listed in divisions (D)(1)(a) to (k) of this section may file a motion with the court that requests the court to issue an order as described in division (D)(1) of this section. If such a motion is filed, the court shall conduct a hearing on it. If at the hearing the movant demonstrates a need for one or more specified records, or for information in one or more specified records, related to the child in question and additionally demonstrates the relevance of the information sought to be obtained from those records, and if the court determines that the limitation specified in division (D)(4) of this section does not preclude the provision of a specified record or specified information to the movant, then the court may issue an order to a designated individual or entity to provide the movant with copies of one or more specified records or with specified information contained in one or more specified records.

(3)(a) Any individual or entity that is authorized by an order issued pursuant to division (D)(1) of this section to obtain copies of one or more specified records, or specified information, related to a particular child may file a written request for copies of the records or for the information with any individual or entity required by the order to provide copies of the records or the information. The request shall be in writing, describe the type of records or the information requested, explain the need for the records or the information, and be accompanied by a copy of the order.

(b) If an individual or entity that is required by an order issued pursuant to division (D)(1) of this section to provide one or more specified records, or specified information, related to a child receives a written request for the records or information in accordance with division (D)(3)(a) of this section, the individual or entity immediately shall comply with the request to the extent it is able to do so, unless the individual or entity determines that it is unable to comply with the request because it is prohibited by law from doing so, or unless the requesting individual or entity does not have authority to obtain the requested records or information. If the individual or entity determines that it is unable to comply with the request, it shall file a motion with the court that issued the order requesting the court to determine the extent to which it is required to comply with the request for records or information. Upon the filing of the motion, the court immediately shall hold a hearing on the motion, determine the extent to which the movant is required to comply with the request for records or information, and issue findings of fact and conclusions of law in support of its determination. The determination of the court shall be final. If the court determines that the movant is required to comply with the request for records or information, it shall identify the specific records or information that must be supplied to the individual or entity that requested the records or information.

(c) If an individual or entity is required to provide copies of one or more specified records pursuant to division (D) of this section, the individual or entity may charge a fee for the copies that does not exceed the cost of supplying them.

(4) Division (D) of this section does not require, authorize, or permit the dissemination of any records or any information contained in any records if the dissemination of the records or information generally is prohibited by any provision of the Revised Code and a specific provision of the Revised Code does not specifically authorize or permit the dissemination of the records or information pursuant to division (D) of this section.

Authority of officers

Under the provisions of RC §§ 2151.14 and 2151.31, it is the manifest duty of enforcement officers to co-operate with and assist the juvenile authorities in the performance of their duties when such officers are specifically requested to do so by the juvenile authorities; and such officers may avoid liability in an action for false imprisonment by showing that they were justified in the detention or restraint of the juvenile made under the specific direction and order of the juvenile authorities: Garland v. Dustman, 19 Ohio App. 2d 292, 48 Ohio Op. 2d 408, 251 N.E.2d 153 (1969).

Compatible offices

The offices of township trustee and juvenile probation officer are compatible: OAG No. 73-035 (1973).

Cross-examination

Although Ohio law generally protects a minor from the exposure of his acts in another judicial forum, paragraph (G) of this section, does not prohibit the cross-examination, in a criminal trial, of a defendant, or defendant's witnesses, concerning a prior juvenile record, where the defendant's evidence attempts to establish his good character: State v. Hale, 21 Ohio App. 2d 207, 50 Ohio Op. 2d 340, 256 N.E.2d 239 (1969).

Disclosure of information

Where a minor and a parent executed waivers pursuant to RC § 1347.08, permitting access to the minor's juvenile records and the records concerning the minor's criminal history were relevant to prove the issues of notice and foreseeability in a civil action, good cause was demonstrated; consequently, the trial court did not abuse its discretion or breach the confidentiality considerations of RC §§ 2151.14 and 5153.17, and Ohio R. Juv. P. 32 in compelling production of the records under Ohio R. Civ. P. 26(B)(1). Grant v. Discovery for Youth, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 701, 2005 Ohio 680, (2005).

The federal constitution does not encompass a general right to nondisclosure of private information. Thus disclosure of juvenile court records, including individual social histories, to appropriate governmental and social agencies is not unconstitutional: J.P. v. DeSanti, 653 F.2d 1080 (6th Cir. 1981).

An informal procedure is distinguished from the formal procedure by the fact that no written pleadings are filed, and the case is not docketed or recorded, but memoranda are made and kept in the social files of the court which, under the provisions of this section, are confidential: In re Douglas, 82 Ohio L. Ab. 170, 11 Ohio Op. 2d 340, 164 N.E.2d 475 (JC 1959).

The provisions of this section, that "the reports and records of the [probation] department [of the juvenile court] shall be considered confidential information and shall not be made public," apply only to the probation department of the juvenile court and have no application to cases where juvenile delinquents have been sentenced and committed to a state institution: State v. Sherow, 101 Ohio App. 169, 1 Ohio Op. 2d 100, 138 N.E.2d 444 (1956).

Pursuant to JuvR 32(B), 37(B) and RC § 2151.14, juvenile court records, the records of social, mental and physical examinations pursuant to court order, and records of the juvenile court probation department are not public records under RC § 149.43: OAG No. 90-101 (1990).

Polygraph examinations

Submission to polygraph examinations is a reasonable requirement of probation: In re D.S., 160 Ohio App. 3d 552, 828 N.E.2d 143, 2005 Ohio 1803, (2005), reversed by 111 Ohio St. 3d 361, 2006 Ohio 5851, 856 N.E.2d 921, 2006 Ohio LEXIS 3275 (2006).

[§ 2151.14.1] § 2151.141 Request for copies of records concerning child alleged to be abused, neglected or dependent.

(B)(1) Any board of education, governing body of a chartered nonpublic school, public children services agency, private child placing agency, probation department, law enforcement agency, or prosecuting attorney that has any records related to a child who is the subject of a complaint as described in division (A) of this section and that receives a request for a copy of the records pursuant to division (A) of this section shall comply with the request, unless the individual or entity determines that it is unable to do so because it is prohibited by law from complying with the request, the request does not comply with division (A) of this section, or a complaint as described in division (A) of this section has not been filed with respect to the child who is the subject of the requested records. If the individual or entity determines that it is unable to comply with the request, it shall file a motion with the court in which the complaint as described in division (A) of this section was filed or was alleged to have been filed requesting the court to determine the extent to which it is required to comply with the request for records. Upon the filing of the motion, the court immediately shall hold a hearing on the motion, determine the extent to which the movant is required to comply with the request for records, and issue findings of fact and conclusions of law in support of its determination. The determination of the court shall be final. If the court determines that the movant is required to comply with the request for records, it shall identify the specific records that must be supplied to the individual or entity that requested them.

(2) In addition to or in lieu of the motion described in division (B)(1) of this section, a law enforcement agency or prosecuting attorney that receives a request for a copy of records pursuant to division (A) of this section may file a motion for a protective order as described in this division with the court in which the complaint as described in division (A) of this section was filed or alleged to have been filed. Upon the filing of a motion of that nature, the court shall conduct a hearing on the motion. If at the hearing the law enforcement agency or prosecuting attorney demonstrates that any of the following applies and if, after considering the purposes for which the records were requested pursuant to division (A) of this section, the best interest of the child, and any demonstrated need to prevent specific information in the records from being disclosed, the court determines that the issuance of a protective order is necessary, then the court shall issue a protective order that appropriately limits the disclosure of one or more specified records or specified information in one or more specified records:

(a) The records or information in the records relate to a case in which the child is alleged to be a delinquent child or a case in which a child is transferred for trial as an adult pursuant to section 2152.12 of the Revised Code and Juvenile Rule 30, and the adjudication hearing in the case, the trial in the case, or other disposition of the case has not been concluded.

(b) The records in question, or the records containing the information in question, are confidential law enforcement investigatory records, as defined in section 149.43 of the Revised Code.

(c) The records or information in the records relate to a case in which the child is or was alleged to be a delinquent child or to a case in which a child is or was transferred for trial as an adult pursuant to section 2152.12 of the Revised Code and Juvenile Rule 30; another case is pending against any child or any adult in which the child is alleged to be a delinquent child, the child is so transferred for trial as an adult, or the adult is alleged to be a criminal offender; the allegations in the case to which the records or information relate and the allegations in the other case are based on the same act or transaction, are based on two or more connected transactions or constitute parts of a common scheme or plan, or are part of a course of criminal conduct; and the adjudication hearing in, trial in, or other disposition of the other case has not been concluded.

(C) If an individual or entity is required to provide copies of records pursuant to this section, the individual or entity may charge a fee for the copies that does not exceed the cost of supplying them.

(D) This section does not require, authorize, or permit, the dissemination of any records or any information contained in any records if the dissemination of the records or information generally is prohibited by section 2151.142 [2151.14.2] or another section of the Revised Code and a waiver as described in division (B)(1) of section 2151.142 [2151.14.2] of the Revised Code or a specific provision of the Revised Code does not specifically authorize or permit the dissemination of the records or information pursuant to this section.

Generally

Sealing of records

Generally

Pursuant to RC § 2151.14.1, when a complaint alleging abuse, neglect, or dependency of a child is filed under RC § 2151.27, a request directed to a public children services agency or the prosecuting attorney for "any records related to the child" must be granted or denied by following the procedures set forth in RC § 2151.14.1: OAG No. 91-003 (1991).

Sealing of records

Records of a county children's services board investigation made pursuant to RC §§ 5153.17 and 2151.14.1 are "official records" within the meaning of RC § 2953.52: State v. S.R., 63 Ohio St. 3d 590, 589 N.E.2d 1319 (1992).

[§ 2151.14.2] § 2151.142 Confidentiality of residential addresses of public children services agency or private child placing agency personnel.

(A) As used in this section, "public record" and "journalist" have the same meanings as in section 149.43 of the Revised Code.

(B) Both of the following apply to the residential address of each officer or employee of a public children services agency or a private child placing agency who performs official responsibilities or duties described in section 2151.14, 2151.141 [2151.14.1], 2151.33, 2151.353 [2151.35.3], 2151.412 [2151.41.2], 2151.413 [2151.41.3], 2151.414 [2151.41.4], 2151.415 [2151.41.5], 2151.416 [2151.41.6], 2151.417 [2151.41.7], or 2151.421 [2151.42.1] or another section of the Revised Code and to the residential address of persons related to that officer or employee by consanguinity or affinity:

(1) Other officers and employees of a public children services agency, private child placing agency, juvenile court, or law enforcement agency shall consider those residential addresses to be confidential information. The officer or employee of the public children services agency or private child placing agency may waive the confidentiality of those residential addresses by giving express permission for their disclosure to other officers or employees of a public children services agency, private child placing agency, juvenile court, or law enforcement agency.

(2) To the extent that those residential addresses are contained in public records kept by a public children services agency, private child placing agency, juvenile court, or law enforcement agency, they shall not be considered to be information that is subject to inspection or copying as part of a public record under section 149.43 of the Revised Code.

(C) Except as provided in division (D) of this section, in the absence of a waiver as described in division (B)(1) of this section, no officer or employee of a public children services agency, private child placing agency, juvenile court, or law enforcement agency shall disclose the residential address of an officer or employee of a public children services agency or private child placing agency, or the residential address of a person related to that officer or employee by consanguinity or affinity, that is confidential information under division (B)(1) of this section to any person, when the disclosing officer or employee knows that the person is or may be a subject of an investigation, interview, examination, criminal case, other case, or other matter with which the officer or employee to whom the residential address relates currently is or has been associated.

(D) If, on or after the effective date of this section, a journalist requests a public children services agency, private child placing agency, juvenile court, or law enforcement agency to disclose a residential address that is confidential information under division (B)(1) of this section, the agency or juvenile court shall disclose to the journalist the residential address if all of the following apply:

(1) The request is in writing, is signed by the journalist, includes the journalist's name and title, and includes the name and address of the journalist's employer.

(2) The request states that disclosure of the residential address would be in the public interest.

(3) The request adequately identifies the person whose residential address is requested.

(4) The public children services agency, private child placing agency, juvenile court, or law enforcement agency receiving the request is one of the following:

(a) The agency or juvenile court with which the official in question serves or with which the employee in question is employed;

(b) The agency or juvenile court that has custody of the records of the agency with which the official in question serves or with which the employee in question is employed.

Generally

The action of a juvenile court in postponing a hearing on a matter submitted to a referee who failed to file findings and recommendations and in rectifying such deficiency by taking additional testimony and, thereafter, rendering a decision constitutes a substantial compliance with this section, which sets forth the duties of juvenile court referees: In re Cutman, 22 Ohio App. 2d 125, 51 Ohio Op. 2d 252, 259 N.E.2d 128 (1969).

The practice of hearings before referees is recognized procedure in the juvenile court: Allstate Ins. Co. v. Cook, 26 Ohio Op. 2d 192, 324 F.2d 752 (6th Cir. 1963).

A referee of the juvenile court appointed pursuant to this section has functions and duties similar to those of a master commissioner appointed pursuant to GC §§ 11487 to 11492 (RC §§ 2315.38 to 2315.43), inclusive: DeVillie v. DeVillie, 87 Ohio App. 220, 42 Ohio Op. 423, 94 N.E.2d 474 (1949).

The findings and recommendations by the referee are required by statute to be in writing; and since the findings and recommendations so certified to the trial judge must be in writing, the findings and recommendations, of which the parties shall have notice, shall likewise be in writing: In re Hobson, 44 Ohio L. Ab. 86, 62 N.E.2d 510 (App 1945).

Compatibility of offices

A person may serve as a part-time administrative hearing officer for a county child support enforcement agency and part-time magistrate of a court of common pleas in an adjacent county, provided that as a magistrate she does not preside over cases involving the child support enforcement agency that employs her as an administrative hearing officer. (1989 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 89-072, distinguished.) Opinion No. 2005-022 (2005).

Hearing by court

An evidentiary hearing before the juvenile court judge is discretionary under RC § 2151.16 after a hearing before a juvenile court referee: In re Stall, 36 Ohio St. 2d 139, 65 Ohio Op. 2d 338, 304 N.E.2d 596 (1973).

Investigator

While the juvenile court has authority by this section to appoint a referee with power of masters in chancery to hear a case and report his findings and recommendations to the judge, there is no such statutory provision with reference to an investigating counselor, and the action and report of such counselor is ex parte and does not constitute the hearing of "additional testimony" by the judge under such statute: Dolgin v. Dolgin, 1 Ohio App. 2d 430, 30 Ohio Op. 2d 435, 205 N.E.2d 106 (1965).

Trial of adult

A juvenile judge has no authority to commit the trial of a criminal charge against an adult to a referee and any proceedings so committed are null and void: State v. Eddington, 52 Ohio App. 2d 312, 6 Ohio Op. 3d 317, 369 N.E.2d 1054 (1976).

Except as otherwise provided by rules promulgated by the supreme court, the juvenile court may prescribe rules regulating the docketing and hearing of causes, motions, and demurrers, and such other matters as are necessary for the orderly conduct of its business and the prevention of delay, and for the government of its officers and employees, including their conduct, duties, hours, expenses, leaves of absence, and vacations.

(A) The juvenile court shall maintain records of all official cases brought before it, including, but not limited to, an appearance docket, a journal, and records of the type required by division (A)(2) of section 2151.35 of the Revised Code. The parents, guardian, or other custodian of any child affected, if living, or the nearest of kin of the child, if the parents would be entitled to inspect the records but are deceased, may inspect these records, either in person or by counsel, during the hours in which the court is open.

(B) Not later than June of each year, the court shall prepare an annual report covering the preceding calendar year showing the number and kinds of cases that have come before it, the disposition of the cases, and any other data pertaining to the work of the court that the juvenile judge directs. The court shall file copies of the report with the board of county commissioners. With the approval of the board, the court may print or cause to be printed copies of the report for distribution to persons and agencies interested in the court or community program for dependent, neglected, abused, or delinquent children and juvenile traffic offenders. The court shall include the number of copies ordered printed and the estimated cost of each printed copy on each copy of the report printed for distribution.

Administrative expenses

Expenses incurred by the county sheriff in serving summonses, warrants, citations, subpoenas, writs, and other papers issued by the juvenile court in connection with cases that are filed in the juvenile court shall, pursuant to RC § 2151.19, be paid out of the monthly allowance that is made available therefor by the board of county commissioners under RC § 325.07. Such expenses shall not be taxed and collected by the juvenile court as fees or costs under RC § 2151.54: OAG No. 89-086 (1989).

The sheriff has no authority to arrest a delinquent child outside of the state and is not entitled to a fee or expenses for so doing: 1918 OAG vol. 1, p. 980 (1918).

Immunity of officer

On grounds of public policy, an administrative or executive officer, whether he be constable, policeman, game warden, sheriff, or any other authorized officer of the state, whose duty it is under the law to serve the process of a court having jurisdiction of an offense sought to be charged in a complaint by affidavit, information or indictment, but which complaint is insufficient in law, is exempt from any liability arising from an imprisonment by virtue of such process, which is prima facie regular: Brinkman v. Drolesbaugh, 97 Ohio St. 171, 119 N.E. 451 (1918).

Juvenile courts within the probate court shall have a seal which shall consist of the coat of arms of the state within a circle one and one-fourth inches in diameter and shall be surrounded by the words "juvenile court... county."

The seal of other courts exercising the powers and jurisdiction conferred in sections 2151.01 to 2151.54, inclusive, of the Revised Code, shall be attached to all writs and processes.

Immunity grant

Generally

The power to punish for contempt is an inherent power of the juvenile court: State v. Hershberger, 77 Ohio L. Ab. 487, 150 N.E.2d 671 (JC 1958).

Immunity grant

A juvenile court has authority to grant immunity under RC § 2945.44, even though there was not any criminal proceeding pending against the "grantee" of the immunity, and even though the grantee was not a witness at the time of the grant: In re Poth, 2 Ohio App. 3d 361, 2 Ohio B. 417, 442 N.E.2d 105 (1981).

No employer shall discharge or terminate from employment, threaten to discharge or terminate from employment, or otherwise punish or penalize any employee because of time lost from regular employment as a result of the employee's attendance at any proceeding pursuant to a subpoena under this chapter or Chapter 2152. of the Revised Code. This section generally does not require and shall not be construed to require an employer to pay an employee for time lost as a result of attendance at any proceeding under either chapter. However, if an employee is subpoenaed to appear at a proceeding under either chapter and the proceeding pertains to an offense against the employer or an offense involving the employee during the course of the employee's employment, the employer shall not decrease or withhold the employee's pay for any time lost as a result of compliance with the subpoena. Any employer who knowingly violates this section is in contempt of court.

Wrongful discharge

An exception to the employment-at-will doctrine exists in Ohio creating a cause of action for wrongful discharge in violation of public policy as articulated in a specific statute, e.g., RC § 2313.18, jury duty. (Greeley v. Miami Valley Maintenance Contrs., Inc. [1990], 49 OS3d 228, 551 NE2d 981, applied); Shaffer v. Frontrunner, Inc., 57 Ohio App. 3d 18, 566 N.E.2d 193 (1990).

The term of any juvenile or domestic relations court, whether a division of the court of common pleas or an independent court, is one calendar year. All actions and other business pending at the expiration of any term of court is automatically continued without further order. The judge may adjourn court or continue any case whenever, in his opinion, such continuance is warranted.

Sessions of the court may be held at such places throughout the county as the judge shall from time to time determine.

Effective until 1-1-08.

(A) The juvenile court has exclusive original jurisdiction under the Revised Code as follows:

(1) Concerning any child who on or about the date specified in the complaint, indictment, or information is alleged to have violated section 2151.87 of the Revised Code or an order issued under that section or to be a juvenile traffic offender or a delinquent, unruly, abused, neglected, or dependent child and, based on and in relation to the allegation pertaining to the child, concerning the parent, guardian, or other person having care of a child who, is alleged to be an unruly or delinquent child for being an habitual or chronic truant;

(2) Subject to divisions (G) and (V) of section 2301.03 of the Revised Code, to determine the custody of any child not a ward of another court of this state;

(3) To hear and determine any application for a writ of habeas corpus involving the custody of a child;

(4) To exercise the powers and jurisdiction given the probate division of the court of common pleas in Chapter 5122. of the Revised Code, if the court has probable cause to believe that a child otherwise within the jurisdiction of the court is a mentally ill person subject to hospitalization by court order, as defined in section 5122.01 of the Revised Code;

(5) To hear and determine all criminal cases charging adults with the violation of any section of this chapter;

(6) To hear and determine all criminal cases in which an adult is charged with a violation of division (C) of section 2919.21, division (B)(1) of section 2919.22, section 2919.222 [2919.22.2], division (B) of section 2919.23, or section 2919.24 of the Revised Code, provided the charge is not included in an indictment that also charges the alleged adult offender with the commission of a felony arising out of the same actions that are the basis of the alleged violation of division (C) of section 2919.21, division (B)(1) of section 2919.22, section 2919.222 [2919.22.2], division (B) of section 2919.23, or section 2919.24 of the Revised Code;

(7) Under the interstate compact on juveniles in section 2151.56 of the Revised Code;

(8) Concerning any child who is to be taken into custody pursuant to section 2151.31 of the Revised Code, upon being notified of the intent to take the child into custody and the reasons for taking the child into custody;

(9) To hear and determine requests for the extension of temporary custody agreements, and requests for court approval of permanent custody agreements, that are filed pursuant to section 5103.15 of the Revised Code;

(10) To hear and determine applications for consent to marry pursuant to section 3101.04 of the Revised Code;

(11) Subject to divisions (G) and (V) of section 2301.03 of the Revised Code, to hear and determine a request for an order for the support of any child if the request is not ancillary to an action for divorce, dissolution of marriage, annulment, or legal separation, a criminal or civil action involving an allegation of domestic violence, or an action for support brought under Chapter 3115. of the Revised Code;

(12) Concerning an action commenced under section 3121.38 of the Revised Code;

(13) To hear and determine violations of section 3321.38 of the Revised Code;

(14) To exercise jurisdiction and authority over the parent, guardian, or other person having care of a child alleged to be a delinquent child, unruly child, or juvenile traffic offender, based on and in relation to the allegation pertaining to the child;

(15) To conduct the hearings, and to make the determinations, adjudications, and orders authorized or required under sections 2152.82 to 2152.85 and Chapter 2950. of the Revised Code regarding a child who has been adjudicated a delinquent child and to refer the duties conferred upon the juvenile court judge under sections 2152.82 to 2152.85 and Chapter 2950. of the Revised Code to magistrates appointed by the juvenile court judge in accordance with Juvenile Rule 40.

(B) Except as provided in divisions (G) and (I) of section 2301.03 of the Revised Code, the juvenile court has original jurisdiction under the Revised Code:

(1) To hear and determine all cases of misdemeanors charging adults with any act or omission with respect to any child, which act or omission is a violation of any state law or any municipal ordinance;

(2) To determine the paternity of any child alleged to have been born out of wedlock pursuant to sections 3111.01 to 3111.18 of the Revised Code;

(3) Under the uniform interstate family support act in Chapter 3115. of the Revised Code;

(4) To hear and determine an application for an order for the support of any child, if the child is not a ward of another court of this state;

(5) To hear and determine an action commenced under section 3111.28 of the Revised Code;

(6) To hear and determine a motion filed under section 3119.961 [3119.96.1] of the Revised Code;

(7) To receive filings under section 3109.74 of the Revised Code, and to hear and determine actions arising under sections 3109.51 to 3109.80 of the Revised Code.

(8) To enforce an order for the return of a child made under the Hague Convention on the Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction pursuant to section 3127.32 of the Revised Code;

(9) To grant any relief normally available under the laws of this state to enforce a child custody determination made by a court of another state and registered in accordance with section 3127.35 of the Revised Code.

(C) The juvenile court, except as to juvenile courts that are a separate division of the court of common pleas or a separate and independent juvenile court, has jurisdiction to hear, determine, and make a record of any action for divorce or legal separation that involves the custody or care of children and that is filed in the court of common pleas and certified by the court of common pleas with all the papers filed in the action to the juvenile court for trial, provided that no certification of that nature shall be made to any juvenile court unless the consent of the juvenile judge first is obtained. After a certification of that nature is made and consent is obtained, the juvenile court shall proceed as if the action originally had been begun in that court, except as to awards for spousal support or support due and unpaid at the time of certification, over which the juvenile court has no jurisdiction.

(D) The juvenile court, except as provided in divisions (G) and (I) of section 2301.03 of the Revised Code, has jurisdiction to hear and determine all matters as to custody and support of children duly certified by the court of common pleas to the juvenile court after a divorce decree has been granted, including jurisdiction to modify the judgment and decree of the court of common pleas as the same relate to the custody and support of children.

(E) The juvenile court, except as provided in divisions (G) and (I) of section 2301.03 of the Revised Code, has jurisdiction to hear and determine the case of any child certified to the court by any court of competent jurisdiction if the child comes within the jurisdiction of the juvenile court as defined by this section.

(F)(1) The juvenile court shall exercise its jurisdiction in child custody matters in accordance with sections 3109.04, 3127.01 to 3127.53, and 5103.20 to 5103.22 of the Revised Code.

(2) The juvenile court shall exercise its jurisdiction in child support matters in accordance with section 3109.05 of the Revised Code.

(G) Any juvenile court that makes or modifies an order for child support shall comply with Chapters 3119., 3121., 3123., and 3125. of the Revised Code. If any person required to pay child support under an order made by a juvenile court on or after April 15, 1985, or modified on or after December 1, 1986, is found in contempt of court for failure to make support payments under the order, the court that makes the finding, in addition to any other penalty or remedy imposed, shall assess all court costs arising out of the contempt proceeding against the person and require the person to pay any reasonable attorney's fees of any adverse party, as determined by the court, that arose in relation to the act of contempt.

(H) If a child who is charged with an act that would be an offense if committed by an adult was fourteen years of age or older and under eighteen years of age at the time of the alleged act and if the case is transferred for criminal prosecution pursuant to section 2152.12 of the Revised Code, the juvenile court does not have jurisdiction to hear or determine the case subsequent to the transfer. The court to which the case is transferred for criminal prosecution pursuant to that section has jurisdiction subsequent to the transfer to hear and determine the case in the same manner as if the case originally had been commenced in that court, including, but not limited to, jurisdiction to accept a plea of guilty or another plea authorized by Criminal Rule 11 or another section of the Revised Code and jurisdiction to accept a verdict and to enter a judgment of conviction pursuant to the Rules of Criminal Procedure against the child for the commission of the offense that was the basis of the transfer of the case for criminal prosecution, whether the conviction is for the same degree or a lesser degree of the offense charged, for the commission of a lesser-included offense, or for the commission of another offense that is different from the offense charged.

(I) If a person under eighteen years of age allegedly commits an act that would be a felony if committed by an adult and if the person is not taken into custody or apprehended for that act until after the person attains twenty-one years of age, the juvenile court does not have jurisdiction to hear or determine any portion of the case charging the person with committing that act. In those circumstances, divisions (A) and (B) of section 2152.12 of the Revised Code do not apply regarding the act, and the case charging the person with committing the act shall be a criminal prosecution commenced and heard in the appropriate court having jurisdiction of the offense as if the person had been eighteen years of age or older when the person committed the act. All proceedings pertaining to the act shall be within the jurisdiction of the court having jurisdiction of the offense, and that court has all the authority and duties in the case that it has in other criminal cases in that court.

(A) The juvenile court has exclusive original jurisdiction under the Revised Code as follows:

(1) Concerning any child who on or about the date specified in the complaint, indictment, or information is alleged to have violated section 2151.87 of the Revised Code or an order issued under that section or to be a juvenile traffic offender or a delinquent, unruly, abused, neglected, or dependent child and, based on and in relation to the allegation pertaining to the child, concerning the parent, guardian, or other person having care of a child who is alleged to be an unruly or delinquent child for being an habitual or chronic truant;

(2) Subject to divisions (G) and (V) of section 2301.03 of the Revised Code, to determine the custody of any child not a ward of another court of this state;

(3) To hear and determine any application for a writ of habeas corpus involving the custody of a child;

(4) To exercise the powers and jurisdiction given the probate division of the court of common pleas in Chapter 5122. of the Revised Code, if the court has probable cause to believe that a child otherwise within the jurisdiction of the court is a mentally ill person subject to hospitalization by court order, as defined in section 5122.01 of the Revised Code;

(5) To hear and determine all criminal cases charging adults with the violation of any section of this chapter;

(6) To hear and determine all criminal cases in which an adult is charged with a violation of division (C) of section 2919.21, division (B)(1) of section 2919.22, section 2919.222 [2919.22.2], division (B) of section 2919.23, or section 2919.24 of the Revised Code, provided the charge is not included in an indictment that also charges the alleged adult offender with the commission of a felony arising out of the same actions that are the basis of the alleged violation of division (C) of section 2919.21, division (B)(1) of section 2919.22, section 2919.222 [2919.22.2], division (B) of section 2919.23, or section 2919.24 of the Revised Code;

(7) Under the interstate compact on juveniles in section 2151.56 of the Revised Code;

(8) Concerning any child who is to be taken into custody pursuant to section 2151.31 of the Revised Code, upon being notified of the intent to take the child into custody and the reasons for taking the child into custody;

(9) To hear and determine requests for the extension of temporary custody agreements, and requests for court approval of permanent custody agreements, that are filed pursuant to section 5103.15 of the Revised Code;

(10) To hear and determine applications for consent to marry pursuant to section 3101.04 of the Revised Code;

(11) Subject to divisions (G) and (V) of section 2301.03 of the Revised Code, to hear and determine a request for an order for the support of any child if the request is not ancillary to an action for divorce, dissolution of marriage, annulment, or legal separation, a criminal or civil action involving an allegation of domestic violence, or an action for support brought under Chapter 3115. of the Revised Code;

(12) Concerning an action commenced under section 121.38 of the Revised Code;

(13) To hear and determine violations of section 3321.38 of the Revised Code;

(14) To exercise jurisdiction and authority over the parent, guardian, or other person having care of a child alleged to be a delinquent child, unruly child, or juvenile traffic offender, based on and in relation to the allegation pertaining to the child;

(15) To conduct the hearings, and to make the determinations, adjudications, and orders authorized or required under sections 2152.82 to 2152.86 and Chapter 2950. of the Revised Code regarding a child who has been adjudicated a delinquent child and to refer the duties conferred upon the juvenile court judge under sections 2152.82 to 2152.86 and Chapter 2950. of the Revised Code to magistrates appointed by the juvenile court judge in accordance with Juvenile Rule 40.

(B) Except as provided in divisions (G) and (I) of section 2301.03 of the Revised Code, the juvenile court has original jurisdiction under the Revised Code:

(1) To hear and determine all cases of misdemeanors charging adults with any act or omission with respect to any child, which act or omission is a violation of any state law or any municipal ordinance;

(2) To determine the paternity of any child alleged to have been born out of wedlock pursuant to sections 3111.01 to 3111.18 of the Revised Code;

(3) Under the uniform interstate family support act in Chapter 3115. of the Revised Code;

(4) To hear and determine an application for an order for the support of any child, if the child is not a ward of another court of this state;

(5) To hear and determine an action commenced under section 3111.28 of the Revised Code;

(6) To hear and determine a motion filed under section 3119.961 [3119.96.1] of the Revised Code;

(7) To receive filings under section 3109.74 of the Revised Code, and to hear and determine actions arising under sections 3109.51 to 3109.80 of the Revised Code.

(8) To enforce an order for the return of a child made under the Hague Convention on the Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction pursuant to section 3127.32 of the Revised Code;

(9) To grant any relief normally available under the laws of this state to enforce a child custody determination made by a court of another state and registered in accordance with section 3127.35 of the Revised Code.

(C) The juvenile court, except as to juvenile courts that are a separate division of the court of common pleas or a separate and independent juvenile court, has jurisdiction to hear, determine, and make a record of any action for divorce or legal separation that involves the custody or care of children and that is filed in the court of common pleas and certified by the court of common pleas for trial, provided that no certification of that nature shall be made to any juvenile court unless the consent of the juvenile judge first is obtained. After a certification of that nature is made and consent is obtained, the juvenile court shall proceed as if the action originally had been begun in that court, except as to awards for spousal support or support due and unpaid at the time of certification, over which the juvenile court has no jurisdiction.

(D) The juvenile court, except as provided in divisions (G) and (I) of section 2301.03 of the Revised Code, has jurisdiction to hear and determine all matters as to custody and support of children duly certified by the court of common pleas to the juvenile court after a divorce decree has been granted, including jurisdiction to modify the judgment and decree of the court of common pleas as the same relate to the custody and support of children.

(E) The juvenile court, except as provided in divisions (G) and (I) of section 2301.03 of the Revised Code, has jurisdiction to hear and determine the case of any child certified to the court by any court of competent jurisdiction if the child comes within the jurisdiction of the juvenile court as defined by this section.

(F)(1) The juvenile court shall exercise its jurisdiction in child custody matters in accordance with sections 3109.04, 3127.01 to 3127.53, and 5103.20 to 5103.22 of the Revised Code.

(2) The juvenile court shall exercise its jurisdiction in child support matters in accordance with section 3109.05 of the Revised Code.

(G) Any juvenile court that makes or modifies an order for child support shall comply with Chapters 3119., 3121., 3123., and 3125. of the Revised Code. If any person required to pay child support under an order made by a juvenile court on or after April 15, 1985, or modified on or after December 1, 1986, is found in contempt of court for failure to make support payments under the order, the court that makes the finding, in addition to any other penalty or remedy imposed, shall assess all court costs arising out of the contempt proceeding against the person and require the person to pay any reasonable attorney's fees of any adverse party, as determined by the court, that arose in relation to the act of contempt.

(H) If a child who is charged with an act that would be an offense if committed by an adult was fourteen years of age or older and under eighteen years of age at the time of the alleged act and if the case is transferred for criminal prosecution pursuant to section 2152.12 of the Revised Code, the juvenile court does not have jurisdiction to hear or determine the case subsequent to the transfer. The court to which the case is transferred for criminal prosecution pursuant to that section has jurisdiction subsequent to the transfer to hear and determine the case in the same manner as if the case originally had been commenced in that court, including, but not limited to, jurisdiction to accept a plea of guilty or another plea authorized by Criminal Rule 11 or another section of the Revised Code and jurisdiction to accept a verdict and to enter a judgment of conviction pursuant to the Rules of Criminal Procedure against the child for the commission of the offense that was the basis of the transfer of the case for criminal prosecution, whether the conviction is for the same degree or a lesser degree of the offense charged, for the commission of a lesser-included offense, or for the commission of another offense that is different from the offense charged.

(I) If a person under eighteen years of age allegedly commits an act that would be a felony if committed by an adult and if the person is not taken into custody or apprehended for that act until after the person attains twenty-one years of age, the juvenile court does not have jurisdiction to hear or determine any portion of the case charging the person with committing that act. In those circumstances, divisions (A) and (B) of section 2152.12 of the Revised Code do not apply regarding the act, and the case charging the person with committing the act shall be a criminal prosecution commenced and heard in the appropriate court having jurisdiction of the offense as if the person had been eighteen years of age or older when the person committed the act. All proceedings pertaining to the act shall be within the jurisdiction of the court having jurisdiction of the offense, and that court has all the authority and duties in the case that it has in other criminal cases in that court.

SECTION 3. Sections 1 and 2 of this act shall take effect on January 1, 2002, or the earliest date permitted by law, whichever is later.

The provisions of § 4 of SB 3 (149 v —) read, in part, as follows:

SECTION 4. Section 2151.23 of the Revised Code is presented in this act as a composite of the section as amended by Am. Sub. S.B. 179, Am. Sub. S.B. 180, and Sub. S.B. 218 of the 123rd General Assembly. The General Assembly, applying the principle stated in division (B) of section 1.52 of the Revised Code that amendments are to be harmonized if reasonably capable of simultaneous operation, finds that the composite is the resulting version of the section in effect prior to the effective date of the section as presented in this act.

Access to proceedings

Proceedings in juvenile court to determine if a child is abused, neglected, or dependent, or to determine custody of a minor child, are neither presumptively open nor presumptively closed to the public. The juvenile court may restrict public access to these proceedings pursuant to JuvR 27 and RC § 2151.35 if the court finds, after hearing evidence and argument on the issue, (1) that there exists a reasonable and substantial basis for believing that public access could harm the child or endanger the fairness of the adjudication, and (2) the potential for harm outweighs the benefits of public access: In re T.R., 52 Ohio St. 3d 6, 556 N.E.2d 439 (1990).

ADC payments

Where the state brought an action against the father of the children, as representative of the mother, to recover ADC payments made and to establish a future child support obligation, but such action was dismissed for failure to prosecute, the dismissal was res judicata as to claims for past support, but not as to claims for future support: Crittendon v. Crittendon, 82 Ohio App. 3d 484, 612 N.E.2d 759 (1992).

Age upon apprehension

Where the 1997 amendments to RC §§ 2151.23(I) and 2151.011 made defendant's age upon apprehension the touchstone for determining jurisdiction, there were no constitutional violations in trying defendant as an adult for an offense committed while defendant was a juvenile. State v. Schaar, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1459, 2004 Ohio 1631, (2004).

Appeal

Juvenile court lacks jurisdiction to proceed with an adjudication of a child after a notice of appeal has been filed from an order of that court. During the pendency of an appeal, any adjudication of a child made by a juvenile court is void. Therefore, the double jeopardy clause of the United States Constitution does not apply, and the court of appeals may review the merits of the appeal: In re S.J., 106 Ohio St. 3d 11, 829 N.E.2d 1207, 2005 Ohio 3215, (2005).

After a full hearing, the retroactive modification of a prior multiple child support order will not be disturbed on appeal in the absence of an abuse of discretion by the trial court: Asztalos v. Fortney, 48 Ohio App. 2d 66, 2 Ohio Op. 3d 45, 355 N.E.2d 517 (1975).

Bindover for prosecution

Trial court did not err in failing to treat defendant as a serious youthful offender who, if convicted, would have been subject to a blended juvenile-adult sentence as there was no statutory mechanism for the trial court to return a case to a juvenile court once the juvenile court had relinquished jurisdiction. Under RC §§ 2152.12(I) and 2151.23(H), once a juvenile court has transferred a case to the Ohio Common Pleas Court, it has no further jurisdiction to hear or to determine a child's case, and the courts have held that when a juvenile has been bound over to the Ohio Common Pleas Court, the Ohio Common Pleas Court has no jurisdiction to review the bindover order for error. State v. Harris, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 653, 2006 Ohio 716, (2006).

Where defendant, age 16, was charged in the juvenile court with carrying concealed weapons in violation of RC § 2923.12 and aggravated robbery involving use of a deadly weapon in violation of RC § 2911.01(A)(1) and where defendant was bound over to the general division of the common pleas court on both offenses based on the aggravated robbery offense of which defendant was later acquitted, all further proceedings in the juvenile division on the carrying concealed weapons charge were discontinued under RC § 2152.12(I), thus terminating the juvenile division's jurisdiction under RC § 2151.23(H). State v. Washington, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 5902, 2005 Ohio 6546, (2005).

Once defendant was properly bound over, the court of common pleas had jurisdiction over the proceedings against defendant; moreover, following the bindover, defendant was no longer a "child" within the meaning of the statutes conferring jurisdiction on the juvenile court over cases involving children, former RC §§ 2151.23(A) and 2151.011(B)(5)(e). State v. Burrell, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 50, 2005 Ohio 34, (2005).

Change of custody

Trial court's judgment overruling a mother's motion for reallocation of parental rights, asking that she be designated as custodian of her daughter rather than the daughter's maternal grandmother, was reversed because the judgment entry failed to discuss the best interests of the child, as required by RC § 2151.23, and there was no indication of the factors that the trial court used in overruling the mother's motion. In re Bell, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 5921, 2005 Ohio 6603, (2005).

There was no evidence before the juvenile court to justify the issuance of an ex parte order because nothing in the parents' motion for emergency custody of their child or supporting affidavit showed that the child's interest and welfare required immediate action. To the contrary, the parents' motion was not filed until 20 days after the fire; the guardian ad litem and the court were aware of the fire. The juvenile court's finding that it did not constitute a change of circumstances sufficient to warrant a change of custody was not an abuse of discretion; and the juvenile court could easily have determined that the emergency motion was simply another attempt to relitigate custody, which the parents were not entitled to do. Hempen v. Bailey (In re Bailey), 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2830, 2005 Ohio 3039, (2005).

A change of circumstances is not a prerequisite for a parent to regain legal custody of a child when the relinquishment of legal custody was not based on unsuitability of the parent. Culp v. Burkhardt, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 4011, 2004 Ohio 4425, (2004).

Where custody of a child had been awarded to the child's grandparents due to the mother's unsuitability, the mother was only entitled to one unsuitability determination and could not re-litigate that issue in her subsequent motion for change of custody: Shargo v. Gregory, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 3161, 2004 Ohio 3512, (2004).

In a change of custody proceeding, RC § 3109.04(B)(1), in conjunction with RC § 3109.04(A) and (C), sets the standards for the court by which it must be guided in making its decision: In re Brazell, 27 Ohio Misc. 2d 7, 27 Ohio B. 68, 499 N.E.2d 925 (CP 1986).

Children out of wedlock

Where there is uncontradicted evidence that there is an admitted natural father of children in a pending custody proceeding, it is in the best interests of the children and a requirement of the law that said father, whether or not he has legitimated his children, be notified of the custody action and be given an opportunity to be heard: In re Dych, 1990 Ohio App. LEXIS 2334 (1990).

Acknowledgement of paternity pursuant to RC § 2105.18 is an establishment of paternity upon which an order of custody and support may be based: In re Custody of Davis, 41 Ohio App. 3d 81, 534 N.E.2d 945 (1987).

Legitimation of the child is not a prerequisite for the natural father to have equality of standing with the mother in a RC § 2151.23(A)(2) custody action. All three methods by which a father in Ohio can legitimate his child—(1) in an acknowledgment proceeding brought under RC § 2105.18; (2) by adopting the child; or (3) by marrying the mother—require the consent of the mother, and therefore the mother can thwart any attempt by the natural father to legitimate the child. A second reason for not requiring legitimation is that such a requirement would not necessarily be in the best interests of the child, and would, in fact, result in dissimilar treatment between legitimate and illegitimate children. Therefore, where the alleged natural father of an illegitimate child has participated in the nurturing process of the child, files a complaint seeking custody of the child under RC § 2151.23(A)(2), and the mother admits that he is the natural father of the child, the natural father has equity of standing with the mother with respect to the custody of the child. The court shall determine which parent shall have the legal custody of the child, taking into account what would be in the best interests of the child: In re Byrd, 66 Ohio St. 2d 334, 20 Ohio Op. 3d 309, 421 N.E.2d 1284 (1981).

The mother of an illegitimate child cannot be deprived of her superior right of custody simply by the exercise of the juvenile court's discretion upon an application for custody by the putative father under RC § 2151.23(A)(2): In re Brenda H., 37 Ohio Misc. 123, 66 Ohio Op. 2d 178, 305 N.E.2d 815 (CP 1973).

When a probate court dismisses an adoption petition and, pursuant to RC § 3107.12, certifies the case to the juvenile court for appropriate action and disposition, the certification of itself does not give the juvenile court jurisdiction to determine custody of an illegitimate child: In the Matter of Robert O., 91 Ohio L. Ab. 101, 28 Ohio Op. 2d 165, 199 N.E.2d 765 (JC 1964).

Jurisdiction is conferred by this section, on the juvenile court to determine the paternity of a child born out of wedlock and to provide for its support: Knox v. Covrett, 85 Ohio App. 524, 40 Ohio Op. 437, 89 N.E.2d 610 (1949).

A juvenile court lacks jurisdiction over a child support action where the child turns eighteen before the complaint is filed: In re Livingston, 115 Ohio App. 3d 613, 685 N.E.2d 1285 (1996).

Determination by a juvenile court that the children were dependent did not divest the domestic relations court of jurisdiction to enter a contempt finding for nonpayment of a support order: State ex rel. Clermont County Dep't of Human Servs. v. Walsson, 108 Ohio App. 3d 125, 670 N.E.2d 287 (1995).

Where an original child support order was for a total sum on behalf of four children and did not designate a specific amount for each child, and thereafter one child was emancipated and the custody of a second child was transferred from the wife to the husband, the court, in its discretion, may modify the prior order retroactively. A modification, if any, need not be made on a pro rata basis: Asztalos v. Fortney, 48 Ohio App. 2d 66, 2 Ohio Op. 3d 45, 355 N.E.2d 517 (1975).

The equities involved in a multiple child support order case are such that if a substantial change in material circumstances has occurred since the original decree was entered, the Juvenile Court may, upon a proper hearing, modify a support order retroactively [McPherson v. McPherson, 153 OS 82, 41 OO 151, distinguished]: Asztalos v. Fortney, 48 Ohio App. 2d 66, 2 Ohio Op. 3d 45, 355 N.E.2d 517 (1975).

The manner of enforcing such order of the juvenile court upon the defendant's default is to seek, by motion filed in the juvenile court, a revocation of the order of probation and to enforce against him the penalty of the judgment: Anderson v. Anderson, 4 Ohio App. 2d 90, 33 Ohio Op. 2d 145, 212 N.E.2d 643 (1965).

Continuing jurisdiction

Juvenile court's transfer of a delinquent juvenile's placement from a residential treatment program to the Division of Youth Services was within the court's authority under RC § 2152.16(A)(1), as it had continuing jurisdiction once the juvenile was adjudicated as delinquent pursuant to RC §§ 2151.23 and 2151.38. In re D.B., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2738, 2006 Ohio 2891, (2006).

New York effectively obtained exclusive and continuing jurisdiction when all the parties, including the child, had moved from the issuing state to New York and, at that point, Puerto Rico no longer had jurisdiction. Puerto Rico reestablished its jurisdiction by issuing a new support order for the child's prospective care because the mother and daughter were again residing in Puerto Rico. Although Puerto Rico did not have jurisdiction to seek enforcement of the 1971 support order for arrears that accrued after New York obtained jurisdiction, it did have jurisdiction to enter a support order for the prospective care of the child. Cruz v. Cumba-Ortiz, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1230, 2006 Ohio 1362, (2006).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in finding that Alabama had jurisdiction over the custody dispute because there had been no valid custody order to enforce and the parents had equal parenting rights. Accordingly, the trial court could not have continuing jurisdiction and the Federal Parental Kidnapping Prevention Act was inapplicable. In re Sklenchar, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 3992, 2004 Ohio 4405, (2004).

Pursuant to Ohio's statutory scheme, a juvenile adjudicated delinquent prior to age 18 remains a child in the eyes of the juvenile court until age 21. The juvenile court's exercise of its continuing jurisdiction regarding the parole violation was lawful: In re Gillespie, 150 Ohio App. 3d 502, 782 N.E.2d 140, 2002 Ohio 7025, (2002), appeal denied by 98 Ohio St. 3d 1513, 2003 Ohio 1572, 786 N.E.2d 63, 2003 Ohio LEXIS 842 (2003).

Contributing to delinquency

Trial court lacked subject matter jurisdiction over non-felony charges filed against defendant in two criminal matters, alleging that he violated RC § 2919.24 for contributing to the unruliness or delinquency of a child, as the juvenile court had exclusive jurisdiction, pursuant to RC § 2151.23(A)(6), over non-felony violations of RC § 2919.24. Defendant's motion to dismiss a pending charge and to vacate a void judgment of conviction arising from his guilty plea to another charge should have been granted. State v. King, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 5565, 2005 Ohio 6174, (2005).

A hearing in juvenile court on a charge of contributing to the delinquency of a minor which resulted in binding the prisoner over to the grand jury upon concluding that a felony over which the juvenile court lacked jurisdiction had been committed, in no way offended the prisoner's federal granted right to be free from double jeopardy: Grear v. Maxwell, 35 Ohio Op. 2d 333, 8 Ohio Misc. 210, 355 F.2d 991 (6th Cir. 1966).

Custody generally

Reasonable fact-finder could have determined, pursuant to 2151.23(A)(2), that awarding legal custody to the couple was in the children's best interest, under RC § 3109.04(B)(1). The children, twins, had stayed with the couple off and on since they were three months old and had bonded with them and their two-year-old son; would be receiving money from Social Security and Veteran's benefits; and stability would be accomplished by remaining with the couple. In re Snyder, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3430, 2006 Ohio 3478, (2006).

Trial court did not err in adopting a magistrate's decision to deny maternal grandparents' motion to intervene in an action commenced by their minor grandchild's biological father, seeking a determination of paternity, custody, visitation, and child support pursuant to RC § 2151.23(A)(2), as they did not establish an in loco parentis relationship with the minor child merely because they cared for the child during a period of time when the complaint was filed, and accordingly, they were not within the scope of the parties defined under Ohio R. Juv. R. 2(Y) and they did not have a right to intervene in the matter pursuant to Ohio R. Civ. P. 24(A); there was no cause to review the issue of parental unsuitability or the constitutional right of parents in the care, custody, and management of their children at that juncture of the matter. Brokaw v. Haser, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5134, 2006 Ohio 5171, (2006).

Trial court awards of legal custody of one child to an aunt, another child to his biological father, and three other children back to the mother and her husband was supported by the evidence and the best interests of the children involved, as the appropriateness of a custody placement for one child is not necessarily the same custody arrangement that suits the best interest of another child. As the county child services agency did not completely withdraw from the matter because it asked, and was ordered, to provide protective supervision to the family, there was no requirement that the trial court make a separate finding of unsuitability of the mother prior to awarding custody to a non-parent pursuant to RC § 2151.23(A)(2). In re Palmer, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4661, 2006 Ohio 4747, (2006).

Trial court did not err when it granted custody to the grandparents after determining that it would be in the child's best interests to remain with them; the finding of neglect implicitly involved a determination that the mother was an unsuitable parent. The trial court also did not err or abuse its discretion when it applied the best interest standard in determining that custody of the child should remain with the grandparents because, although the mother had completed her case plan, she remained with the father who had a mental illness and minimized the risk that the father posed to the child. In re Sorgen, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4136, 2006 Ohio 4180, (2006).

Trial court's finding that granting custody of a child to the child's maternal grandmother was in the best interest of the child was supported by the evidence. While the evidence showed that the child would be well cared for and loved in either the home of the maternal grandmother or the home of the paternal grandmother, the evidence allowed a conclusion that the maternal grandmother would be more conducive to visitation between the parties. In re Mitchell, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 564, 2006 Ohio 632, (2006).

Trial court's finding that a child's father was an unfit parent was not against the manifest weight of the evidence. The evidence showed that the father had a history of drug abuse; that, while he had sought some treatment, he had not had a completely clean rehabilitation; that the father had not held a meaningful, full-time job for the past 18 months; and that the father continued to rely upon the paternal grandmother for his support as well as the support of his son. In re Mitchell, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 564, 2006 Ohio 632, (2006).

In a custody proceeding under RC § 2151.23(A)(2) between a son's mother and the son's paternal aunt, the trial court's finding that the mother did not take the son to court-ordered therapy for his emotional issues, did not make her son do eye therapy exercises as instructed by his doctor, did not timely schedule a follow-up appointment with a specialist the son saw for stomach problems, and did not timely report to the specialist that the son was unable to take the medication constituted competent, credible evidence for the trial court's finding that the mother was unsuitable. In re Kovaleski, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 281, 2006 Ohio 317, (2006).

Award of legal custody of a child does not divest parents of their residual parental rights, privileges, and responsibilities. Juvenile court adjudication of abuse, neglect, or dependency is a determination about the care and condition of a child and implicitly involves a determination of the unsuitability of the child's custodial and/or noncustodial parents. When a juvenile court adjudicates a child to be abused, neglected, or dependent, it has no duty to make a separate finding at the dispositional hearing that a noncustodial parent is unsuitable before awarding legal custody to a nonparent. In re C.R., 108 Ohio St. 3d 369, 843 N.E.2d 1188, 2006 Ohio 1191, (2006).

Juvenile court has exclusive jurisdiction to determine custody of any child not a ward of another court. Under RC § 5103.15(B)(2), parents may permanently surrender a child under six months of age to a child-placing agency only if they have custody of the child: Adoption Link, Inc. v. Suver, 112 Ohio St. 3d 166, 858 N.E.2d 424, 2006 Ohio 6528, (2006).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in finding that a mother was an unsuitable parent under RC § 2151.23(A)(2) and awarding custody of the son to his foster parents because evidence that the mother was living with her mother, that she was receiving governmental assistance and was unemployed, and that she was not involved in her son's schooling showed that the present return of custody to the mother would be detrimental to her special needs son. In re Fout, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3935, 2005 Ohio 4344, (2005).

Juvenile court's finding that a mother was an unsuitable parent was supported by evidence that the mother might have coached the child to fear that he would be sexually abused by the father, that the mother had inappropriate parenting skills and poor judgment, that the child had a significant knowledge of sexual behavior and terminology, and that the mother's allegations of sexual abuse against the father were unsubstantiated. In re Manweiler, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2506, 2005 Ohio 2657, (2005).

Because the father was not properly named on or served with a petition for custody, the trial court erred by awarding custody to the child's maternal grandparents under RC § 2151.23(A)(2); consequently, the father was entitled to relief under Ohio R. Civ. P. 60(B), U.S. Const. amend. XIV, and Ohio Const. art. I, § 16. In re A.H., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 1275, 2005 Ohio 1307, (2005).

There was no abuse of discretion in granting custody of the children to the grandmother because, in determining that the trial court's classification of the mother as "unsuitable" was supported by the evidence, the trial court's action of awarding custody to a non-parent, under the circumstances, did not infringe on the mother's fundamental right to custody of her children, under U.S. Const., Amend. 14 and Ohio Const., art. 1, § 16. The mother had demonstrated an inability to care for her children on a regular basis through the frequency of changing residences, her marriage to a man who was a risk to her children, her financial instability, and her mental health issues. In re Hamblett, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 589, 2005 Ohio 550, (2005).

Award of legal custody to the maternal grandparents did not divest the mother of her residual parental rights. The evidence supported the court's finding that awarding custody to the mother would be detrimental to the children: In re Sean T., 164 Ohio App. 3d 218 (2005).

Juvenile court erred in using the Perales standard that the state supreme court applied to private custody cases and that required an examination of parental unsuitability in determining whether a parent or a nonparent should be awarded legal custody of children; instead, because the case of the legal custody of the two minor children was initiated by the children's services agency, the juvenile court should have applied a "best interest of the child" standard to determine whether the father or the uncle should have received legal custody of the children. In re Trowbridge, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2335, 2004 Ohio 2645, (2004).

Juvenile court did not abuse its discretion in awarding custody of a mother's son to his maternal grandparents where sufficient evidence was presented as to the mother's unsuitability as a parent, including her: (1) failure to provide him financial support; (2) frequent moves over a four-year period; (3) failure to provide him with a suitable home; (4) act of disappearing and abandoning the child on one occasion; and (5) complete lack of an ability to provide him with consistent medical care given his various needs. Karr v. Dunn, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 837, 2004 Ohio 928, (2004).

Where the trial court adopted the magistrate's decision finding that the mother was unsuitable and awarding custody of the child to the paternal grandmother, in doing so, the trial court complied with RC § 2151.23(A)(2), as the magistrate found that the mother was unsuitable before recommending placement with the grandmother. Walther v. Newsome, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4263, 2003 Ohio 4723, (2003).

Because the scope of inquiry is broader in custody proceedings between a parent and a nonparent, the action fell within the coverage of R.C. § 2151.23(A), requiring application of the "suitability of the parent" test, rather than under R.C. § 3109.04, which would require the "best interests of the child" test. Ives v. Ives, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3212, 2003 Ohio 3505, (2003).

Revised Code § 3109.04 specifically uses the term "parent," and that term is defined in RC § 3111.01. Pursuant to RC § 2151.23(A)(2), a juvenile court may determine whether a shared custody agreement involving a second or psychological parent is in the best interests of a child: In re Bonfield, 97 Ohio St. 3d 387, 780 N.E.2d 241, 2002 Ohio 6660, (2002).

In custody proceedings initiated following the murder of a child's biological mother and custodial parent, there was no abuse of discretion in the trial court's award of legal custody to the maternal grandmother and grant of supervised visitation to the father, who had moved to Alabama years earlier and had had only limited contact with the child since: In re Smith, 1998 Ohio App. LEXIS 517 (12th Dist. 1998).

Under RC § 2151.23, nonbiological "parents" may be awarded custody where a biological parent has abandoned the child due to lack of interest: Reynolds v. Goll, 75 Ohio St. 3d 121, 661 N.E.2d 1008, 1996 Ohio 153, (1996).

While RC § 2151.23(F)(1) states that a juvenile court must exercise its jurisdiction in child custody matters in accordance with RC § 3109.04, neither RC § 2151.23 nor 2151.35.3 specify that the juvenile court must apply the change of circumstances standard before granting legal custody of the child: In re Wells, 108 Ohio App. 3d 41, 669 N.E.2d 887 (1995).

Unlike the RC § 3109.04(D)(2) certification process, the RC § 3109.06 certification process does not require the certifying court to first find that it is in the best interest of the child for neither parent to have custody. RC § 3109.06 proceedings do not require a finding of parental unsuitability: In re Whaley, 86 Ohio App. 3d 304, 620 N.E.2d 954 (1993).

The best interest of the child remains the primary standard to be applied in custody cases. Nevertheless, while the welfare of the child is the primary consideration, suitable parents have a paramount right to custody: In re Pryor, 86 Ohio App. 3d 327, 620 N.E.2d 973 (1993).

Parent may be denied custody only if a preponderance of the evidence indicates abandonment, contractual relinquishment of custody, total inability to provide care or support, or that his custody would be detrimental to the child: Reynolds v. Ross Cty. Children's Service Agency, 5 Ohio St. 3d 27, 5 Ohio B. 87, 448 N.E.2d 816 (1983).

In a child custody dispute between the parent of a child and a non-parent brought under RC § 3109.04, a suitable parent has a paramount right to custody so long as such custody is not detrimental to the child. (In re Perales, 52 OS2d 89, 6 OO3d 293, adopted for RC § 3109.04 custody disputes): Thrasher v. Thrasher, 3 Ohio App. 3d 210, 3 Ohio B. 240, 444 N.E.2d 431 (1981).

The word "custody" as used in RC § 3109.04 has the same meaning as the word used in RC §§ 2151.23(A)(2) and 3105.21, so that the former section is equally applicable to the other two: In re Smelser, 22 Ohio Misc. 41, 51 Ohio Op. 2d 31, 257 N.E.2d 769 (CP 1969).

The word "custody" as used in this section, connotes the sum total of all parental rights, among which is the right to support for such child: Kolody v. Kolody, 110 Ohio App. 260, 13 Ohio Op. 2d 25, 169 N.E.2d 34 (1960).

In order to determine the right of custody, it is not necessary for the court to find first that such child is delinquent, neglected, dependent, crippled, or otherwise physically handicapped: In re Torok, 161 Ohio St. 585, 53 Ohio Op. 433, 120 N.E.2d 307 (1954).

—Abandonment

A parent may be denied custody if a preponderance of the evidence indicates that he has abandoned the child: Hughes v. Scaffide, 58 Ohio St. 2d 88, 12 Ohio Op. 3d 92, 388 N.E.2d 1233 (1979).

A parent has forfeited his paramount right to custody if he has abandoned the child. The court must then weigh the best interests of the child in determining whether to grant the writ returning the child to the parent: In re Young, 58 Ohio St. 2d 90, 12 Ohio Op. 3d 93, 388 N.E.2d 1235 (1979).

—Parental unsuitability

Denial of the grandparents' motion for custody was proper as the mother's drug use and mental health issues did not automatically make her unsuitable to care for her child. Just because the child's home with the grandparents could have been perceived as the "better" placement, it did not mean that the mother was an unsuitable parent. It was noted that the children's services agency would not have removed the child from the mother's care based on its investigation, that the child forensic interview failed to show any cause for concern, and that the mother had been able to care for her younger child since his birth. In re Todd, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1281, 2007 Ohio 1410, (Mar. 22, 2007).

In a custody proceeding under RC § 2151.23(A)(2) between a son's mother and the son's paternal aunt, the trial court properly applied the unsuitability standard rather than the modification of custody standard under RC § 3109.04(E)(1) because a nonparent was seeking custody of the son, and the trial court had not previously considered whether the mother was a suitable parent. In re Kovaleski, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 281, 2006 Ohio 317, (2006).

Since it appeared that the issue of the unsuitability of the child's mother was raised in the initial custody proceeding, was found to have been previously resolved at the time of the original transfer of custody without objection from counsel, and was not raised on appeal, there was no reason to revisit the issue in the mother's appeal from the trial court's judgment overruling her motion for reallocation of parental rights. In re Bell, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 5921, 2005 Ohio 6603, (2005).

Finding of parental unsuitability was properly based on the father's limited interest and participation in the children's care and well-being. The trial court properly awarded custody to the maternal grandmother: In re S.M., 160 Ohio App. 3d 794, 828 N.E.2d 1044, 2005 Ohio 2187, (2005).

Because juvenile court had already determined that a child was abused, dependent, or neglected in accordance with RC § 2151.353, there was no requirement that it first determine that the mother was unfit before denying her RC § 2151.23(A)(2) motion to modify custody for the child. In re Allah, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 1163, 2005 Ohio 1182, (2005).

Where a custody hearing did not constitute a true dispositional hearing as envisioned by RC § 2151.353, the trial court abused its discretion in granting custody to a maternal grandmother absent a finding that the children's mother was unsuitable or unfit, pursuant to RC § 2151.23(A)(2). In re Mahley, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1571, 2004 Ohio 1772, (2004).

The requirement that a court first find a parent unsuitable before awarding legal custody of a child to a nonparent does not apply to dispositional hearings following an adjudication that the child is abused, dependent, or neglected: In re D.R., 153 Ohio App. 3d 156, 792 N.E.2d 203, 2003 Ohio 2852, (2003).

In a child custody case arising out of a parentage action between a natural parent of the child and a nonparent, a trial court must make a parental unsuitability determination on the record before awarding legal custody of the child to the nonparent: Hockstok v. Hockstok, 98 Ohio St. 3d 238, 781 N.E.2d 971, 2002 Ohio 7208, (2002).

A parent has a paramount right to custody over a nonparent unless the parent is found unsuitable: In re Porter, 113 Ohio App. 3d 580, 681 N.E.2d 954 (1996).

In custody disputes between a parent and a non-parent brought pursuant to RC § 2151.23(A)(2), the juvenile court must consider the "paramount" rights of the parent, finding the parent "unsuitable" before awarding custody to a non-parent: Reynolds v. Goll, 80 Ohio App. 3d 494, 609 N.E.2d 1276 (1992).

In a RC § 2151.23(A)(2) child custody proceeding between a parent and a nonparent, the hearing officer may not award custody to the nonparent without first making a finding of parental unsuitability—that is, without first determining that a preponderance of the evidence shows that the parent abandoned the child, that the parent contractually relinquished custody of the child, that the parent has become totally incapable of supporting or caring for the child, or that an award of custody to the parent would be detrimental to the child: In re Perales, 52 Ohio St. 2d 89, 6 Ohio Op. 3d 293, 369 N.E.2d 1047 (1977).

Court of common pleas, juvenile division, erred when it determined that the court lacked jurisdiction to adjudicate the issue of abuse when the child was deceased as the technicality of death did not rob children of statutory protection since the statutory protections afforded siblings extended to afterborn children; RC § 2151.23 does not limit the juvenile court to deciding only particular aspects of a juvenile's case, or in any way restrict its jurisdiction, other than by limiting the court to dealing with juveniles. In re Darling, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 6640, 2003 Ohio 7184, (2003).

Dependent child

The determination of whether or not a child is "dependent," as defined in RC § 2151.04, must be made as of the time of the hearing on the complaint, and a determination that a child is not a "dependent child" at one time is no bar to a later determination that the child is then "dependent": In re Justice, 59 Ohio App. 2d 78, 13 Ohio Op. 3d 139, 392 N.E.2d 897 (1978).

Estate matters

Juvenile court had no jurisdiction to determine estate matters, and its judgment finding that child support arrearages owed to the mother were not an asset of her estate was vacated. Miller v. McMichael, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 6081, 2003 Ohio 6713, (2003).

Forfeiture proceedings

Forfeiture proceedings apply to juveniles found to be delinquent, and juvenile courts have jurisdiction over such proceedings: In re Harman, 63 Ohio Misc. 2d 529, 635 N.E.2d 96 (1994).

Guardian ad litem

Statute providing for appointment of a guardian ad litem was inapplicable in a proceeding to terminate visitation where no abuse charges were ever filed against the noncustodial parent: Truitt v. Truitt, 65 Ohio App. 3d 126, 583 N.E.2d 331 (1989).

Habeas corpus

A parent, alleging that he failed to receive notice of a hearing concerning the shelter care of his child, must move the juvenile court for a rehearing, pursuant to JuvR 7(G), before seeking a writ of habeas corpus: Linger v. Weiss, 57 Ohio St. 2d 97, 11 Ohio Op. 3d 281, 386 N.E.2d 1354 (1979).

Where a petition is filed which states a proper cause of action for a writ of habeas corpus, and there is no plain and adequate remedy in the ordinary course of the law, OConst art IV, §§ 2 and 3 require the supreme court and the court of appeals to exercise their original jurisdiction in habeas corpus; and in such a case, these courts cannot refuse to exercise that original jurisdiction under the doctrine of forum non conveniens: Hughes v. Scaffide, 53 Ohio St. 2d 85, 7 Ohio Op. 3d 175, 372 N.E.2d 598 (1978).

Under RC § 2151.23(A), the Juvenile Court has exclusive original jurisdiction in applications for a writ of habeas corpus involving custody of a child and is thereby empowered to determine custody in such proceeding: In re Wright, 52 Ohio Misc. 4, 6 Ohio Op. 3d 31, 367 N.E.2d 931 (JC 1977).

Both the courts of appeals and the juvenile courts have original jurisdiction in habeas corpus actions as to the custody of children: In re Children, 64 Ohio App. 2d 168, 18 Ohio Op. 3d 123, 411 N.E.2d 802 (1977).

The grant of original jurisdiction, by RC § 2151.23(A)(3), to juvenile courts in habeas corpus actions involving the custody of minors is exclusive only as between juvenile courts and those courts given general habeas corpus jurisdiction by RC § 2725.02: In re Black, 36 Ohio St. 2d 124, 65 Ohio Op. 2d 308, 304 N.E.2d 394 (1973).

A juvenile who submits without challenge to the jurisdiction of a municipal court cannot thereafter secure release in a habeas corpus action on the ground that the judgment and sentence of the municipal court is void for want of jurisdiction: Hemphill v. Johnson, 31 Ohio App. 2d 241, 60 Ohio Op. 2d 404, 287 N.E.2d 828 (1972).

Since under RC § 2151.23(A) the juvenile court has exclusive original jurisdiction "to hear and determine any application for a writ of habeas corpus involving the custody of a child," the court is empowered to adjudicate fully as to the needs of the child involved: Baker v. Rose, 28 Ohio Misc. 200, 57 Ohio Op. 2d 57, 270 N.E.2d 678 (CP 1970).

Habeas corpus in a court of competent jurisdiction as prescribed in RC Chapter 2725., is the proper proceeding to raise the question of rightful custody of minor children, where it is alleged that the restraint is illegal, or where a parent or other person claims that he or she has been unlawfully deprived of custody of a minor child; and, as part of such proceedings, the best interests and welfare of the child is a primary question and determining factor, and all other matters must yield accordingly, including the comity existing between states: In re Messner, 19 Ohio App. 2d 33, 48 Ohio Op. 2d 31, 249 N.E.2d 532 (1969).

A writ of habeas corpus will not be granted to release from the state reformatory a minor who, upon being arrested and taken before the municipal court, stated his age to be 19 years, when in fact he was but 17 years of age, and thereafter was indicted, pleaded guilty and was convicted in the common pleas court on a criminal charge: In re Evans, 67 Ohio App. 66, 21 Ohio Op. 93, 35 N.E.2d 887 (1941).

Hearings

Where a complaint is filed alleging that a child is dependent or neglected in violation of RC §§ 2151.03(B) and 2151.04(A), (B), and (C), JuvR 29(D)(2) does not prohibit the child's mother from participating in the adjudicatory hearing just because she entered a plea of "admitted" to the allegations in the complaint: In re Sims, 13 Ohio App. 3d 37, 13 Ohio B. 40, 468 N.E.2d 111 (1983).

Jurisdiction

Juvenile court had subject matter jurisdiction pursuant to RC § 2151.23(A)(1) over a matter commenced by a county social service agency against a mother regarding allegations of neglect and dependency as to her three minor children. In re L.S., — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1455, 2007 Ohio 1583, (Apr. 4, 2007).

Where a juvenile court acquires jurisdiction of a minor child, pursuant to RC § 2151.23, and a divorce is later instituted, the juvenile court has exclusive jurisdiction to make custody determinations of such child. Issa v. Bair, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 883, 2007 Ohio 930, (Feb. 22, 2007).

When a juvenile court awarded a child's custody to the child's grandparents, in a dependency and neglect action, and then terminated the involvement of a child protection agency and closed its case, a general division court hearing the child's parents' divorce did not have jurisdiction to award the child's custody to the father because once the juvenile court acquired jurisdiction over the child's custody, it retained exclusive jurisdiction over that issue, pursuant to RC § 2151.23(A)(1), (2), and (F)(1), and it did not relinquish its jurisdiction, as its final order required any further proceedings concerning the child's custody, support, and visitation to be filed in a division of the juvenile court. Issa v. Bair, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 883, 2007 Ohio 930, (Feb. 22, 2007).

When, in one county, a father's parentage was established and he was ordered to pay child support and then, in another county, he filed a complaint for child support because he had obtained custody of the child, without modifying the first court's orders, the two courts, under the terms of RC §§ 2151.23(B)(4) and 2151.231, appeared to have concurrent jurisdiction because the child was not a ward of another court and apparently resided with each of his parents at the times each of them sought child support, so the court in which an action was first filed had exclusive jurisdiction, and it was not error to dismiss the complaint filed in the second court. Dazey v. Pollock, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4756, 2006 Ohio 4850, (2006).

When a juvenile court awarded the Director of a county department of job and family services temporary custody of a child, that court had exclusive jurisdiction over the child's custody, under RC § 2151.23(A)(9), so another juvenile court had no jurisdiction to order the Director to surrender the child to an adoption agency, pursuant to a purported surrender of permanent custody by the child's parents, under RC § 5103.15, and the agency was not entitled to habeas corpus relief. Adoption Link, Inc. v. Suver, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4363, 2006 Ohio 4438, (Aug. 23, 2006), affirmed by 112 Ohio St. 3d 166, 2006 Ohio 6528, 858 N.E.2d 424, 2006 Ohio LEXIS 3574 (2006).

Trial court had subject matter jurisdiction over a dependency proceeding in which the agency involved later filed a motion for permanent custody of the subject child because, pursuant to RC § 2151.23(A), the trial court acquired subject matter jurisdiction over the matter with the filing of the dependency complaint. In re L.H., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4045, 2006 Ohio 4116, (2006).

RC § 2151.23(A)(2) granted exclusive, original jurisdiction to determine the custody of any child not a ward of another Ohio court; therefore, a trial court had the power to determine custody of a child, including the journalization of the agreed entry granting custody of the child to her grandparents. In re Weller, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2880, 2006 Ohio 3015, (2006).

Where a mother sought to preclude a juvenile court judge from exercising post-judgment jurisdiction over visitation and custody motions filed by the father of her child after the mother had filed her intent to relocate to North Carolina with the child, her claim that the judge no longer had jurisdiction over the matter lacked merit, as the juvenile court and the judge had general statutory authority over such issues pursuant to RC §§ 2151.23 and 2151.231. The mother also failed to show entitlement to the writ where she had an adequate remedy at law through either an appeal or a request to transfer the proceedings to North Carolina, pursuant to Ohio R. Juv. P. 11 and 39, such that dismissal of the complaint was warranted. Rivers v. Ramsey, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1610, 2006 Ohio 1744, (2006).

Although a trial court had jurisdiction under RC §§ 2151.23(A)(2) and 3127.18(A)(2) to make a temporary emergency ex parte custody order of children who resided in Louisiana to be in the custody of their grandmother, an Ohio resident, based on allegations that the mother and her boyfriend were using drugs in their Louisiana home, it was divested of jurisdiction under RC § 3127.18(B) of the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction Enforcement Act, RC §§ 3127.01 to 3127.53, when the mother commenced divorce proceedings that included a request for custody in her home state of Louisiana. Given the Louisiana court's jurisdiction over the children, RC § 3127.15(A)(3) and (4) did not apply to give the Ohio court jurisdiction. In re Fluharty, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6426, 2006 Ohio 6529, (2006).

Where a divorce was commenced but prior to a custody determination having been entered by the domestic relations court (DRC), a juvenile court made a custody decision pursuant to neglect proceedings instituted on behalf of the parties' minor child, the DRC lacked jurisdiction on that issue pursuant to RC §§ 2151.23 and 3109.04; accordingly, the DRC acted properly in sua sponte vacating those portions of the order that allocated parental rights and child support. Ryan v. Ryan, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3793, 2005 Ohio 4166, (2005).

Juvenile court's subject matter jurisdiction in a juvenile delinquency case was established under RC §§ 2151.23(A)(1), 2151.011(B)(5), and 2152.02(F)(1) because the complaint alleged appellant was a delinquent child. In re C.W., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3579, 2005 Ohio 3905, (2005).

Where the parties' child lived in Ohio until just a few days before the father filed a custody complaint, both venue and jurisdiction rested in Ohio pursuant to RC §§ 2151.23(A)(2) and 3109.22(A). Goeller v. Moore, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 249, 2005 Ohio 292, (2005).

Under RC § 2101.24(A)(1)(e), a probate court retained exclusive jurisdiction over modification of its custody decision and appointment of a guardian even after a minor became the subject of a neglect/dependency complaint within the exclusive jurisdiction of a juvenile court under RC § 2151.23(A)(1). In re Guardianship of Pierce, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3559, 2003 Ohio 3997, (2003).

The juvenile court had jurisdiction to revoke the suspension of permanent commitment even though the juvenile had been released from official probation: In re Bracewell, 126 Ohio App. 3d 133, 709 N.E.2d 938 (1998).

The court of common pleas loses jurisdiction over custody determinations when it concludes that the father is not the biological father; jurisdiction over the matter of custody is then vested in the juvenile court: Thompson v. Thompson, 1995 Ohio App. LEXIS 3402 (4th Dist. 1995).

Absent a proper bindover procedure pursuant to RC § 2151.26, the juvenile court has the exclusive subject matter jurisdiction over any case concerning a child who is alleged to be a delinquent. The exclusive subject matter jurisdiction of the juvenile court cannot be waived: State v. Wilson, 73 Ohio St. 3d 40, 652 N.E.2d 196, 1995 Ohio 217, (1995).

Revised Code § 2151.23(A)(1) vests the juvenile court with exclusive original jurisdiction when the matter concerns an alleged delinquent child. Where appellants seek compensatory relief for the alleged wrongful acts of the Department of Human Services in removing the child from their home, such claims are separate and distinct from custody issues and may be pursued in the general division. Conversely, the general division may not grant injunctive relief regarding custody as such action would usurp the juvenile division's exclusive jurisdiction: Tingley v. Williams County Dep't of Human Servs., 1993 Ohio App. LEXIS 3627 (1993).

The juvenile court did not have jurisdiction to make an order requiring reimbursement of ADC payments where the child was a ward of the probate court due to the guardianship proceedings: Lake County Dep't of Human Servs. v. Adams, 82 Ohio App. 3d 494, 612 N.E.2d 766 (1992).

Pursuant to RC § 2151.23(A), the juvenile court has jurisdiction to determine the custody of a child alleged to be abused, neglected, or dependent, when that child is not the ward of any court in this state. This jurisdiction includes children subject to a divorce decree granting custody pursuant to RC § 3109.04. When a juvenile court makes a custody determination under RC §§ 2151.23 and 2151.35.3, it must do so in accordance with RC § 3109.04 (RC § 2151.23[F][1], construed and applied): In re Poling, 64 Ohio St. 3d 211, 594 N.E.2d 589, 1992 Ohio 144, (1992).

If jurisdiction has been previously acquired over children through custody disposition in a divorce decree, the common pleas court must certify the custody matter to the juvenile court before such court has jurisdiction to determine any subsequent custody issue. Before the juvenile court may determine custody in a neglect proceeding, it must make an adjudication of abuse, neglect or dependency: Moore v. Moore, 1991 Ohio App. LEXIS 472 (4th Dist. 1991).

A juvenile court lacks jurisdiction to order that a delinquent child be cared for in a private mental health facility at the expense of the department of mental health and of an organization of community mental health boards: In re Hoodlet, 72 Ohio App. 3d 115, 593 N.E.2d 478 (1991).

Revised Code § 2151.23(A)(4) grants jurisdiction to the juvenile court to exercise only those powers given to the probate courts by RC Chapters 5122 and 5123. A probate court can hold a hearing under RC § 5122.15 and subsequently judicially commit a person to a mental health board pursuant to RC § 5122.15(C)(4) only if the judicial commitment proceedings were commenced in accordance with the procedural requirements of RC § 5122.11 and the other requirements of RC §§ 5122.11 through 5122.15 were complied with thereafter: In re Shott, 75 Ohio App. 3d 270, 599 N.E.2d 363 (1991).

A failure to support one's minor children constitutes a tortious act or omission in Ohio conferring in personam jurisdiction under CivR 4.3(A)(3): Wayne County Bureau of Support v. Wolfe, 71 Ohio App. 3d 765, 595 N.E.2d 421 (1991).

Juvenile Court has no jurisdiction under RC § 3109.21 (Uniform Custody Jurisdiction Act) to enforce foreign support order. Doctrine of forum non conveniens cannot vest juvenile court with jurisdiction to enforce foreign support order: In re Dych, 1990 Ohio App. LEXIS 2334 (1990).

Where child had resided in another state for three years, but was born in Ohio, spent first five years in Ohio, mother lived in Ohio, and evidence of future care, protection, and training were available in Ohio, Ohio court had jurisdiction to entertain custody action. Where child resided in another state, mother resided in Ohio, evidence from other state was accessible and could be documented and submitted in Ohio, Ohio was more convenient forum for custody action brought by mother: In re Capton, 1990 Ohio App. LEXIS 3296 (1990).

The probate court has no jurisdiction to determine custody of a minor once it terminates the guardianship of that minor. Once the guardianship is terminated, the juvenile court then has exclusive jurisdiction to determine the custody of the child under RC § 2151.23(A)(2): In re Guardianship of Harrison, 60 Ohio App. 3d 19, 572 N.E.2d 855 (1989).

Once the probate court appoints a guardian for a minor, the juvenile court is without jurisdiction to grant custody of the ward to another person, until the guardianship has been terminated: In re Miller, 33 Ohio App. 3d 224, 515 N.E.2d 635 (1986).

The juvenile court does not have exclusive jurisdiction where a defendant could have been charged under RC Chapter 2151., but was charged and convicted under RC Chapter 2907.: Peck v. Marshall, 22 Ohio St. 3d 78, 22 Ohio B. 94, 488 N.E.2d 870 (1986).

Juvenile court lacks jurisdiction over charges under RC Title 29: State ex rel. McMinn v. Whitfield, 27 Ohio St. 3d 4, 27 Ohio B. 73, 500 N.E.2d 875 (1986).

A court which obtains jurisdiction over and enters orders regarding the custody and support of children retains continuing and exclusive jurisdiction over such matters: Hardesty v. Hardesty, 16 Ohio App. 3d 56, 16 Ohio B. 59, 474 N.E.2d 368 (1984).

Revised Code § 2151.23(A) which states that "[t]he juvenile court has exclusive original jurisdiction under the Revised Code:  (2) [t]o determine the custody of any child not a ward of another court of this state " confers concurrent jurisdiction upon this state's court, where another state's court has already properly assumed and exercised jurisdiction in conformity with RC §§ 3109.21 to 3109.36: Squires v. Squires, 12 Ohio App. 3d 138, 12 Ohio B. 460, 468 N.E.2d 73 (1983).

The Juvenile Court acts beyond the scope of its jurisdiction when it orders the Ohio Department of Mental Health to pay the cost of care of a child placed in a private, non-public psychiatric hospital: In re Hamil, 69 Ohio St. 2d 97, 23 Ohio Op. 3d 151, 431 N.E.2d 317 (1982).

Revised Code § 2151.23 does not limit the juvenile court to deciding only particular aspects of a juvenile's case, or in any way restrict its jurisdiction, other than by limiting the court to dealing with juveniles. Thus a juvenile may challenge in that forum the distribution of juvenile court records, including social histories, to governmental and social agencies: J. F. v. DeSanti, 653 F.2d 1080 (6th Cir. 1981).

The juvenile court has exclusive original jurisdiction, pursuant to RC § 2151.23(A), concerning any child who is alleged in a proper complaint to be neglected, and the court does not lose jurisdiction by failing to adhere to the time limits set forth in JuvR 29(A) and 34(A): Linger v. Weiss, 57 Ohio St. 2d 97, 11 Ohio Op. 3d 281, 386 N.E.2d 1354 (1979).

In any case where a court of common pleas has made an award of custody or an order for support, or both, of minor children, that court may certify the case to the juvenile court of any county in the state for further proceedings: Pylant v. Pylant, 61 Ohio App. 2d 247, 15 Ohio Op. 3d 407, 401 N.E.2d 940 (1978).

Where a court, having acquired jurisdiction over a child by virtue of a divorce action between the child's parents, certifies the matter of the child's custody to a juvenile court, the consent of the juvenile court having first been obtained, the juvenile court has exclusive jurisdiction over the child's custody by virtue of RC § 3109.06 and RC § 2151.23(D) and a finding of unfitness of the parents or that there is no suitable relative to have custody is not a necessary prerequisite to such certification: In re Height, 47 Ohio App. 2d 203, 1 Ohio Op. 3d 279, 353 N.E.2d 887 (1975).

The amendment of this section, adopted by the Legislature effective November 19, 1969, deprives a municipal court of any jurisdiction to hear and determine any criminal case charging an adult with the violation of any section of RC Chapter 2151.: State v. Sanchez, 22 Ohio App. 2d 145, 51 Ohio Op. 2d 292, 259 N.E.2d 139 (1970).

An Ohio juvenile court, in a dependency proceeding pursuant to RC § 2151.27 et seq., has no jurisdiction to interfere with mother's legal custody of her children, in the absence of proof, and a finding, of unfitness of such parent, merely for the purpose of releasing such children to the officers of the court of a foreign state; the Ohio juvenile court need not give full faith and credit to a Michigan decree where that decree was obtained by the husband in an ex parte custody determination, subsequent to a divorce decree, in which the Michigan court had no personal jurisdiction over the nonresident wife: In re Messner, 19 Ohio App. 2d 33, 48 Ohio Op. 2d 31, 249 N.E.2d 532 (1969).

The state of Ohio has the burden of proof in the prosecution of a delinquency complaint to establish the jurisdiction of the juvenile court over the person of the "child": State v. Mendenhall, 21 Ohio App. 2d 135, 50 Ohio Op. 2d 227, 255 N.E.2d 307 (1969).

Under the authority derived from RC §§ 2151.23, 2151.27 and 2151.35, the juvenile court has the authority to hear and determine the case of a neglected child notwithstanding the fact that the child is at the time within the continuing jurisdiction of the common pleas court by virtue of a divorce decree: In re Gail, 12 Ohio Misc. 251, 41 Ohio Op. 2d 341, 231 N.E.2d 253 (JC 1967).

Subsections (A)(1) and (A)(2) of this section are independent grants of jurisdiction to the juvenile court. Subsection (A)(2) does not modify the power granted by subsection (A)(1): James v. Child Welfare Board, 9 Ohio App. 2d 299, 38 Ohio Op. 2d 347, 224 N.E.2d 358 (1967).

The common pleas court is, therefore, without jurisdiction to entertain an action filed by the mother against the father for alleged delinquencies in the weekly payments ordered as a condition of probation by the juvenile court: Anderson v. Anderson, 4 Ohio App. 2d 90, 33 Ohio Op. 2d 145, 212 N.E.2d 643 (1965).

In such case, where the mother files a petition for divorce in the common pleas court subsequent to the action in juvenile court and upon trial a divorce is granted to the mother, the common pleas court in its decree is without jurisdiction to deal with the custody and support of the minor children, jurisdiction of custody and support then being exclusively in the juvenile court: Anderson v. Anderson, 4 Ohio App. 2d 90, 33 Ohio Op. 2d 145, 212 N.E.2d 643 (1965).

Where the jurisdiction of the juvenile court has been invoked by the arrest of a father of minor children on a charge of nonsupport filed by the mother, and upon trial the father pleads guilty and is sentenced, which sentence is suspended and the defendant put on probation, the condition of the probation being that the defendant will pay a specified sum weekly for support, the minor children thereby become wards of the Juvenile Court and the subject of their support and the power to enforce the condition of probation is exclusively in that court until each child has reached the age of eighteen years (RC §§ 2151.49 and 2151.99): Anderson v. Anderson, 4 Ohio App. 2d 90, 33 Ohio Op. 2d 145, 212 N.E.2d 643 (1965).

The statutes of Ohio confer jurisdiction on the juvenile court with respect to custody of a neglected or dependent child: Byington v. Byington, 175 Ohio St. 513, 26 Ohio Op. 2d 176, 196 N.E.2d 588 (1964).

A juvenile court which acquires jurisdiction of a minor child of persons who are subsequently divorced has, by virtue of this section exclusive jurisdiction of such minor, and the common pleas court wherein such divorce is granted has no jurisdiction to make any order respecting the custody of such child: Patton v. Patton, 1 Ohio App. 2d 1, 30 Ohio Op. 2d 49, 203 N.E.2d 662 (1963).

The juvenile court has exclusive original jurisdiction of delinquent minors: State ex rel. Schwartz v. Haines, 172 Ohio St. 572, 18 Ohio Op. 2d 130, 179 N.E.2d 46 (1962).

The physical presence of the child within the geography of the court empowers the juvenile court to determine its custody, provided it is "not a ward of another court": In re Wolfe, 91 Ohio L. Ab. 167, 26 Ohio Op. 2d 274, 187 N.E.2d 658 (JC 1962).

Where separate complaints, alleging each of petitioner's children to be a neglected child, were filed in the juvenile court before the petitioner filed a habeas corpus proceeding in the common pleas court alleging that he was unlawfully deprived of their custody, the juvenile court acquired jurisdiction over the matter of custody: In re Ruth, 88 Ohio L. Ab. 1, 16 Ohio Op. 2d 408, 176 N.E.2d 187 (CP 1961).

When the question of custody only comes before a court, under the authority granted in this section, that court has jurisdiction to include in the award of custody an order for the support of such child: Kolody v. Kolody, 110 Ohio App. 260, 13 Ohio Op. 2d 25, 169 N.E.2d 34 (1960).

Where a neglected child proceeding is instituted in the juvenile court, pursuant to RC § 2151.27, by a parent of such child, and a divorce action is later instituted by such parent, the juvenile court has exclusive original jurisdiction to determine whether the child is neglected, the power to determine his custody and the authority to place the child with a relative: In re Small, 114 Ohio App. 248, 19 Ohio Op. 2d 128, 181 N.E.2d 503 (1960).

Where the juvenile court has entertained jurisdiction over a minor, and has by decree, placed the permanent custody of said minor, with the county welfare department, the juvenile court has original and continuing jurisdiction and the probate court is without jurisdiction and authority to grant letters of guardianship in such a case: In re Brinegar's Guardianship, 81 Ohio L. Ab. 158, 160 N.E.2d 589 (PC 1959).

Under division (A) of this section the juvenile court has exclusive original jurisdiction of any child who is neglected and this excludes action by any other court not explicitly given jurisdiction: Hartshorne v. Hartshorne, 89 Ohio L. Ab. 243, 185 N.E.2d 329 (App 1959).

By the language of this section, the juvenile court is without authority to accept or exercise jurisdiction where the matter has not been referred to it by a court vested with authority to do so: Haynie v. Haynie, 169 Ohio St. 467, 8 Ohio Op. 2d 476, 159 N.E.2d 765 (1959), [affirming 108 Ohio App. 342, 9 Ohio Op. 2d 301, 161 N.E.2d 549.]

Under RC §§ 3105.21 and 2151.23, where the court of common pleas in a divorce action dismisses the action for insufficient evidence and without making a determination on the merits, it lacks the power and authority to certify the question of the custody of the minor child of the parties to the juvenile court, and the juvenile court is without power to accept such question: Haynie v. Haynie, 169 Ohio St. 467, 8 Ohio Op. 2d 476, 159 N.E.2d 765 (1959), [affirming 108 Ohio App. 342, 9 Ohio Op. 2d 301, 161 N.E.2d 549.]

The right to custody of a minor child, the duty to support and the right of a parent to reasonable visitation may, where the interest of the child requires it, be determined or altered by a court of this state in whose jurisdiction the child may be, even though a court of another state has determined the right to custody: Bain v. Rose, 103 Ohio App. 297, 3 Ohio Op. 2d 326, 145 N.E.2d 319 (1957).

The juvenile court has exclusive original jurisdiction under this section to determine the custody of any child not a ward of another court: Crum v. Howard, 73 Ohio L. Ab. 111, 1 Ohio Op. 2d 399, 137 N.E.2d 654 (CP 1956).

Under the provisions of this section, the juvenile court is invested with original jurisdiction to determine the custody of any child not a ward of another court: In re Torok, 161 Ohio St. 585, 53 Ohio Op. 433, 120 N.E.2d 307 (1954).

Under the provisions of this section, the juvenile court is given original jurisdiction in a proper proceeding to determine the right of custody of any child where such child is not a ward of another court, and it is not necessary in the exercise of such jurisdiction that the juvenile court first determine that such child is a dependent, neglected or delinquent child as defined by GC §§ 1639-2, 1639-3, and 1639-4 (RC §§ 2151.02, 2151.03, and 2151.04): In re Lorok, 93 Ohio App. 251, 51 Ohio Op. 10, 114 N.E.2d 65 (1952).

This section confers exclusive original jurisdiction upon the juvenile court to determine the custody of any child not a ward of another court: Withorowski v. Withorowski, 89 Ohio App. 424, 46 Ohio Op. 259, 102 N.E.2d 896 (1951).

There was no proper basis for certification from the probate court to the juvenile court, and, no complaint having been filed charging the child to be a dependent child or any other form of complaint originating in the juvenile court, that court was without jurisdiction to determine that the child was a dependent child or to make an order depriving the mother of custody and committing the child to the custody of a detention home: State ex rel. Clark v. Allaman, 87 Ohio App. 101, 42 Ohio Op. 330, 90 N.E.2d 394 (1950).

By the provisions of this section, jurisdiction is conferred on the juvenile court to "determine the custody of any child not a ward of another court" and "to hear and determine the case of any child duly certified to the court according to law by any court of competent jurisdiction, and to make disposition of said child in accordance with the provisions of this chapter": State ex rel. Sparto v. Williams, 86 Ohio App. 377, 41 Ohio Op. 474, 86 N.E.2d 501 (1949), [affirmed, 153 Ohio St. 64.]

The juvenile court has jurisdiction of a child only if such child is found to be delinquent, neglected or dependent: Paddock v. Ripley, 149 Ohio St. 539, 37 Ohio Op. 262, 80 N.E.2d 129 (1948).

Under this section the juvenile court has exclusive original jurisdiction over delinquent, neglected, dependent, crippled or otherwise physically handicapped children, and if a complaint is filed in the juvenile court alleging that a child is delinquent, neglected, dependent, crippled, or otherwise physically handicapped, the juvenile court may exercise such jurisdiction if the complaint is proven and may make such order as provided by the juvenile court code even though the child is a ward of the common pleas court in a divorce proceeding, except that it may not change the custody of said child as between the parties to the divorce action unless the question of custody is certified to the juvenile court by the court granting the divorce decree: In re Jones, 46 Ohio L. Ab. 132, 33 Ohio Op. 331, 68 N.E.2d 97 (JC 1946).

The jurisdiction over minors acquired by the common pleas court in a divorce action is continuing and, as between the parties to a divorce action, no other court has authority to make any order affecting the custody of such minors: McFadden v. Kendall, 81 Ohio App. 107, 36 Ohio Op. 414, 77 N.E.2d 625 (1946).

Where a child is properly charged with being a delinquent, neglected, or dependent child, and is proven to be such, the juvenile court, by this section, is the special and exclusive tribunal for determining the issue of such child's care, custody and control:

McFadden v. Kendall, 81 Ohio App. 107, 36 Ohio Op. 414, 77 N.E.2d 625 (1946).

This section, relative to the jurisdiction of the juvenile court to determine custody of minors, is a grant, and not a limitation, of jurisdiction: McFadden v. Kendall, 81 Ohio App. 107, 36 Ohio Op. 414, 77 N.E.2d 625 (1946).

Since August 19, 1937, the juvenile court, subject to the jurisdiction of the common pleas court in divorce cases, has exclusive original jurisdiction over dependent, neglected and crippled children: In re Howell, 21 Ohio Op. 379, 7 Ohio Supp. 4 (JC 1941).

The juvenile court code, GC § 1639-1 (RC § 2151.01) et seq. does not make the jurisdiction of the juvenile court exclusive throughout. It vests jurisdiction over the infant, not the crime: In re Evans, 67 Ohio App. 66, 21 Ohio Op. 93, 35 N.E.2d 887 (1941).

When the common pleas court, under authority of GC § 8034-1 (RC § 3109.06), certified to the juvenile court the matter of arrearages which had arisen on support orders, the common pleas court surrendered all jurisdiction as to that question and thereafter the juvenile court had continuing and exclusive jurisdiction as to any modification of the orders: Baumgarten v. Baumgarten, 29 Ohio L. Ab. 112, 14 Ohio Op. 490 (CP 1939).

In the part relating to adults, found in this section, the word "exclusive" is not used; it will be observed therefore that exclusive jurisdiction is only conferred by the juvenile court code with respect to offenses from the standpoint of the child: In re Cooper, 134 Ohio St. 40, 11 Ohio Op. 416, 15 N.E.2d 634 (1938), [affirming 58 Ohio App. 519.]

Pursuant to R.C. 2151.23(A), the Probate and Juvenile Division of the Muskingum County Court of Common Pleas has exclusive original jurisdiction to issue orders of support in cases brought under R.C. 2151.27 to R.C. 2151.331, including orders complying with R.C. 2151.33(B)(2)(a). The language of R.C. 2301.03(AA) establishing the powers and duties of the judge of the Domestic Relations Division of the Muskingum County Court of Common Pleas does not modify or restrict the exclusive original jurisdiction of the juvenile court in this regard. Opinion No. 2005-003 (2005).

When a juvenile court exercising jurisdiction over a child under GC § 1639-16 (RC § 2151.23) terminates such jurisdiction, said child by virtue of GC §§ 1639-6 and 3391-16 (RC §§ 2151.06 and 5113.05) immediately acquires a legal settlement in the county of residence of the parents, surviving parent, sole parent, parent having custody awarded by a court having jurisdiction, or guardian of the person of such minor: 1953 OAG No. 2656 (1953).

Juvenile courts have no jurisdiction of felonies or offenses described in GC §§ 13008 and 13012 (RC §§ 3113.01 and 3113.06): 1946 OAG No. 1100 (1946).

—Surrender of child to relative

A juvenile court does not have jurisdiction to approve a parent's permanent surrender of rights to a relative: State ex rel. Lunsford v. Buck, 88 Ohio App. 3d 425, 623 N.E.2d 1356 (1993).

—Visitation

Trial court's requirement of supervised visitation and the numerous rules imposed on visitation were justified by the history of the case. Because the determination that the parents had to pay the supervision and guardian ad litem fees had already been made, the parents needed to present some evidence regarding their income and expenses to prove their contention that they could not afford the fees, which they failed to do. Hempen v. Bailey (In re Bailey), 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2830, 2005 Ohio 3039, (2005).

The complaint of a grandparent seeking only visitation with a grandchild may not be determined by the juvenile court pursuant to its authority to determine the "custody" of children under RC § 2151.23(A)(2): In re Gibson, 61 Ohio St. 3d 168, 573 N.E.2d 1074 (1991).

—Ward of another state court

Juvenile Court did not have jurisdiction, pursuant to RC § 2151.23(A)(2), to grant permanent custody of a child to a county agency, as the child was the ward of another state court that had specifically retained jurisdiction over the child after the court granted legal custody of the child to her relatives in her parents' divorce proceeding. In re Frenz, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3289, 2003 Ohio 3653, (2003).

Money judgments

The juvenile court does not have jurisdiction to render a money judgment: Snyder v. Snyder, 32 Ohio L. Ab. 28, 18 Ohio Op. 69, 5 Ohio Supp. 222 (JC 1940).

Parentage proceedings

Under the circumstances, the juvenile division and the general division had concurrent jurisdiction over the parentage action: Payne v. Cartee, 111 Ohio App. 3d 580, 676 N.E.2d 946 (1996).

A juvenile court's jurisdiction in paternity actions includes authority to order the father to reimburse the human services department pursuant to RC § 5107.04. The order must provide for full reimbursement of the department: Brightwell v. Easter, 93 Ohio App. 3d 425, 638 N.E.2d 1067 (1994).

A juvenile court has statutory authority to award child support arrearages to the mother and/or minor child upon a motion for child support arrearages filed by the mother and minor child in a parentage action brought pursuant to RC § 2151.23(B)(2) and RC §§ 3111.01 through 3111.19 where the father has acknowledged the father-child relationship and the mother has consented to the filing of a legitimation order by a probate court pursuant to RC § 2105.18: Lewis v. Chapin, 93 Ohio App. 3d 695, 639 N.E.2d 848 (1994).

Privilege against self-incrimination

The privilege against self-incrimination applied to a parent in a proceeding where the county was seeking temporary custody of a child that was alleged to be neglected: Gill v. Cuyahoga County Dep't of Children & Family Servs. (In re Knight), 135 Ohio App. 3d 172, 733 N.E.2d 303 (1999).

Prohibition

Where a juvenile court judge had statutory authority to determine permanent custody issues under RC §§ 2151.23(A)(2) and 2151.353(A)(4), and a father had a legal remedy providing adequate relief, the father was foreclosed from pursuing an extraordinary remedy in prohibition. State ex rel. Wells v. Costine, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 530, 2004 Ohio 563, (2004).

Proof of age

Once a court has properly established subject matter and personal jurisdiction over an alleged juvenile offender, additional evidence of the juvenile's age is not essential to a finding of delinquency, unless one of the elements of the adult crime alleged requires specific proof of age: In re Burton S., 136 Ohio App. 3d 386, 736 N.E.2d 928 (1999).

Unless a child has been transferred from the juvenile court, a court of common pleas does not have jurisdiction over a person under 18. A court of common pleas has jurisdiction to determine defendant's age at a hearing. The state has the burden of proving beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant was an adult at the time of the offense: State v. Neguse, 71 Ohio App. 3d 596, 594 N.E.2d 1116 (1991).

Reference

A juvenile judge has no authority to commit the trial of a criminal charge against an adult to a referee and any proceedings so committed are null and void: State v. Eddington, 52 Ohio App. 2d 312, 6 Ohio Op. 3d 317, 369 N.E.2d 1054 (1976).

Right to counsel

When a parent's mother sought custody of the parent's child, the parent was not entitled to have counsel appointed, despite the use of the word "dependent" in the mother's petition, because the use of that word did not place the mother's petition under RC § 2151.23(A)(1), under which the parent would have had a right to appointed counsel, but, rather, the petition was simply the petition of a private party for custody, which was governed by RC § 2151.23(A)(2), under which the parent did not have a right to appointed counsel. State ex rel. Johnson v. Baronzzi, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4889, 2006 Ohio 4955, (2006).

A party who has a right to appointed counsel in a juvenile court action for child support is also entitled to counsel on the issues of custody and visitation: McKinney v. McClure, 102 Ohio App. 3d 165, 656 N.E.2d 1310 (1995).

Same-sex relationship

Pursuant to its authority under RC § 2151.23(A)(2), a juvenile court may determine whether a shared custody agreement between partners in a same-sex relationship is in the best interests of the children: In re Bonfield, 96 Ohio St. 3d 218, 773 N.E.2d 507, 2002 Ohio 4182, (2002), substituted opinion at 97 Ohio St. 3d 387, 2002 Ohio 6660, 780 N.E.2d 241, 2002 Ohio LEXIS 3047 (2002).

Shared parenting

Juvenile court had jurisdiction to rule on a father's motion for a shared parenting plan concerning the parties' daughter and to make a custody determination in accordance with RC § 3109.04. Steven D. C. v. Carrie Anne P., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3548, 2005 Ohio 3858, (2005).

Temporary custody

Revised Code § 3109.04(B) has no application where a parent is seeking to extinguish an award of temporary custody to a non-parent in order to re-establish custody of the child: In re Custody of Carpenter, 41 Ohio App. 3d 182, 534 N.E.2d 1216 (1987).

Revised Code § 3109.04(C) does not apply to orders of temporary custody; nevertheless, the factors enumerated therein are factors that the trial court may, in its discretion, consider in connection with the determination required by In re Perales (1977), 52 OS2d 89, 6 OO3d 293, 369 NE2d 1047: In re Custody of Carpenter, 41 Ohio App. 3d 182, 534 N.E.2d 1216 (1987).

URESA

Prohibition will not issue to prevent a juvenile court, in a URESA action, from requiring information as to a party's financial status: Manrow v. Court of Common Pleas of Lucas Cty., 20 Ohio St. 3d 37, 20 Ohio B. 285, 485 N.E.2d 713 (1985).

Unborn child

The juvenile court has no jurisdiction to regulate the conduct of a pregnant adult for the purpose of protecting the health of her unborn child: Cox v. Franklin Cty. Court of Common Pleas, 42 Ohio App. 3d 171, 537 N.E.2d 721 (1988).

Uniform child custody jurisdiction act

The juvenile court did not abuse its discretion by declining jurisdiction pursuant to the uniform child custody jurisdiction act. Ex parte communications between the judges involved concerning procedural matters were proper: In re Simons, 118 Ohio App. 3d 622, 693 N.E.2d 1111 (1997).

Visiting judge

In a court that possesses subject matter jurisdiction, procedural irregularities in the transfer of a case to a visiting judge affect the court's jurisdiction over the particular case and render the judgment voidable, not void: In re J.J., 111 Ohio St. 3d 205, 855 N.E.2d 851, 2006 Ohio 5484, (2006).

Voluntary placement with relatives

Children were not dependent or neglected where the parent with custody voluntarily placed them with relatives, pursuant to an informal agreement, prior to the involvement of DJFS, and the children were receiving proper care from the relatives: In re Stoll, 165 Ohio App. 3d 226, 845 N.E.2d 581, 2006 Ohio 346, (2006).

The parent, guardian, or custodian of a child, the person with whom a child resides, or the child support enforcement agency of the county in which the child, parent, guardian, or custodian of the child resides may bring an action in a juvenile court or other court with jurisdiction under section 2101.022 [2101.02.2] or 2301.03 of the Revised Code under this section requesting the court to issue an order requiring a parent of the child to pay an amount for the support of the child without regard to the marital status of the child's parents. No action may be brought under this section against a person presumed to be the parent of a child based on an acknowledgment of paternity that has not yet become final under former section 3111.211 [3111.21.1] or 5101.314 [5101.31.4] or section 2151.232 [2151.23.2], 3111.25, or 3111.821 [3111.82.1] of the Revised Code.

The parties to an action under this section may raise the issue of the existence or nonexistence of a parent-child relationship, unless a final and enforceable determination of the issue has been made with respect to the parties pursuant to Chapter 3111. of the Revised Code or an acknowledgment of paternity signed by the child's parents has become final pursuant to former section 3111.211 [3111.21.1] or 5101.314 [5101.31.4] or section 2151.232 [2151.23.2], 3111.25, or 3111.821 [3111.82.1] of the Revised Code. If a complaint is filed under this section and an issue concerning the existence or nonexistence of a parent-child relationship is raised, the court shall treat the action as an action pursuant to sections 3111.01 to 3111.18 of the Revised Code. An order issued in an action under this section does not preclude a party to the action from bringing a subsequent action pursuant to sections 3111.01 to 3111.18 of the Revised Code if the issue concerning the existence or nonexistence of the parent-child relationship was not determined with respect to the party pursuant to a proceeding under this section, a proceeding under Chapter 3111. of the Revised Code, or an acknowledgment of paternity that has become final under former section 3111.211 [3111.21.1] or 5101.314 [5101.31.4] or section 2151.232 [2151.23.2], 3111.25, or 3111.821 [3111.82.1] of the Revised Code. An order issued pursuant to this section shall remain effective until an order is issued pursuant to sections 3111.01 to 3111.18 of the Revised Code that a parent-child relationship does not exist between the alleged father of the child and the child or until the occurrence of an event described in section 3119.88 of the Revised Code that would require the order to terminate.

The court, in accordance with sections 3119.29 to 3119.56 of the Revised Code, shall include in each support order made under this section the requirement that one or both of the parents provide for the health care needs of the child to the satisfaction of the court.

County child support enforcement agency

A county child support enforcement agency has standing to bring an action in a juvenile court to obtain reimbursement for public support provided, even where parentage was never at issue: State ex rel. Lamier v. Lamier, 105 Ohio App. 3d 797, 664 N.E.2d 1384 (1995).

There is no statutory authority for a county support enforcement agency to bring a support action in its own name where the parents are married, do not dispute parentage and do not receive public assistance: In re Owens, 104 Ohio App. 3d 201, 661 N.E.2d 765 (1994).

Jurisdiction

When, in one county, a father's parentage was established and he was ordered to pay child support and then, in another county, he filed a complaint for child support because he had obtained custody of the child, without modifying the first court's orders, the two courts, under the terms of RC §§ 2151.23(B)(4) and 2151.231, appeared to have concurrent jurisdiction because the child was not a ward of another court and apparently resided with each of his parents at the times each of them sought child support, so the court in which an action was first filed had exclusive jurisdiction, and it was not error to dismiss the complaint filed in the second court. Dazey v. Pollock, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4756, 2006 Ohio 4850, (2006).

Where a mother sought to preclude a juvenile court judge from exercising post-judgment jurisdiction over visitation and custody motions filed by the father of her child after the mother had filed her intent to relocate to North Carolina with the child, her claim that the judge no longer had jurisdiction over the matter lacked merit, as the juvenile court and the judge had general statutory authority over such issues pursuant to RC §§ 2151.23 and 2151.231. The mother also failed to show entitlement to the writ where she had an adequate remedy at law through either an appeal or a request to transfer the proceedings to North Carolina, pursuant to Ohio R. Juv. P. 11 and 39, such that dismissal of the complaint was warranted. Rivers v. Ramsey, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1610, 2006 Ohio 1744, (2006).

State of Ohio

The state of Ohio has an interest in all child support actions by virtue of either the residential parent's assignment of rights as public assistance recipients or the interest in enforcing child support awards in order to protect and ensure the integrity of the public fisc: Cuyahoga County Support Enforcement Agency v. Lozada, 102 Ohio App. 3d 442, 657 N.E.2d 372 (1995).

If an acknowledgment has been filed and entered into the birth registry pursuant to section 3111.24 of the Revised Code but has not yet become final, either parent who signed the acknowledgment may bring an action in the juvenile court or other court with jurisdiction under section 2101.022 [2101.02.2] or 2301.03 of the Revised Code under this section requesting that the court issue an order requiring a parent of the child to pay an amount for the support of the child in accordance with Chapters 3119., 3121., 3123., and 3125. of the Revised Code.

The parties to an action under this section may raise the issue of the existence or nonexistence of a parent-child relationship. If an action is commenced pursuant to this section and the issue of the existence or nonexistence of a parent-child relationship is raised, the court shall treat the action as an action commenced pursuant to sections 3111.01 to 3111.18 of the Revised Code. If the issue is raised, the court shall promptly notify the office of child support in the department of job and family services that it is conducting proceedings in compliance with sections 3111.01 to 3111.18 of the Revised Code. On receipt of the notice by the office, the acknowledgment of paternity signed by the parties and filed pursuant to section 3111.23 of the Revised Code shall be considered rescinded.

If the parties do not raise the issue of the existence or nonexistence of a parent-child relationship in the action and an order is issued pursuant to this section prior to the date the acknowledgment filed and entered on the birth registry becomes final, the acknowledgment shall be considered final as of the date of the issuance of the order. An order issued pursuant to this section shall not affect an acknowledgment that becomes final pursuant to section 3111.25 of the Revised Code prior to the issuance of the order.

(A)(1) Subject to division (A)(2) of this section, any person having knowledge of a child who appears to have violated section 2151.87 of the Revised Code or to be a juvenile traffic offender or to be an unruly, abused, neglected, or dependent child may file a sworn complaint with respect to that child in the juvenile court of the county in which the child has a residence or legal settlement or in which the violation, unruliness, abuse, neglect, or dependency allegedly occurred. If an alleged abused, neglected, or dependent child is taken into custody pursuant to division (D) of section 2151.31 of the Revised Code or is taken into custody pursuant to division (A) of section 2151.31 of the Revised Code without the filing of a complaint and placed into shelter care pursuant to division (C) of that section, a sworn complaint shall be filed with respect to the child before the end of the next day after the day on which the child was taken into custody. The sworn complaint may be upon information and belief, and, in addition to the allegation that the child committed the violation or is an unruly, abused, neglected, or dependent child, the complaint shall allege the particular facts upon which the allegation that the child committed the violation or is an unruly, abused, neglected, or dependent child is based.

(2) Any person having knowledge of a child who appears to be an unruly child for being an habitual truant may file a sworn complaint with respect to that child and the parent, guardian, or other person having care of the child in the juvenile court of the county in which the child has a residence or legal settlement or in which the child is supposed to attend public school. The sworn complaint may be upon information and belief and shall contain the following allegations:

(a) That the child is an unruly child for being an habitual truant and, in addition, the particular facts upon which that allegation is based;

(b) That the parent, guardian, or other person having care of the child has failed to cause the child's attendance at school in violation of section 3321.38 of the Revised Code and, in addition, the particular facts upon which that allegation is based.

(B) If a child, before arriving at the age of eighteen years, allegedly commits an act for which the child may be adjudicated an unruly child and if the specific complaint alleging the act is not filed or a hearing on that specific complaint is not held until after the child arrives at the age of eighteen years, the court has jurisdiction to hear and dispose of the complaint as if the complaint were filed and the hearing held before the child arrived at the age of eighteen years.

(C) If the complainant in a case in which a child is alleged to be an abused, neglected, or dependent child desires permanent custody of the child or children, temporary custody of the child or children, whether as the preferred or an alternative disposition, or the placement of the child in a planned permanent living arrangement, the complaint shall contain a prayer specifically requesting permanent custody, temporary custody, or the placement of the child in a planned permanent living arrangement.

(D) Any person with standing under applicable law may file a complaint for the determination of any other matter over which the juvenile court is given jurisdiction by section 2151.23 of the Revised Code. The complaint shall be filed in the county in which the child who is the subject of the complaint is found or was last known to be found.

(E) A public children services agency, acting pursuant to a complaint or an action on a complaint filed under this section, is not subject to the requirements of section 3127.23 of the Revised Code.

(F) Upon the filing of a complaint alleging that a child is an unruly child, the court may hold the complaint in abeyance pending the child's successful completion of actions that constitute a method to divert the child from the juvenile court system. The method may be adopted by a county pursuant to divisions (D) and (E) of section 121.37 of the Revised Code or it may be another method that the court considers satisfactory. If the child completes the actions to the court's satisfaction, the court may dismiss the complaint. If the child fails to complete the actions to the court's satisfaction, the court may consider the complaint.

† The effective date of sections 1 and 2 of Sub. H.B. 57 (149 v —) differs from the effective date set for the sections by section 3 of the Act. See provisions of OConst art II, §§ 1c and d.

Analogous in part to former RC § 2151.27 (GC § 1639-23; 117 v 520; 121 v 557; Bureau of Code Revision, 10-1-53; 127 v 547), repealed 133 v H 320, eff 11-19-69.

The provisions of § 3 of HB 57 (149 v —) read as follows:
SECTION 3. Sections 1 and 2 of this act shall take effect January 1, 2002.

The provisions of § 6 of HB 57 (149 v —) read as follows:
SECTION 6. Section 2151.27 of the Revised Code is presented in this act as a composite of the section as amended by both Am. Sub. S.B. 179 and Sub. S.B. 218 of the 123rd General Assembly. The General Assembly, applying the principle stated in division (B) of section 1.52 of the Revised Code that amendments are to be harmonized if reasonably capable of simultaneous operation, finds that the composite is the resulting version of the section in effect on January 1, 2002.

Adoption

The fact that the mother initially gave up her child for the purpose of adoption does not constitute such rejection of the child as to warrant a finding that the child is a neglected child: In re Robert O., 95 Ohio L. Ab. 101, 28 Ohio Op. 2d 165, 199 N.E.2d 765 (JC 1964).

A proceeding, instituted in the juvenile court under the provisions of RC § 2151.27, the so-called "neglected child" statute, may not be used by the complainant either to force an adoption or as a substitute for an adoption proceeding: In re Minton, 112 Ohio App. 361, 16 Ohio Op. 2d 283, 176 N.E.2d 252 (1960).

Case plan

Where a grandmother filed a dependency petition regarding a child pursuant to RC § 2151.27(A) and no children services agency provided services in the matter, the juvenile court did not commit any error in failing to comply with the case plan requirement of RC § 2151.412(A), as it had no applicability to the dependency action where the agency was not involved. In re Brown, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3090, 2006 Ohio 3189, (2006).

Construction with other laws

Revised Code § 3109.04, relating to the custody of children of separated or divorced parents, is not applicable to a neglected-child proceeding under this section: In re Small, 114 Ohio App. 248, 19 Ohio Op. 2d 128, 181 N.E.2d 503 (1960).

Dismissal of complaint

Trial court properly dismissed a husband's complaint, pursuant to Ohio R. Civ. P. 12, alleging neglect and dependency on behalf of his children because the complaint alleged prospective and conclusory allegations, which were insufficient to support a claim under RC § 2151.27; it was noted that a claim that the children were not performing at appropriate age levels did not fall within the definition of dependency pursuant to RC § 2151.04, neglect pursuant to RC § 2151.03, or abuse pursuant to RC § 2151.031. Louck v. Louck, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5328, 2003 Ohio 5999, (2003).

Due process

In a dependency proceeding, GC §§ 1639-4, 1639-21, 1639-35 (RC §§ 2151.04, 2151.16, 2151.38) and this section, there must be legal service upon a minor parent and there must be a guardian ad litem to represent her as prerequisites to any order of dependency against her child in order to satisfy the requirements of due process: In re Hobson, 44 Ohio L. Ab. 85, 62 N.E.2d 510 (App 1945).

Guardian ad litem

It was error for an appointed guardian ad litem to present evidence alleging that the child that the guardian was appointed for was an abused or neglected child because the presentation contravened the statutory mandate from the general assembly; however, that did not affect the validity of the complaint because the guardian ad litem qualified as "any person" under the statute. In re Kheirkhah, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 444, 2004 Ohio 521, (2004).

Habeas corpus

An application for a writ of habeas corpus will be denied, where a complaint is duly filed in the county of legal residence, pursuant to this section, charging a child with being a dependent or neglected child, notwithstanding the court of common pleas of another county in this state, as a result of a divorce action there heard, gave custody of the child to the mother, who subsequently moved with the child to the county where the affidavit of dependency and neglect was filed: James v. Child Welfare Board, 9 Ohio App. 2d 299, 38 Ohio Op. 2d 347, 224 N.E.2d 358 (1967).

Jurisdiction

Grandmother's dependency petition and request for temporary custody of her grandchild pursuant to RC §§ 2151.27(A)(1) and 2151.04 was within the juvenile court's subject matter jurisdiction, as the grandmother qualified as "any person" pursuant to RC § 2151.27(A)(1), and RC §§ 2151.27(C) and 2151.353(A)(3) allowed her to seek custody. In re Brown, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3090, 2006 Ohio 3189, (2006).

An Ohio juvenile court, in a dependency proceeding pursuant to RC § 2151.27 et seq., has no jurisdiction to interfere with a mother's legal custody of her children, in the absence of proof, and a finding, of unfitness of such parent, merely for the purpose of releasing such children to the officers of the court of a foreign state. The Ohio juvenile court need not give full faith and credit to a Michigan decree where that decree was obtained by the husband in an ex parte, custody determination, subsequent to a divorce decree, in which the Michigan court had no personal jurisdiction over the nonresident wife: In re Messner, 19 Ohio App. 2d 33, 48 Ohio Op. 2d 31, 249 N.E.2d 532 (1969).

Under the authority derived from RC §§ 2151.23, 2151.27 and 2151.35, the juvenile court has the authority to hear and determine the case of a neglected child notwithstanding the fact that the child is at the time within the continuing jurisdiction of the common pleas court by virtue of a divorce decree: In re Gail, 12 Ohio Misc. 251, 41 Ohio Op. 2d 341, 231 N.E.2d 253 (JC 1967).

The juvenile court having once waived jurisdiction to handle a case under the juvenile code must order further proceedings under the regular procedural provisions of the criminal law: In re Davis, 87 Ohio L. Ab. 222, 22 Ohio Op. 2d 108, 179 N.E.2d 198 (JC 1961).

Where a neglected-child proceeding is instituted in the juvenile court, pursuant to this section by a parent of such child, and a divorce action is later instituted by such parent, the juvenile court has exclusive original jurisdiction to determine whether the child is neglected, the power to determine his custody and the authority to place the child with a relative: In re Small, 114 Ohio App. 248, 19 Ohio Op. 2d 128, 181 N.E.2d 503 (1960).

Majority

years before the adjudicatory and dispositional hearings were conducted on the delinquency complaints: In re J.B., 71 Ohio Misc. 2d 63, 654 N.E.2d 216 (CP 1995).

The fact that the juvenile reached the age of eighteen on the day after the complaint was filed in juvenile court did not alone deprive that court of jurisdiction: In re Davis, 87 Ohio L. Ab. 222, 22 Ohio Op. 2d 108, 179 N.E.2d 198 (JC 1961).

Neglected child

In actions brought pursuant to RC §§ 2151.27 and 2151.03, the state's primary objective is not to decide conflicting claims to custody; its objective is to determine if a child is receiving proper parental care, and if that care is being provided by a relative pursuant to an agreement initiated by the child's parent, then the child is not a neglected child: In re Reese, 4 Ohio App. 3d 59, 4 Ohio B. 109, 446 N.E.2d 482 (1982).

In a proceeding in the juvenile court, instituted by the filing of a complaint under the provisions of RC § 2151.27, a finding by the court that a child is "neglected" in that it "lacked proper parental care because of the faults and habits of his parents" (RC § 2151.03[B]), and "dependent," in that its "condition and environment... is such as to warrant the court... in assuming his guardianship" (RC § 2151.04[C]), must be based on evidence with respect to whether the child was receiving proper parental care in a proper environment in its home at the time of the hearing: In re Minton, 112 Ohio App. 361, 16 Ohio Op. 2d 283, 176 N.E.2d 252 (1960).

Where an affidavit is filed in support of a motion for a new trial, alleging that the child was a neglected child within the meaning of the provisions of this section, on which charges a hearing was had, the juvenile court has jurisdiction in such matter and may grant a motion for new trial: State ex rel. Sparto v. Williams, 86 Ohio App. 377, 41 Ohio Op. 474, 86 N.E.2d 501 (1949), [affirmed, 153 Ohio St. 64.]

Pleadings

Pursuant to RC § 2151.27, in a juvenile action, the complaint shall allege the particular facts upon which the allegation that the child is a neglected, or dependent child is based, and, pursuant to RC § 2151.353(B) and Ohio R. Juv. P. 10(D), shall contain a prayer specifically requesting permanent custody if that is the relief sought by the complainant; a complaint that sought to adjudicate a father's child neglected and abused properly stated the claim against the father. In re I.M., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 6437, 2003 Ohio 7069, (2003).

An objection based on a defect in the complaint must be heard before the adjudicatory hearing by a pre-hearing motion. Failure to make a timely objection constitutes a waiver: In re Dukes, 81 Ohio App. 3d 145, 610 N.E.2d 513 (1991).

In a parental rights termination proceeding, claims were sufficient to establish juvenile court jurisdiction and apprise mother of the nature of the claims even though they did not provide exact dates of where the alleged events occurred: In re Pieper Children, 74 Ohio App. 3d 714, 600 N.E.2d 317 (1991).

In proving its case in a neglect and dependency proceeding, the state is not limited to those faults and habits of the custodial parent which are specifically listed in the complaint. It is not the intent of JuvR 10(B) to force a complainant to state in the complaint every fact surrounding each incident described: In re Sims, 13 Ohio App. 3d 37, 13 Ohio B. 40, 468 N.E.2d 111 (1983).

A complaint under JuvR 10 and RC § 2151.27 alleging that a child is dependent must state the essential facts which bring the proceeding within the jurisdiction of the court: In re Hunt, 46 Ohio St. 2d 378, 75 Ohio Op. 2d 450, 348 N.E.2d 727 (1976).

Proceedings, wherein the juvenile court determines, in response to a motion, that a child is a neglected and dependent child and orders such child placed in the temporary custody of the county welfare board, are void ab initio for want of a complaint filed as prescribed by this section. Such proceedings cannot be the foundation for a determination of dependency or neglect necessary to support an order awarding custody of such child: Union County Child Welfare Board v. Parker, 7 Ohio App. 2d 79, 36 Ohio Op. 2d 162, 218 N.E.2d 757 (1964).

An allegation in a motion filed in juvenile court seeking to have that court "determine and award the future care and custody" of a child, that "neither parent is a suitable person to have the care and custody of said child," does not constitute a charge that such child is "neglected" (RC § 2151.03) or "dependent" (RC § 2151.04) and is not sufficiently definite to constitute the "complaint" necessitated by RC § 2151.27: Union County Child Welfare Board v. Parker, 7 Ohio App. 2d 79, 36 Ohio Op. 2d 162, 218 N.E.2d 757 (1964).

Jurisdiction and procedure in complaints involving a child are defined and controlled by RC § 2151.27 et seq: State ex rel. Burchett v. Juvenile Court, 92 Ohio L. Ab. 357, 28 Ohio Op. 2d 116, 194 N.E.2d 912 (App 1962).

In a proceeding to establish the dependency of a child, GC § 1639-23 makes the complaint sufficiently definite by the simple use of the word "dependent": In re Duncan, 62 Ohio L. Ab. 173, 107 N.E.2d 256 (App 1951).

A complaint filed under this section which alleges that a child under twenty months of age is dependent is sufficiently definite: In re Anteau, 67 Ohio App. 117, 21 Ohio Op. 129, 36 N.E.2d 47 (1941).

Request for records

Pursuant to RC § 2151.14.1, when a complaint alleging abuse, neglect, or dependency of a child is filed under RC § 2151.27, a request directed to a public children services agency or the prosecuting attorney for "any records related to the child" must be granted or denied by following the procedures set forth in RC § 2151.14.1: OAG No. 91-003 (1991).

Venue

Under the provisions of this section jurisdiction of the juvenile court rests on either the residence of the child in the county where the complaint has been filed, or a showing that the acts constituting neglect or dependency of the minor child have occurred in that county: State ex rel. Burchett v. Juvenile Court, 92 Ohio L. Ab. 357, 28 Ohio Op. 2d 116, 194 N.E.2d 912 (App 1962).

Under this section, the juvenile court of the county in which acts constituting neglect or dependency of a minor child occur, has jurisdiction over complaints concerning such child, and it is immaterial whether the parent or minor child was a nonresident of the county in which the complaint is filed: In re Belk, 97 Ohio App. 114, 55 Ohio Op. 330, 123 N.E.2d 757 (1954).

Except in a case in which the child is alleged to be a serious youthful offender under section 2152.13 of the Revised Code, if the child resides in a county of the state and the proceeding is commenced in a juvenile court of another county, that court, on its own motion or a motion of a party, may transfer the proceeding to the county of the child's residence upon the filing of the complaint or after the adjudicatory, or dispositional hearing, for such further proceeding as required. The court of the child's residence shall then proceed as if the original complaint had been filed in that court. Transfer may also be made if the residence of the child changes. The proceeding shall be so transferred if other proceedings involving the child are pending in the juvenile court of the county of the child's residence.

Whenever a case is transferred to the county of the child's residence and it appears to the court of that county that the interests of justice and the convenience of the parties requires that the adjudicatory hearing be had in the county in which the complaint was filed, the court may return the proceeding to the county in which the complaint was filed for the purpose of the adjudicatory hearing. The court may thereafter proceed as to the transfer to the county of the child's legal residence as provided in this section.

Certified copies of all legal and social records pertaining to the case shall accompany the transfer.

The effective date is set by section 5 of SB 179.

Appeal
Applicability
Discretion of court
Temporary custody orders

Appeal

A common pleas court order transferring proceedings involving an unruly minor to a juvenile court of another county is not a final appealable order where the transferee court has not yet accepted or rejected jurisdiction. A temporary custody order is not a final order. In re Devlin, 78 Ohio App. 3d 543, 605 N.E.2d 467 (1992).

Applicability

Revised Code § 2151.27.1 does not encompass a transfer of the cause after a dispositional order has been made: In re Sekulich, 65 Ohio St. 2d 13, 19 Ohio Op. 3d 192, 417 N.E.2d 1014 (1981).

Discretion of court

The venue provisions of RC § 2151.27.1 and JuvR 11 are discretionary with the court: In re Meyer, 98 Ohio App. 3d 189, 648 N.E.2d 52 (1994).

Temporary custody orders

Temporary custody orders entered pursuant to JuvR 34 are final and appealable when they are entered, and failure to timely appeal the orders precludes any further consideration of the hearings conducted prior to those orders: Ackerman v. Lucas Cty. Children Services Bd., 49 Ohio App. 3d 14, 550 N.E.2d 549 (1989).

§ 2151.28 Adjudicatory hearing; shelter care determination; summons.

(A) No later than seventy-two hours after the complaint is filed, the court shall fix a time for an adjudicatory hearing. The court shall conduct the adjudicatory hearing within one of the following periods of time:

(1) Subject to division (C) of section 2152.13 of the Revised Code and division (A)(3) of this section, if the complaint alleged that the child violated section 2151.87 of the Revised Code or is a delinquent or unruly child or a juvenile traffic offender, the adjudicatory hearing shall be held and may be continued in accordance with the Juvenile Rules.

(2) If the complaint alleged that the child is an abused, neglected, or dependent child, the adjudicatory hearing shall be held no later than thirty days after the complaint is filed, except that, for good cause shown, the court may continue the adjudicatory hearing for either of the following periods of time:

(a) For ten days beyond the thirty-day deadline to allow any party to obtain counsel;

(b) For a reasonable period of time beyond the thirty-day deadline to obtain service on all parties or any necessary evaluation, except that the adjudicatory hearing shall not be held later than sixty days after the date on which the complaint was filed.

(3) If the child who is the subject of the complaint is in detention and is charged with violating a section of the Revised Code that may be violated by an adult, the hearing shall be held not later than fifteen days after the filing of the complaint. Upon a showing of good cause, the adjudicatory hearing may be continued and detention extended.

(B) At an adjudicatory hearing held pursuant to division (A)(2) of this section, the court, in addition to determining whether the child is an abused, neglected, or dependent child, shall determine whether the child should remain or be placed in shelter care until the dispositional hearing. When the court makes the shelter care determination, all of the following apply:

(1) The court shall determine whether there are any relatives of the child who are willing to be temporary custodians of the child. If any relative is willing to be a temporary custodian, the child otherwise would remain or be placed in shelter care, and the appointment is appropriate, the court shall appoint the relative as temporary custodian of the child, unless the court appoints another relative as custodian. If it determines that the appointment of a relative as custodian would not be appropriate, it shall issue a written opinion setting forth the reasons for its determination and give a copy of the opinion to all parties and the guardian ad litem of the child.

The court's consideration of a relative for appointment as a temporary custodian does not make that relative a party to the proceedings.

(2) The court shall comply with section 2151.419 [2151.41.9] of the Revised Code.

(3) The court shall schedule the date for the dispositional hearing to be held pursuant to section 2151.35 of the Revised Code. The parents of the child have a right to be represented by counsel; however, in no case shall the dispositional hearing be held later than ninety days after the date on which the complaint was filed.

(C)(1) The court shall direct the issuance of a summons directed to the child except as provided by this section, the parents, guardian, custodian, or other person with whom the child may be, and any other persons that appear to the court to be proper or necessary parties to the proceedings, requiring them to appear before the court at the time fixed to answer the allegations of the complaint. The summons shall contain the name and telephone number of the court employee designated by the court pursuant to section 2151.314 [2151.31.4] of the Revised Code to arrange for the prompt appointment of counsel for indigent persons. A child alleged to be an abused, neglected, or dependent child shall not be summoned unless the court so directs. A summons issued for a child who is under fourteen years of age and who is alleged to be a delinquent child, unruly child, or a juvenile traffic offender shall be served on the parent, guardian, or custodian of the child in the child's behalf.

If the person who has physical custody of the child, or with whom the child resides, is other than the parent or guardian, then the parents and guardian also shall be summoned. A copy of the complaint shall accompany the summons.

(2) In lieu of appearing before the court at the time fixed in the summons and prior to the date fixed for appearance in the summons, a child who is alleged to have violated section 2151.87 of the Revised Code and that child's parent, guardian, or custodian may sign a waiver of appearance before the clerk of the juvenile court and pay a fine of one hundred dollars. If the child and that child's parent, guardian, or custodian do not waive the court appearance, the court shall proceed with the adjudicatory hearing as provided in this section.

(D) If the complaint contains a prayer for permanent custody, temporary custody, whether as the preferred or an alternative disposition, or a planned permanent living arrangement in a case involving an alleged abused, neglected, or dependent child, the summons served on the parents shall contain as is appropriate an explanation that the granting of permanent custody permanently divests the parents of their parental rights and privileges, an explanation that an adjudication that the child is an abused, neglected, or dependent child may result in an order of temporary custody that will cause the removal of the child from their legal custody until the court terminates the order of temporary custody or permanently divests the parents of their parental rights, or an explanation that the issuance of an order for a planned permanent living arrangement will cause the removal of the child from the legal custody of the parents if any of the conditions listed in divisions (A)(5)(a) to (c) of section 2151.353 [2151.35.3] of the Revised Code are found to exist.

(E)(1) Except as otherwise provided in division (E)(2) of this section, the court may endorse upon the summons an order directing the parents, guardian, or other person with whom the child may be to appear personally at the hearing and directing the person having the physical custody or control of the child to bring the child to the hearing.

(2) In cases in which the complaint alleges that a child is an unruly or delinquent child for being an habitual or chronic truant and that the parent, guardian, or other person having care of the child has failed to cause the child's attendance at school, the court shall endorse upon the summons an order directing the parent, guardian, or other person having care of the child to appear personally at the hearing and directing the person having the physical custody or control of the child to bring the child to the hearing.

(F)(1) The summons shall contain a statement advising that any party is entitled to counsel in the proceedings and that the court will appoint counsel or designate a county public defender or joint county public defender to provide legal representation if the party is indigent.

(2) In cases in which the complaint alleges a child to be an abused, neglected, or dependent child and no hearing has been conducted pursuant to division (A) of section 2151.314 [2151.31.4] of the Revised Code with respect to the child or a parent, guardian, or custodian of the child does not attend the hearing, the summons also shall contain a statement advising that a case plan may be prepared for the child, the general requirements usually contained in case plans, and the possible consequences of failure to comply with a journalized case plan.

(G) If it appears from an affidavit filed or from sworn testimony before the court that the conduct, condition, or surroundings of the child are endangering the child's health or welfare or those of others, that the child may abscond or be removed from the jurisdiction of the court, or that the child will not be brought to the court, notwithstanding the service of the summons, the court may endorse upon the summons an order that a law enforcement officer serve the summons and take the child into immediate custody and bring the child forthwith to the court.

(H) A party, other than the child, may waive service of summons by written stipulation.

(I) Before any temporary commitment is made permanent, the court shall fix a time for hearing in accordance with section 2151.414 [2151.41.4] of the Revised Code and shall cause notice by summons to be served upon the parent or guardian of the child and the guardian ad litem of the child, or published, as provided in section 2151.29 of the Revised Code. The summons shall contain an explanation that the granting of permanent custody permanently divests the parents of their parental rights and privileges.

(J) Any person whose presence is considered necessary and who is not summoned may be subpoenaed to appear and testify at the hearing. Anyone summoned or subpoenaed to appear who fails to do so may be punished, as in other cases in the court of common pleas, for contempt of court. Persons subpoenaed shall be paid the same witness fees as are allowed in the court of common pleas.

(K) The failure of the court to hold an adjudicatory hearing within any time period set forth in division (A)(2) of this section does not affect the ability of the court to issue any order under this chapter and does not provide any basis for attacking the jurisdiction of the court or the validity of any order of the court.

(L) If the court, at an adjudicatory hearing held pursuant to division (A) of this section upon a complaint alleging that a child is an abused, neglected, dependent, delinquent, or unruly child or a juvenile traffic offender, determines that the child is a dependent child, the court shall incorporate that determination into written findings of fact and conclusions of law and enter those findings of fact and conclusions of law in the record of the case. The court shall include in those findings of fact and conclusions of law specific findings as to the existence of any danger to the child and any underlying family problems that are the basis for the court's determination that the child is a dependent child.

The provisions of § 3 of HB 180 (149 v —) read as follows:

SECTION 3. The General Assembly hereby requests the Supreme Court to promptly modify Rule 29 of the Rules of Juvenile Procedure pursuant to its authority under the Ohio Constitution to make that rule consistent with the amendments of this act to section 2151.28 of the Revised Code.

The General Assembly further requests the Supreme Court to promptly modify Rule 7 of the Rules of Juvenile Procedure pursuant to its authority under the Ohio Constitution to make that rule consistent with the amendments of this act to section 2151.31 of the Revised Code.

Abused child

During the adjudicatory phase of the proceedings to determine whether a child is an "abused child," the trial court does not have to find any fault on the part of a parent, guardian or custodian in order to conclude that the child is "abused" pursuant to RC § 2151.03.1. All that is necessary is that the child be a victim, regardless of who is responsible for the abuse: In re Pitts, 38 Ohio App. 3d 1, 525 N.E.2d 814 (1987).

Confessions

The confrontation clauses of OConst art I, § 10 and USConst amend VI are not violated by the admission of a nontestifying co-defendant's confession, where the confession is redacted to eliminate not only the defendant's name, but also any reference to his or her existence. (Richardson v. Marsh [1987], 481 US 200, approved and followed): In re Watson, 47 Ohio St. 3d 86, 548 N.E.2d 210 (1989).

In deciding whether a juvenile's confession is involuntarily induced, the court should consider the totality of the circumstances, including the age, mentality and prior criminal experience of the accused; the length, intensity, and frequency of interrogation; and the existence of physical deprivation or inducement. (State v. Edwards [1976], 49 OS2d 31, 3 OO3d 18, 358 NE2d 1051, approved and followed): In re Watson, 47 Ohio St. 3d 86, 548 N.E.2d 210 (1989).

Consent to permanent surrender of custody

Jurisdiction of the juvenile court was proper in a proceeding to terminate parental rights despite the failure to serve the infant's mother when the mother had voluntarily executed a permanent surrender of the child to a private agency and had actual notice of the proceeding via service upon her husband, the legal father: In re Luallen, 27 Ohio App. 3d 29, 27 Ohio B. 30, 499 N.E.2d 358 (1985).

Juvenile Court jurisdiction to consent to an agreement surrendering permanent custody of a minor to a county children services board, pursuant to RC §§ 5103.15 and 5153.16(B), is not dependent upon service of process on the child and his parents as provided for in RC § 2151.28, nor upon appointment of a guardian ad litem as provided for in RC § 2151.28.1: In re Miller, 61 Ohio St. 2d 184, 15 Ohio Op. 3d 211, 399 N.E.2d 1262 (1980).

All fact-finding hearings in juvenile court must measure up to the essentials of due process, including adequate and timely notice so that the child and his parents have opportunity to respond. In hearings which may result in commitment, the child is entitled to counsel and must be informed of his legal rights, including privilege against self-incrimination, prior to a confession: In re Gault, 40 Ohio Op. 2d 378, 387 U.S. 1, 18 L. Ed. 2d 527, 87 S. Ct. 1428 (1967).

By virtue of the provisions of this section, the parents of a minor child or children are entitled to notice, actual or constructive, in a proceeding instituted in the juvenile court upon a complaint of dependency of such children. Unless such notice is given to the parents, the jurisdiction of the court does not attach, and a judgment of commitment rendered in such proceeding is void: In re Corey, 145 Ohio St. 413, 31 Ohio Op. 35, 61 N.E.2d 892 (1945).

Hearings generally

Both the existing juvenile code and the Juvenile Rules require a hearing before a temporary commitment to the Ohio youth commission can be made permanent, which hearing requires the presence of the youth involved: OAG No. 72-071 (1972).

Immediate custody order

Revised Code §§ 2151.28 and 2151.31, a part of the juvenile court act, do not require a hearing as a condition precedent to the taking of a child into custody, pursuant to order of a juvenile court, during pendency of an action in such court: In re Jones, 114 Ohio App. 319, 19 Ohio Op. 2d 286, 182 N.E.2d 631 (1961).

Jurisdiction

Mother did not have standing to challenge, under RC § 2151.28(C)(1), a trial court's lack of personal jurisdiction over a father in a dependency case because she could not show that she had been prejudiced by the alleged error. The mother's only allegation of prejudice, that she had been deprived of custody of the child, was not caused by a failure to properly serve the father. In re L.H., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4045, 2006 Ohio 4116, (2006).

Where a hearing is held under the provisions of this section, the juvenile court may deal with the child as provided therein even to the point of making an order for permanent custody, notwithstanding that the child is a ward of another court of this state by virtue of custody order arising out of a divorce action: James v. Child Welfare Board, 9 Ohio App. 2d 299, 38 Ohio Op. 2d 347, 224 N.E.2d 358 (1967).

A court acquires jurisdiction over the person of a defendant either by service of process upon him, whereby he is brought into court against his will, or by his voluntary appearance and submission; an appearance for any purpose, except to object to the jurisdiction over the person, constitutes a submission to the jurisdiction of the court; appearance in court or participation in the trial subjects the defendant to the court's jurisdiction: Mobley v. Allaman, 89 Ohio L. Ab. 473, 184 N.E.2d 707 (PC 1961).

The notice provision of the code of the juvenile court must be complied with before the court acquires jurisdiction of any child before it, and since parents are necessary parties to any proceedings concerning a child in the juvenile court they must either be served with the required citations or notices, or must enter their appearance in some other manner: Mobley v. Allaman, 89 Ohio L. Ab. 473, 184 N.E.2d 707 (PC 1961).

The parents of a minor child, in court by citation or notice, are parties to a proceeding before the juvenile court to determine whether such child is a neglected child and where the child is determined to be a neglected child and made a ward of the court and committed to the temporary custody of the county child welfare board, any resistance by the parents to the execution of such order, either active or passive, constitutes a contempt for which such parents may be punished by the court: State v. Hershberger, 77 Ohio L. Ab. 487, 150 N.E.2d 671 (JC 1958).

When [a parent] was made defendant in the divorce action in the domestic relations court and was duly served with summons in that action, he was bound with knowledge that the divorce court had jurisdiction to make disposition of the child of the parties to that action... [a]nd by his failure to appear in that action he is estopped from... claiming that the court was without jurisdiction to make the order here complained of: In re McCoy, 72 Ohio L. Ab. 519, 135 N.E.2d 638 (App 1954).

Where only the father and mother were cited to appear, the court acquired jurisdiction only of the parents and not of the children: Pesta v. Pesta, 45 Ohio L. Ab. 631, 68 N.E.2d 234 (App 1944).

Regular legal notice by service of process on the parent is an indispensable prerequisite to jurisdiction of the juvenile court to make commitment of a minor child charged with being delinquent: In re Flickinger, 33 Ohio L. Ab. 8, 20 Ohio Op. 224 (CP 1940).

Notice generally

Notice requirements for juvenile's adjudicatory hearing were met when the juvenile's guardian was served with the relevant process, and as a result, showed up at the juvenile's adjudicatory hearing; the juvenile could not claim error when his father was neither notified nor present at the hearing because the juvenile had been in the permanent custody of the county for 12 years and had a guardian who was not his father, which meant that the father was not a necessary party to the action. State v. D.M., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 2901, 2003 Ohio 3228, (2003).

Parties

Trial court did not err in not joining a paternal grandmother to a parental rights termination proceeding involving the parents of 10 minor children, although the grandmother lived with the family, as she was not a necessary party pursuant to Ohio R. Juv. P. 2(Y) and RC § 2151.28(C)(1); she did not hold the title of legal custodian or guardian of any of the children, and she had actual notice of the proceedings. In re Hilyard, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1808, 2006 Ohio 1977, (2006).

A father is a party to proceedings in a juvenile court in which his children are found to be neglected and in which temporary custody is given to the mother; and he is also a party to a subsequent proceeding in the same court modifying such temporary custody order and is entitled to appear in an appeal from such order and move to dismiss such appeal: In re Rule, 1 Ohio App. 2d 57, 30 Ohio Op. 2d 76, 203 N.E.2d 501 (1963).

Privilege against self-incrimination

A parent's privilege against self-incrimination precludes compelling the parent to testify in a dependency proceeding: In re Billman, 92 Ohio App. 3d 279, 634 N.E.2d 1050 (1993).

Reasonable efforts to reunify children

Requirement in RC § 2151.419(A)(1) that a children's services agency make "reasonable efforts" to reunify children removed from their home with their families applied to hearings held pursuant to RC §§ 2151.28, 2151.31(E), 2151.314, 2151.33, and 2151.353, but it did not apply when permanent custody was sought pursuant to RC § 2151.413 or when such a motion was heard pursuant to RC § 2151.414, so it did not apply to an agency's motion for permanent custody of a father's children. In re R.A.M., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3149, 2006 Ohio 3242, (2006).

Service of process

If the person to be served summons, notices, and subpoenas of the juvenile court is out of the state and his address is known, service of summons may be made by the sheriff by delivering a copy to him personally or mailing a copy to him by registered or certified mail: OAG No. 70-130 (1970).

In the event the juvenile court requests the summons, notices, or subpoenas to be served personally or whether the same is to be delivered by registered or certified mail, the sheriff's office is legally required to serve the same in accordance with the directions of the juvenile court: OAG No. 70-130 (1970).

The sheriff is required to serve summons, notices, and subpoenas which are directed to him by the juvenile court: OAG No. 70-130 (1970).

Where the continuances granted by the trial court in the dependency case caused the temporary custody hearing to be pushed beyond the 90-day period for such a hearing under RC § 2151.28(B)(3) and RC § 2151.35(B)(1), the mother waived the statutory limitations period claim by failing to raise the claim before the trial court, and the trial court was within its discretion in granting continuances pursuant to Ohio R. Juv. P. 23. In re Jessica M. B., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 926, 2004 Ohio 1040, (2004).

The court did not abuse its discretion by refusing to award temporary custody to the maternal grandmother where she did not show an interest in obtaining custody until she realized that the mother might lose custody permanently: In re Travis Children, 80 Ohio App. 3d 620, 609 N.E.2d 1356 (1992).

Time for hearings

Although the time requirements under RC §§ 2151.28(A)(2), (B)(3), and 2151.35(B)(1) were not complied with in holding adjudicatory and dispositional hearings regarding a child's dependency and an award of temporary custody to her grandmother and then her father, any objection thereto was waived by the mother's failure to raise the issue in a timely manner and by her continued participation in the proceedings. In re Brown, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3090, 2006 Ohio 3189, (2006).

There was no error in refusing to dismiss the case because the father waived his right to an adjudication hearing and a dispositional hearing within the applicable statutory time periods, pursuant to RC § 2151.28, and failed to file his motion to dismiss in compliance with Ohio R. Juv. P. 22(E) since he did not file his motion to dismiss until the day of the hearing. In re A.P., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2551, 2006 Ohio 2717, (2006).

(A) The court shall appoint a guardian ad litem, subject to rules adopted by the supreme court, to protect the interest of a child in any proceeding concerning an alleged or adjudicated delinquent child or unruly child when either of the following applies:

(1) The child has no parent, guardian, or legal custodian.

(2) The court finds that there is a conflict of interest between the child and the child's parent, guardian, or legal custodian.

(B)(1) The court shall appoint a guardian ad litem, subject to rules adopted by the supreme court, to protect the interest of a child in any proceeding concerning an alleged abused or neglected child and in any proceeding held pursuant to section 2151.414 [2151.41.4] of the Revised Code. The guardian ad litem so appointed shall not be the attorney responsible for presenting the evidence alleging that the child is an abused or neglected child and shall not be an employee of any party in the proceeding.

(2) The guardian ad litem appointed for an alleged or adjudicated abused or neglected child may bring a civil action against any person who is required by division (A)(1) or (4) of section 2151.421 [2151.42.1] of the Revised Code to file a report of child abuse or child neglect that is known or reasonably suspected or believed to have occurred if that person knows, or has reasonable cause to suspect or believe based on facts that would cause a reasonable person in a similar position to suspect or believe, as applicable, that the child for whom the guardian ad litem is appointed is the subject of child abuse or child neglect and does not file the required report and if the child suffers any injury or harm as a result of the child abuse or child neglect that is known or reasonably suspected or believed to have occurred or suffers additional injury or harm after the failure to file the report.

(C) In any proceeding concerning an alleged or adjudicated delinquent, unruly, abused, neglected, or dependent child in which the parent appears to be mentally incompetent or is under eighteen years of age, the court shall appoint a guardian ad litem to protect the interest of that parent.

(D) The court shall require the guardian ad litem to faithfully discharge the guardian ad litem's duties and, upon the guardian ad litem's failure to faithfully discharge the guardian ad litem's duties, shall discharge the guardian ad litem and appoint another guardian ad litem. The court may fix the compensation for the service of the guardian ad litem, which compensation shall be paid from the treasury of the county, subject to rules adopted by the supreme court.

(E) A parent who is eighteen years of age or older and not mentally incompetent shall be deemed sui juris for the purpose of any proceeding relative to a child of the parent who is alleged or adjudicated to be an abused, neglected, or dependent child.

(F) In any case in which a parent of a child alleged or adjudicated to be an abused, neglected, or dependent child is under eighteen years of age, the parents of that parent shall be summoned to appear at any hearing respecting the child, who is alleged or adjudicated to be an abused, neglected, or dependent child.

(G) In any case involving an alleged or adjudicated abused or neglected child or an agreement for the voluntary surrender of temporary or permanent custody of a child that is made in accordance with section 5103.15 of the Revised Code, the court shall appoint the guardian ad litem in each case as soon as possible after the complaint is filed, the request for an extension of the temporary custody agreement is filed with the court, or the request for court approval of the permanent custody agreement is filed. In any case involving an alleged dependent child in which the parent of the child appears to be mentally incompetent or is under eighteen years of age, there is a conflict of interest between the child and the child's parents, guardian, or custodian, or the court believes that the parent of the child is not capable of representing the best interest of the child, the court shall appoint a guardian ad litem for the child. The guardian ad litem or the guardian ad litem's replacement shall continue to serve until any of the following occur:

(1) The complaint is dismissed or the request for an extension of a temporary custody agreement or for court approval of the permanent custody agreement is withdrawn or denied;

(2) All dispositional orders relative to the child have terminated;

(3) The legal custody of the child is granted to a relative of the child, or to another person;

(4) The child is placed in an adoptive home or, at the court's discretion, a final decree of adoption is issued with respect to the child;

(5) The child reaches the age of eighteen if the child is not mentally retarded, developmentally disabled, or physically impaired or the child reaches the age of twenty-one if the child is mentally retarded, developmentally disabled, or physically impaired;

(6) The guardian ad litem resigns or is removed by the court and a replacement is appointed by the court.

If a guardian ad litem ceases to serve a child pursuant to division (G)(4) of this section and the petition for adoption with respect to the child is denied or withdrawn prior to the issuance of a final decree of adoption or prior to the date an interlocutory order of adoption becomes final, the juvenile court shall reappoint a guardian ad litem for that child. The public children services agency or private child placing agency with permanent custody of the child shall notify the juvenile court if the petition for adoption is denied or withdrawn.

(H) If the guardian ad litem for an alleged or adjudicated abused, neglected, or dependent child is an attorney admitted to the practice of law in this state, the guardian ad litem also may serve as counsel to the ward. Until the supreme court adopts rules regarding service as a guardian ad litem that regulate conflicts between a person's role as guardian ad litem and as counsel, if a person is serving as guardian ad litem and counsel for a child and either that person or the court finds that a conflict may exist between the person's roles as guardian ad litem and as counsel, the court shall relieve the person of duties as guardian ad litem and appoint someone else as guardian ad litem for the child. If the court appoints a person who is not an attorney admitted to the practice of law in this state to be a guardian ad litem, the court also may appoint an attorney admitted to the practice of law in this state to serve as counsel for the guardian ad litem.

(I) The guardian ad litem for an alleged or adjudicated abused, neglected, or dependent child shall perform whatever functions are necessary to protect the best interest of the child, including, but not limited to, investigation, mediation, monitoring court proceedings, and monitoring the services provided the child by the public children services agency or private child placing agency that has temporary or permanent custody of the child, and shall file any motions and other court papers that are in the best interest of the child.

The guardian ad litem shall be given notice of all hearings, administrative reviews, and other proceedings in the same manner as notice is given to parties to the action.

(J)(1) When the court appoints a guardian ad litem pursuant to this section, it shall appoint a qualified volunteer or court appointed special advocate whenever one is available and the appointment is appropriate.

(2) Upon request, the department of job and family services shall provide for the training of volunteer guardians ad litem.

HISTORY: 133 v H 320 (Eff 11-19-69); 136 v H 85 (Eff 11-28-75); 138 v H 695 (Eff 10-24-80); 140 v S 321 (Eff 4-9-85); 141 v H 529 (Eff 3-11-87); 142 v S 89 (Eff 1-1-89); 146 v H 274 (Eff 8-8-96); 146 v H 419 (Eff 9-18-96); 148 v H 471. Eff 7-1-2000; 151 v S 17, § 1, eff. 8-3-06; 151 v S 238, § 1, eff. 9-21-06.

The provisions of § 4 of 151 v S 238 read as follows:

SECTION 4. The General Assembly hereby respectfully requests that the Supreme Court adopt rules regarding the standards, qualifications, and service of guardians ad litem.

The effective date is set by section 12(A) of HB 471.

Effect of Amendments

151 v S 238, effective September 21, 2006, inserted "subject to rules adopted by the supreme court" in (A), (B)(1), and (D); in (H), added "Until the supreme court ... and as counsel," to the beginning of the second sentence; and, in (J)(1), inserted "or court appointed special advocate".

151 v S 17, effective August 3, 2006, rewrote (B)(2).

Comment, Legislative Service Commission

Section 2151.281 of the Revised Code is amended by Am. Sub. S.B. 238 and Am. Sub. S.B. 17 of the 126th General Assembly. Comparison of these amendments in pursuance of section 1.52 of the Revised Code discloses that they are not irreconcilable so that they are required by that section to be harmonized to give effect to each amendment.

Generally

Magistrate did not commit plain error in awarding legal custody of a mother's child to legal custodians with the mother's consent, as she was represented by an attorney and a guardian ad litem during the adjudication of her child as dependent and during the custody determination, pursuant to RC § 2151.281(C); accordingly, the mother's interests were adequately protected. In re H.B., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1969, 2006 Ohio 2124, (2006).

Trial court did not err in refusing to appoint guardians ad litem for the twin boys regarding the father's motion for visitation as the authority that the mother cited in support of her argument for such appointments did not apply to the present case: RC § 2151.281 applied only if an alleged delinquent or unruly child was involved, and none was not involved in the current case; RC § 3109.04 applied only if the trial court was going to interview the children, which also did not occur; and Ohio R. Civ. P. 17(B) only applied if the child or children were parties, and they were not in the present proceeding. Putthoff v. Thompson, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 79, 2004 Ohio 76, (2004).

Any error associated with the guardian ad litem's questioning was not plain as the mother did not establish that the guardian ad litem's questioning of witnesses seriously affected the basic fairness, integrity, or public reputation of the judicial process. In re Curry, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 691, 2004 Ohio 750, (2004).

The trial court erred in considering the guardian ad litem's report and in failing to require the guardian ad litem fulfill her statutory duties; without an independent investigation into the home and personal lives of the children as required by RC § 2151.28.1(I), the guardian was not qualified to make a judgment regarding the best interests of the children: In re Thomas, 1998 Ohio App. LEXIS 5099 (3rd Dist. 1998).

Ohio statutory law requires that a guardian ad litem be appointed for the child in neglect and abuse proceedings. However, the appointment of a guardian ad litem is not required in dependency proceedings pursuant to RC § 2151.28.1: Davis v. Trumbull Cty. Children Serv. Bd., 24 Ohio App. 3d 180, 24 Ohio B. 270, 493 N.E.2d 1011 (1985).

Juvenile Court jurisdiction to consent to an agreement surrendering permanent custody of a minor to a county children services board, pursuant to RC §§ 5103.15 and 5153.16(B), is not dependent upon service of process on the child and his parents as provided for in RC § 2151.28, nor upon appointment of a guardian ad litem as provided for in RC § 2151.28.1: In re Miller, 61 Ohio St. 2d 184, 15 Ohio Op. 3d 211, 399 N.E.2d 1262 (1980).

Applicability

Statute providing for appointment of a guardian ad litem was inapplicable in a proceeding to terminate visitation where no abuse charges were ever filed against the noncustodial parent: Truitt v. Truitt, 65 Ohio App. 3d 126, 583 N.E.2d 331 (1989).

Attorney as guardian ad litem

When an attorney was appointed to represent a person and was also appointed guardian ad litem for that person, his first and highest duty was to zealously represent his client within the bounds of the law and to champion his client's cause, and if the attorney felt there was a conflict between his role as attorney and his role as guardian, he had to petition the court for an order allowing him to withdraw as guardian, and the court was not to hesitate to grant such request. In re Butler, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4510, 2006 Ohio 4547, (2006).

Under Ohio R. Juv. P. 4(C) and RC § 2151.281(H), the same attorney could be appointed, in a dependency proceeding, as both counsel and guardian ad litem for a child, but, when the attorney advocated a position that was adverse to the child's wishes regarding his custody, the attorney had to withdraw, under § 2151.281(H), and she had to be replaced by a new guardian ad litem. In re Butler, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4510, 2006 Ohio 4547, (2006).

Based on Ohio R. Juv. P. 4(A) and (B), as well as RC §§ 2151.281(H) and 2151.352, a trial court did not err in appointing a licensed attorney to represent 10 children in a parental rights termination proceeding as both their legal counsel and their guardian ad litem, as none of the children "repeatedly expressed a desire" to remain with the parents, and there was no apparent or actual conflict shown in the attorney's dual capacity role. In re Hilyard, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1809, 2006 Ohio 1976, (2006).

Pursuant to RC § 2151.281, a court, not the county, appointed an attorney to serve as the children's guardian ad litem, and the county had no control over the attorney's actions. Avion v. Franklin County Prosecuting Atty's Office, — F. Supp. 2d —, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11669 (S.D. Ohio June 14, 2005).

Where the trial court, in the modification of allocation of parental rights case, granted the father's motion to remove the attorney, who was hired by the mother to represent the child and acted as co-counsel with the guardian ad litem, the trial court's order was proper; the guardian ad litem was to act as counsel for the child as well pursuant to RC § 2151.281(H) and Cuyahoga County, Ohio, Ct. C.P. Dom. Rel. Div. R. 35(G), and pursuant to Ohio R. Juv. P. 4(C)(2), absent a conflict of interest, of which there was no evidence in the instant case, the appointment of separate counsel as co-counsel with the guardian ad litem was unnecessary. Jennings-Harder v. Yarnesch, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 3605, 2004 Ohio 3960, (2004).

Absent an express dual appointment, courts should not presume a dual appointment merely because the appointed guardian ad litem is also an attorney. In re Janie M., 131 Ohio App. 3d 637, 723 N.E.2d 191 (1999).

Where the guardian ad litem appointed for a parent who fled to China with a child was also an attorney, the court did not err by terminating parental rights without granting a continuance so that new counsel could be appointed for the parent to replace counsel who withdrew due to lack of communication with the parent. In re Zhang, 135 Ohio App. 3d 350, 734 N.E.2d 379 (1999).

When an attorney is appointed to represent a person and is also appointed guardian ad litem for that person, his first and highest duty is to zealously represent his client within the bounds of the law and to champion his client's cause. If the attorney feels there is a conflict between his role as attorney and his role as guardian, he should petition the court for an order allowing him to withdraw as guardian. In re Smith, 77 Ohio App. 3d 1, 601 N.E.2d 45 (1991).

Where conflicting obligations arise, an attorney may not serve as both the guardian ad litem of a child and as the legal representative of the child. Bawidamann v. Bawidamann, 63 Ohio App. 3d 691, 580 N.E.2d 15 (1989).

An attorney should not serve as both guardian ad litem and appointed counsel where there is a conflict in such roles. In re Baby Girl Baxter, 17 Ohio St. 3d 229, 17 Ohio B. 469, 479 N.E.2d 257 (1985).

Attorney for child

There was no error in failing to appoint a separate attorney for the child in the permanent custody proceedings because there was no clear conflict of interest between what the child desired and what the guardian ad litem was recommending. Due to the child's extensive medical and cognitive issues, she was not able to participate at all in any decisions surrounding her best interests but her desires were taken into consideration. In re P.S., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3766, 2005 Ohio 4157, (2005).

Where a trial court appointed a guardian ad litem to protect the interests of a 29-month-old child in a parental rights termination proceeding, there was no showing that it was error for the trial court to have failed to appoint independent counsel for the child, pursuant to RC §§ 2151.281(B) and 2151.352, as there was no evidence that the guardian's role to protect the interests of the child conflicted with the child's interests. The father lacked standing to raise such an error on appeal, as there was no showing that the child's interests were aligned with those of the father. In re M.W., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 1273, 2005 Ohio 1302, (2005), criticized by In re A.S., 163 Ohio App. 3d 647, 2005 Ohio 5309, 839 N.E.2d 972, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 4830 (Ohio Ct. App., Summit County 2005), criticized by In re A.B., 2005 Ohio 4936, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 4466 (Ohio Ct. App., Summit County Sept. 21, 2005).

Guardian ad litem and the child did not disagree, so the child did not require a separate appointed attorney for a planned permanent living arrangement hearing under RC § 2151.353(A)(5). In re Holt, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4978, 2003 Ohio 5580, (2003).

Failure to appoint counsel to represent all of the allegedly abused children was rendered harmless because the court was not prevented from knowing the wishes of the children. In re Joshua B., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 2797, 2003 Ohio 3096, (2003).

Children who were the subject of a proceeding for termination of parental rights were entitled to appointed counsel, especially where there were indications that they wanted to remain with the parents. The appointment of an attorney as the substitute guardian was not sufficient. In re Stacey S., 136 Ohio App. 3d 503, 737 N.E.2d 92, 1999 Ohio 989, (1999).

Compensation and fees

Although the guardian ad litem (GAL) was entitled to the fees owed to him, it was possible that a portion of the amount owed represented an amount incurred while he attempted to collect his original fee. That would have constituted collection fees, which was a civil debt, rather than child support, and could have affected the contempt holding and the status of the mother's bankruptcy proceeding. In re Thomas, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3237, 2006 Ohio 3324, (2006).

Where an attorney is appointed as a guardian ad litem, the court is not required to award fees at different rates for legal and non-legal services. Robbins v. Ginese, 93 Ohio App. 3d 370, 638 N.E.2d 627 (1994).

Where the county commissioners have set a maximum fee schedule for guardians ad litem, the court may not order additional payment for extraordinary services. In re Shaw, 1990 Ohio App. LEXIS 973 (5th Dist. 1990).

Where an action is brought against a minor and his parent for fire damage to a rental unit caused by the minor, and where the court finds the minor liable for the damages, but finds his parent not liable, the fees and expenses of the child's court-appointed guardian ad litem are properly chargeable to the indigent minor and not to his parent, as part of the court costs: Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. Wymer, 33 Ohio App. 3d 318, 515 N.E.2d 987 (1986).

There is no statutory authority which authorizes the payment of guardian ad litem fees from county funds in a civil case involving the alleged negligent or intentional acts of an indigent minor in causing fire damage to a rental unit: Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. Wymer, 33 Ohio App. 3d 318, 515 N.E.2d 987 (1986).

Conflict of interest

JuvR 4(B)(2) mandates that the possibility that interests may conflict is sufficient for the required appointment of a guardian ad litem. In the context of a delinquency proceeding, a parent's or a legal guardian's speaking out against the child's penal interest raises a colorable claim of conflict. In re K.B., 170 Ohio App. 3d 121, 866 N.E.2d 66, 2007 Ohio 396, (2007).

Trial court abused its discretion where it failed to appoint a guardian ad litem or inquire whether one was necessary where there was a conflict of interest between the juvenile and his legal guardians. In re Slider, 160 Ohio App. 3d 159, 826 N.E.2d 356, 2005 Ohio 1457, (2005).

No conflict of interest existed for the guardian ad litem in the permanent custody hearing because, while his prior representation of the mother's husband's ex-wife did deal with a domestic violence incident involving the husband, the facts of that incident were before the court, and the position taken in his prior representation of the ex-wife was not inconsistent with his current position regarding the husband. Additionally, any confidential information gained through the guardian ad litem's representation of the ex-wife was covered under the attorney/client privilege. In re Morgan, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 3653, 2004 Ohio 4018, (2004).

Reversal and remand were required where the trial court erred failing to appoint a guardian ad litem to represent defendant juvenile when a conflict existed between the juvenile and his parents as the juvenile was accused of raping his half-sister; failure to appoint a guardian ad litem to oversee the juvenile's best interests was an abuse of discretion. In re K. J. F., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 250, 2004 Ohio 263, (2004).

Where the transcript of juvenile proceedings revealed no anger or tension between a juvenile defendant and her mother, only that the mother requested a disposition more lenient than what defendant herself sought, the record did not reflect a situation in which the magistrate plainly erred by failing to appoint a guardian ad litem on the basis of a conflict of interest. In re Harper, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5962, 2003 Ohio 6666, (2003).

The court was required to appoint a guardian ad litem where there was a strong possibility of conflict of interest between the guardian and the child. In re Spradin, 140 Ohio App. 3d 402, 747 N.E.2d 877, 2000 Ohio 2003, (2000).

A guardian ad litem should have been appointed for the alleged delinquent where his mother was the only person to appear with him and she was also the mother of the victim. In re Miller, 119 Ohio App. 3d 52, 694 N.E.2d 500 (1997).

When a parent speaks against a child's penal interest in a delinquency case, the court must inquire whether there is a conflict of interest requiring appointment of a guardian ad litem: In re Howard, 119 Ohio App. 3d 201, 695 N.E.2d 1 (1997).

The court abused its discretion by not appointing a guardian ad litem where the record indicated a strong possibility of conflicting interests between the juvenile and his father, who represented him at the adjudicatory and dispositional hearing: In re Sappington, 123 Ohio App. 3d 448, 704 N.E.2d 339 (1997).

The court did not comply with RC § 2151.28.1 where it appointed the juvenile's grandmother, who happened to be at the hearing, as guardian, and she then damaged the juvenile's credibility and suggested a stiff penalty: In re Johnson, 106 Ohio App. 3d 38, 665 N.E.2d 247 (1995).

Delinquent child

Appointment of a guardian ad litem for an alleged delinquent child was not required under the circumstances: In re D.M., 158 Ohio App. 3d 780, 822 N.E.2d 433, 2004 Ohio 5858, (2004).

Discretion of court

Where a trial court denied a motion to appoint a guardian ad litem based solely upon the timeliness of the motion and did not hear evidence on the conflict of interest issue, the trial court abused its discretion under R.C. § 2151.281(A) and Ohio R. Juv. P. 4(B). Johnson v. Johnson, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 2931, 2003 Ohio 3278, (2003).

Due process

Juvenile court denied the mother due process in a custody matter by receiving a report of counsel appointed for her child without giving her a chance to review and challenge it, and erred by failing to hold a new permanent custody hearing with the participation of counsel for the child. In re Williams, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3246, 2003 Ohio 3550, (2003), affirmed by 101 Ohio St. 3d 398, 2004 Ohio 1500, 805 N.E.2d 1110, 2004 Ohio LEXIS 705 (2004).

Juvenile court did not err in failing to appoint a new guardian ad litem for the child of a custody modification battle, as the attorney who was appointed as the child's guardian ad litem was also an able legal representative in the juvenile court proceeding between the child's divorced parents where no conflict in serving in both capacities existed pursuant to Ohio R. Juv. P. 4(C)(1) and (2); there was no evidence that the guardian became an advocate for either party, and she acted within her authority under RC § 2151.281(I). In re Smith, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 812, 2007 Ohio 893, (Mar. 2, 2007).

Guardian ad litem for a child who was the subject of a parental rights termination proceeding sufficiently complied with her duties under RC § 2151.281(I), as she visited the home where the mother was living and determined that it was inappropriate for the child and the three adults who were living there, she met the child with each of the parents or foster parents, she reviewed prior agency records, and she then recommended that permanent custody be granted to the county social service agency. There was no showing as to how the guardian was lacking in her duties, and further, the mother failed to establish that she suffered any prejudice. In re West, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2780, 2005 Ohio 2977, (2005).

It was error for an appointed guardian ad litem to present evidence alleging that the child that the guardian was appointed for was an abused or neglected child because the presentation contravened the statutory mandate from the general assembly. In re Kheirkhah, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 444, 2004 Ohio 521, (2004).

Guardian ad litem's failure to file a timely report was harmless error because his recommendation at the hearing was the same one he delivered in his written report subsequently filed with the trial court, and the recommendation was consistent with the evidence presented at the hearing and no new facts, evidence, or opinions were presented in the report. In re Ridenour, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1703, 2004 Ohio 1958, (2004).

A guardian ad litem's report was defective for not containing a statement of the children's wishes as to custody in a termination of parental rights case because the children did not testify at the permanent custody hearing and the elder child consistently expressed a desire to remain with his mother. In re Williams, 2003

Ohio App. LEXIS 3246, 2003 Ohio 3550, (2003), affirmed by 101 Ohio St. 3d 398, 2004 Ohio 1500, 805 N.E.2d 1110, 2004 Ohio LEXIS 705 (2004).

Role of the guardian ad litem at the dispositional hearing was to protect the interests of the child, and the guardian ad litem did so by filing a report that the children should not be returned to the parents; the guardian ad litem was not also required to use the specific words that the county welfare agency should be granted "permanent custody," especially since that recommendation was clear from the guardian ad litem's report. In re Myers, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 2492, 2003 Ohio 2776, (2003).

Immunity

A guardian ad litem has absolute immunity from actions arising out of the performance of duties mandated by his role as advocate for the child in judicial proceedings (Kurzawa v. Mueller, 732 F.2d 1456 [6th Cir. 1984] followed); Penn v. McMonagle, 60 Ohio App. 3d 149, 573 N.E.2d 1234 (1990).

Incompetent parent

Mother failed to demonstrate that the trial court erred for failing to sua sponte appoint a guardian ad litem, under RC § 2151.281(C) and Ohio R. Juv. P. 4 (B)(3), or that her trial counsel was ineffective for failing to request such an appointment because there was nothing in the record to suggest that the mother appeared incompetent at the time she voluntarily relinquished her parental rights. There was nothing in the record to indicate the extent to which, if at all, the mother's mental health issues impeded her ability to understand and participate in the proceedings and the record actually demonstrated that she took affirmative steps to attempt to assist in her case. In re D.C.H., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3873, 2005 Ohio 4257, (2005).

There was no plain error, pursuant to Ohio R. Crim. P. 52(B), in a trial court's failure to appoint a guardian ad litem for a mother who had a "borderline to low average range of functioning" in a permanent custody proceeding by a county agency, pursuant to RC § 2151.281(C) and Ohio R. Juv. P. 4(B)(3), as the mother did not show that she was prejudiced by such failure of appointment, nor did she show how having a guardian ad litem would have altered the outcome of the proceeding. In re McHugh Children, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2235, 2005 Ohio 2345, (2005).

Where neither appellant mother nor her attorney requested that the trial court appoint a guardian ad litem for the mother, the court did not violate Ohio R. Juv. P. 4(B) or RC § 2151.281(C) by failing to do so sua sponte, as the psychologist who examined the mother testified he was unable to conclude that she suffered from any mental illness; simply because she needed clarification of questions asked of her during the proceedings did not mean that she appeared mentally incompetent. In re K.P., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1494, 2004 Ohio 1674, (2004), appeal denied by 102 Ohio St. 3d 1473, 2004 Ohio 2830, 809 N.E.2d 1159, 2004 Ohio LEXIS 1419 (2004).

Pursuant to RC § 2151.281(C) the court shall appoint a guardian ad litem in any action to adjudicate a child dependent where it appears to the court that one or both parents are mentally incompetent; where information regarding second-hand reports of the father's mental problems were ambiguous at best, failing sua sponte to appoint a guardian was not error. In re Isaac M., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5569, 2003 Ohio 6197, (2003).

When the parent has been found mentally incompetent in the process of an adjudicatory hearing in juvenile court, the appointment of a guardian ad litem for the child is mandatory under the language of RC § 2151.28.1(C): In re Pledgure, 1998 Ohio App. LEXIS 298 (1998).

Removal of guardian ad litem

There was no merit to the mother's motion to remove the guardian ad litem (GAL) because the mother did not provide any details as to the "truly justifiable" reasons for which she alleged that the GAL should be removed. Nor did the mother point to any law supporting her contention that the vague incidents referred to amounted to a GAL failing to perform his duties. In re Thomas, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3237, 2006 Ohio 3324, (2006).

Right to counsel, generally

RC § 2151.352 provides that indigent children, parents, custodians, or other persons in loco parentis are entitled to appointed counsel in all proceedings conducted pursuant to RC § 2151. In re Holt, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4978, 2003 Ohio 5580, (2003).

Individual's right to counsel in juvenile court proceedings not involving termination of parental rights is statutory, and is not derived from the United States or Ohio Constitutions. In re Holt, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4978, 2003 Ohio 5580, (2003).

Temporary custody

When an emergency situation exists, the juvenile court may grant temporary custody of a child to the local Children Services Board in an ex parte proceeding: Parker v. Children Services Bd. of Trumbull Cty., 21 Ohio App. 3d 115, 21 Ohio B. 123, 487 N.E.2d 341 (1984).

[§ 2151.28.2] § 2151.282 CASA/GAL study committee.

(A) There is hereby created the Ohio court appointed special advocate/guardian ad litem (CASA/GAL) study committee consisting of five members. One member shall be a representative of the Ohio court appointed special advocate/guardian ad litem association appointed by the governor and shall be the chairperson of the committee. One member shall be a member of the Ohio juvenile judges association, appointed by the president of the senate. One member shall be a member of the Ohio state bar association appointed by the speaker of the house of representatives. One member shall be a representative of the office of the state public defender appointed by the minority leader of the senate. One member shall be a representative of the Ohio county commissioner's association appointed by the minority leader of the house of representatives. The members of the committee shall be appointed within sixty days after the effective date of this section. The committee shall do all of the following:

(1) Compile available public data associated with state and local costs of advocating on behalf of children who have been found to be abused, neglected, or dependent children;

(2) Examine the costs in counties that have established and operated an Ohio CASA/GAL association program, and the costs in counties that utilize the county public defender, joint county public defender, or court-appointed counsel, to advocate on behalf of children who have been found to be abused, neglected, or dependent children;

(3) Analyze the total cost of advocating on behalf of children who have been found to be abused, neglected, or dependent children on a per county basis and a per child served basis;

(4) Analyze the cost benefit of having an Ohio CASA/GAL association versus utilizing the county public defender, joint county public defender, or court-appointed counsel to advocate on behalf of children who have been found to be abused, neglected, or dependent children;

(5) Analyze the advocacy services provided to abused children, neglected children, or dependent children by Ohio CASA/GAL association programs versus the advocacy services provided to abused, neglected, or dependent children by county public defenders, joint county public defenders, or court-appointed counsel.

(B) The Ohio CASA/GAL association shall provide staff for the Ohio CASA/GAL study committee and shall pay for any expenses incurred by the study committee. The study committee shall meet within thirty days after the appointment of the members to the study committee.

(C) The Ohio CASA/GAL study committee shall prepare a report containing all relevant data and information that division (A) of this section requires the study committee to compile, examine, and analyze. The Ohio CASA/GAL study committee shall deliver a final copy of the report to the governor, the speaker of the house of representatives, and the president of the senate on or before July 1, 2007.

HISTORY: 151 v H 66, § 101.01, eff. 9-29-05.

The effective date is set by § 612.03 of 151 v H 66.

Service of summons, notices, and subpoenas, prescribed by section 2151.28 of the Revised Code, shall be made by delivering a copy to the person summoned, notified, or subpoenaed, or by leaving a copy at the person's usual place of residence. If the juvenile judge is satisfied that such service is impracticable, the juvenile judge may order service by registered or certified mail. If the person to be served is without the state but the person can be found or the person's address is known, or the person's whereabouts or address can with reasonable diligence be ascertained, service of the summons may be made by delivering a copy to the person personally or mailing a copy to the person by registered or certified mail.

Whenever it appears by affidavit that after reasonable effort the person to be served with summons cannot be found or the person's post-office address ascertained, whether the person is within or without a state, the clerk shall publish such summons once in a newspaper of general circulation throughout the county. The summons shall state the substance and the time and place of the hearing, which shall be held at least one week later than the date of the publication. A copy of the summons and the complaint, indictment, or information shall be sent by registered or certified mail to the last known address of the person summoned unless it is shown by affidavit that a reasonable effort has been made, without success, to obtain such address.

A copy of the advertisement, the summons, and the complaint, indictment, or information, accompanied by the certificate of the clerk that such publication has been made and that the summons and the complaint, indictment, or information have been mailed as required by this section, is sufficient evidence of publication and mailing. When a period of one week from the time of publication has elapsed, the juvenile court shall have full jurisdiction to deal with such child as provided by sections 2151.01 to 2151.99 of the Revised Code.

Generally

Father was provided with appropriate notice of the permanent custody hearing, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(A)(1) and Ohio R. Juv. P. 20, because the record showed, and the father conceded, that he was personally served at the initial shelter care hearing with a summons and a copy of the permanent custody complaint. The complaint set forth the dates of the pretrial, trial, and subsequent review dates, the father was present at the pretrial hearing, and the trial court's entry noted the father's presence and reiterated the date of the permanent custody hearing on the entry. In re Zurfley/Chatman/Black Children, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 602, 2006 Ohio 683, (2006).

Although a father of a minor child had previously appeared in a pretrial matter in a termination of parental rights proceeding, he was entitled to notice of a permanent custody hearing pursuant to RC § 2151.29, as well as pursuant to his due process rights; failure to provide such notice resulted in a reversal of the termination order. In re Th.W, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2681, 2005 Ohio 2852, (2005).

Where the mother asserted on appeal in the permanent custody case that she received insufficient notice, the claim failed; notice of the permanent custody hearing was given in compliance with RC § 2151.414(A)(1), as the mother received personal service of the motion for permanent custody and notice of the initial permanent custody hearing in accordance with RC § 2151.29, Ohio R. Juv. P. 16(A), and Ohio R. Juv. P. 12(A), (B), and the mother's counsel gave the mother notice of the final permanent custody hearing. In re Keith Lee P., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1719, 2004 Ohio 1976, (2004).

Where the trial court record indicated that a mother was personally served approximately six months after the filing of a motion by a social services agency to modify its temporary custody to permanent custody, which was seven months prior to the hearing thereon, the mandates of RC §§ 2151.414(A)(1) and 2151.29 were met; in a motion seeking permanent custody of a minor, RC § 2151.414(A)(1) requires that a parent receive notice of a hearing thereon, and pursuant to RC § 2151.29, service of the necessary papers shall be made by leaving a copy at the parent's usual place of residence. In re R.K., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5675, 2003 Ohio 6333, (2003).

In order to be valid, such notice must be served sufficiently in advance of the hearing to give the person to be notified a reasonable time to obtain counsel and prepare for participation in such hearing. In re Frinzel, 152 Ohio St. 164, 39 Ohio Op. 456, 87 N.E.2d 583 (1949).

A juvenile court is without jurisdiction to make permanent a temporary commitment of a dependent or delinquent child unless notice of the time and place of the hearing upon such matter is served on the parent or guardian of such child either by delivering a copy to the person to be notified, by leaving a copy at his usual place of residence, by service by registered mail, or by publication, as provided and directed by this section: In re Frinzel, 152 Ohio St. 164, 39 Ohio Op. 456, 87 N.E.2d 583 (1949).

Knowledge by a mother that her daughter was being held and that a complaint probably would be made is not sufficient notice, because this section specifically requires that service of citations, notices and subpoenas shall be made personally by delivery of the attested copies thereof to the persons cited: In re Flickinger, 30 Ohio L. Ab. 8, 20 Ohio Op. 224 (CP 1940).

An order of a juvenile court declaring a minor child to be a dependent child and awarding its custody to a stranger, obtained without service upon the parent, the guardian, or a person having the custody of such child by operation of law or awarded by a judicial order, judgment, or decree, confers upon such stranger no power to consent to the adoption of such child by any one: Rarey v. Schmidt, 115 Ohio St. 518, 154 N.E. 914 (1926).

Where a minor child has neither legal guardian nor a custodian created by operation of law or by judicial order, judgment, or decree, other than a parent, and the residence of such parent is known, service, actual or constructive, must be had upon such parent before a juvenile court has jurisdiction to declare such child a dependent child: Rarey v. Schmidt, 115 Ohio St. 518, 154 N.E. 914 (1926).

Jurisdiction

Where the only notice given to the mother of an adjudged dependent child, of a hearing to change such child's temporary commitment to a permanent one, was served on the mother within an hour before such hearing and she had no opportunity between the time of being served with the notice and the time of the hearing, to either prepare for such hearing or to engage counsel to represent her, such notice is insufficient in law and an order for permanent custody made at such hearing is void for want of jurisdiction of the court in making it, and an attack made upon it by an application for a writ of habeas corpus is direct and not collateral and is proper even though the judgment appears to be regular and valid upon its face [Paragraph four of the syllabus in Lewis v. Reed, 117 OS 152, approved and followed]: In re Frinzel, 152 Ohio St. 164, 39 Ohio Op. 456, 87 N.E.2d 583 (1949).

Service by publication

Service by publication was sufficient where mother had a history of sporadic conduct and was unable to obtain stable housing or provide the county children services board with an address to send notices: In re Cowling, 72 Ohio App. 3d 499, 595 N.E.2d 470 (1991).

Service by publication, under JuvR 16(A), requires that any notice published in a newspaper of general circulation include, among other things, the last known address of the party whose present whereabouts are unknown and a summary statement of the object of the complaint. Service by publication is a method of last resort and the requirements thereof, as specified in JuvR 16(A), are mandatory and will be strictly enforced. A failure to include such information in the publication-notice will result in defective service. (JuvR 16[A], construed.): In re Wilson, 21 Ohio App. 3d 36, 21 Ohio B. 38, 486 N.E.2d 152 (1984).

Support orders

Pursuant to R.C. 2151.23(A), the Probate and Juvenile Division of the Muskingum County Court of Common Pleas has exclusive original jurisdiction to issue orders of support in cases brought under R.C. 2151.27 to R.C. 2151.331, including orders complying with R.C. 2151.33(B)(2)(a). The language of R.C. 2301.03(AA) establishing the powers and duties of the judge of the Domestic Relations Division of the Muskingum County Court of Common Pleas does not modify or restrict the exclusive original jurisdiction of the juvenile court in this regard. Opinion No. 2005-003 (2005).

§ 2151.30 Issuance of warrant.

In any case when it is made to appear to the juvenile judge that the service of a citation under section 2151.29 of the Revised Code will be ineffectual or the welfare of the child requires that he be brought forthwith into the custody of the juvenile court, a warrant may be issued against the parent, custodian, or guardian, or against the child himself.

Warrant, JuvR 13(A), 15(D)-(E), 16(B).

§ 2151.31 Apprehension, custody, and detention.

(A) A child may be taken into custody in any of the following ways:

(1) Pursuant to an order of the court under this chapter or pursuant to an order of the court upon a motion filed pursuant to division (B) of section 2930.05 of the Revised Code;

(2) Pursuant to the laws of arrest;

(3) By a law enforcement officer or duly authorized officer of the court when any of the following conditions are present:

(a) There are reasonable grounds to believe that the child is suffering from illness or injury and is not receiving proper care, as described in section 2151.03 of the Revised Code, and the child's removal is necessary to prevent immediate or threatened physical or emotional harm;

(b) There are reasonable grounds to believe that the child is in immediate danger from the child's surroundings and that the child's removal is necessary to prevent immediate or threatened physical or emotional harm;

(c) There are reasonable grounds to believe that a parent, guardian, custodian, or other household member of the child's household has abused or neglected another child in the household and to believe that the child is in danger of immediate or threatened physical or emotional harm from that person.

(4) By an enforcement official, as defined in section 4109.01 of the Revised Code, under the circumstances set forth in section 4109.08 of the Revised Code;

(5) By a law enforcement officer or duly authorized officer of the court when there are reasonable grounds to believe that the child has run away from the child's parents, guardian, or other custodian;

(6) By a law enforcement officer or duly authorized officer of the court when any of the following apply:

(a) There are reasonable grounds to believe that the conduct, conditions, or surroundings of the child are endangering the health, welfare, or safety of the child.

(b) A complaint has been filed with respect to the child under section 2151.27 or 2152.021 [2152.02.1] of the Revised Code or the child has been indicted under division (A) of section 2152.13 of the Revised Code or charged by information as described in that section and there are reasonable grounds to believe that the child may abscond or be removed from the jurisdiction of the court.

(c) The child is required to appear in court and there are reasonable grounds to believe that the child will not be brought before the court when required.

(d) There are reasonable grounds to believe that the child committed a delinquent act and that taking the child into custody is necessary to protect the public interest and safety.

(B)(1) The taking of a child into custody is not and shall not be deemed an arrest except for the purpose of determining its validity under the constitution of this state or of the United States.

(2) Except as provided in division (C) of section 2151.311 [2151.31.1] of the Revised Code, a child taken into custody shall not be held in any state correctional institution, county, multicounty, or municipal jail or workhouse, or any other place where any adult convicted of crime, under arrest, or charged with crime is held.

(C)(1) Except as provided in division (C)(2) of this section, a child taken into custody shall not be confined in a place of juvenile detention or placed in shelter care prior to the implementation of the court's final order of disposition, unless detention or shelter care is required to protect the child from immediate or threatened physical or emotional harm, because the child is a danger or threat to one or more other persons and is charged with violating a section of the Revised Code that may be violated by an adult, because the child may abscond or be removed from the jurisdiction of the court, because the child has no parents, guardian, or custodian or other person able to provide supervision and care for the child and return the child to the court when required, or because an order for placement of the child in detention or shelter care has been made by the court pursuant to this chapter.

(2) A child alleged to be a delinquent child who is taken into custody may be confined in a place of juvenile detention prior to the implementation of the court's final order of disposition if the confinement is authorized under section 2152.04 of the Revised Code or if the child is alleged to be a serious youthful offender under section 2152.13 of the Revised Code and is not released on bond.

(D) Upon receipt of notice from a person that the person intends to take an alleged abused, neglected, or dependent child into custody pursuant to division (A)(3) of this section, a juvenile judge or a designated referee may grant by telephone an ex parte emergency order authorizing the taking of the child into custody if there is probable cause to believe that any of the conditions set forth in divisions (A)(3)(a) to (c) of this section are present. The judge or referee shall journalize any ex parte emergency order issued pursuant to this division. If an order is issued pursuant to this division and the child is taken into custody pursuant to the order, a sworn complaint shall be filed with respect to the child before the end of the next business day after the day on which the child is taken into custody and a hearing shall be held pursuant to division (E) of this section and the Juvenile Rules. A juvenile judge or referee shall not grant an emergency order by telephone pursuant to this division until after the judge or referee determines that reasonable efforts have been made to notify the parents, guardian, or custodian of the child that the child may be placed into shelter care and of the reasons for placing the child into shelter care, except that, if the requirement for notification would jeopardize the physical or emotional safety of the child or result in the child being removed from the court's jurisdiction, the judge or referee may issue the order for taking the child into custody and placing the child into shelter care prior to giving notice to the parents, guardian, or custodian of the child.

(E) If a judge or referee pursuant to division (D) of this section issues an ex parte emergency order for taking a child into custody, the court shall hold a hearing to determine whether there is probable cause for the emergency order. The hearing shall be held before the end of the next business day after the day on which the emergency order is issued, except that it shall not be held later than seventy-two hours after the emergency order is issued.

If the court determines at the hearing that there is not probable cause for the issuance of the emergency order issued pursuant to division (D) of this section, it shall order the child released to the custody of the child's parents, guardian, or custodian. If the court determines at the hearing that there is probable cause for the issuance of the emergency order issued pursuant to division (D) of this section, the court shall do all of the following:

(1) Ensure that a complaint is filed or has been filed;

(2) Comply with section 2151.419 [2151.41.9] of the Revised Code;

(3) Hold a hearing pursuant to section 2151.314 [2151.31.4] of the Revised Code to determine if the child should remain in shelter care.

(F) If the court determines at the hearing held pursuant to division (E) of this section that there is probable cause to believe that the child is an abused child, as defined in division (A) of section 2151.031 [2151.03.1] of the Revised Code, the court may do any of the following:

(1) Upon the motion of any party, the guardian ad litem, the prosecuting attorney, or an employee of the public children services agency, or its own motion, issue reasonable protective orders with respect to the interviewing or deposition of the child;

(2) Order that the child's testimony be videotaped for preservation of the testimony for possible use in any other proceedings in the case;

(3) Set any additional conditions with respect to the child or the case involving the child that are in the best interest of the child.

(G) This section is not intended, and shall not be construed, to prevent any person from taking a child into custody, if taking the child into custody is necessary in an emergency to prevent the physical injury, emotional harm, or neglect of the child.

Constitutionality
Generally
Authority of police officer
Bail
False imprisonment
Immunity
Parole violation
Place of detention or care
Reasonable efforts to reunify family

Constitutionality

Pretrial detention of juveniles presenting a serious risk of committing an offense was constitutional: Schall v. Martin, 467 US 253, 104 S Ct 2403, 81 L Ed2d 207 (1984).

Generally

Under Ohio law, unless matters of public safety are involved, a child alleged to be abused, neglected, or dependent may be removed from his home by court order only upon a judicial determination that continuation in the home would be contrary to the child's best interests: OAG No. 87-105 (1987).

Authority of police officer

A police officer may take a child into protective custody without process where he has reasonable grounds to believe said child to be a delinquent, neglected or dependent child, and it is not necessary that the child be committing a misdemeanor in the officer's presence or that probable cause exist for the officer to believe that the child has been involved in the commission of a felony: In re L., 25 Ohio Op. 2d 369, 194 N.E.2d 797 (JC 1963).

Bail

A juvenile court may admit a juvenile to bail in a case where the state has moved for a bindover. RC § 2151.31 and JuvR 7, taken together, amount to a presumption against detention: In re K.G., 89 Ohio Misc. 2d 16, 693 N.E.2d 1186 (CP 1997).

False imprisonment

In an action for damages for false imprisonment, the plaintiff has the burden to prove that the detention or restraint caused by the defendant was an unreasonable detention or restraint and was not accidental or incidental to the welfare of the plaintiff: Garland v. Dustman, 19 Ohio App. 2d 292, 48 Ohio Op. 2d 408, 251 N.E.2d 153 (1969).

Immunity

A police officer was not entitled to summary judgment based on immunity where an arrest may not have been objectively reasonable: Hicks v. Leffler, 119 Ohio App. 3d 424, 695 N.E.2d 777 (1997).

A juvenile judge and the quasi-judicial officers of a juvenile court are immune from liability for causing the detention of juveniles when they are acting within the scope of their jurisdiction, and public policy will not justify or sanction liability in damages for false imprisonment against enforcement officers acting in good faith under the direct orders of such juvenile authorities: Garland v. Dustman, 19 Ohio App. 2d 292, 48 Ohio Op. 2d 408, 251 N.E.2d 153 (1969).

Under the provisions of RC §§ 2151.14 and 2151.31, it is the manifest duty of enforcement officers to co-operate with and assist the juvenile authorities in the performance of their duties when such officers are specifically requested to do so by the juvenile authorities; and such officers may avoid liability in an action for false imprisonment by showing that they were justified in the detention or restraint of the juvenile made under the specific direction and order of the juvenile authorities: Garland v. Dustman, 19 Ohio App. 2d 292, 48 Ohio Op. 2d 408, 251 N.E.2d 153 (1969).

Parole violation

Pursuant to Ohio's statutory scheme, a juvenile adjudicated delinquent prior to age 18 remains a child in the eyes of the juvenile court until age 21. The juvenile court's exercise of its continuing jurisdiction regarding the parole violation was lawful: In re Gillespie, 150 Ohio App. 3d 502, 782 N.E.2d 140, 2002 Ohio 7025, (2002), appeal denied by 98 Ohio St. 3d 1513, 2003 Ohio 1572, 786 N.E.2d 63, 2003 Ohio LEXIS 842 (2003).

Place of detention or care

If a peace officer determines that the detention or shelter care of a child appears to be required as provided in RC § 2151.31(C) and JuvR 7(A), the peace officer is required by RC § 2151.31.1(A) and JuvR 7(B) to bring the child to the court or deliver the child to a place of detention or shelter care designated by the court. A peace officer who determines that the detention or shelter care of a child appears to be required may contact the juvenile court by telephone to determine the place of detention or shelter care to which to deliver the child: OAG No. 96-061 (1996).

Reasonable efforts to reunify family

Requirement in RC § 2151.419(A)(1) that a children's services agency make "reasonable efforts" to reunify children removed from their home with their families applied to hearings held pursuant to RC §§ 2151.28, 2151.31(E), 2151.314, 2151.33, and 2151.353, but it did not apply when permanent custody was sought pursuant to RC § 2151.413 or when such a motion was heard pursuant to RC § 2151.414, so it did not apply to an agency's motion for permanent custody of a father's children. In re R.A.M., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3149, 2006 Ohio 3242, (2006).

[§ 2151.31.1] § 2151.311 Procedure upon apprehension.

(A) A person taking a child into custody shall, with all reasonable speed and in accordance with division (C) of this section, either:

(1) Release the child to the child's parents, guardian, or other custodian, unless the child's detention or shelter care appears to be warranted or required as provided in section 2151.31 of the Revised Code;

(2) Bring the child to the court or deliver the child to a place of detention or shelter care designated by the court and promptly give notice thereof, together with a statement of the reason for taking the child into custody, to a parent, guardian, or other custodian and to the court.

(B) If a parent, guardian, or other custodian fails, when requested by the court, to bring the child before the court as provided by this section, the court may issue its warrant directing that the child be taken into custody and brought before the court.

(C)(1) Before taking any action required by division (A) of this section, a person taking a child into custody may hold the child for processing purposes in a county, multicounty, or municipal jail or workhouse, or other place where an adult convicted of crime, under arrest, or charged with crime is held for either of the following periods of time:

(a) For a period not to exceed six hours, if all of the following apply:

(i) The child is alleged to be a delinquent child for the commission of an act that would be a felony if committed by an adult;

(ii) The child remains beyond the range of touch of all adult detainees;

(iii) The child is visually supervised by jail or workhouse personnel at all times during the detention;

(iv) The child is not handcuffed or otherwise physically secured to a stationary object during the detention.

(b) For a period not to exceed three hours, if all of the following apply:

(i) The child is alleged to be a delinquent child for the commission of an act that would be a misdemeanor if committed by an adult, is alleged to be a delinquent child for being a chronic truant or an habitual truant who previously has been adjudicated an unruly child for being an habitual truant, or is alleged to be an unruly child or a juvenile traffic offender;

(ii) The child remains beyond the range of touch of all adult detainees;

(iii) The child is visually supervised by jail or workhouse personnel at all times during the detention;

(iv) The child is not handcuffed or otherwise physically secured to a stationary object during the detention.

(2) If a child has been transferred to an adult court for prosecution for the alleged commission of a criminal offense, subsequent to the transfer, the child may be held as described in division (F) of section 2152.26 or division (B) of section 5120.16 of the Revised Code.

(D) As used in division (C)(1) of this section, "processing purposes" means all of the following:

(1) Fingerprinting, photographing, or fingerprinting and photographing the child in a secure area of the facility;

(2) Interrogating the child, contacting the child's parent or guardian, arranging for placement of the child, or arranging for transfer or transferring the child, while holding the child in a nonsecure area of the facility.

Confessions

Confessions

The fact that the police did not immediately take defendant to a juvenile facility did not render his statements inadmissible: State v. Bobo, 65 Ohio App. 3d 685, 585 N.E.2d 429 (1989).

Confessions were admissible in evidence, even though the accused were not taken immediately before the juvenile court as directed by this section: State v. Lowder, 79 Ohio App. 237, 34 Ohio Op. 568, 72 N.E.2d 785 (1946).

Detention

If a peace officer determines that the detention or shelter care of a child appears to be required as provided in RC § 2151.31(C) and JuvR 7(A), the peace officer is required by RC § 2151.31.1(A) and JuvR 7(B) to bring the child to the court or deliver the child to a place of detention or shelter care designated by the court. A peace officer who determines that the detention or shelter care of a child appears to be required may contact the juvenile court by telephone to determine the place of detention or shelter care to which to deliver the child: OAG No. 96-061 (1996).

Revised Code §§ 2151.31.1(A)(1), 2151.31.4(A), and JuvR 7(B) do not authorize the release of a child to the peace officer who took the child into custody: OAG No. 96-061 (1996).

Search and seizure

The matter of unlawful search and seizure under the USConst amend IV applies to juveniles; and the burden of proving unlawful search and seizure is upon the one who filed the motion to suppress evidence: In re Morris, 29 Ohio Misc. 71, 58 Ohio Op. 2d 126, 278 N.E.2d 701 (JC 1971).

§ 2151.31.2 § 2151.312 Places where neglected, abused, dependent or unruly child may or may not be held.

(A) A child alleged to be or adjudicated an unruly child may be held only in the following places:

(1) A certified family foster home or a home approved by the court;

(2) A facility operated by a certified child welfare agency;

(3) Any other suitable place designated by the court.

(B)(1) Except as provided under division (C)(1) of section 2151.311 [2151.31.1] of the Revised Code, a child alleged to be or adjudicated a neglected child, an abused child, a dependent child, or an unruly child may not be held in any of the following facilities:

(a) A state correctional institution, county, multi-county, or municipal jail or workhouse, or other place in which an adult convicted of a crime, under arrest, or charged with a crime is held;

(b) A secure correctional facility.

(2) Except as provided under sections 2151.26 to 2151.61 of the Revised Code and division (B)(3) of this section, a child alleged to be or adjudicated an unruly child may not be held for more than twenty-four hours in a detention facility. A child alleged to be or adjudicated a neglected child, an abused child, or a dependent child shall not be held in a detention facility.

(3) A child who is alleged to be or adjudicated an unruly child and who is taken into custody on a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday, as listed in section 1.14 of the Revised Code, may be held in a detention facility until the next succeeding day that is not a Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday.

Not analogous to former RC § 2151.31.2, amended and renumbered RC § 2152.26 in 148 v S 179, eff 1-1-2002.

The effective date is set by section 5 of SB 179.

The provisions of § 11 of SB 179 (148 v —) read, in part, as follows:

SECTION 11. * * * Section 2151.312 of the Revised Code is presented in this act as a composite of the section as amended by Sub. H.B. 332, Sub. H.B. 448, and Am. Sub. S.B. 181, all of the 123rd General Assembly, with the new language of none of the acts shown in capital letters. * * * This is in recognition of the principle stated in division (B) of section 1.52 of the Revised Code that such amendments are to be harmonized where not substantively irreconcilable and constitutes a legislative finding that such is the resulting version in effect prior to the effective date of this act.

Constitutionality

Generally

Appointment of counsel

Constitutionality

Juveniles sent to an adult jail and detained in a facility unequipped to provide individual treatment and counseling are deprived of due process. Such incarceration made for the sole purpose of frightening them and directing them away from a life of crime violates their eighth amendment rights: Doe v. McFaul, 599 F. Supp. 1421 (N.D. Ohio 1984).

Generally

There is no authority for a juvenile court to commit a delinquent juvenile to a jail for adult offenders, absent a finding that housing in an appropriate juvenile facility is unavailable, or that the public safety and protection so require: State v. Grady, 3 Ohio App. 3d 174, 3 Ohio B. 199, 444 N.E.2d 51 (1981).

The commitment of a fifteen year old to a state institution pursuant to RC § 2151.26 for the purpose of examination is not an act for which a writ of prohibition will issue: State ex rel. Harris v. Common Pleas Court, 25 Ohio App. 2d 78, 54 Ohio Op. 2d 115, 266 N.E.2d 589 (1970).

A child who is alleged to be delinquent because of a domestic violence offense may be placed in any setting authorized by RC § 2151.31.2(A): OAG No. 96-061 (1996).

Amended House Bill No. 1196, effective August 9, 1976, does not operate to prohibit the commingling of pre-adjudicated and post-adjudicated youth confined in a district detention home. The Ohio Youth Commission may pursuant to RC § 5139.28.1 adopt a rule requiring the separation of an adjudicated delinquent where extraordinary circumstances make such separation necessary for the care, treatment or training of such youth, or where necessary to insure the safety of that youth, or any other youth in the detention home: OAG No. 77-066 (1977).

If the county adult detention facility is designed with a space which is enclosed on all sides, that is distinct, set apart and disconnected so that no child over the age of fifteen placed in that space will come in contact or communication with any adult convicted of or arrested for a crime and the public interest and safety require the detention of such child when a delinquent detention facility is not available, the use of such adult facility is authorized by the Revised Code: OAG No. 70-015 (1970).

Appointment of counsel

The court did not err by appointing counsel for a grandparent seeking visitation rights: Holley v. Higgins, 86 Ohio App. 3d 240, 620 N.E.2d 251 (1993).

[§ 2151.31.3] § 2151.313 Fingerprints, photographs, and related arrest or custody records.

(A)(1) Except as provided in division (A)(2) of this section and in sections 109.57, 109.60, and 109.61 of the Revised Code, no child shall be fingerprinted or photographed in the investigation of any violation of law without the consent of the juvenile judge.

(2) Subject to division (A)(3) of this section, a law enforcement officer may fingerprint and photograph a child without the consent of the juvenile judge when the child is arrested or otherwise taken into custody for the commission of an act that would be an offense, other than a traffic offense or a minor misdemeanor, if committed by an adult, and there is probable cause to believe that the child may have been involved in the commission of the act. A law enforcement officer who takes fingerprints or photographs of a child under division (A)(2) of this section immediately shall inform the juvenile court that the fingerprints or photographs were taken and shall provide the court with the identity of the child, the number of fingerprints and photographs taken, and the name and address of each person who has custody and control of the fingerprints or photographs or copies of the fingerprints or photographs.

(3) This section does not apply to a child to whom either of the following applies:

(a) The child has been arrested or otherwise taken into custody for committing, or has been adjudicated a delinquent child for committing, an act that would be a felony if committed by an adult or has been convicted of or pleaded guilty to committing a felony.

(b) There is probable cause to believe that the child may have committed an act that would be a felony if committed by an adult.

(B)(1) Subject to divisions (B)(4), (5), and (6) of this section, all fingerprints and photographs of a child obtained or taken under division (A)(1) or (2) of this section, and any records of the arrest or custody of the child that was the basis for the taking of the fingerprints or photographs, initially may be retained only until the expiration of thirty days after the date taken, except that the court may limit the initial retention of fingerprints and photographs of a child obtained under division (A)(1) of this section to a shorter period of time and except that, if the child is adjudicated a delinquent child for the commission of an act described in division (B)(3) of this section or is convicted of or pleads guilty to a criminal offense for the commission of an act described in division (B)(3) of this section, the fingerprints and photographs, and the records of the arrest or custody of the child that was the basis for the taking of the fingerprints and photographs, shall be retained in accordance with division (B)(3) of this section. During the initial period of retention, the fingerprints and photographs of a child, copies of the fingerprints and photographs, and records of the arrest or custody of the child shall be used or released only in accordance with division (C) of this section. At the expiration of the initial period for which fingerprints and photographs of a child, copies of fingerprints and photographs of a child, and records of the arrest or custody of a child may be retained under this division, if no complaint, indictment, or information is pending against the child in relation to the act for which the fingerprints and photographs originally were obtained or taken and if the child has neither been adjudicated a delinquent child for the commission of that act nor been convicted of or pleaded guilty to a criminal offense based on that act subsequent to a transfer of the child's case for criminal prosecution pursuant to section 2152.12 of the Revised Code, the fingerprints and photographs of the child, all copies of the fingerprints and photographs, and all records of the arrest or custody of the child that was the basis of the taking of the fingerprints and photographs shall be removed from the file and delivered to the juvenile court.

(2) If, at the expiration of the initial period of retention set forth in division (B)(1) of this section, a complaint, indictment, or information is pending against the child in relation to the act for which the fingerprints and photographs originally were obtained or the child either has been adjudicated a delinquent child for the commission of an act other than an act described in division (B)(3) of this section or has been convicted of or pleaded guilty to a criminal offense for the commission of an act other than an act described in division (B)(3) of this section subsequent to transfer of the child's case, the fingerprints and photographs of the child, copies of the fingerprints and photographs, and the records of the arrest or custody of the child that was the basis of the taking of the fingerprints and photographs may further be retained, subject to division (B)(4) of this section, until the earlier of the expiration of two years after the date on which the fingerprints or photographs were taken or the child attains eighteen years of age, except that, if the child is adjudicated a delinquent child for the commission of an act described in division (B)(3) of this section or is convicted of or pleads guilty to a criminal offense for the commission of an act described in division (B)(3) of this section, the fingerprints and photographs, and the records of the arrest or custody of the child that was the basis for the taking of the fingerprints and photographs, shall be retained in accordance with division (B)(3) of this section.

Except as otherwise provided in division (B)(3) of this section, during this additional period of retention, the fingerprints and photographs of a child, copies of the fingerprints and photographs of a child, and records of the arrest or custody of a child shall be used or released only in accordance with division (C) of this section. At the expiration of the additional period, if no complaint, indictment, or information is pending against the child in relation to the act for which the fingerprints originally were obtained or taken or in relation to another act for which the fingerprints were used as authorized by division (C) of this section and that would be a felony if committed by an adult, the fingerprints of the child, all copies of the fingerprints, and all records of the arrest or custody of the child that was the basis of the taking of the fingerprints shall be removed from the file and delivered to the juvenile court, and, if no complaint, indictment, or information is pending against the child concerning the act for which the photographs originally were obtained or taken or concerning an act that would be a felony if committed by an adult, the photographs and all copies of the photographs, and, if no fingerprints were taken at the time the photographs were taken, all records of the arrest or custody that was the basis of the taking of the photographs shall be removed from the file and delivered to the juvenile court. In either case, if, at the expiration of the applicable additional period, such a complaint, indictment, or information is pending against the child, the photographs and copies of the photographs of the child, or the fingerprints and copies of the fingerprints of the child, whichever is applicable, and the records of the arrest or custody of the child may be retained, subject to division (B)(4) of this section, until final disposition of the complaint, indictment, or information, and, upon final disposition of the complaint, indictment, or information, they shall be removed from the file and delivered to the juvenile court, except that, if the child is adjudicated a delinquent child for the commission of an act described in division (B)(3) of this section or is convicted of or pleads guilty to a criminal offense for the commission of an act described in division (B)(3) of this section, the fingerprints and photographs, and the records of the arrest or custody of the child that was the basis for the taking of the fingerprints and photographs, shall be retained in accordance with division (B)(3) of this section.

(3) If a child is adjudicated a delinquent child for violating section 2923.42 of the Revised Code or for committing an act that would be a misdemeanor offense of violence if committed by an adult, or is convicted of or pleads guilty to a violation of section 2923.42 of the Revised Code, a misdemeanor offense of violence, or a violation of an existing or former municipal ordinance or law of this state, another state, or the United States that is substantially equivalent to section 2923.42 of the Revised Code or any misdemeanor offense of violence, both of the following apply:

(a) Originals and copies of fingerprints and photographs of the child obtained or taken under division (A)(1) of this section, and any records of the arrest or custody that was the basis for the taking of the fingerprints or photographs, may be retained for the period of time specified by the juvenile judge in that judge's grant of consent for the taking of the fingerprints or photographs. Upon the expiration of the specified period, all originals and copies of the fingerprints, photographs, and records shall be delivered to the juvenile court or otherwise disposed of in accordance with any instructions specified by the juvenile judge in that judge's grant of consent. During the period of retention of the photographs and records, all originals and copies of them shall be retained in a file separate and apart from all photographs taken of adults. During the period of retention of the fingerprints, all originals and copies of them may be maintained in the files of fingerprints taken of adults. If the juvenile judge who grants consent for the taking of fingerprints and photographs under division (A)(1) of this section does not specify a period of retention in that judge's grant of consent, originals and copies of the fingerprints, photographs, and records may be retained in accordance with this section as if the fingerprints and photographs had been taken under division (A)(2) of this section.

(b) Originals and copies of fingerprints and photographs taken under division (A)(2) of this section, and any records of the arrest or custody that was the basis for the taking of the fingerprints or photographs, may be retained for the period of time and in the manner specified in division (B)(3)(b) of this section. Prior to the child's attainment of eighteen years of age, all originals and copies of the photographs and records shall be retained and shall be kept in a file separate and apart from all photographs taken of adults. During the period of retention of the fingerprints, all originals and copies of them may be maintained in the files of fingerprints taken of adults. Upon the child's attainment of eighteen years of age, all originals and copies of the fingerprints, photographs, and records shall be disposed of as follows:

(i) If the juvenile judge issues or previously has issued an order that specifies a manner of disposition of the originals and copies of the fingerprints, photographs, and records, they shall be delivered to the juvenile court or otherwise disposed of in accordance with the order.

(ii) If the juvenile judge does not issue and has not previously issued an order that specifies a manner of disposition of the originals and copies of the fingerprints not maintained in adult files, photographs, and records, the law enforcement agency, in its discretion, either shall remove all originals and copies of them from the file in which they had been maintained and transfer them to the files that are used for the retention of fingerprints and photographs taken of adults who are arrested for, otherwise taken into custody for, or under investigation for the commission of a criminal offense or shall remove them from the file in which they had been maintained and deliver them to the juvenile court. If the originals and copies of any fingerprints of a child who attains eighteen years of age are maintained in the files of fingerprints taken of adults or if pursuant to division (B)(3)(b)(ii) of this section the agency transfers the originals and copies of any fingerprints not maintained in adult files, photographs, or records to the files that are used for the retention of fingerprints and photographs taken of adults who are arrested for, otherwise taken into custody for, or under investigation for the commission of a criminal offense, the originals and copies of the fingerprints, photographs, and records may be maintained, used, and released after they are maintained in the adult files or after the transfer as if the fingerprints and photographs had been taken of, and as if the records pertained to, an adult who was arrested for, otherwise taken into custody for, or under investigation for the commission of a criminal offense.

(4) If a sealing or expungement order issued under sections 2151.356 [2151.35.6] to 2151.358 [2151.35.8] of the Revised Code requires the sealing or destruction of any fingerprints or photographs of a child obtained or taken under division (A)(1) or (2) of this section or of the records of an arrest or custody of a child that was the basis of the taking of the fingerprints or photographs prior to the expiration of any period for which they otherwise could be retained under division (B)(1), (2), or (3) of this section, the fingerprints, photographs, and arrest or custody records that are subject to the order and all copies of the fingerprints, photographs, and arrest or custody records shall be sealed or destroyed in accordance with the order.

(5) All fingerprints of a child, photographs of a child, records of an arrest or custody of a child, and copies delivered to a juvenile court in accordance with division (B)(1), (2), or (3) of this section shall be destroyed by the court, provided that, if a complaint is filed against the child in relation to any act to which the records pertain, the court shall maintain all records of an arrest or custody of a child so delivered for at least three years after the final disposition of the case or after the case becomes inactive.

(6)(a) All photographs of a child and records of an arrest or custody of a child retained pursuant to division (B) of this section and not delivered to a juvenile court shall be kept in a file separate and apart from fingerprints, photographs, and records of an arrest or custody of an adult. All fingerprints of a child retained pursuant to division (B) of this section and not delivered to a juvenile court may be maintained in the files of fingerprints taken of adults.

(b) If a child who is the subject of photographs or fingerprints is adjudicated a delinquent child for the commission of an act that would be an offense, other than a traffic offense or a minor misdemeanor, if committed by an adult or is convicted of or pleads guilty to a criminal offense, other than a traffic offense or a minor misdemeanor, all fingerprints not maintained in the files of fingerprints taken of adults and all photographs of the child, and all records of the arrest or custody of the child that is the basis of the taking of the fingerprints or photographs, that are retained pursuant to division (B) of this section and not delivered to a juvenile court shall be kept in a file separate and apart from fingerprints, photographs, and arrest and custody records of children who have not been adjudicated a delinquent child for the commission of an act that would be an offense, other than a traffic offense or a minor misdemeanor, if committed by an adult and have not been convicted of or pleaded guilty to a criminal offense other than a traffic offense or a minor misdemeanor.

(C) Until they are delivered to the juvenile court or sealed, transferred in accordance with division (B)(3)(b) of this section, or destroyed pursuant to a sealing or expungement order, the originals and copies of fingerprints and photographs of a child that are obtained or taken pursuant to division (A)(1) or (2) of this section, and the records of the arrest or custody of the child that was the basis of the taking of the fingerprints or photographs, shall be used or released only as follows:

(1) During the initial thirty-day period of retention, originals and copies of fingerprints and photographs of a child, and records of the arrest or custody of a child, shall be used, prior to the filing of a complaint or information against or the obtaining of an indictment of the child in relation to the act for which the fingerprints and photographs were originally obtained or taken, only for the investigation of that act and shall be released, prior to the filing of the complaint, only to a court that would have jurisdiction of the child's case under this chapter. Subsequent to the filing of a complaint or information or the obtaining of an indictment, originals and copies of fingerprints and photographs of a child, and records of the arrest or custody of a child, shall be used or released during the initial thirty-day period of retention only as provided in division (C)(2)(a), (b), or (c) of this section.

(2) Originals and copies of fingerprints and photographs of a child, and records of the arrest or custody of a child, that are retained beyond the initial thirty-day period of retention subsequent to the filing of a complaint or information or the obtaining of an indictment, a delinquent child adjudication, or a conviction of or guilty plea to a criminal offense shall be used or released only as follows:

(a) Originals and copies of photographs of a child, and, if no fingerprints were taken at the time the photographs were taken, records of the arrest or custody of the child that was the basis of the taking of the photographs, may be used only as follows:

(i) They may be used for the investigation of the act for which they originally were obtained or taken; if the child who is the subject of the photographs is a suspect in the investigation, for the investigation of any act that would be an offense if committed by an adult; and for arresting or bringing the child into custody.

(ii) If the child who is the subject of the photographs is adjudicated a delinquent child for the commission of an act that would be a felony if committed by an adult or is convicted of or pleads guilty to a criminal offense that is a felony as a result of the arrest or custody that was the basis of the taking of the photographs, a law enforcement officer may use the photographs for a photo line-up conducted as part of the investigation of any act that would be a felony if committed by an adult, whether or not the child who is the subject of the photographs is a suspect in the investigation.

(b) Originals and copies of fingerprints of a child, and records of the arrest or custody of the child that was the basis of the taking of the fingerprints, may be used only for the investigation of the act for which they originally were obtained or taken; if a child is a suspect in the investigation, for the investigation of another act that would be an offense if committed by an adult; and for arresting or bringing the child into custody.

(c) Originals and copies of fingerprints, photographs, and records of the arrest or custody that was the basis of the taking of the fingerprints or photographs shall be released only to the following:

(i) Law enforcement officers of this state or a political subdivision of this state, upon notification to the juvenile court of the name and address of the law enforcement officer or agency to whom or to which they will be released;

(ii) A court that has jurisdiction of the child's case under Chapters 2151. and 2152. of the Revised Code or subsequent to a transfer of the child's case for criminal prosecution pursuant to section 2152.12 of the Revised Code.

(D) No person shall knowingly do any of the following:

(1) Fingerprint or photograph a child in the investigation of any violation of law other than as provided in division (A)(1) or (2) of this section or in sections 109.57, 109.60, and 109.61 of the Revised Code;

(2) Retain fingerprints or photographs of a child obtained or taken under division (A)(1) or (2) of this section, copies of fingerprints or photographs of that nature, or records of the arrest or custody that was the basis of the taking of fingerprints or photographs of that nature other than in accordance with division (B) of this section;

(3) Use or release fingerprints or photographs of a child obtained or taken under division (A)(1) or (2) of this section, copies of fingerprints or photographs of that nature, or records of the arrest or custody that was the basis of the taking of fingerprints or photographs of that nature other than in accordance with division (B) or (C) of this section.

Generally
Identification evidence
Public records law

Generally

Revised Code § 2151.31.3(A)(1) permits a juvenile court judge to order fingerprinting of a juvenile not in custody or under arrest without a finding of probable cause, when the juvenile court judge determines that: (1) there is an articulable and specific basis in fact for suspecting criminal activity; (2) the intrusion is justified by substantial law enforcement interests; and (3) the intrusion is limited in scope, purpose and duration: In re Order Requiring Fingerprinting of a Juvenile, 42 Ohio St. 3d 124, 537 N.E.2d 1286 (1989).

Although a violation of RC § 2151.31.3 warrants the criminal prosecution of the violator under RC § 2151.99(B), it does not compel the exclusion of evidence pertaining to the taking of a minor's fingerprints: State v. Davis, 56 Ohio St. 2d 51, 10 Ohio Op. 3d 87, 381 N.E.2d 641 (1978).

The nature of the card upon which fingerprints or photograph is placed has nothing to do with their authenticity. The purpose of this section is not to determine their admissibility into evidence but rather to conform to the theory that juvenile proceedings are not criminal in nature: State v. Carder, 9 Ohio St. 2d 1, 38 Ohio Op. 2d 1, 222 N.E.2d 620 (1966).

If a law enforcement officer or other authorized person takes photographs and fingerprints of a juvenile taken into custody for a first-time drug or alcohol offense, records of that custody and of the photographs and fingerprints may be disclosed only as permitted by RC § 2151.31.3: OAG No. 87-010 (1987).

There is not statutory authority, in cases where juveniles are fingerprinted with the consent of the juvenile court under this section, which would permit or require local police officers to forward the fingerprint impressions so made to the state bureau of criminal identification for inclusion in the bureau's permanent files; nor is the bureau authorized, under GC § 1841-15 (RC § 5149.03), to procure and file for record the fingerprints of juveniles who are in any place of confinement under a commitment by a juvenile court on a charge of delinquency: 1952 OAG No. 1771 (1952).

Identification evidence

Where testimony is offered for the purpose of identifying the accused as the perpetrator of a crime, but such is based in part on illegally obtained evidence, it will not be excluded if the totality of circumstances manifests an effective identification apart from and independent of the tainted procedure: State v. Jones, 49 Ohio App. 2d 170, 3 Ohio Op. 3d 222, 359 N.E.2d 1386 (1976).

Public records law

If, pursuant to RC § 2151.31.3, a law enforcement officer or other authorized person takes fingerprints or photographs of a juvenile arrested or taken into custody, the fingerprints, photographs and other records relating to that arrest or custody of the juvenile are not public records: OAG No. 90-101 (1990).

[§ 2151.31.4] § 2151.314 Detention or shelter care hearing.

(A) When a child is brought before the court or delivered to a place of detention or shelter care designated by the court, the intake or other authorized officer of the court shall immediately make an investigation and shall release the child unless it appears that the child's detention or shelter care is warranted or required under section 2151.31 of the Revised Code.

If the child is not so released, a complaint under section 2151.27 or 2152.021 [2152.02.1] or an information under section 2152.13 of the Revised Code shall be filed or an indictment under division (B) of section 2152.13 of the Revised Code shall be sought and an informal detention or shelter care hearing held promptly, not later than seventy-two hours after the child is placed in detention or shelter care, to determine whether detention or shelter care is required. Reasonable oral or written notice of the time, place, and purpose of the detention or shelter care hearing shall be given to the child and, if they can be found, to the child's parents, guardian, or custodian. In cases in which the complaint alleges a child to be an abused, neglected, or dependent child, the notice given the parents, guardian, or custodian shall inform them that a case plan may be prepared for the child, the general requirements usually contained in case plans, and the possible consequences of the failure to comply with a journalized case plan.

Prior to the hearing, the court shall inform the parties of their right to counsel and to appointed counsel or to the services of the county public defender or joint county public defender, if they are indigent, of the child's right to remain silent with respect to any allegation of delinquency, and of the name and telephone number of a court employee who can be contacted during the normal business hours of the court to arrange for the prompt appointment of counsel for any party who is indigent. Unless it appears from the hearing that the child's detention or shelter care is required under the provisions of section 2151.31 of the Revised Code, the court shall order the child's release as provided by section 2151.311 [2151.31.1] of the Revised Code. If a parent, guardian, or custodian has not been so notified and did not appear or waive appearance at the hearing, upon the filing of an affidavit stating these facts, the court shall rehear the matter without unnecessary delay.

(B) When the court conducts a hearing pursuant to division (A) of this section, all of the following apply:

(1) The court shall determine whether an alleged abused, neglected, or dependent child should remain or be placed in shelter care;

(2) The court shall determine whether there are any relatives of the child who are willing to be temporary custodians of the child. If any relative is willing to be a temporary custodian, the child would otherwise be placed or retained in shelter care, and the appointment is appropriate, the court shall appoint the relative as temporary custodian of the child, unless the court appoints another relative as temporary custodian. If it determines that the appointment of a relative as custodian would not be appropriate, it shall issue a written opinion setting forth the reasons for its determination and give a copy of the opinion to all parties and to the guardian ad litem of the child.

The court's consideration of a relative for appointment as a temporary custodian does not make that relative a party to the proceedings.

(3) The court shall comply with section 2151.419 [2151.41.9] of the Revised Code.

(C) If a child is in shelter care following the filing of a complaint pursuant to section 2151.27 or 2152.021 [2152.02.1] of the Revised Code, the filing of an information, or the obtaining of an indictment or following a hearing held pursuant to division (A) of this section, any party, including the public children services agency, and the guardian ad litem of the child may file a motion with the court requesting that the child be released from shelter care. The motion shall state the reasons why the child should be released from shelter care and, if a hearing has been held pursuant to division (A) of this section, any changes in the situation of the child or the parents, guardian, or custodian of the child that have occurred since that hearing and that justify the release of the child from shelter care. Upon the filing of the motion, the court shall hold a hearing in the same manner as under division (A) of this section.

(D) Each juvenile court shall designate at least one court employee to assist persons who are indigent in obtaining appointed counsel. The court shall include in each notice given pursuant to division (A) or (C) of this section and in each summons served upon a party pursuant to this chapter, the name and telephone number at which each designated employee can be contacted during the normal business hours of the court to arrange for prompt appointment of counsel for indigent persons.

Consent to temporary custody of agency

Revised Code § 2151.31.4, which requires a court hearing within seventy-two hours after a child is placed in detention, is not applicable where temporary custody of the child is voluntarily given to a children services agency by the parents: In re Pachin, 50 Ohio App. 3d 44, 552 N.E.2d 655 (1988).

Parent to be informed of rights

Any failure to inform a parent at the initial shelter-care hearing of the possible consequences of failing to conform to the case plan was cured well before his parental rights were terminated: In re Moore, 153 Ohio App. 3d 641, 795 N.E.2d 149, 2003 Ohio 4250, (2003).

Placement with relatives

RC § 2151.314(B)(2) did not require that legal custody of a nephew be awarded to an aunt and uncle (relatives) over the nephew's foster parents as the relatives were not suitable for placement when the nephew was removed from his parents because they resided in Texas and the juvenile court had no way of knowing if their home was suitable for the nephew. In re Halstead, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 902, 2005 Ohio 403, (2004).

Reasonable efforts to reunify family

Requirement in RC § 2151.419(A)(1) that a children's services agency make "reasonable efforts" to reunify children removed from their home with their families applied to hearings held pursuant to RC §§ 2151.28, 2151.31(E), 2151.314, 2151.33, and 2151.353, but it did not apply when permanent custody was sought pursuant to RC § 2151.413 or when such a motion was heard pursuant to RC § 2151.414, so it did not apply to an agency's motion for permanent custody of a father's children. In re R.A.M., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3149, 2006 Ohio 3242, (2006).

Release to officer

Revised Code §§ 2151.31.1(A)(1), 2151.31.4(A), and JuvR 7(B) do not authorize the release of a child to the peace officer who took the child into custody: OAG No. 96-061 (1996).

Right to counsel

Father did not receive ineffective assistance of counsel during the permanent custody proceedings because the father waived his right to counsel since he did not apply for counsel prior to the hearing and he failed to assert any prejudice deriving from his lack of counsel at the shelter care hearing. Also, counsel's withdrawal of the motion seeking payment for anger management counseling appeared to be a tactical decision within the realm of reasonable professional judgment and fails to establish ineffective assistance of counsel. In re E. T., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2308, 2006 Ohio 2413, (2006).

§ 2151.32 Selection of custodian.

In placing a child under any guardianship or custody other than that of its parent, the juvenile court shall, when practicable, select a person or an institution or agency governed by persons of like religious faith as that of the parents of such child, or in case of a difference in the religious faith of the parents, then of the religious faith of the child, or if the religious faith of the child is not ascertained, then of either of the parents.

(A) Pending hearing of a complaint filed under section 2151.27 of the Revised Code or a motion filed or made under division (B) of this section and the service of citations, the juvenile court may make any temporary disposition of any child that it considers necessary to protect the best interest of the child and that can be made pursuant to division (B) of this section. Upon the certificate of one or more reputable practicing physicians, the court may summarily provide for emergency medical and surgical treatment that appears to be immediately necessary to preserve the health and well-being of any child concerning whom a complaint or an application for care has been filed, pending the service of a citation upon the child's parents, guardian, or custodian. The court may order the parents, guardian, or custodian, if the court finds the parents, guardian, or custodian able to do so, to reimburse the court for the expense involved in providing the emergency medical or surgical treatment. Any person who disobeys the order for reimbursement may be adjudged in contempt of court and punished accordingly.

If the emergency medical or surgical treatment is furnished to a child who is found at the hearing to be a nonresident of the county in which the court is located and if the expense of the medical or surgical treatment cannot be recovered from the parents, legal guardian, or custodian of the child, the board of county commissioners of the county in which the child has a legal settlement shall reimburse the court for the reasonable cost of the emergency medical or surgical treatment out of its general fund.

(B)(1) After a complaint, petition, writ, or other document initiating a case dealing with an alleged or adjudicated abused, neglected, or dependent child is filed and upon the filing or making of a motion pursuant to division (C) of this section, the court, prior to the final disposition of the case, may issue any of the following temporary orders to protect the best interest of the child:

(a) An order granting temporary custody of the child to a particular party;

(b) An order for the taking of the child into custody pursuant to section 2151.31 of the Revised Code pending the outcome of the adjudicatory and dispositional hearings;

(c) An order granting, limiting, or eliminating parenting time or visitation rights with respect to the child;

(d) An order requiring a party to vacate a residence that will be lawfully occupied by the child;

(e) An order requiring a party to attend an appropriate counseling program that is reasonably available to that party;

(f) Any other order that restrains or otherwise controls the conduct of any party which conduct would not be in the best interest of the child.

(2) Prior to the final disposition of a case subject to division (B)(1) of this section, the court shall do both of the following:

(a) Issue an order pursuant to Chapters 3119. to 3125. of the Revised Code requiring the parents, guardian, or person charged with the child's support to pay support for the child.

(b) Issue an order requiring the parents, guardian, or person charged with the child's support to continue to maintain any health insurance coverage for the child that existed at the time of the filing of the complaint, petition, writ, or other document, or to obtain health insurance coverage in accordance with sections 3119.29 to 3119.56 of the Revised Code.

(C)(1) A court may issue an order pursuant to division (B) of this section upon its own motion or if a party files a written motion or makes an oral motion requesting the issuance of the order and stating the reasons for it. Any notice sent by the court as a result of a motion pursuant to this division shall contain a notice that any party to a juvenile proceeding has the right to be represented by counsel and to have appointed counsel if the person is indigent.

(2) If a child is taken into custody pursuant to section 2151.31 of the Revised Code and placed in shelter care, the public children services agency or private child placing agency with which the child is placed in shelter care shall file or make a motion as described in division (C)(1) of this section before the end of the next day immediately after the date on which the child was taken into custody and, at a minimum, shall request an order for temporary custody under division (B)(1)(a) of this section.

(3) A court that issues an order pursuant to division (B)(1)(b) of this section shall comply with section 2151.419 [2151.41.9] of the Revised Code.

(D) The court may grant an ex parte order upon its own motion or a motion filed or made pursuant to division (C) of this section requesting such an order if it appears to the court that the best interest and the welfare of the child require that the court issue the order immediately. The court, if acting on its own motion, or the person requesting the granting of an ex parte order, to the extent possible, shall give notice of its intent or of the request to the parents, guardian, or custodian of the child who is the subject of the request. If the court issues an ex parte order, the court shall hold a hearing to review the order within seventy-two hours after it is issued or before the end of the next day after the day on which it is issued, whichever occurs first. The court shall give written notice of the hearing to all parties to the action and shall appoint a guardian ad litem for the child prior to the hearing.

The written notice shall be given by all means that are reasonably likely to result in the party receiving actual notice and shall include all of the following:

- (1) The date, time, and location of the hearing;
- (2) The issues to be addressed at the hearing;
- (3) A statement that every party to the hearing has a right to counsel and to court-appointed counsel, if the party is indigent;
- (4) The name, telephone number, and address of the person requesting the order;
- (5) A copy of the order, except when it is not possible to obtain it because of the exigent circumstances in the case.

If the court does not grant an ex parte order pursuant to a motion filed or made pursuant to division (C) of this section or its own motion, the court shall hold a shelter care hearing on the motion within ten days after the motion is filed. The court shall give notice of the hearing to all affected parties in the same manner as set forth in the Juvenile Rules.

(E) The court, pending the outcome of the adjudicatory and dispositional hearings, shall not issue an order granting temporary custody of a child to a public children services agency or private child placing agency pursuant to this section, unless the court determines and specifically states in the order that the continued residence of the child in the child's current home will be contrary to the child's best interest and welfare and the court complies with section 2151.419 [2151.41.9] of the Revised Code.

(F) Each public children services agency and private child placing agency that receives temporary custody of a child pursuant to this section shall maintain in the child's case record written documentation that it has placed the child, to the extent that it is consistent with the best interest, welfare, and special needs of the child, in the most family-like setting available and in close proximity to the home of the parents, custodian, or guardian of the child.

(G) For good cause shown, any court order that is issued pursuant to this section may be reviewed by the court at any time upon motion of any party to the action or upon the motion of the court.

Constitutionality

This section is not unconstitutional: In re Clark, 90 Ohio L. Ab. 21, 21 Ohio Op. 2d 86, 185 N.E.2d 128 (CP 1962).

Applicability

Revised Code §§ 2151.41.2 and 2151.41.4 are applicable only where the child or children have previously been determined dependent, neglected or abused, their temporary custody has been committed to a children services board, a welfare department or a certified organization, and an order is sought changing temporary to permanent custody. These sections are not applicable where the original request was for permanent custody, and an order of temporary custody was issued pending hearing on the complaint as provided by RC § 2151.33: In re Covert, 17 Ohio App. 3d 122, 17 Ohio B. 185, 477 N.E.2d 678 (1984).

Consent to treatment

Where a physician or surgeon seeks to avoid potential liability in tort for the administration, without the patient's consent, of medical or surgical treatment to a minor child receiving care from a child welfare board, the question, in particular cases, of what person, organization or authority is competent to give such consent on behalf of such child, so as effectively to protect him from incurring such liability, is ultimately one for decision by the physician or surgeon concerned, upon advice of private counsel: 1951 OAG No. 898 (1951).

Where a child is being cared for by a county welfare department or board of child welfare, by agreement with the parents or guardian of such child, only such parents or guardian may properly consent, upon competent medical advice, to medical or surgical treatment of such child: 1951 OAG No. 898 (1951).

Dependency determination

Trial court improperly awarded permanent custody (RC § 2151.414 and RC § 2151.353) to the agency without first adjudicating the child dependent. The evidence introduced at the temporary emergency custody hearing did not support a dependency determination and no subsequent hearing was held to determine dependency. In re Nibert, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2641, 2005 Ohio 2797, (2005).

Emergency treatment

When a child's right to live and his parents' religious belief collide, the former is paramount, and the religious doctrine must give way: In re Clark, 90 Ohio L. Ab. 21, 21 Ohio Op. 2d 86, 185 N.E.2d 128 (CP 1962).

Where a child's life is concerned, the juvenile court has not only the right but the duty to act in the child's behalf first, and give the parents their day in court later: In re Clark, 90 Ohio L. Ab. 21, 21 Ohio Op. 2d 86, 185 N.E.2d 128 (CP 1962).

A juvenile court may summarily give the medical staff of a hospital authority to administer blood transfusions to a child suffering serious burns, whose blood condition is deteriorating, although the child's parents refused to give permission because of religious beliefs: In re Clark, 90 Ohio L. Ab. 21, 21 Ohio Op. 2d 86, 185 N.E.2d 128 (CP 1962).

When a complaint or application for care concerning a child has been filed with the juvenile court, such court may, pending service of a citation on the child's parents, guardian or custodian, order the provision of emergency medical or surgical treatment upon the certificate of one or more reputable practicing physicians, as provided in this section: 1951 OAG No. 898 (1951).

Reasonable efforts to reunify family

Requirement in RC § 2151.419(A)(1) that a children's services agency make "reasonable efforts" to reunify children removed from their home with their families applied to hearings held pursuant to RC §§ 2151.28, 2151.31(E), 2151.314, 2151.33, and 2151.353, but it did not apply when permanent custody was sought pursuant to RC § 2151.413 or when such a motion was heard pursuant to RC § 2151.414, so it did not apply to an agency's motion for permanent custody of a father's children. In re R.A.M., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3149, 2006 Ohio 3242, (2006).

Support orders

Pursuant to R.C. 2151.23(A), the Probate and Juvenile Division of the Muskingum County Court of Common Pleas has exclusive original jurisdiction to issue orders of support in cases brought under R.C. 2151.27 to R.C. 2151.331, including orders complying with R.C. 2151.33(B)(2)(a). The language of R.C. 2301.03(AA) establishing the powers and duties of the judge of the Domestic Relations Division of the Muskingum County Court of Common Pleas does not modify or restrict the exclusive original jurisdiction of the juvenile court in this regard. Opinion No. 2005-003 (2005).

[§ 2151.33.1] § 2151.331 Placement options for alleged or adjudicated abused, neglected, dependent or unruly child.

A child alleged to be or adjudicated an abused, neglected, dependent, or unruly child or a juvenile traffic offender may be detained after a complaint is filed in a certified foster home for a period not exceeding sixty days or until the final disposition of the case, whichever comes first. The court also may arrange with a public children services agency or private child placing agency to receive, or with a private noncustodial agency for temporary care of, the child within the jurisdiction of the court. A child alleged to be or adjudicated an unruly child also may be assigned to an alternative diversion program established by the court for a period not exceeding sixty days after a complaint is filed or until final disposition of the case, whichever comes first.

If the court arranges for the board of a child temporarily detained in a certified foster home or arranges for the board of a child through a private child placing agency, the board of county commissioners shall pay a reasonable sum, which the court shall fix, for the board of the child. In order to have certified foster homes available for service, an agreed monthly subsidy may be paid in addition to a fixed rate per day for care of a child actually residing in the certified foster home.†

(A)(1) Except as otherwise provided by division (A)(3) of this section or in section 2152.13 of the Revised Code, the juvenile court may conduct its hearings in an informal manner and may adjourn its hearings from time to time. The court may exclude the general public from its hearings in a particular case if the court holds a separate hearing to determine whether that exclusion is appropriate. If the court decides that exclusion of the general public is appropriate, the court still may admit to a particular hearing or all of the hearings relating to a particular case those persons who have a direct interest in the case and those who demonstrate that their need for access outweighs the interest in keeping the hearing closed.

Except cases involving children who are alleged to be unruly or delinquent children for being habitual or chronic truants and except as otherwise provided in section 2152.13 of the Revised Code, all cases involving children shall be heard separately and apart from the trial of cases against adults. The court may excuse the attendance of the child at the hearing in cases involving abused, neglected, or dependent children. The court shall hear and determine all cases of children without a jury, except cases involving serious youthful offenders under section 2152.13 of the Revised Code.

If a complaint alleges a child to be a delinquent child, unruly child, or juvenile traffic offender, the court shall require the parent, guardian, or custodian of the child to attend all proceedings of the court regarding the child. If a parent, guardian, or custodian fails to so attend, the court may find the parent, guardian, or custodian in contempt.

If the court finds from clear and convincing evidence that the child violated section 2151.87 of the Revised Code, the court shall proceed in accordance with divisions (F) and (G) of that section.

If the court at the adjudicatory hearing finds from clear and convincing evidence that the child is an abused, neglected, or dependent child, the court shall proceed, in accordance with division (B) of this section, to hold a dispositional hearing and hear the evidence as to the proper disposition to be made under section 2151.353 [2151.35.3] of the Revised Code. If the court at the adjudicatory hearing finds beyond a reasonable doubt that the child is a delinquent or unruly child or a juvenile traffic offender, the court shall proceed immediately, or at a postponed hearing, to hear the evidence as to the proper disposition to be made under section 2151.354 [2151.35.4] or Chapter 2152. of the Revised Code. If the court at the adjudicatory hearing finds beyond a reasonable doubt that the child is an unruly child for being an habitual truant, or that the child is an unruly child for being an habitual truant and that the parent, guardian, or other person having care of the child has failed to cause the child's attendance at school in violation of section 3321.38 of the Revised Code, the court shall proceed to hold a hearing to hear the evidence as to the proper disposition to be made in regard to the child under division (C)(1) of section 2151.354 [2151.35.4] of the Revised Code and the proper action to take in regard to the parent, guardian, or other person having care of the child under division (C)(2) of section 2151.354 [2151.35.4] of the Revised Code. If the court at the adjudicatory hearing finds beyond a reasonable doubt that the child is a delinquent child for being a chronic truant or for being an habitual truant who previously has been adjudicated an unruly child for being an habitual truant, or that the child is a delinquent child for either of those reasons and the parent, guardian, or other person having care of the child has failed to cause the child's attendance at school in violation of section 3321.38 of the Revised Code, the court shall proceed to hold a hearing to hear the evidence as to the proper disposition to be made in regard to the child under division (A)(7)(a) of section 2152.19 of the Revised Code and the proper action to take in regard to the parent, guardian, or other person having care of the child under division (A)(7)(b) of section 2152.19 of the Revised Code.

If the court does not find the child to have violated section 2151.87 of the Revised Code or to be an abused, neglected, dependent, delinquent, or unruly child or a juvenile traffic offender, it shall order that the case be dismissed and that the child be discharged from any detention or restriction theretofore ordered.

(2) A record of all testimony and other oral proceedings in juvenile court shall be made in all proceedings that are held pursuant to section 2151.414 [2151.41.4] of the Revised Code or in which an order of disposition may be made pursuant to division (A)(4) of section 2151.353 [2151.35.3] of the Revised Code, and shall be made upon request in any other proceedings. The record shall be made as provided in section 2301.20 of the Revised Code.

(3) The authority of a juvenile court to exclude the general public from its hearings that is provided by division (A)(1) of this section does not limit or affect any right of a victim of a crime or delinquent act, or of a victim's representative, under Chapter 2930. of the Revised Code.

(B)(1) If the court at an adjudicatory hearing determines that a child is an abused, neglected, or dependent child, the court shall not issue a dispositional order until after the court holds a separate dispositional hearing. The court may hold the dispositional hearing for an adjudicated abused, neglected, or dependent child immediately after the adjudicatory hearing if all parties were served prior to the adjudicatory hearing with all documents required for the dispositional hearing. The dispositional hearing may not be held more than thirty days after the adjudicatory hearing is held. The court, upon the request of any party or the guardian ad litem of the child, may continue a dispositional hearing for a reasonable time not to exceed the time limits set forth in this division to enable a party to obtain or consult counsel. The dispositional hearing shall not be held more than ninety days after the date on which the complaint in the case was filed.

If the dispositional hearing is not held within the period of time required by this division, the court, on its own motion or the motion of any party or the guardian ad litem of the child, shall dismiss the complaint without prejudice.

(2) The dispositional hearing shall be conducted in accordance with all of the following:

(a) The judge or referee who presided at the adjudicatory hearing shall preside, if possible, at the dispositional hearing;

(b) The court may admit any evidence that is material and relevant, including, but not limited to, hearsay, opinion, and documentary evidence;

(c) Medical examiners and each investigator who prepared a social history shall not be cross-examined, except upon consent of the parties, for good cause shown, or as the court in its discretion may direct. Any party may offer evidence supplementing, explaining, or disputing any information contained in the social history or other reports that may be used by the court in determining disposition.

(3) After the conclusion of the dispositional hearing, the court shall enter an appropriate judgment within seven days and shall schedule the date for the hearing to be held pursuant to section 2151.415 [2151.41.5] of the Revised Code. The court may make any order of disposition that is set forth in section 2151.353 [2151.35.3] of the Revised Code. A copy of the judgment shall be given to each party and to the child's guardian ad litem. If the judgment is conditional, the order shall state the conditions of the judgment. If the child is not returned to the child's own home, the court shall determine which school district shall bear the cost of the child's education and shall comply with section 2151.36 of the Revised Code.

(4) As part of its dispositional order, the court may issue any order described in division (B) of section 2151.33 of the Revised Code.

(C) The court shall give all parties to the action and the child's guardian ad litem notice of the adjudicatory and dispositional hearings in accordance with the Juvenile Rules.

(D) If the court issues an order pursuant to division (A)(4) of section 2151.353 [2151.35.3] of the Revised Code committing a child to the permanent custody of a public children services agency or a private child placing agency, the parents of the child whose parental rights were terminated cease to be parties to the action upon the issuance of the order. This division is not intended to eliminate or restrict any right of the parents to appeal the permanent custody order issued pursuant to division (A)(4) of section 2151.353 [2151.35.3] of the Revised Code.

(E) Each juvenile court shall schedule its hearings in accordance with the time requirements of this chapter.

(F) In cases regarding abused, neglected, or dependent children, the court may admit any statement of a child that the court determines to be excluded by the hearsay rule if the proponent of the statement informs the adverse party of the proponent's intention to offer the statement and of the particulars of the statement, including the name of the declarant, sufficiently in advance of the hearing to provide the party with a fair opportunity to prepare to challenge, respond to, or defend against the statement, and the court determines all of the following:

(1) The statement has circumstantial guarantees of trustworthiness;

(2) The statement is offered as evidence of a material fact;

(3) The statement is more probative on the point for which it is offered than any other evidence that the proponent can procure through reasonable efforts;

(4) The general purposes of the evidence rules and the interests of justice will best be served by the admission of the statement into evidence.

(G) If a child is alleged to be an abused child, the court may order that the testimony of the child be taken by deposition. On motion of the prosecuting attorney, guardian ad litem, or any party, or in its own discretion, the court may order that the deposition be videotaped. Any deposition taken under this division shall be taken with a judge or referee present.

If a deposition taken under this division is intended to be offered as evidence at the hearing, it shall be filed with the court. Part or all of the deposition is admissible in evidence if counsel for all parties had an opportunity and similar motive at the time of the taking of the deposition to develop the testimony by direct, cross, or redirect examination and the judge determines that there is reasonable cause to believe that if the child were to testify in person at the hearing, the child would experience emotional trauma as a result of participating at the hearing.

Analogous in part to former RC § 2151.35 (GC § 1639-30; 117 v 520; 119 v 731; 121 v 557; Bureau of Code Revision, 10-1-53; 125 v 324; 127 v 547; 130 v 621; 130 v 623; 132 v S 278; 133 v S 49 (eff 8-13-69)) repealed in 133 v H 320, § 2, eff 11-19-69.

The provisions of § 3 of HB 400 (149 v —) read as follows:

SECTION 3. Section 2151.35 of the Revised Code is presented in Section 1 of this act as a composite of the section as amended by both Am. Sub. S.B. 179 and Sub. S.B. 218 of the 123rd General Assembly. Section 2152.19 of the Revised Code is presented in Section 1 of this act as a composite of the section as amended by both Sub. H.B. 247 and Sub. H.B. 393 of the 124th General Assembly. The General Assembly, applying the principle stated in division (B) of section 1.52 of the Revised Code that amendments are to be harmonized if reasonably capable of simultaneous operation, finds that the composites are the resulting versions of the sections in effect prior to the effective date of the sections as presented in Section 1 of this act.

Constitutionality

The confrontation clause of USConst amend VI does not apply to dependency and neglect proceedings in juvenile courts: In re Burchfield, 51 Ohio App. 3d 148, 555 N.E.2d 325 (1988).

A law making it a crime to publish truthful information, lawfully obtained, concerning the identity of a youth charged as a juvenile offender is violative of the first amendment: Smith v. Daily Mail Publishing Co., 443 U.S. 97, 99 S. Ct. 2667, 61 L. Ed. 2d 399 (1979).

A pretrial order enjoining the news media from disseminating the identity of a juvenile in any manner in connection with juvenile proceedings violates the first amendment where members of the press were present at an initial hearing with full knowledge of and without objection by the court and defense and prosecution counsel: Oklahoma Publishing Co. v. District Court, 439 U.S. 308, 97 S. Ct. 1045, 51 L. Ed. 2d 355 (1976).

Trial by jury in the juvenile court's adjudicative stage is not a constitutional requirement: McKeiver v. Pennsylvania, 403 U.S. 528, 91 S. Ct. 1976, 29 L. Ed. 2d 647 (1971).

Delinquency proceedings in juvenile court do not require indictment or trial by jury under the USConst amend V, VI and XIV or under OConst art I, §§ 5 and 10: In re Agler, 19 Ohio St. 2d 70, 48 Ohio Op. 2d 85, 249 N.E.2d 808 (1969).

Federal constitutional guarantees accompanying ordinary criminal proceedings are applicable to state juvenile court proceedings where possible commitment to a state institution is involved: In re Whittington, 45 Ohio Op. 2d 31, 391 U.S. 341, 20 L. Ed. 2d 625, 88 S. Ct. 1507 (1968).

The provisions of this section relating to the hearing and commitment of a delinquent child without an indictment or a jury trial are not violative of OConst art I, § 5 or § 10: In re Darnell, 173 Ohio St. 335, 19 Ohio Op. 2d 269, 182 N.E.2d 321 (1962).

Generally

Proceedings in the juvenile court are civil in nature and not criminal. This section implies protection for the minor and not punishment: Cope v. Campbell, 175 Ohio St. 475, 26 Ohio Op. 2d 88, 196 N.E.2d 457 (1964).

Proceedings instituted in a juvenile court are not criminal in nature nor are they conducted with the objective of convicting a minor of a crime and punishing him therefor; they are informal hearings through a medium of the juvenile court to determine whether the child needs intervention of the state as guardian and protector of his person: In re L., 25 Ohio Op. 2d 369, 194 N.E.2d 797 (JC 1963).

Proceedings instituted in a juvenile court are not criminal in nature nor are they conducted with the object of convicting a minor of a crime and punishing him therefor; they are informal hearings through the medium of the juvenile court to determine whether the child needs intervention of the state as guardian and protector of his person: State v. Shardell, 107 Ohio App. 338, 8 Ohio Op. 2d 262, 153 N.E.2d 510 (1958).

Abused, neglected, or dependent child

Review of RC § 2151.35(B)(1) showed that it was inconsistent with Ohio R. Juv. P. 34(A) as RC § 2151.35(B)(1) allowed a trial court to hold a dispositional hearing for an adjudicated dependent child immediately after the adjudicatory hearing if all parties were served prior to the adjudicatory hearing with all documents required for the dispositional hearing, while Ohio R. Juv. P. 34(A) was stricter because it also required that all parties consent to the dispositional hearing being held immediately after the adjudicatory hearing, and it was well-established that in instances of procedural conflict the Ohio Rules of Juvenile Procedure, which were prepared and submitted by the Ohio Supreme Court to the legislature, controlled over inconsistent statutory provisions purporting to govern procedural matters. In re J.H., — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3151, 2006 Ohio 3237, (June 26, 2006).

Findings of neglect and dependency were not supported by clear and convincing evidence. The testimony concerning domestic violence between the parents was conflicting: In re Alexander C., 164 Ohio App. 3d 540, 843 N.E.2d 211, 2005 Ohio 6134, (2005).

There was clear and convincing evidence under RC § 2151.35(A) to support a finding by a magistrate, which was adopted by the trial court, that a mother's children were abused and dependent, pursuant to RC §§ 2151.031(B) and (C), and 2151.04(D), respectively, where there was expert testimony that the mother's 19-day-old child had abusive grab marks, and the mother admitted that she may have caused those marks when she grabbed her child. In re Butcher, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3510, 2005 Ohio 3816, (2005).

When a child was removed from the hospital shortly after birth, the child was properly found to be dependent by clear and convincing evidence, under RC §§ 2151.04(D) and 2151.35(A), even though she had not actually lived in a household in which another child was found to have been abused or neglected, because there was evidence that had the child not been removed from the hospital, the child would have lived in a home in which her half sibling was found to be abused, due to Munchausen's Syndrome by proxy, her siblings were found to be dependent, and her parents refused to acknowledge the problem which caused the finding that the half sibling was abused, indicating that there continued to be a risk to the child if she was placed in that home. In re Hortsmann, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2089, 2005 Ohio 2168, (2005).

Trial court had sufficient evidence to come to a firm belief or conclusion that a father sexually abused a victim, his daughter, where both the father and the victim testified at the hearing, where the trial court found that the victim's testimony was more credible, where the victim's mother corroborated certain parts of the victim's testimony and two caseworkers reported that the victim's story was virtually identical to her testimony at the hearing; the father's assertion that the lack of any physical evidence was conclusive proof that his testimony was more credible than the victim's was unfounded. In re Moonshower, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 3654, 2004 Ohio 4024, (2004).

There was insufficient evidence to support a juvenile court's findings that children were neglected or dependent based on an incident where their mother had appeared intoxicated as a chaperone for a school field trip taken by one of the children. The mother had made arrangements for the children to have been cared for by their grandmother, and the appellate court found that the family services department failed to present clear and convincing proof that the children lacked adequate parental care, as there was no showing that either child was ever deprived of adequate food or clothing, the children were never subjected to the mother's sole parental supervision on the day of the field trip, and there was no showing that the mother's problems with substance abuse were such that it deprived her children of adequate or proper parental care. In re C.M., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2041, 2004 Ohio 2294, (2004).

Evidence that the parties needed intervention for counseling to be effective supported removing a minor child from an unstable and abusive environment temporarily. In re Day, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3253, 2003 Ohio 3544, (2003).

Where a home had no electricity, the children lacked food and/or supervision, and where the mother refused to accept help or follow advice, the children were neglected pursuant to RC §§ 2151.03(A)(2), 2151.011(B)(1), and 2151.05; therefore, the RC § 2151.35(A) determination of neglect was proper. In re Browne Children, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3293, 2003 Ohio 3637, (2003).

In an action to place a child in the temporary care and custody of a county department of human services on the ground that the child had been abused, a journal entry of the jury's verdict that the child's stepfather was guilty of endangering her pursuant to RC § 2919.22 is admissible: In re Boyce, 37 Ohio App. 3d 105, 523 N.E.2d 900 (1987).

The unfitness of a parent, guardian or custodian can be predicted by past history. The child does not first have to be put into a particular environment before the court can determine that that environment is unhealthy or unsafe: In re Bishop, 36 Ohio App. 3d 123, 521 N.E.2d 838 (1987).

Where the parents of an alleged dependent child have filed a praecipe for a subpoena duces tecum of a children services board (the party filing the complaint) seeking to obtain or view the agency's records, it is error for the court to sustain a motion to quash the subpoena on the basis that the records are privileged and confidential; the court should allow counsel for the parents reasonable access to the files in order to use the parts which are relevant to the issues being presented to the court: Davis v. Trumbull Cty. Children Serv. Bd., 24 Ohio App. 3d 180, 24 Ohio B. 270, 493 N.E.2d 1011 (1985).

The conduct of a parent is relevant under the terms of RC § 2151.35 solely insofar as that parent's conduct forms a part of the environment of the child. As a part of the child's environment such conduct is only significant if it can be demonstrated to have an adverse impact upon the child sufficient to warrant state intervention. That impact cannot be simply inferred in general, but must be specifically demonstrated in a clear and convincing manner: In re Burrell, 58 Ohio St. 2d 37, 12 Ohio Op. 3d 43, 388 N.E.2d 738 (1979).

Authority of agency

An agency of the state may not seize a person's child and then be the sole judge at how much of the evidence in respect to the agency's conduct it will refuse to divulge: Davis v. Trumbull Cty. Children Serv. Bd., 24 Ohio App. 3d 180, 24 Ohio B. 270, 493 N.E.2d 1011 (1985).

Bindover for prosecution

A two-stage proceeding is required where a motion to transfer a child for prosecution as an adult is filed. The preliminary hearing is presumptively open to the public, while the amenability hearing is presumptively closed: In re D.R., 63 Ohio Misc. 2d 273, 624 N.E.2d 1120 (CP 1993).

Child's testimony via closed circuit TV

In civil abuse, neglect or dependency hearings, allowing a child victim of alleged sexual abuse to testify live via two-way closed circuit television does not violate due process or the confrontation clause of USConst amend VI: In re Burchfield, 51 Ohio App. 3d 148, 555 N.E.2d 325 (1988).

Competency evaluation

The standard enunciated in RC § 2945.37(A) governs competency evaluations of juveniles, so long as it is applied in light of juvenile rather than adult norms: In re Williams, 116 Ohio App. 3d 237, 687 N.E.2d 507 (1997).

Confessions, statements

An eleven-year-old's confession was admissible where his Miranda rights were fully explained to him and his mother and there was no coercive police conduct: In re Goins, 137 Ohio App. 3d 158, 738 N.E.2d 385 (1999).

The juvenile's responses at the scene to an officer were admissible where the questions were based on valid public safety concerns. The juvenile's statements at the interview with the juvenile and his mother were voluntary under the circumstances: In re Travis, 110 Ohio App. 3d 684, 675 N.E.2d 36 (1996).

Alleged waivers by minors of their Miranda rights must be scrutinized closely since the validity of the waiver is affected by the factors of age, emotional stability and mental capacity: In re Smalley, 62 Ohio App. 3d 435, 575 N.E.2d 1198 (1989).

Consent to permanent surrender of rights

An agreement by a parent with the welfare department for permanent surrender of a child prior to consent of the juvenile court is not only revocable by the parent prior to consent of the juvenile court, but such revocation also operates to dissolve the offer to surrender: In re Williams, 7 Ohio App. 3d 324, 7 Ohio B. 421, 455 N.E.2d 1027 (1982).

Construction with other laws

Revised Code § 2151.41.3 does not provide the only method of obtaining permanent custody. RC § 2151.35 also allows the court to grant the agency permanent custody on the initial complaint of the agency. A complaint seeking shelter care pending adjudication allows the agency to subsequently file an amended complaint seeking permanent custody and the amended complaint will relate back as though the agency had initially sought permanent custody as allowed by RC § 2151.35: In re Massengill, 76 Ohio App. 3d 220, 601 N.E.2d 206 (1991).

Revised Code § 3109.04, which permits the court to allow the choice of a child of fourteen years of age or more to determine with which parent he will live, is applicable to a proceeding for change of custody under the juvenile court act: In re Smelser, 22 Ohio Misc. 41, 51 Ohio Op. 2d 31, 257 N.E.2d 769 (JC 1969).

Death of child

Court of common pleas, juvenile division, erred when it determined that the court lacked jurisdiction to adjudicate the issue of abuse when the child was deceased; the technicality of death did not rob children of statutory protection as the statutory protections afforded siblings extended to afterborn children. In re Darling, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 6640, 2003 Ohio 7184, (2003).

Delinquency

Juvenile court's determination that defendant, a juvenile, was a delinquent pursuant to RC § 2151.35(A) and Ohio R. Juv. P. 29(E)(4) for committing a robbery, in violation of RC § 2911.02(A)(2), was not against the manifest weight of the evidence, as the identification of defendant as the perpetrator was supported by testimony from the victim which was deemed reliable, and there was sufficient evidence that money was taken from the victim's pocket during the criminal incident. In re Lower, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1581, 2007 Ohio 1735, (Apr. 5, 2007).

In a delinquency proceeding, a trial judge had to find, based on the evidence produced at an adjudicatory hearing, whether the State proved delinquency beyond a reasonable doubt, under RC § 2151.35(A) and Ohio R. Juv. P. 29(E), so it was error for him to consider, in a rape trial, comments made by his wife about feminine hygiene. In re K.B., — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1501, 2007 Ohio 1647, (Apr. 9, 2007).

Where the State initiated formal proceedings against a juvenile who was charged with being a delinquent under RC § 2151.35(A) due to his alleged commission of multiple criminal offenses, the trial court erred in addressing the matter informally under Ohio R. Juv. P. 9, as it was not appropriate in the circumstances. As the juvenile's dismissal motion was only based on his alleged lack of competency to communicate effectively with his counsel, and not on any issues regarding his culpability or his ability to have formed the requisite intent, the trial court's dismissal upon a determination that the State would be unable to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the juvenile had the requisite intent to have committed any of the offenses was error because no evidence on that issue had been submitted. In re Kovalchik, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5987, 2006 Ohio 6049, (2006).

Upon a determination during reviewing hearings held pursuant to RC § 2151.417 and Ohio R. Juv. P. 36(A) that a juvenile was not benefiting from a residential treatment program that he was originally committed to upon being declared a delinquent pursuant to RC § 2151.35(A)(1) and that he was acting out, a juvenile court's placement of the juvenile with the Department of Youth Services was not error pursuant to RC § 2151.354(5) and (6); the juvenile was not amenable to treatment or rehabilitation due to his conduct at the residential treatment facility. In re D.B., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2738, 2006 Ohio 2891, (2006).

Defendant juvenile's adjudication of delinquency for the act of arson (RC § 2909.02(A)) was against the manifest weight of the evidence as the State failed to prove that defendant knowingly (RC § 2901.22(B)) started or accelerated the fire. The conclusion was based on the improbability of the timeline for the sequence of events that the State presented; the illogical conclusions of the State's expert testimony; and statements and omissions by defendant's stepmother, which logically could only have been construed to support defendant's contention that the fire was accidental. In re Horton, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3249, 2005 Ohio 3502, (2005).

Where a juvenile charged with violating RC § 2913.02 (theft) is tried by a referee, and the referee intervenes on behalf of the prosecution to help it prove the enhancement portion of the charge, and where the referee then sua sponte declares a mistrial based upon her own intervention, with a retrial to follow, the juvenile cannot be retried on the enhanced "felony," i.e., the juvenile may only be retried on the underlying petit theft charge: In re Williams, 31 Ohio App. 3d 241, 31 Ohio B. 525, 510 N.E.2d 832 (1986).

The due process clause protects a juvenile against conviction except upon proof beyond a reasonable doubt of every fact necessary to constitute the crime with which he is charged: In re Winship, 397 U.S. 358, 90 S. Ct. 1068, 25 L. Ed. 2d 368 (1970).

Dependent child

Finding that the child was dependent was not against the manifest weight of the evidence because the mother suffered from a mental condition rendering her unable to adequately care for her son; she suffered from delusions in the form of hallucinations. She testified that she saw spirits and believed that people could be possessed by them, that the spirits could hurt her son by, for example, entering a body and slapping him or throwing things at him, and that, if a spirit possessed her son, her boyfriend would help her drive the spirit out of his body and that there would be some pain associated with the procedure. In re Anderson, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1159, 2007 Ohio 1233, (Mar. 15, 2007).

Clear and convincing evidence, as required by RC

Clear and convincing evidence pursuant to RC § 2151.35 and Ohio R. Juv. P. 29(E)(4) supported a trial court's determination that a child was dependent pursuant to RC § 2151.04(C), as she was diagnosed with mental health issues, she had homicidal and suicidal tendencies, and had run away from home to avoid auditory hallucinations telling her to kill herself and her family; the parents' conduct adversely impacted the child and the severity of her condition, and it created a risk to her safety. In re E. R., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4745, 2006 Ohio 4816, (2006).

Finding that the children were dependent under RC § 2151.04(D) was supported by clear and convincing evidence, pursuant to RC § 2151.35(A), because the father punched the mother with a closed fist and threw her down the stairs, the mother told a police officer that the father physically abused her several times a month, and the evidence showed that the mother still had some level of relationship and interaction with the father, which in the past had led inevitably to alcohol usage and domestic violence, causing the removal of their other children from their custody. The same economic and home environment issues that imperiled the children's siblings were putting the children at issue in danger as well. In re G.S., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2389, 2006 Ohio 2530, (2006).

Based on prior adjudications of abuse of a child's siblings and a continued threat to the child's safety, the child was properly deemed dependent under RC §§ 2151.04(D), 2151.35(A). Transfer to the Cherokee Nation pursuant to 25 U.S.C.S. § 1911(B), 1914 was not required where the Cherokee Nation merely asked for continued notification and the right to participate. In re Hortsmann, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2091, 2005 Ohio 2172, (2005).

Where a county children service agency filed a dependency complaint, and a dispositional hearing was held by a magistrate within 90 days thereof, the time requirements of Ohio R. Juv. P. 34(A) and RC § 2151.35(B)(1) were met. The mother's claim on appeal that she did not present evidence at the hearing was waived where she stipulated to her daughters' dispositions, and she did not object to her son's disposition, nor did she attempt to present witnesses, and the magistrate had the right to conduct an informal hearing, pursuant to § 2151.35(A)(1) and Ohio R. Juv. P. 27(A). In re Ohm, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3245, 2005 Ohio 3500, (2005).

Because the trial court, before accepting the parents' admissions that their children were dependent, did not address them to ensure that they understood the nature of the allegations or the consequences of the admissions as required by Ohio R. Juv. P. 29(A), it committed plain error in finding the children to be dependent based on those admissions. In re Elliott, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2461, 2004 Ohio 2770, (2004).

Clear and convincing evidence supported the juvenile court's finding that the first and second daughters of the mother were dependent children whose best interests were fulfilled by taking custody of them from the mother and placing them with the mother's parents, as the evidence showed the mother had harmed the first daughter in the past and had thoughts of doing more harm to the first daughter in the future. In re Hauenstein, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2550, 2004 Ohio 2915, (2004).

Where the mother had few financial resources, had been unable to find employment, did not get routine medical treatment for her children, depended upon others for her own maintenance and was on the verge of losing her residence, and psychological tests indicated a lack of efficacy and a lack of independence, there was sufficient evidence presented to the trial court from which it could find by clear and convincing evidence that the minor child was a dependent child. In re Barker, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5758, 2003 Ohio 6406, (2003).

The court found that a child was a dependent child as a result of the method by which parent and live-in companion administered corporal punishment. In re Jandrew, 1997 Ohio App. LEXIS 5999 (4th Dist. 1997).

The fact of dependency must be proved by clear and convincing evidence. In re Bishop, 36 Ohio App. 3d 123, 521 N.E.2d 838 (1987).

The fact of dependency must be proven by clear and convincing evidence (RC § 2151.35, applied): In re Green, 18 Ohio App. 3d 43, 18 Ohio B. 155, 480 N.E.2d 492 (1984).

The fact of dependency must be proved by clear and convincing evidence. RC § 2151.35: In re Bibb, 70 Ohio App. 2d 117, 24 Ohio Op. 3d 159, 435 N.E.2d 96 (1980).

Due process

Where a juvenile has received the following essentials of due process and fair treatment, (1) written notice of the specific charge or factual allegations, given to the juvenile and his parents or guardian sufficiently in advance of the hearing to permit preparation; (2) notification to the juvenile and his parents of the juvenile's right to be represented by counsel retained by them, or, if they are unable to afford counsel, that counsel will be appointed to represent the juvenile; (3) application of the constitutional privileges against self-incrimination; and (4), absent a valid confession, a determination of delinquency and an order of commitment based only on sworn testimony subjected to the opportunity for cross-examination in accordance with constitutional requirements, such juvenile has not been deprived of due process under either the Constitution of the United States or the Constitution of the state of Ohio: In re Baker, 18 Ohio App. 2d 276, 47 Ohio Op. 2d 411, 248 N.E.2d 620 (1969).

In the absence of a valid confession, a juvenile can be committed only upon sworn testimony subject to cross-examination. In re Gault, 387 U.S. 1, 87 S. Ct. 1428, 18 L. Ed. 2d 527 (1967).

Due process in a juvenile proceeding must include adequate written notice; advice as to the right to counsel, retained or appointed; confrontation and cross-examination of witnesses; and the privilege against self-incrimination. In re Gault, 387 U.S. 1, 87 S. Ct. 1428, 18 L. Ed. 2d 527 (1967).

Evidence generally

Where the hearsay evidence concerned only the issue of abuse and the court found in the parents' favor on that issue, its admission into evidence was not prejudicial. The prohibition concerning the introduction of "dispositional" evidence into adjudicatory proceedings is not so much the nature of the evidence as for what purpose it is admitted: In re S., 102 Ohio App. 3d 338, 657 N.E.2d 307 (1995).

Exclusion of general public, media

When appellant, a juvenile, moved a trial court to exclude the press, close the courtroom, order non-disclosure of information from the police to the press, and non-disclosure of personal information of the juvenile parties to appellant's trial for gross sexual imposition and unlawful restraint, it was not an abuse of discretion, under Ohio R. Juv. P. 27 and RC § 2151.35, for the trial court to deny the motion because it properly considered potential harm to appellant, the benefits of public access, and ordered a reasonable alternative when it ordered that the media could not disclose the identities of appellant or his parents and barred the use of video or photographs of appellant. In re K.J.B., — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1533, 2007 Ohio 1677, (Apr. 9, 2007).

Prohibition may be granted to prevent a judge from closing juvenile court proceedings without conducting an evidentiary hearing and without making the required findings. When a party requests that a juvenile court proceeding be closed, but the court fails to hold an appropriate evidentiary hearing and make the required findings before closing the proceeding, a person or entity successfully challenging that practice is not automatically entitled to release of the transcript of the improperly closed proceeding. Instead, the person or entity challenging the improper closure is entitled to a writ of mandamus to compel the judge to conduct the closure hearing that should have been held in order to determine if release of the transcript is warranted. Mandamus may be granted to compel a juvenile court to make publicly available notice of (1) motions to close proceedings, (2) when hearings on closure motions will be held, and (3) court rulings on closure motions: State ex rel. Plain Dealer Publ. Co. v. Floyd, 111 Ohio St. 3d 56, 855 N.E.2d 35, 2006 Ohio 4437, (2006).

The court abused its discretion by closing a detention hearing to the media without a motion for closure and without holding a hearing or making the required findings: State ex rel. Dispatch Printing Co. v. Loudon, 91 Ohio St. 3d 61, 741 N.E.2d 517, 2001 Ohio 268, (2001).

The public does not have a qualified constitutional right of access to juvenile delinquency proceedings. Such proceedings are not presumed open or presumed closed. The burden of proof is on a party seeking closure: State ex rel. Plain Dealer Publ'g Co. v. Geauga County Court of Common Pleas, 90 Ohio St. 3d 79, 734 N.E.2d 1214, 2000 Ohio 35, (2000).

A juvenile court should not summarily deny closure of a hearing where no party objects to closure and evidence is likely to be presented that will be psychologically damaging to an abused child if made public: In re Joanne M., 103 Ohio App. 3d 447, 659 N.E.2d 864 (1995).

Unless summarily denied, a motion of a party to a juvenile court proceeding ("proceeding") requesting that the proceeding be closed to the press and public, requires the juvenile court to conduct an evidentiary hearing ("closure hearing") to determine whether closure of the proceeding is warranted. Closure of the proceeding may be warranted upon a showing by the juvenile court that it has followed the standards set forth in In re T.R. (1990), 52 OS3d 6, 556 NE2d 439, paragraph three of the syllabus, and that there are no reasonable alternatives to closure. When a party to a juvenile court proceeding asserts that a closure hearing itself should be closed, the juvenile court must conduct an in camera inspection to determine if closure of the closure hearing is appropriate. Any party urging the closure of a proceeding must present to the juvenile court, for its in camera inspection, a written or recorded summary of any testimony sought to be excluded from the public domain. Such summary must contain sufficient information for the juvenile court to make an informed decision, pursuant to the standards set forth in T.R., as to whether any or all of the testimony sought to be excluded from public disclosure should be excluded: State ex rel. Dispatch Printing Co. v. Lias, 68 Ohio St. 3d 497, 628 N.E.2d 1368, 1994 Ohio 335, (1994).

The public has an interest in access to delinquency proceedings which corresponds to the public's interest in criminal matters. However, the public's right of access must be weighed against the unique confidentiality concerns of a juvenile court. Any limitations on access must be narrowly drawn: In re N.H., 63 Ohio Misc. 2d 285, 626 N.E.2d 697 (CP 1992).

Proceedings in juvenile court to determine if a child is abused, neglected, or dependent, or to determine custody of a minor child, are neither presumptively open nor presumptively closed to the public. The juvenile court may restrict public access to these proceedings pursuant to JuvR 27 and RC § 2151.35 if the court finds, after hearing evidence and argument on the issue, (1) that there exists a reasonable and substantial basis for believing that public access could harm the child or endanger the fairness of the adjudication, and (2) the potential for harm outweighs the benefits of public access: In re T.R., 52 Ohio St. 3d 6, 556 N.E.2d 439 (1990).

Prohibition will not issue to require the court to exclude the media and the public from a hearing on transfer of jurisdiction: State ex rel. Fyffe v. Pierce, 40 Ohio St. 3d 8, 531 N.E.2d 673 (1988).

Hearings generally

Although the time requirements under RC §§ 2151.28(A)(2), (B)(3), and 2151.35(B)(1) were not complied with in holding adjudicatory and dispositional hearings regarding a child's dependency and an award of temporary custody to her grandmother and then her father, any objection thereto was waived by the mother's failure to raise the issue in a timely manner and by her continued participation in the proceedings. In re Brown, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3090, 2006 Ohio 3189, (2006).

Department of Children and Family Services, the minor child's aunt, and the child's foster parents were entitled to a dispositional hearing, on their motion to modify a prior custody order, and the trial court was required to provide notice to the guardian ad litem of said motion; although the burden rested with the movants to set forth the evidence in support of their motion, and no error could be attributed to the trial court for the movants failing to meet this burden, the movants should not have been precluded from presenting such evidence, if desired. In re G.R., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 886, 2004 Ohio 999, (2004).

Where neither attorney objected to the combining of the adjudicatory and dispositional hearings by the judge, any claimed error concerning bifurcation was waived: In re Williams, 2000 Ohio App. LEXIS 455 (8th Dist. 2000).

Juvenile Rule 37 and RC § 2151.35 state that a juvenile hearing may, but need not be, held in an informal manner: In re Corcoran, 68 Ohio App. 3d 213, 587 N.E.2d 957 (1990).

The authority granted the court by this section to "conduct its hearings in an informal manner" does not abrogate the right of a minor defendant to a separate trial: In re Allen, 10 Ohio App. 2d 120, 39 Ohio Op. 2d 200, 226 N.E.2d 135 (1967).

Hearsay

There was no error in permitting the testimony of the social worker regarding the removal of the child in the permanent custody proceeding because RC § 2151.35(B)(2)(b) permitted the trial court to admit any evidence that was material and relevant. Even if hearsay had been barred, under either exception to hearsay, Ohio R. Evid. 803(6) (business records) or Ohio R. Evid. 803(8) (public records), the social worker's testimony concerning statements made during the course of the agency's investigation were admissible since the contents of her file, including the statement by the cousin, had been compiled as part of the social worker's activities. In re Z.T., 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 759, 2007 Ohio 827, (2007).

Revised Code § 2151.35(F) is inconsistent with Article VIII of the Ohio Rules of Evidence and, as such, has no force or effect: In re Coy, 67 Ohio St. 3d 215, 616 N.E.2d 1105, 1993 Ohio 202, (1993).

In a dependency proceeding, since a report containing social history information is hearsay, it may be used to clarify allegations in the complaint; however, it may not be used as proof or evidence of those allegations: Davis v. Trumbull Cty. Children Serv. Bd., 24 Ohio App. 3d 180, 24 Ohio B. 270, 493 N.E.2d 1011 (1985).

Indigency

An indigent parent has a right to a transcript of proceedings for purposes of appealing from a state-instituted permanent custody action: State ex rel. Howard v. Ferreri, 70 Ohio St. 3d 587, 639 N.E.2d 1189 (1994).

Oath of witness

Although a juvenile court may conduct a hearing in an informal manner, witnesses should be placed under oath before testifying: In re Ramsey, 102 Ohio App. 3d 168, 656 N.E.2d 1311 (1995).

Polygraph

Where the parties stipulated to the admissibility of polygraph results, the magistrate was bound to consider them: In re Burton S., 136 Ohio App. 3d 386, 736 N.E.2d 928 (1999).

Privileges

In an action seeking a determination of dependency and neglect and an order of permanent custody of a child, the statutes of Ohio make no exception to the privilege attaching to the communications between psychiatrist and patient, psychologist and patient (or client), and to the privilege, if it exists, between social workers employed in the office of the psychiatrist and psychologist and client: In re Decker, 20 Ohio App. 3d 203, 20 Ohio B. 248, 485 N.E.2d 751 (1984).

Protective supervision order

There was no indication the trial court requested the protective supervision order (PSO) in contemplation of a dispositional hearing because the plain language of the magistrate's decision indicated that rather than being submitted for dispositional issues, the PSO was being considered as an alternative to a contested trial. Furthermore, while the letter from the doctor was attached to the PSO and contained the medical reasoning behind his opinion as to why he did not believe that the children being at home with their biological parents was in their best interest, the presence of language alone did not lead to the inevitable conclusion that the magistrate considered the letter for the purpose of disposition. In re Vecchia, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6035, 2006 Ohio 6095, (2006).

Records

Revised Code § 1347.04 does not operate to exempt juvenile courts from the provisions of RC Chapter 1347, with respect to the courts' records of matters pertaining to juveniles; however, if a juvenile court has any personal information systems which are comprised of investigatory material compiled for law enforcement purposes, such systems are exempt from RC Chapter 1347, under RC § 1347.04(A)(1)(e). Under RC § 1347.08, a juvenile court must permit a juvenile or duly-authorized attorney who represents the juvenile to inspect court records pertaining to the juvenile unless the records are exempted under RC § 1347.04(A)(1)(e) or 1347.08(C) or (E)(2). Under JuvR 37(B), the records may not, however, be put to any public use except in the course of an appeal or as authorized by order of the court: OAG No. 84-077 (1984).

Recusal of judge

The judge was not required to recuse himself based on knowledge gained in presiding over the disposition of a co-defendant: In re Daniel E., 122 Ohio App. 3d 139, 701 N.E.2d 408 (1997).

Temporary custody to agency

A prospective finding of dependency is appropriate where children have not been in the custody of the mother, but circumstances demonstrate that to allow the mother to have custody of her children would threaten their health and safety. A court is justified in awarding temporary custody to the children services board where the father has already been found to have abused the children and the mother, who is contesting the award, is planning a sham separation in order to gain custody and flee the jurisdiction: In re Pieper, 85 Ohio App. 3d 318, 619 N.E.2d 1059 (1993).

In an action seeking temporary custody of a child who is alleged to be a "dependent child" pursuant to RC § 2151.04(C), the standard of proof in the adjudicatory portion of the proceedings is by clear and convincing evidence and the standard of proof in the dispositional portion of the proceedings is by a preponderance of the evidence (RC § 2151.35 and JuvR 29[E][4], applied): In re Willmann, 24 Ohio App. 3d 191, 24 Ohio B. 313, 493 N.E.2d 1380 (1986).

Termination of parental rights

Where no notices of the juvenile court's judgment granting permanent custody of children to an agency were sent to either parent, contrary to Ohio R. Civ. P. 58(B), their appeal was deemed timely under Ohio R. App. P. 4(A), even though filed more than 30 days after the judgment and even though they had actual knowledge of the judgment. In re Elliott, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2461, 2004 Ohio 2770, (2004).

Pursuant to RC § 2151.414(B)(1) and (2), a juvenile court must find clear and convincing evidence of both prongs of a two-prong test prior to terminating parental rights; in an action to terminate parental rights, the trial court found in a RC § 2151.35 hearing that the first prong of a permanent custody test was satisfied because a minor child had been in county custody for more than 12 of the 24 months prior to the hearing, the second prong was satisfied because it was in the best interest of the child as the father had failed to foster a positive relationship with his daughter. In re T. S., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 13, 2004 Ohio 32, (2004).

In a proceeding for termination of parental rights, the parent should have been permitted to rebut the testimony of the guardian ad litem. Public agencies should assist a parent in implementing a reunification plan: In re Sadiku, 139 Ohio App. 3d 263, 743 N.E.2d 507 (2000).

The right of an incarcerated parent to attend a permanent custody hearing is within the sound discretion of the court: State ex rel. Vanderlaan v. Pollex, 96 Ohio App. 3d 235, 644 N.E.2d 1073 (1994).

Pursuant to OConst art IV, § 5(B), JuvR 2(1) prevails over RC § 2151.35, making a hearing under RC § 2151.41.4 an adjudicatory hearing. Hearsay is ordinarily inadmissible in an adjudicatory proceeding, but the exception provided in RC § 2151.35(F) is applicable to RC § 2151.41.4: In re Brofford, 83 Ohio App. 3d 869, 615 N.E.2d 1120 (1992).

In proceedings where parental rights are subject to termination, both the Juvenile Rules and the Revised Code prescribe that such proceedings be bifurcated into separate adjudicatory and dispositional hearings (RC § 2151.35 and JuvR 29 and 34, construed and applied): In re Baby Girl Baxter, 17 Ohio St. 3d 229, 17 Ohio B. 469, 479 N.E.2d 257 (1985).

Time limits

Where the continuances granted by the trial court in the dependency case caused the temporary custody hearing to be pushed beyond the 90-day period for such a hearing under RC § 2151.28(B)(3) and RC § 2151.35(B)(1), the mother waived the statutory limitations period claim by failing to raise the claim before the trial court, and the trial court was within its discretion in granting continuances pursuant to Ohio R. Juv. P. 23. In re Jessica M. B., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 926, 2004 Ohio 1040, (2004).

Trial court did not fail to conduct the permanent custody dispositional hearing within 30 days of the adjudication hearing as required by Ohio R. Juv. P. 34 because the father implicitly waived his right to invoke the statute to have the case dismissed for exceeding the statutory time limits. The father participated in the scheduling of the dispositional hearing, failed to object when the hearing was continued, and filed his own motion to continue the dispositional hearing. In re Burton, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 3652, 2004 Ohio 4021, (2004), appeal denied by 103 Ohio St. 3d 1495, 2004 Ohio 5605, 816 N.E.2d 1081, 2004 Ohio LEXIS 2584 (2004).

Revised Code § 2151.35 requires a juvenile court to dismiss without prejudice, on its own motion, when it cannot hold a timely dispositional hearing, i.e., within ninety days of the filing of a complaint: In re Olah, 142 Ohio App. 3d 176, 754 N.E.2d 1271 (2000).

The seven-day time limit set forth in RC § 2151.35(B)(3) is directory, not mandatory, and failure to comply with it will not deprive a court of jurisdiction: In re Davis, 84 Ohio St. 3d 520, 705 N.E.2d 1219, 1999 Ohio 419, (1999).

The judgment must be reversed where, due to the inordinate delay between the filing of the motion for permanent custody and the issuance of the judgment, the court lost its authority to issue an order terminating parental rights: In re Omosun Children, 106 Ohio App. 3d 813, 667 N.E.2d 431 (1995).

Where the dispositional hearing was scheduled and held within ninety days, its completion beyond that time was proper and the court was not deprived of jurisdiction: In re Brown, 96 Ohio App. 3d 306, 644 N.E.2d 1117 (1994).

Revised Code § 2151.35(B)(1) requires the dispositional hearing to commence no more than thirty days after the adjudication hearing has concluded and within 90 days after the complaint was filed. Continuances may be granted for good cause shown: In re Dixon, 1992 Ohio App. LEXIS 5175 (6th Dist. 1992).

Motions for a continuance waived the 90-day limit under RC § 2151.35(B)(1): In re Kutzli, 71 Ohio App. 3d 843, 595 N.E.2d 1026 (1991).

The seven-day period for entry of judgment set forth in RC § 2151.35(B)(3) and JuvR 34(C) is mandatory. The proper remedy for the court's failure to comply is to file a writ of procedendo in the court of appeals: In re Fleming, 76 Ohio App. 3d 30, 600 N.E.2d 1112 (1991).

The seven-day period under RC § 2151.35(B)(3) and JuvR 34(C) for entry of final judgment is mandatory. However, non-compliance does not deprive the court of jurisdiction: In re Galloway, 77 Ohio App. 3d 61, 601 N.E.2d 83 (1991).

Transcript

Pursuant to RC § 2151.35(A), a transcript is not required unless requested: In re East, 105 Ohio App. 3d 221, 663 N.E.2d 983 (1995).

In cases not involving permanent custody, the court is required to make a transcript of oral proceedings only on the request of a party: In re Wright, 88 Ohio App. 3d 539, 624 N.E.2d 347 (1993).

Voluntary placement with relatives

Children were not dependent or neglected where the parent with custody voluntarily placed them with relatives, pursuant to an informal agreement, prior to the involvement of DJFS, and the children were receiving proper care from the relatives: In re Stoll, 165 Ohio App. 3d 226, 845 N.E.2d 581, 2006 Ohio 346, (2006).

[§ 2151.35.1] § 2151.351 Repealed, 146 v H 265, § 2 [139 v H 440]. Eff 3-3-97.

This section concerned confinement of non-delinquent children. See now RC §§ 2151.33.1, 2151.35.3 and 2151.35.4.

A child, the child's parents or custodian, or any other person in loco parentis of the child is entitled to representation by legal counsel at all stages of the proceedings under this chapter or Chapter 2152. of the Revised Code. If, as an indigent person, a party is unable to employ counsel, the party is entitled to have counsel provided for the person pursuant to Chapter 120. of the Revised Code except in civil matters in which the juvenile court is exercising jurisdiction pursuant to division (A)(2), (3), (9), (10), (11), (12), or (13); (B)(2), (3), (4), (5), or (6); (C); (D); or (F)(1) or (2) of section 2151.23 of the Revised Code. If a party appears without counsel, the court shall ascertain whether the party knows of the party's right to counsel and of the party's right to be provided with counsel if the party is an indigent person. The court may continue the case to enable a party to obtain counsel, to be represented by the county public defender or the joint county public defender, or to be appointed counsel upon request pursuant to Chapter 120. of the Revised Code. Counsel must be provided for a child not represented by the child's parent, guardian, or custodian. If the interests of two or more such parties conflict, separate counsel shall be provided for each of them.

Section 2935.14 of the Revised Code applies to any child taken into custody. The parents, custodian, or guardian of a child taken into custody, and any attorney at law representing them or the child, shall be entitled to visit the child at any reasonable time, be present at any hearing involving the child, and be given reasonable notice of the hearing.

Any report or part of a report concerning the child, which is used in the hearing and is pertinent to the hearing, shall for good cause shown be made available to any attorney at law representing the child and to any attorney at law representing the parents, custodian, or guardian of the child, upon written request prior to any hearing involving the child.

Constitutionality

In actions instituted by the state to force the permanent, involuntary termination of parental rights, the United States and Ohio Constitutions' guarantees of due process and equal protection of the law require that indigent parents be provided with counsel and a transcript at public expense for appeals as of right: State ex rel. Heller v. Miller, 61 Ohio St. 2d 6, 15 Ohio Op. 3d 3, 399 N.E.2d 66 (1980).

Generally

Juvenile's constitutional right to counsel was violated where he indicated at the arraignment that he wanted an attorney, but the issue was never raised or considered again in the proceedings: In re R.B., 166 Ohio App. 3d 626, 852 N.E.2d 1219, 2006 Ohio 264, (2006).

Father's contention that the trial court erred in failing to appoint counsel for his children to represent them in a permanent custody proceeding was without merit. The father waived his right to complain of the alleged error on appeal by his failure to raise the issue before the trial court, and even so, the record indicated that the trial court appointed an individual as both guardian ad litem and counsel for all three children. In re Salsberry, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3191, 2006 Ohio 3273, (2006).

Based on Ohio R. Juv. P. 4(A) and (B), as well as RC §§ 2151.281(H) and 2151.352, a trial court did not err in appointing a licensed attorney to represent 10 children in a parental rights termination proceeding as both their legal counsel and their guardian ad litem, as none of the children "repeatedly expressed a desire" to remain with the parents, and there was no apparent or actual conflict shown in the attorney's dual capacity role. In re Hilyard, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1809, 2006 Ohio 1976, (2006).

When the father of appellant, a juvenile, participated in appellant's adjudicatory hearing before the juvenile court, this did not obviate appellant's right to counsel under a sentence of RC § 2151.352, providing that counsel had to be provided for a child not represented by the child's parent, guardian, or custodian, because (1) no statute could override appellant's constitutional right to counsel, (2) if this provision were so interpreted, it would conflict with other provisions of § 2151.352 giving appellant the right to counsel at all stages of the proceedings and requiring a court to ascertain if appellant knew of his right to counsel and his right to be provided with counsel if he was indigent. In re R.B., 166 Ohio App. 3d 626, 852 N.E.2d 1219, 2006 Ohio 264, (2006).

When, at the arraignment of appellant, a juvenile, he responded affirmatively to a question asking if he wanted counsel, and the issue was not further discussed throughout his proceedings before the trial court, his constitutional right to counsel, also provided in RC § 2151.352 and Ohio R. Juv. P. 29(B)(3), was violated, as it could not be inferred from the record that appellant, at any time, knowingly and intelligently waived his right to counsel. In re R.B., 166 Ohio App. 3d 626, 852 N.E.2d 1219, 2006 Ohio 264, (2006).

With respect to the appointment of independent counsel since the children's wishes appeared to be in conflict with the attorney/guardian ad litem's recommendation, the mother had the opportunity at the permanent custody hearing to timely assert the children's rights, and therefore her derivative rights, but she chose not to. In re T.E., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 204, 2006 Ohio 254, (2006).

Although the mother was present at the show cause hearing, she did not represent or advise the juvenile. As a victim, she may have had interests adverse to the juvenile. The juvenile did not voluntarily waive the right to counsel. In re William B., 163 Ohio App. 3d 201, 837 N.E.2d 414, 2005 Ohio 4428, (2005).

There was no error in the failure to appoint an attorney to represent the mother in the adjudicatory phase of the dependency proceeding because the mother was advised of her right to request counsel but failed to make any such request. In re T.V., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3884, 2005 Ohio 4280, (2005).

Where one of four children expressed a desire to live with her father, while the other three were in favor of termination of parental rights, that child was entitled to separate counsel. In re Sherman, 162 Ohio App. 3d 73, 832 N.E.2d 797, 2005 Ohio 3444, (2005), vacated by, substituted opinion at 2005 Ohio 5888, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 5312 (Ohio Ct. App., Hancock County Nov. 7, 2005).

Trial court did not err in granting a grandmother's appointed counsel's motion for leave to withdraw in a parental rights termination proceeding, as the grandmother was a party to the action, pursuant to Ohio R. Juv. P. 2(Y), and she was accordingly entitled to be represented by counsel, but she was not entitled to appointed counsel under RC § 2151.352; Ohio R. Juv. P. 4(A) was not applicable to the circumstances, as the right to counsel emanated from RC § 2151.352. In re Denisha Michelle T., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 1041, 2005 Ohio 1032, (2005).

Pursuant to RC § 2151.352 and Ohio R. Juv. P. 4(F), the trial court committed plain error in allowing the father's counsel to withdraw her representation immediately prior to the dispositional hearing regarding the father's parental rights because the father did not waive his right to counsel. The trial court could not reasonably have concluded that the failure of counsel's communication with the father, whether reasonable or not, resulted in the inability of counsel to ascertain the father's wishes because counsel, herself, informed the trial court that it was the father's desire to have custody of the child. In re Tyler Jo S., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 1214, 2005 Ohio 1225, (2005).

Although neither the court nor the guardian ad litem ever had any direct interaction with the two children in a proceeding by a children's services agency seeking permanent custody, the court properly considered their wishes pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D) by being made aware of the older child's desire to be placed with his mother, through testimony of the mother and a caseworker, and accordingly, any error on that issue was deemed harmless. The Ohio Supreme Court had previously relied on its prior decisions, RC § 2151.352, and Ohio R. Juv. P. 4(A) and 2(Y) in determining that a child who is the subject of a juvenile court proceeding to terminate parental rights is a party to that proceeding and is entitled to independent counsel in certain circumstances. In re Lane, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2486, 2004 Ohio 2798, (2004).

There was no evidence regarding the son's wishes or level of maturity on which the juvenile court could have made any decision regarding the appointment of counsel; the juvenile court did not appoint counsel for the children, did not expressly appoint the guardian ad litem to act as their counsel, and did not make any determination as to whether any of the children lacked the maturity to benefit from the appointment of counsel. In re Ridenour, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1703, 2004 Ohio 1958, (2004).

Trial court was not obligated to ascertain whether the mother knew of her right to counsel because no hearing was held on the initial date due to a continuance and the mother failed to appear for the actual permanent custody hearing, and since there was no indication the mother ever demonstrated a desire to have counsel appointed, the trial court could not engage in the dialogue set forth in former RC § 2151.352. In re Williams, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 592, 2004 Ohio 678, (2004).

Individual's right to counsel in juvenile court proceedings not involving termination of parental rights is statutory, and is not derived from the United States or Ohio Constitutions. In re Holt, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4978, 2003 Ohio 5580, (2003).

Juvenile court denied the mother due process in a custody matter by receiving a report of counsel appointed for her child without giving her a chance to review and challenge it, and erred by failing to hold a new permanent custody hearing with the participation of counsel for the child. In re Williams, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3246, 2003 Ohio 3550, (2003), affirmed by 101 Ohio St. 3d 398, 2004 Ohio 1500, 805 N.E.2d 1110, 2004 Ohio LEXIS 705 (2004).

An order terminating parental rights may be reversed where the parents did not have counsel at the dispositional hearing. Permitting counsel for a parent to withdraw at the hearing based on a lack of communication with the parent did not justify the court in proceeding with the hearing. In re Alyssa Nicole C., 153 Ohio App. 3d 10, 790 N.E.2d 803, 2003 Ohio 2673, (2003).

An adjudication proceeding cannot go forward unless the juvenile is represented by counsel or there has been a valid waiver. Delegating the task of hiring counsel to the juvenile is inappropriate. In re Johnston, 142 Ohio App. 3d 314, 755 N.E.2d 457 (2001).

Under RC § 2151.35.2, indigent children, parents, custodians, or other persons in loco parentis are entitled to appointed counsel in all juvenile court proceedings. State ex rel. Asberry v. Payne, 82 Ohio St. 3d 44, 693 N.E.2d 794, 1998 Ohio 596, (1998).

Collectively advising a group of juveniles of their right to consult an attorney and then handing a juvenile a statement of rights form did not satisfy RC § 2151.35.2 and JuvR 29(B). In re Miller, 119 Ohio App. 3d 52, 694 N.E.2d 500 (1997).

The mother was not denied her right to counsel where she was notified of the proceedings, but did not contact the public defender's office until after the children had been adjudicated abused. In re Ramsey, 102 Ohio App. 3d 168, 656 N.E.2d 1311 (1995).

The court did not commit prejudicial error by failing to appoint separate counsel where there was no evidence of a conflict of interest. The parents' counsel did not provide ineffective assistance. In re Brodbeck, 97 Ohio App. 3d 652, 647 N.E.2d 240 (1994).

Neither RC § 2151.35.2 nor JuvR 4 requires appointment of counsel for a natural parent who has notice of the custody proceedings and disavows any interest in obtaining custody. In re Whaley, 86 Ohio App. 3d 304, 620 N.E.2d 954 (1993).

A parent who has executed an invalid surrender of parental rights is entitled to appointed counsel if the parent is indigent. State ex rel. Lunsford v. Buck, 88 Ohio App. 3d 425, 623 N.E.2d 1356 (1993).

The procedures enunciated in Anders v. California (1967), 386 US 738, are applicable to appeals involving the termination of parental rights (Freels v. Hills [6th Cir., 1988], 843 F.2d 958, 961, followed); Morris v. Lucas Cty. Children Serv. Bd., 49 Ohio App. 3d 86, 550 N.E.2d 980 (1989).

When the record fails to establish that the trial court fulfilled its RC § 2151.35.2 duty to advise a juvenile defendant of his right to appointed counsel, if indigent, and that a determination was made on the subject of indigency, if claimed, the juvenile defendant's statutory right to representation of counsel has been violated and his adjudication as a juvenile traffic offender pursuant to RC § 2151.02.1 must be vacated: In re Kriak, 30 Ohio App. 3d 83, 30 Ohio B. 140, 506 N.E.2d 556 (1986).

An indigent child is entitled pursuant to RC § 2151.35.2 and JuvR 4(A) to be represented by the county public defender in all juvenile court proceedings pertaining to a complaint alleging the child to be a juvenile traffic offender, regardless of whether the outcome of the proceeding could result in a loss of liberty, except when the right to counsel is waived or the juvenile court pursuant to RC § 120.16(E) appoints counsel other than the county public defender or allows an indigent child to select his own personal counsel to represent him (1984 OAG No. 84-023, approved and followed): OAG No. 97-040 (1997).

Pursuant to RC § 2151.35.2, a child, his parents, custodian, or other persons in loco parentis, if indigent, is entitled to be represented in all juvenile proceedings by a public defender in accordance with the comprehensive system set forth in RC Chapter 120., regardless of whether the outcome of the proceeding could result in a loss of liberty: OAG No. 84-023 (1984).

There is no provision under the statutes which permits the juvenile court to authorize compensation to attorneys appointed to represent indigents: OAG No. 67-068 (1967).

Juvenile courts have inherent power to appoint counsel for indigents: OAG No. 67-068 (1967).

Applicability

Revised Code § 2151.35.2 applies only to status cases involving delinquency, unruliness, juvenile traffic offenders, dependency, abuse and neglect. There are no statutory or constitutional provisions providing for the appointment of counsel, for an indigent parent, in a companionship action brought pursuant to RC § 3109.12(A): Bloom v. Stevens, 1997 Ohio App. LEXIS 4924 (5th Dist. 1997).

A party who has a right to appointed counsel in a juvenile court action for child support is also entitled to counsel on the issues of custody and visitation: McKinney v. McClure, 102 Ohio App. 3d 165, 656 N.E.2d 1310 (1995).

Child's right to counsel

Trial court erred in failing to determine whether appellant child knowingly and voluntarily waived his right to an attorney. The trial court should have explained the elements and seriousness of the charge against him and should have determined that appellant child was not being coerced or pressured into waiving his right to counsel, addressed his parents to ensure there was no conflict of interest and that the parents also understood the proceedings. In re Mills, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 882, 2007 Ohio 924, (Mar. 5, 2007).

As a juvenile was over the age of 18 years old at the time of his parole-revocation hearing, the requirement that counsel be appointed for him due to the lack of representation by his parent, guardian, or custodian was not applicable. In re Andrew, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 927, 2007 Ohio 1021, (Mar. 9, 2007).

Trial court, at a minimum, was required to interview the child, on the record, to determine if she was of sufficient maturity to benefit from separate counsel in the permanent custody proceeding, but failed to do so. There was a clear conflict because the guardian ad litem recommended to the trial court that the mother's parental rights be terminated but the agency case supervisor for the child testified at the permanent custody hearing that the child ultimately wanted to be with her mom. In re Roque, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6961, 2006 Ohio 7007, (2006).

Trial court did not err in not appointing an attorney to represent a mother's children in a permanent custody proceeding since the statements by the two older children that they loved their mother and missed her did not constitute evidence that they had an affirmative desire to live with their mother on a permanent basis that was in conflict with their guardian ad litem's recommendation that permanent custody be granted to the agency. Moreover, the second oldest son lacked maturity to understand

Trial court erred by failing to appoint the child's guardian ad litem to act as her attorney and did not make any determination as to whether the child possessed the competency and maturity to express her own wishes. However, the error did not require reversal because the child's wishes were evidenced by the guardian ad litem's report and witness testimony and were consistent with the guardian ad litem's recommendation. In re Kangas, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3380, 2006 Ohio 3433, (2006).

Under the circumstances, appointment of counsel for the children in the permanent custody proceeding was not required because the children lacked the necessary maturity to give any credible testimony to the court about their wishes with regard to custody. In re Shrider, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2641, 2006 Ohio 2792, (2006).

Trial court erred by failing to appoint counsel after a possible conflict became known between the child's wishes and the recommendation of the guardian ad litem during the permanent custody hearing and thus, the child was entitled to counsel pursuant to RC § 2151.352, as clarified by Ohio R. Juv. P. 4(A) and Ohio R. Juv. P. 2(Y). An attorney would have been required to provide zealous representation for his client and make every legitimate effort to secure an order allowing the child to have continued contact with her father, which the guardian ad litem could not do and remain consistent with his recommendation. In re H.R., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1472, 2006 Ohio 1595, (2006).

There was no error in failing to commence the permanent custody hearing (RC § 2151.414) anew after counsel was appointed for the children, pursuant to Ohio R. Juv. P. 4 and RC § 2151.352, because the conflict between the guardian ad litem's recommendation and the children's wishes only became apparent after the hearing had commenced; the error was waived since the mother failed to object, pursuant to Ohio R. Juv. P. 40(3)(a)(i); the attorney declined the opportunity to call other witnesses who had testified at the earlier hearing, with full knowledge of what those witnesses had said, because the attorney was provided a transcript of that earlier hearing; and after the attorney was appointed to represent the children, the mother could no longer claim standing to object that the children's rights in the subsequent proceedings were violated. In re R.E., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1145, 2006 Ohio 1256, (2006).

Trial court did not err in failing to appoint counsel for three children who were the subject of a termination of parental rights proceeding where: (1) the children were older and of a higher maturity level, (2) the guardian ad litem's (GAL) recommendation did not conflict with the wishes of the children to not be returned to the mother's care, (3) the children's counselors also indicated that the children did not want to return to the mother, and (4) the juvenile court had an in-camera interview with the children and their statements in that interview conformed to the statements made by the GAL and the counselors. In re Nelson, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 5926, 2005 Ohio 6600, (2005).

Without any evidence of the children's wishes before it (in the permanent custody hearing pursuant to RC § 2151.414), the trial court did not make, and could not have made, the meaningful determination required as to whether the children needed separate counsel, pursuant to RC § 2151.352, as clarified by Ohio R. Juv. P. 4(A) and Ohio R. Juv. P. 2(Y). The guardian ad litem's report, which was filed during the hearing, did not take a position on what the best interest of the children was. In re T.V., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3884, 2005 Ohio 4280, (2005).

Where a trial court appointed a guardian ad litem to protect the interests of a 29-month-old child in a parental rights termination proceeding, there was no showing that it was error for the trial court to have failed to appoint independent counsel for the child, pursuant to RC §§ 2151.281(B) and 2151.352, as there was no evidence that the guardian's role to protect the interests of the child conflicted with the child's interests. The father lacked standing to raise such an error on appeal, as there was no showing that the child's interests were aligned with those of the father. In re M.W., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 1273, 2005 Ohio 1302, (2005), criticized by In re A.S., 163 Ohio App. 3d 647, 2005 Ohio 5309, 839 N.E.2d 972, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 4830 (Ohio Ct. App., Summit County 2005), criticized by In re A.B., 2005 Ohio 4936, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 4466 (Ohio Ct. App., Summit County Sept. 21, 2005).

There was no error in the trial court's decision not to inquire further into appointment of separate counsel for the children in the permanent custody proceeding, because no conflict existed between the recommendation of the guardian ad litem and the wishes of the children; moreover, the guardian ad litem was able to ascertain the wishes of the children through the lay guardian. In re Miller, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 900, 2005 Ohio 897, (2005).

Holding in In re Williams may be applied retroactively. The trial court should have conducted an investigation into whether children who were the subject of a proceeding to terminate parental rights were entitled to counsel. The mother's failure to raise the issue in the trial court did not waive the children's rights: In re Moore, 158 Ohio App. 3d 679, 821 N.E.2d 1039, 2004 Ohio 4544, (2004).

Pursuant to RC § 2151.352, as clarified by JuvR 4(A) and JuvR 2(Y), a child who is the subject of a juvenile court proceeding to terminate parental rights is a party to that proceeding and, therefore, is entitled to independent counsel in certain circumstances: In re Williams, 101 Ohio St. 3d 398, 805 N.E.2d 1110, 2004 Ohio 1500, (2004).

The permanent custody hearing was procedurally deficient where the children's right to counsel was violated: In re Clark, 141 Ohio App. 3d 55, 749 N.E.2d 833, 2001 Ohio 4126, (2001).

Juvenile Rules 4(A) and 29(B) and RC § 2151.35.2 entitle a juvenile to be represented by counsel at all stages of the proceedings. However, that right may be waived: In re East, 105 Ohio App. 3d 221, 663 N.E.2d 983 (1995).

Consent to permanent surrender of rights

Approval by the court of the permanent surrender of a child is purely an administrative matter, and not in the nature of an adversary proceeding; the court has no duty to advise the mother of her right to counsel or to appoint a lawyer for her in the event of indigency: In re Anne K., 31 Ohio Misc. 218, 60 Ohio Op. 2d 134, 282 N.E.2d 370 (JC 1972).

Delinquency

Where a juvenile in a delinquency proceeding appeared at the disposition hearing without his counsel and there was on indication on the record why counsel was absent, nor was there any waiver as to counsel's appearance by the juvenile, such was error under Ohio R. Juv. P. 29(B)(4) and RC § 2151.352. In re B.M.S., 165 Ohio App. 3d 609, 847 N.E.2d 506, 2006 Ohio 981, (2006).

Because the record did not show that counsel had been appointed on a juvenile defendant's behalf, as required by RC § 2151.352, and there was no evidence in the transcript that the defendant waived the right to have counsel present, defendant's delinquency adjudication and sexual predator commitment were vacated. In re C.F., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2121, 2005 Ohio 2190, (2005).

The juvenile's rights to counsel and due process were violated where the court accepted her admissions while addressing almost all of its remarks to the juvenile's mother: In re Rogers, 124 Ohio App. 3d 392, 706 N.E.2d 390 (1997).

A minor charged with delinquency in a juvenile court proceeding has the right to be represented by an attorney at law in such proceeding: State v. Shardell, 107 Ohio App. 338, 8 Ohio Op. 2d 262, 153 N.E.2d 510 (1958).

In the juvenile court in respect to proceedings to determine delinquency which may result in commitment to an institution in which the juvenile's freedom is curtailed, the child and his parent must be notified of the child's right to be represented by counsel retained by them, or if they are unable to afford counsel, that counsel will be appointed to represent the child: OAG No. 67-068 (1967).

Discovery

Juvenile Rule 24(B) provides that discovery may be limited where it may impede criminal prosecution of a minor as an adult or of an adult involved in the same occurrence: National Am. Ins. Co. v. Clermont County Bd. of Comm'rs, 65 Ohio Misc. 2d 5, 640 N.E.2d 616 (1994).

Guardian ad litem as counsel

In proceedings that granted a motion filed by a county children's services agency for permanent custody of a mother's three children under RC § 2151.414(B)(1), a trial court did not err in failing to appoint an attorney for each child. The appointment of separate attorneys was required only when a conflict existed between the role of guardian ad litem and that of attorney under Ohio R. Juv. P. 4(C)(2), and no evidence was presented to show that a conflict existed between the performance of the children's attorney as their appointed counsel under RC § 2151.352 and her role as their guardian ad litem. In re Parks, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5836, 2006 Ohio 5891, (2006).

In a permanent custody proceeding, a trial court did not fail to appoint counsel for the subject children when it appointed their guardian ad litem as their counsel, as this was provided for in RC § 2151.352, and it was not claimed that the guardian ad litem's dual role resulted in a conflict of interest. In re Salsberry, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3185, 2006 Ohio 3274, (June 19, 2006).

Where there was no evidence of a conflict of interest between a court-appointed guardian ad litem's role on behalf of children in a permanent custody proceeding and his additional role as their attorney, there was no need for the trial court to have appointed a separate individual to serve as their counsel pursuant to Ohio R. Juv. P. 4(C)(2) and RC § 2151.352. In re McHugh Children, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2235, 2005 Ohio 2345, (2005).

Trial court did not err when it denied the father's request to appoint a separate attorney and separate guardian ad litem, in the permanent custody proceeding, because the father presented no evidence to establish that a conflict existed between the attorney's performance as the children's guardian ad litem and as their attorney. In re Miller, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 875, 2005 Ohio 856, (2005).

Although the guardian ad litem was an attorney, the court could not presume dual appointment, as the roles of guardian ad litem and attorney are different: In re Amos, 154 Ohio App. 3d 434, 797 N.E.2d 568, 2003 Ohio 5014, (2003).

Absent an express dual appointment, courts should not presume a dual appointment merely because the appointed guardian ad litem is also an attorney: In re Janie M., 131 Ohio App. 3d 637, 723 N.E.2d 191 (1999).

Guardian ad litem generally

The guardian ad litem appointed for a child in a dependency action where the interest of the child and the parent may conflict must have no ties or loyalties to anyone with an adversary interest in the outcome such as a natural parent or the prospective adoptive parents: In re Christopher, 54 Ohio App. 2d 137, 8 Ohio Op. 3d 271, 376 N.E.2d 603 (1977).

Where an infant child has been in the custody of prospective adoptive parents as a result of a permanent order of custody in a dependency action and that permanent order is subsequently vacated and the parent moves to terminate temporary custody, it appears that the interests of the child and parent may conflict and a guardian ad litem must be appointed for the child pursuant to JuvR 4(B) prior to the hearing on the mother's motion to terminate custody: In re Christopher, 54 Ohio App. 2d 137, 8 Ohio Op. 3d 271, 376 N.E.2d 603 (1977).

Harmless error

Failure to appoint counsel to represent all of the allegedly abused children was rendered harmless because the court was not prevented from knowing the wishes of the children. In re Joshua B., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 2797, 2003 Ohio 3096, (2003).

Incarcerated persons

Pursuant to RC § 2151.352, an indigent father had a legal right to appointed counsel in his attempt to obtain visitation rights of his child; a trial court erred in refusing to appoint counsel for an indigent, incarcerated father seeking visitation rights. Hatton v. Ankney, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 1232, 2005 Ohio 1252, (Mar. 21, 2005).

In a child support enforcement proceeding, an incarcerated obligor father did not show that he was entitled to appointed counsel under Ohio R. Juv. P. 4 or RC § 2151.352 because he did not establish that he was indigent. Jones v. Bowns, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4671, 2003 Ohio 5224, (2003), appeal denied by 101 Ohio St. 3d 1423, 2004 Ohio 123, 802 N.E.2d 154, 2004 Ohio LEXIS 147 (2004).

Ineffective assistance of counsel

Mother failed to establish that her counsel's performance during the permanent custody proceedings was deficient in any form and she failed to show prejudice resulting from any alleged deficiency. The fact that her counsel sought to have a different attorney appointed did not demonstrate deficient performance, and the mother failed to demonstrate that she was prejudiced in any manner by having a second counsel appointed. In re Shriver, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2641, 2006 Ohio 2792, (2006).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to make a continuous objection to the hearing continuing when the mother failed to appear since the evidence showed that the mother had notice of the hearing, was offered transportation by the Sandusky County Department of Job and Family Services, and the Department was attempting to contact the mother during the hearing and had someone on standby to bring her to court once contact was made; failure to request a bifurcated hearing did not amount of ineffective assistance since the mother failed to demonstrate any harm from such failure. In re Antonio C., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 67, 2004 Ohio 82, (2004).

Trial counsel did not render ineffective assistance of counsel by failing to object to the guardian ad litem's questioning of witnesses. The mother failed to overcome the strong presumption that trial counsel acted within the realm of reasonable trial strategy and that counsel was competent, and failed to show how counsel's failure to object to the guardian ad litem's questioning of witnesses prejudiced her or affected the outcome of the trial court's decision to award the agency permanent custody. In re Curry, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 691, 2004 Ohio 750, (2004).

In a proceeding to terminate a mother's parental rights, her counsel's decision not to present witnesses fell within the realm of trial strategy, and as she failed to show how this decision affected the outcome of the proceedings, she did not demonstrate ineffective assistance of counsel. In re Hatfield, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 6668, 2003 Ohio 7339, (2003).

Father had the right to be represented by counsel in a child support matter and had the right to effective assistance of counsel; however, the father failed to show that he was denied effective assistance of counsel in either his counsel's failure to present his case that he paid past child support or in his counsel's failure to raise a laches defense. Newbauer v. Bertrand, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4612, 2003 Ohio 5109, (2003).

The right to counsel, guaranteed in permanent custody proceedings by RC § 2151.352 and by Ohio R. Juv. P. 4, includes the right to the effective assistance of counsel, and the test for ineffective assistance of counsel used in criminal cases is equally applicable to actions seeking to force the permanent, involuntary termination of parental custody. In re Riley, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3658, 2003 Ohio 4109, (2003).

Defense of diminished capacity due to intoxication is not recognized in Ohio, so counsel did not render ineffective assistance by failing to raise that defense to charge of felonious assault. State v. Hill, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3184, 2003 Ohio 3484, (2003).

Father failed to demonstrate ineffective assistance of counsel where all parties waived opening and closing statements, which had no evidentiary value, and there was no indication of evidence that would have changed the result of the proceeding but was not presented. In re Matuszczak, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 2609, 2003 Ohio 2892, (2003).

The test for ineffective assistance of counsel used in criminal cases is equally applicable to actions seeking to force the permanent, involuntary termination of parental custody: In re Heston, 129 Ohio App. 3d 825, 719 N.E.2d 93 (1998).

Parents receive ineffective assistance of counsel in termination of rights proceedings where appointed counsel fails to object to the court's loss of jurisdiction: In re Travis Children, 80 Ohio App. 3d 620, 609 N.E.2d 1356 (1992).

The two-part test for ineffective assistance of counsel used in criminal cases, announced in Strickland v. Washington (1984), 466 US 668, 687, is equally applicable in actions by the state to force the permanent, involuntary termination of parental rights: Jones v. Lucas Cty. Children Services Bd., 46 Ohio App. 3d 85, 546 N.E.2d 471 (1988).

Judicial immunity

A judge has judicial immunity as to removal of an attorney's name from a list of approved counsel who may be appointed to represent indigents: Eichenberger v. Petree, 76 Ohio App. 3d 779, 603 N.E.2d 366 (1992).

Mandamus to require appointment

When a parent's mother sought custody of the parent's child, had the parent been entitled to have counsel appointed, she was not entitled to a writ of mandamus requiring a trial court to make such an appointment because she had an adequate remedy at law, which was an appeal of the trial court's denial of her motion to have counsel appointed, as that denial was a final appealable order, under RC § 2505.02(B)(2), because it was rendered in a special proceeding, which was a juvenile court case, and it affected a substantial right, which was the parent's right to counsel, especially if the parent was correct in maintaining that RC § 2151.352 guaranteed her that right. State ex rel. Johnson v. Baronzzi, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4889, 2006 Ohio 4955, (2006).

Reimbursement of public defender's office

An order requiring the parents to reimburse the public defender's office for the cost of defending the child will be remanded where it is not clear whether it was fairly imposed: In re Hinko, 84 Ohio App. 3d 89, 616 N.E.2d 515 (1992).

A trial court is not required to appoint the attorney chosen by an indigent: State ex rel. Butler v. Demis, 66 Ohio St. 2d 123, 20 Ohio Op. 3d 121, 420 N.E.2d 116 (1981).

Separation of witnesses

If the parents of a juvenile who is the subject of a delinquency hearing in juvenile court are to testify at that hearing, the exclusion by the judge of the parents from the courtroom under an order for separation of witnesses until they have testified is not prejudicial, where the juvenile is represented by counsel during the hearing: State v. Ostrowski, 30 Ohio St. 2d 34, 59 Ohio Op. 2d 62, 282 N.E.2d 359 (1972).

Social worker as custodian

A social worker from a facility where the juvenile had been committed constituted a "custodian" for purposes of RC § 2151.35.2. The fact that the social worker advised the juvenile to admit the offense if she did it and to deny the offense if she did not commit it did not establish that the social worker was opposed to the juvenile's best legal interests. The court's colloquy did not establish that the juvenile fully understood the waiver of counsel: In re Smith, 142 Ohio App. 3d 16, 753 N.E.2d 930 (2001).

Temporary custody

Parents do not have a constitutional right to counsel at temporary custody proceedings: Beard v. Williams Cty. Dept. of Social Services, 12 Ohio St. 3d 40, 12 Ohio B. 35, 465 N.E.2d 397 (1984).

Waiver of counsel

When a trial court advised a juvenile alleged to have violated his probation that he had the right to counsel, that counsel would be appointed to represent him if he wanted counsel and could not afford a lawyer, and of the condition of his probation which he was alleged to have violated, it complied with RC § 2151.352 and Ohio R. Juv. P. 35(B), so it could properly accept his waiver of counsel, and it did not have to first advise him of the possible penalties he faced. In re L.A.B., — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1385, 2007 Ohio 1479, (Mar. 30, 2007).

Record did not support a conclusion that defendant, a juvenile, waived his right to legal counsel, pursuant to RC § 2151.352, at either the adjudicatory hearing or the sexual offender classification hearing because defendant was never afforded the opportunity to request the assistance of legal counsel in connection with the hearing at which his admission was tendered and accepted, and he never indicated that he was waiving that right and, at the sexual classification hearing, the trial court elicited a waiver of counsel from defendant's mother, but never ascertained whether defendant, himself, was willing to waive his right to legal counsel. In re C.A.C., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3934, 2006 Ohio 4003, (2006).

Based on a review of the record as a whole, and in consideration of the affirmations of the minor and her mother that they wished to proceed without counsel on her delinquency charge for drug possession, the requirements of Ohio R. Juv. P. 29(B) were met and the minor's waiver of counsel was voluntarily, knowingly and understandingly given. The trial court explained to the minor her right to counsel, the nature, elements, and category of the charge, her right to a trial, the possible commitment, her right to remain silent, her right to present evidence in her defense and her right to cross-examine witnesses and, as each right was explained, the minor answered that she understood the right and then the minor and her mother agreed to proceed without counsel. In re Loos, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3891, 2006 Ohio 3932, (2006).

There was no showing of prejudice to a father where the mother waived her right to counsel in a parental rights termination proceeding, as the father was represented by his own counsel and had the opportunity to cross-examine witnesses and to submit evidence. In re Z.Y., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 260, 2006 Ohio 300, (2006).

When appellant was charged with offenses in juvenile court, RC § 2151.352 did not require that counsel be appointed to represent him because the statute, as well as Ohio R. Juv. P. 4(A) and 29(B), allowed him to waive counsel, which he knowingly, intelligently, and voluntarily did. In re Spears, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1761, 2006 Ohio 1920, (2006).

Although the trial court substantially complied with Ohio R. Juv. P. 29(D) when it accepted defendant juvenile's waiver of counsel during the adjudication hearing, the trial court failed to reiterate defendant's right to counsel during disposition or allow him either to invoke or to waive his right to counsel at that stage as required by Ohio R. Juv. P. 34. In re S. J., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4395, 2006 Ohio 4467, (2006).

In determining whether a juvenile's waiver of counsel is knowing, intelligent and voluntary, a court is required to give close scrutiny to such factors as the juvenile's age, emotional stability, mental capacity, and prior criminal experience. In re Kindred, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 3281, 2004 Ohio 3647, (2004).

Where a trial court determined that defendant, a juvenile, waived his right to counsel in his juvenile delinquency proceeding without having conducted the type of dialogue contemplated by the Ohio Juvenile Procedure Rules, the waiver was insufficient and defendant's admission of true should not have been accepted; defendant, as a juvenile, had a right to counsel under RC § 2151.352, and Ohio R. Juv. P. 4(A) and 29(B), and the trial court was required to make a sufficient inquiry as to his knowing, intelligent, and voluntary waiver of that right in order to avoid violating defendant's right to due process under U.S. Const. amends. V and XIV and Ohio Const. art. I, § 16. In re Christner, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 3864, 2004 Ohio 4252, (2004).

Given the background, experience, and conduct of the mother, the trial court did not err in determining that she waived her right to counsel and in granting counsel's motion to withdraw; the mother received notice of the scheduled hearings but failed to appear, she had had no contact with the attorney, and evidence showed that the mother had been disinterested in the child from the time of her birth, had been uncooperative with regard to case plan services, refused drug treatment, refused recommended psychiatric counseling, and failed to keep regularly scheduled meetings with her caseworkers. In re Savanah M., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5209, 2003 Ohio 5855, (2003).

Under the totality of the circumstances, including the facts that a parent was repeatedly reminded of his right to counsel, discharged his appointed counsel, and stated that he would obtain counsel, the court properly allowed the parent to proceed without counsel. In re Moore, 153 Ohio App. 3d 641, 795 N.E.2d 149, 2003 Ohio 4250, (2003).

To establish a valid waiver of counsel, a court must investigate as long and as thoroughly as the circumstances of the case demand. In re Royal, 132 Ohio App. 3d 496, 725 N.E.2d 685 (1999).

The waiver of counsel was not valid where the magistrate's explanation seemed to state that the right to counsel was triggered only if the juvenile elected to proceed to trial. A waiver of rights form signed after the charge was admitted was not effective. In re Doyle, 122 Ohio App. 3d 767, 702 N.E.2d 970 (1997).

Pursuant to the 1996 amendment to JuvR 37, a notation in a journal entry that the juvenile waived counsel at a dispositional hearing is no longer sufficient. In re Solis, 124 Ohio App. 3d 547, 706 N.E.2d 839 (1997).

The court erred by accepting the thirteen-year-old's waiver of counsel without fully explaining his rights and inquiring into the circumstances of the waiver. In re Johnson, 106 Ohio App. 3d 38, 665 N.E.2d 247 (1995).

Withdrawal by counsel

Parent's right to appointed counsel was not violated by her attorney's withdrawal in a proceeding to terminate parental rights where the parent's uncooperativeness and lack of interest in the proceedings were demonstrated by her failure to appear at scheduled hearings and by her attorney's unsuccessful attempts to contact her. In re Hendrickson, 162 Ohio App. 3d 602, 834 N.E.2d 401, 2005 Ohio 4183, (2005).

The court erred by allowing a parent's attorney to withdraw on the morning of the dispositional hearing, without prior notice to the client. A simple assertion that a party has been "uncooperative" is insufficient to demonstrate that an attorney should be allowed to withdraw, especially on the day of the dispositional hearing. In re M.L.R., 150 Ohio App. 3d 39, 779 N.E.2d 772, 2002 Ohio 5958, (2002).

(A) If a child is adjudicated an abused, neglected, or dependent child, the court may make any of the following orders of disposition:

(1) Place the child in protective supervision;

(2) Commit the child to the temporary custody of a public children services agency, a private child placing agency, either parent, a relative residing within or outside the state, or a probation officer for placement in a certified foster home, or in any other home approved by the court;

(3) Award legal custody of the child to either parent or to any other person who, prior to the dispositional hearing, files a motion requesting legal custody of the child or is identified as a proposed legal custodian in a complaint or motion filed prior to the dispositional hearing by any party to the proceedings. A person identified in a complaint or motion filed by a party to the proceedings as a proposed legal custodian shall be awarded legal custody of the child only if the person identified signs a statement of understanding for legal custody that contains at least the following provisions:

(a) That it is the intent of the person to become the legal custodian of the child and the person is able to assume legal responsibility for the care and supervision of the child;

(b) That the person understands that legal custody of the child in question is intended to be permanent in nature and that the person will be responsible as the custodian for the child until the child reaches the age of majority. Responsibility as custodian for the child shall continue beyond the age of majority if, at the time the child reaches the age of majority, the child is pursuing a diploma granted by the board of education or other governing authority, successful completion of the curriculum of any high school, successful completion of an individualized education program developed for the student by any high school, or an age and schooling certificate. Responsibility beyond the age of majority shall terminate when the child ceases to continuously pursue such an education, completes such an education, or is excused from such an education under standards adopted by the state board of education, whichever occurs first.

(c) That the parents of the child have residual parental rights, privileges, and responsibilities, including, but not limited to, the privilege of reasonable visitation, consent to adoption, the privilege to determine the child's religious affiliation, and the responsibility for support;

(d) That the person understands that the person must be present in court for the dispositional hearing in order to affirm the person's intention to become legal custodian, to affirm that the person understands the effect of the custodianship before the court, and to answer any questions that the court or any parties to the case may have.

(4) Commit the child to the permanent custody of a public children services agency or private child placing agency, if the court determines in accordance with division (E) of section 2151.414 [2151.41.4] of the Revised Code that the child cannot be placed with one of the child's parents within a reasonable time or should not be placed with either parent and determines in accordance with division (D) of section 2151.414 [2151.41.4] of the Revised Code that the permanent commitment is in the best interest of the child. If the court grants permanent custody under this division, the court, upon the request of any party, shall file a written opinion setting forth its findings of fact and conclusions of law in relation to the proceeding.

(5) Place the child in a planned permanent living arrangement with a public children services agency or private child placing agency, if a public children services agency or private child placing agency requests the court to place the child in a planned permanent living arrangement and if the court finds, by clear and convincing evidence, that a planned permanent living arrangement is in the best interest of the child and that one of the following exists:

(a) The child, because of physical, mental, or psychological problems or needs, is unable to function in a family-like setting and must remain in residential or institutional care.

(b) The parents of the child have significant physical, mental, or psychological problems and are unable to care for the child because of those problems, adoption is not in the best interest of the child, as determined in accordance with division (D) of section 2151.414 [2151.41.4] of the Revised Code, and the child retains a significant and positive relationship with a parent or relative.

(c) The child is sixteen years of age or older, has been counseled on the permanent placement options available to the child, is unwilling to accept or unable to adapt to a permanent placement, and is in an agency program preparing the child for independent living.

(6) Order the removal from the child's home until further order of the court of the person who committed abuse as described in section 2151.031 [2151.03.1] of the Revised Code against the child, who caused or allowed the child to suffer neglect as described in section 2151.03 of the Revised Code, or who is the parent, guardian, or custodian of a child who is adjudicated a dependent child and order any person not to have contact with the child or the child's siblings.

(B) No order for permanent custody or temporary custody of a child or the placement of a child in a planned permanent living arrangement shall be made pursuant to this section unless the complaint alleging the abuse, neglect, or dependency contains a prayer requesting permanent custody, temporary custody, or the placement of the child in a planned permanent living arrangement as desired, the summons served on the parents of the child contains as is appropriate a full explanation that the granting of an order for permanent custody permanently divests them of their parental rights, a full explanation that an adjudication that the child is an abused, neglected, or dependent child may result in an order of temporary custody that will cause the removal of the child from their legal custody until the court terminates the order of temporary custody or permanently divests the parents of their parental rights, or a full explanation that the granting of an order for a planned permanent living arrangement will result in the removal of the child from their legal custody if any of the conditions listed in divisions (A)(5)(a) to (c) of this section are found to exist, and the summons served on the parents contains a full explanation of their right to be represented by counsel and to have counsel appointed pursuant to Chapter 120. of the Revised Code if they are indigent.

If after making disposition as authorized by division (A)(2) of this section, a motion is filed that requests permanent custody of the child, the court may grant permanent custody of the child to the movant in accordance with section 2151.414 [2151.41.4] of the Revised Code.

(C) If the court issues an order for protective supervision pursuant to division (A)(1) of this section, the court may place any reasonable restrictions upon the child, the child's parents, guardian, or custodian, or any other person, including, but not limited to, any of the following:

(1) Order a party, within forty-eight hours after the issuance of the order, to vacate the child's home indefinitely or for a specified period of time;

(2) Order a party, a parent of the child, or a physical custodian of the child to prevent any particular person from having contact with the child;

(3) Issue an order restraining or otherwise controlling the conduct of any person which conduct would not be in the best interest of the child.

(D) As part of its dispositional order, the court shall journalize a case plan for the child. The journalized case plan shall not be changed except as provided in section 2151.412 [2151.41.2] of the Revised Code.

(E)(1) The court shall retain jurisdiction over any child for whom the court issues an order of disposition pursuant to division (A) of this section or pursuant to section 2151.414 [2151.41.4] or 2151.415 [2151.41.5] of the Revised Code until the child attains the age of eighteen years if the child is not mentally retarded, developmentally disabled, or physically impaired, the child attains the age of twenty-one years if the child is mentally retarded, developmentally disabled, or physically impaired, or the child is adopted and a final decree of adoption is issued, except that the court may retain jurisdiction over the child and continue any order of disposition under division (A) of this section or under section 2151.414 [2151.41.4] or 2151.415 [2151.41.5] of the Revised Code for a specified period of time to enable the child to graduate from high school or vocational school. The court shall make an entry continuing its jurisdiction under this division in the journal.

(2) Any public children services agency, any private child placing agency, the department of job and family services, or any party, other than any parent whose parental rights with respect to the child have been terminated pursuant to an order issued under division (A)(4) of this section, by filing a motion with the court, may at any time request the court to modify or terminate any order of disposition issued pursuant to division (A) of this section or section 2151.414 [2151.41.4] or 2151.415 [2151.41.5] of the Revised Code. The court shall hold a hearing upon the motion as if the hearing were the original dispositional hearing and shall give all parties to the action and the guardian ad litem notice of the hearing pursuant to the Juvenile Rules. If applicable, the court shall comply with section 2151.42 of the Revised Code.

(F) Any temporary custody order issued pursuant to division (A) of this section shall terminate one year after the earlier of the date on which the complaint in the case was filed or the child was first placed into shelter care, except that, upon the filing of a motion pursuant to section 2151.415 [2151.41.5] of the Revised Code, the temporary custody order shall continue and not terminate until the court issues a dispositional order under that section.

(G)(1) No later than one year after the earlier of the date the complaint in the case was filed or the child was first placed in shelter care, a party may ask the court to extend an order for protective supervision for six months or to terminate the order. A party requesting extension or termination of the order shall file a written request for the extension or termination with the court and give notice of the proposed extension or termination in writing before the end of the day after the day of filing it to all parties and the child's guardian ad litem. If a public children services agency or private child placing agency requests termination of the order, the agency shall file a written status report setting out the facts supporting termination of the order at the time it files the request with the court. If no party requests extension or termination of the order, the court shall notify the parties that the court will extend the order for six months or terminate it and that it may do so without a hearing unless one of the parties requests a hearing. All parties and the guardian ad litem shall have seven days from the date a notice is sent pursuant to this division to object to and request a hearing on the proposed extension or termination.

(a) If it receives a timely request for a hearing, the court shall schedule a hearing to be held no later than thirty days after the request is received by the court. The court shall give notice of the date, time, and location of the hearing to all parties and the guardian ad litem. At the hearing, the court shall determine whether extension or termination of the order is in the child's best interest. If termination is in the child's best interest, the court shall terminate the order. If extension is in the child's best interest, the court shall extend the order for six months.

(b) If it does not receive a timely request for a hearing, the court may extend the order for six months or terminate it without a hearing and shall journalize the order of extension or termination not later than fourteen days after receiving the request for extension or termination or after the date the court notifies the parties that it will extend or terminate the order. If the court does not extend or terminate the order, it shall schedule a hearing to be held no later than thirty days after the expiration of the applicable fourteen-day time period and give notice of the date, time, and location of the hearing to all parties and the child's guardian ad litem. At the hearing, the court shall determine whether extension or termination of the order is in the child's best interest. If termination is in the child's best interest, the court shall terminate the order. If extension is in the child's best interest, the court shall issue an order extending the order for protective supervision six months.

(2) If the court grants an extension of the order for protective supervision pursuant to division (G)(1) of this section, a party may, prior to termination of the extension, file with the court a request for an additional extension of six months or for termination of the order. The court and the parties shall comply with division (G)(1) of this section with respect to extending or terminating the order.

(3) If a court grants an extension pursuant to division (G)(2) of this section, the court shall terminate the order for protective supervision at the end of the extension.

(H) The court shall not issue a dispositional order pursuant to division (A) of this section that removes a child from the child's home unless the court complies with section 2151.419 [2151.41.9] of the Revised Code and includes in the dispositional order the findings of fact required by that section.

(I) If a motion or application for an order described in division (A)(6) of this section is made, the court shall not issue the order unless, prior to the issuance of the order, it provides to the person all of the following:

- (1) Notice and a copy of the motion or application;
- (2) The grounds for the motion or application;
- (3) An opportunity to present evidence and witnesses at a hearing regarding the motion or application;
- (4) An opportunity to be represented by counsel at the hearing.

(J) The jurisdiction of the court shall terminate one year after the date of the award or, if the court takes any further action in the matter subsequent to the award, the date of the latest further action subsequent to the award, if the court awards legal custody of a child to either of the following:

(1) A legal custodian who, at the time of the award of legal custody, resides in a county of this state other than the county in which the court is located;

(2) A legal custodian who resides in the county in which the court is located at the time of the award of legal custody, but moves to a different county of this state prior to one year after the date of the award or, if the court takes any further action in the matter subsequent to the award, one year after the date of the latest further action subsequent to the award.

The court in the county in which the legal custodian resides then shall have jurisdiction in the matter.†

† The amendments made by HB 448 (148 v —), effective 10-5-2000 and HB 332 (148 v —), effective 1-1-2001 are the same. Both amendments delete the word "family" before "foster home" in division (A)(2) and add the word "years" to division (E)(1).

The effective date is set by section 5 of HB 332.

Effect of Amendments

151 v S 238, effective September 21, 2006, added the language beginning "or is identified" to the end of the introductory paragraph of (A)(3); and added (A)(3)(a) through (d).

150 v S 185, effective April 11, 2005, made minor stylistic changes.

Constitutionality

Neither RC § 2151.04 nor 2151.35.3 is unconstitutionally broad or vague: In re Williams, 7 Ohio App. 3d 324, 7 Ohio B. 421, 455 N.E.2d 1027 (1982).

Generally

Grant of legal custody of a mother's son to the son's father was properly found to be in the son's best interest under RC § 3109.04 as the record showed that the parties' son and their daughter, who resided with the mother, harbored considerable anger toward one another but that the interaction between them had improved since they had been living in separate homes. In re Ratliff, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1625, 2007 Ohio 1770, (Apr. 13, 2007).

Competent, credible evidence supported the trial court's decision to place the children in the legal custody of the uncle and his wife because the trial court had discretion to make a dispositional order in the best interests of the children as it retained jurisdiction over the children. The problems that led to the original grant of temporary custody had not been resolved by the time the trial court made its dispositional order since the treatment of the children and the medical "diagnosis" of Munchausen Syndrome by Proxy and its applicability were still very much in issue. In re

McCallum, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 905, 2007 Ohio 995, (Mar. 1, 2007).

Right to file a petition for child custody is substantive, and JuvR 10 must be read in conjunction with the limitations expressed in RC §§ 2151.414(F) and 2151.353(E)(2): In re McBride, 110 Ohio St. 3d 19, 850 N.E.2d 43, 2006 Ohio 3454, (2006).

Evidence showed that it was in the best interests of the children of a mother and a father to award legal custody of the children to the father because the evidence showed that the mother was emotionally disturbed, that the children were afraid of the mother and believed that she did not like them because of her violent and angry actions, that the children enjoyed living with their father, and that the father had done a good job of taking care of the children. In re Memic, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6302, 2006 Ohio 6346, (2006).

Evidence supported trial court's finding that granting custody to the aunt and uncle of children who had been adjudicated dependent was in the children's best interests, in that it showed that the children had lived in the father's semi-truck cab during at least two cross-country treks with their parents, that the children were left alone in the cab while the parents went to bathe and eat during rest stops, that the children had excrement and dirt stuck to their bodies, and that the mother and the father failed to visit the children for at least a five-month period while the children were living with the aunt and uncle. In re T.G., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5489, 2006 Ohio 5504, (2006), dismissed by 113 Ohio St. 3d 1520, 2007 Ohio 2487, 866 N.E.2d 1093, 2007 Ohio LEXIS 1281 (2007).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion when it determined that the best interests of a mother's two children were best served by awarding legal custody to the children's paternal grandparents under RC § 2151.353(A)(3) because the mother had stipulated to findings of dependency for both children and also stipulated to a finding that one of the children had been abused, the mother did not demonstrate any sort of a bond with the children, the children regularly visited their paternal grandparents for extended vacations, and they expressed a strong desire to live with their grandparents instead of with the mother. In re C.S., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5117, 2006 Ohio 5198, (2006).

Juvenile court did not abuse its discretion in awarding the grandmother legal custody of the children, pursuant to RC § 2151.353, because there was competent, credible evidence to support the determination of the children's best interests by a preponderance of the evidence. The requirement of finding the mother unsuitable did not apply since the children had been adjudicated dependent, the grandmother had succeeded in providing a stable home for the children, with the structure and consistency the boys needed, the children's guardian ad litem recommended that both children be placed with the grandmother, and the mother had mental health issues. In re D.R., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 307, 2006 Ohio 340, (2006).

Legal custody of children under RC § 2151.353(A)(3) was properly granted to the children's father rather than the children's mother as the evidence showed that the mother was emotionally disturbed and should not have custody of children, in that she had brandished a knife in front of the children, holding police at bay on one occasion for two hours, had destroyed property, had spat on the children and the father, and had hit the children. In re Memic, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6302, 2006 Ohio 6346, (2006).

Juvenile court was not required to make a determination that a mother was unsuitable prior to awarding legal custody of the mother's child, who was adjudicated as dependent, to the child's grandmother on an interim temporary basis and ultimately to the father. In re Brown, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3090, 2006 Ohio 3189, (2006).

It was not plain error for a magistrate to have accepted the consent of a mother, who was an "unemancipated incompetent minor," to a disposition of legal custody of her child, as the child was declared dependent pursuant to RC § 2151.04, and accordingly, the trial court had the right to make an award of legal custody with or without the mother's consent, pursuant to RC § 2151.353. In re H.B., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1969, 2006 Ohio 2124, (2006).

Because neither the father nor his brother filed a motion requesting legal custody of the children prior to the dispositional hearing, the trial court was not required to consider the father's brother as a placement option, pursuant to RC § 2151.353, in the permanent custody proceeding. Assuming, arguendo, that the father or the father's brother had a proper motion before the trial court, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in not granting legal custody to father's brother because the brother and his girlfriend were not able to adequately care for the children. In re Zurfley/Chatman/Black Children, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 602, 2006 Ohio 683, (2006).

Because a dependency complaint was never filed, the trial court had no jurisdiction to find the child to be a dependent child. As a result, it had no jurisdiction to grant legal custody to the boyfriend under RC § 2151.353, regardless of its finding that the father was an unsuitable parent. Riley v. Liston, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5799, 2006 Ohio 5846, (2006).

When an appellate record did not reflect that a trial court adjudicated the children who were the subject of a motion for permanent custody to be abused, neglected or dependent, the trial court had no authority, under RC § 2151.353(A), to make any order of disposition regarding the children, including a grant of their permanent custody. In re Ronald H., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4638, 2006 Ohio 4693, (2006).

Trial court was not required to find a change of circumstances or to find that the mother and the father were unsuitable before awarding legal custody of their children to the children's paternal aunt and uncle since the children had been adjudicated dependent. The relevant inquiry was merely whether granting custody to the aunt and uncle was in the children's best interests, and RC § 3109.04 was inapplicable. In re T.G., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5489, 2006 Ohio 5504, (2006), dismissed by 113 Ohio St. 3d 1520, 2007 Ohio 2487, 866 N.E.2d 1093, 2007 Ohio LEXIS 1281 (2007).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion under RC § 2151.353(A)(3) when it terminated a putative father's custody and visitation rights with a minor child in favor of granting permanent custody to the child's biological father; when determining custody between a parent and a non-parent in an original custody dispute when the child had been adjudicated dependent, custody could not be awarded to the non-parent without a finding of parental unsuitability, which required a showing by a preponderance of the evidence that the biological parent contractually relinquished custody of the child, that the parent had become totally incapable of supporting or caring for the child, or that an award of custody to the parent would have been detrimental to the child. Huffman v. Forsythe, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5293, 2006 Ohio 5311, (2006).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion by finding, in a custody proceeding involving a minor child's relative and the child's foster mother, that considerations related to stability and continuity of care were overriding factors especially where the child had been raised since birth by the same foster family that was seeking legal custody, and notwithstanding the fact both parties seeking legal custody appeared to be suitable custodians. Thus, there was both competent, credible evidence and case law to support the trial court's decision. In re A. V., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3021, 2006 Ohio 3149, (2006).

Where a magistrate expressed doubt that a mother had received a long term benefit from completing her case plan and services, the appellate court presumed that the findings were correct and that the trial court did not abuse its discretion in terminating the mother's parental rights under RC § 2151.353(A)(3) based on the best interests of the children. In re Joemyde L., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 568, 2005 Ohio 537, (2005).

Award of legal custody to the maternal grandparents did not divest the mother of her residual parental rights. The evidence supported the court's finding that awarding custody to the mother would be detrimental to the children: In re Sean T., 164 Ohio App. 3d 218, 841 N.E.2d 838, 2005 Ohio 5739, (2005).

Although a child's paternal relatives were entitled to consideration for custody of the child under RC § 2151.353, because the mother's parental rights had not been terminated, the trial court abused its discretion under RC § 3109.04(F)(1) by failing to grant custody to the maternal relatives in accordance with the mother's wishes. In re Mouser, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2128, 2005 Ohio 2244, (2005).

Because juvenile court had already determined that a child was abused, dependent, or neglected in accordance with RC

RC § 2151.353 deals with the disposition of abused, neglected, and dependent children, and it does not distinguish between granting custody of a child to a relative versus a non-relative at the dispositional hearing. In re Halstead, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 902, 2005 Ohio 403, (2004).

Mother was properly granted legal custody of her son where she demonstrated the ability to care for him, with extensive family support if such was required, and she could provide the child with a stable home which was well-kept. In re E.B., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1996, 2004 Ohio 2250, (2004).

RC § 2151.353 does not distinguish between granting custody of a child to a relative versus a non-relative at a dispositional hearing. In re Halstead, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 902, 2005 Ohio 403, (2004).

Trial court was precluded from making any determination as to the child's best interest without first complying with the procedural safeguards of RC § 2151.353. In re G.R., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 886, 2004 Ohio 999, (2004).

Evidence supported the trial court's refusal to modify, pursuant to RC § 2151.417(B), an award of custody to the mother's sister pursuant to RC § 2151.353; granting custody to the father was not in the best interest of the child pursuant to RC § 2151.42(A), as the father was barely known by the child, had had two children taken from him, and could not show that the test establishing his paternity was a change in circumstances under RC § 2151.42(B). In re Osberry, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4922, 2003 Ohio 5462, (2003).

In determining the best interest of a child in parental custody proceedings incident to a dependency and neglect action, the juvenile courts should consider the totality of the circumstances, including, to the extent they are applicable, those factors set forth in RC § 3109.04(F); a trial court's award of legal custody to a father was supported by the evidence and was affirmed where the child had done well while in temporary custody of the father and the mother had struggled with basic parenting skills. In re Fulton, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5323, 2003 Ohio 5984, (2003).

Trial court did not err in awarding custody of the minor child to the foster parents, as competent credible evidence in the record supported the trial court's conclusion that it was in the best interests of the child because the grandmother would not be as appropriate a custodian of the child as would be the foster parents. In re Huffer, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5302, 2003 Ohio 5964, (2003).

Grant of custody of the dependent child to a maternal great grandmother accorded with RC § 2151.353(A)(3); the former primary caregiver failed to complete a drug and alcohol relapse program or have a psychiatric evaluation and admitted to having prescription-drug problems, all indicating failure substantially to comply with the case plan. In re Rowe, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5403, 2003 Ohio 6062, (2003).

Best interest of the child, as defined in RC § 3109.04(F)(1), must be considered by the juvenile court when determining the statutorily permissible alternatives set forth in RC § 2151.353(A); in an action to determine custody of two children where the parents were incapable of caring for the children, the trial court properly awarded custody of the girls to an aunt and uncle who were willing and desired to keep the girls, despite the recommendation of the guardian ad litem. In re Mitchell, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3647, 2003 Ohio 4102, (2003).

Trial court did not err by not giving the father a parental unsuitability determination before awarding custody of the child to the maternal grandmother because the child was adjudicated neglected and it was in the child's best interest to be with the grandmother. In re C.F., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 2920, 2003 Ohio 3260, (2003), criticized by In re C.R., 2004 Ohio 4465, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 4053 (Ohio Ct. App., Cuyahoga County Aug. 26, 2004).

There was no abuse of discretion in denying the grandmother's motion for permanent custody of the grandchildren because of the ongoing history of abuse in her home including a conviction of child endangering for whipping her daughter with a belt. In re Zorns, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5020, 2003 Ohio 5664, (2003), appeal denied by 100 Ohio St. 3d 1547, 2003 Ohio 6879, 800 N.E.2d 752, 2003 Ohio LEXIS 3528 (2003).

Juvenile court did not err by ordering the removal of a dependent child from an abusive and unstable environment because the preponderance of the evidence showed that removal was appropriate under the circumstances; the parents and the minor child required counseling before reunification was proper. In re Day, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3253, 2003 Ohio 3544, (2003).

The requirement that a court first find a parent unsuitable before awarding legal custody of a child to a nonparent does not apply to dispositional hearings following an adjudication that the child is abused, dependent, or neglected: In re D.R., 153 Ohio App. 3d 156, 792 N.E.2d 203, 2003 Ohio 2852, (2003).

Evidence that, among other things, the mother failed to provide financial support for the children, failed to attend any counseling sessions, completed less than half of the random urine screenings, and had no concern for the substantiated abuse claim of one of the children supported the award of custody to the cousin. In re Gales, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5646, 2003 Ohio 6309, (2003).

The best interest of the child remains the primary standard to be applied in custody cases. Nevertheless, while the welfare of the child is the primary consideration, suitable parents have a paramount right to custody: In re Pryor, 86 Ohio App. 3d 327, 620 N.E.2d 973 (1993).

When proceeding under RC § 2151.35.3(A)(4), the court must find by clear and convincing evidence that the behavior of the parents has created an environment which is having an adverse impact on the child and that such environment will continue: Elmer v. Lucas Cty. Children Serv. Bd., 36 Ohio App. 3d 241, 523 N.E.2d 540 (1987).

Under RC § 2151.35, a juvenile court may upon finding that a child is neglected, dependent, or delinquent, commit the child to any person or institution meeting the requirements of RC §§ 5103.02 and 5103.03, even though a county child welfare board exists and could provide care and support for the child: 1962 OAG No. 3489 (1962).

Adoption

Where permanent custody had already been granted to an agency, the juvenile court's grant of legal custody to parties who were ineligible to adopt thwarted the children's right to an expeditious adoption: In re Hitchcock, 120 Ohio App. 3d 88, 696 N.E.2d 1090 (1996).

Appeals

Although a dispositional hearing was required by RC § 2151.353(E)(2), based upon the fact that a county agency had petitioned for permanent custody of two minor children, because a grandmother failed to file an objection to a magistrate's determination, pursuant to Ohio R. Juv. P. 40(E)(3)(b), the error was not properly preserved for appellate review. In re McCann, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 260, 2004 Ohio 283, (2004).

Adjudication that a child was abused followed by a disposition awarding temporary custody to a public children services agency pursuant to R.C. § 2151.353(A)(2) constituted a final appealable order. In re K.B., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3402, 2003 Ohio 3784, (2003).

An adjudication by a juvenile court that a child is "neglected" or "dependent" as defined in RC Chapter 2151, followed by a disposition awarding temporary custody to a public children services agency pursuant to RC § 2151.35.3(A)(2) constitutes a "final order" within the meaning of RC § 2505.02 and is appealable to the court of appeals pursuant to RC § 2501.02: In re Murray, 52 Ohio St. 3d 155, 556 N.E.2d 1169 (1990).

An order modifying a previously-entered temporary custody order which was made in disposition of a finding that a child is neglected constitutes a final appealable order pursuant to the provisions of RC § 2501.02: In re Rule, 1 Ohio App. 2d 57, 30 Ohio Op. 2d 76, 203 N.E.2d 501 (1963).

Applicability

Where children had been removed from their mother's care and adjudicated as neglected, and thereafter, the social service agency that had temporary custody of the children sought to modify the custody to permanent custody, RC § 2151.353 was not applicable; rather, the proceeding was governed by RC § 2151.414(B). In re Ch. O., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 1024, 2005 Ohio 1013, (2005).

Care plan for child

If a juvenile court, in making disposition of an unruly or delinquent child pursuant to RC §§ 2151.35.4 or 2151.35.5, places the child into the temporary custody of the county department of human services in accordance with RC § 2151.35.3 and the department provides services to that child, the county department of human services is required to develop and file with the court a case plan pursuant to RC § 2151.41.2 and to hold semiannual reviews of the case plan pursuant to RC § 2151.41.6: OAG No. 99-041 (1999).

Children with disabilities

Since the record did not reflect whether a father's son was mentally retarded, developmentally disabled, or physically impaired, it was possible that the trial court could still retain jurisdiction over the son under RC § 2151.353(A)(5). The father's appeal from the trial court's judgment granting legal custody of the son to a children services agency was not definitively moot by virtue of the fact that the son had since turned 18 years old. In re Anthony C., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6725, 2006 Ohio 6812, (2006).

A juvenile court's jurisdiction over handicapped children until age twenty-one includes authority to order a parent to provide health insurance for the child until that date. In re Kessler, 90 Ohio App. 3d 231, 628 N.E.2d 153 (1993).

Commitment to district home

The juvenile court, pursuant to this section, may commit children directly to a district children's home: 1950 OAG No. 2529 (1950).

Continuing jurisdiction

Trial court had jurisdiction, pursuant to RC § 2151.353(E)(1) and RC § 2151.417(A), to modify or amend its prior disposition, including terminating the mother's parental rights, because, when the trial court returned the children to the mother, it specifically ordered that the agency maintain protective supervision. As such, the trial court had jurisdiction to proceed in the same case, under the same case number, when the agency asserted that the children needed to be removed from the mother's home based upon matters observed while the children remained under the agency's protective supervision. In re Peterson, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1367, 2006 Ohio 1499, (2006).

Child's ongoing dependency action provided the trial court with subject matter jurisdiction as well as the authority to make ongoing decisions regarding his care, pursuant to RC § 2151.417(A) and (B) and RC § 2151.353(E)(1). In re Unger Children, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2291, 2005 Ohio 2414, (2005).

Where problems which initially resulted in a temporary custody order over a minor child remained unresolved, the trial court retained jurisdiction and discretion to make a dispositional order in the best interest of the child, pursuant to RC § 2151.353(F). Accordingly, the father's claim that the juvenile court was divested of jurisdiction to enter orders due to the passing of the statutory time period lacked merit. In re P. C., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1088, 2004 Ohio 1230, (2004).

A juvenile court retains jurisdiction over a child who has been adjudicated to be unruly or delinquent until the child attains twenty-one years of age, and may continue to make dispositional orders with respect to the child until that time, regardless of whether the court's order of temporary custody has expired under the time limitations set forth in RC § 2151.35.3(F) and RC § 2151.41.5: OAG No. 2003-004 (2003).

Juvenile court retains jurisdiction over a child placed in the permanent custody of a county children's services agency until the child is adopted and a final decree of adoption is issued; where the final adoption decree was filed, jurisdiction over the child, the adoption proceeding, and related matters rested with the probate division, and the juvenile court was thus without jurisdiction to consider the father's motion to set aside its termination and custody orders. In re Phillips, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4618, 2003 Ohio 5107, (2003).

A juvenile court's retained jurisdiction did not terminate upon a finding that the child had been found, or could have been found, dependent by another court in another county: In re Mullins, 1994 Ohio App. LEXIS 4220 (9th Dist. 1994).

Revised Code § 2151.35.3 authorizes a juvenile court to retain jurisdiction over a neglected child. Thus prohibition will not issue to prevent a juvenile court from ordering, under the threat of a contempt finding, that any adoption proceedings be stayed until the court has relinquished jurisdiction: State ex rel. Cuyahoga County Dep't of Children & Family Servs. v. Ferreri, 96 Ohio App. 3d 660, 645 N.E.2d 837 (1994).

The continuing jurisdiction of a juvenile court does not present a jurisdictional bar to adoption proceedings in a probate court: State ex rel. Hitchcock v. Cuyahoga County Court of Common Pleas, 97 Ohio App. 3d 600, 647 N.E.2d 208 (1994).

Cost of psychiatric care

A juvenile court does not possess the authority to require the Ohio department of mental health to pay the psychiatric costs associated with the care of a child who is placed in a private non-public psychiatric institution: Lozano v. Ohio Dep't of Mental Health, 66 Ohio App. 3d 583, 585 N.E.2d 889 (1990).

Death of child

Court of common pleas, juvenile division, erred when it determined that the court lacked jurisdiction to adjudicate the issue of abuse when the child was deceased; the technicality of death did not rob children of statutory protection as the statutory protections afforded siblings extended to afterborn children. In re Darling, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 6640, 2003 Ohio 7184, (2003).

Detention home

The placement or detention of delinquent, dependent, neglected children, or juvenile traffic offenders, under this section, is upon final disposition of the juvenile court and does not include placement in a detention home provided under RC § 2151.34: 1963 OAG No. 553 (1963).

Due process

Mother's contention that she was deprived of her due process rights because she was not given adequate notice that the trial court would be considering the issue of legal custody, under RC §§ 2152.19(A)(1) and 2151.353, of her son at a third hearing held after the son had been adjudicated delinquent was rejected because the trial court twice made the parties aware that it would consider the various dispositional alternatives at subsequent hearings and indicated that it would do so on its own motion. Moreover, the mother's presence at the hearing waived any objections she had to inadequacies of notice. In re Ratliff, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1625, 2007 Ohio 1770, (Apr. 13, 2007).

Trial court erred in excluding the testimony of the potential custodians on the grounds that it could not grant legal custody of the child to them because they had not filed their own motion requesting legal custody because the parties had sufficient notice that the couple were potential custodians well in advance of the hearing. Fundamental fairness as well as due process required the trial court to allow the mother to rebut or to explain the testimony of the agency's caseworker concerning the couple, and to argue that it would be in the best interest of the child to grant the couple legal custody rather than to grant permanent custody to the agency. In re Beatty, 167 Ohio App. 3d 730, 856 N.E.2d 1042, 2006 Ohio 3698, (2006), appeal dismissed for want of debatable question by 113 Ohio St. 3d 1207, 2007 Ohio 860, 862 N.E.2d 839, 2007 Ohio LEXIS 507 (2007).

Decision granting legal custody of a mother's daughter to her father under RC § 2151.353(A)(3) was supported by sufficient evidence and did not violate the mother's constitutional right to due process under U.S. Const. amends. V and XIV and Ohio Const. art. I, § 10. The mother offered unwavering support of and commitment to her husband, a sexually oriented offender who sexually abused her daughter, even supporting his efforts to move back into her home, and failed to complete her case plan objectives. In re A.W., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1944, 2006 Ohio 2103, (2006).

Court rejected the contention of a relative of a child that, as a qualified blood-relative of the child, she had a substantive due process right to custody of the child, who was in foster care. In Ohio, relatives seeking legal custody of a child are not afforded the same presumptive rights that a parent receives as a matter of law. In re A. V., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3021, 2006 Ohio 3149, (2006).

Courts must carefully avoid circumventing the fundamentally important adjudicatory stage when terminating parental rights because omitting the adjudicatory hearing from the process is a substantial deprivation of a parent's due process rights and renders the process fundamentally unfair. The adjudicatory stage requires stringent application of the Ohio Rules of Evidence and forbids any consideration of the child's best interests. In re Nibert, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2641, 2005 Ohio 2797, (2005).

Where an unidentified biological parent does not voluntarily step forward and identify himself as the parent of abused, neglected or dependent children and request that he be reunited with the children, such a parent is not denied due process of law when he is not provided with a comprehensive reunification plan prior to the court's divesting him of his parental rights. If, however, it comes to the social welfare agency's attention, through a paternity suit or otherwise, and prior to the court's granting permanent custody to the social welfare agency, that a previously unidentified individual is the biological parent of the children, the social welfare agency must acknowledge the fact of the children's biological parentage and include said parent as a party to the permanent custody proceedings: Garabrandt v. Lucas Cty. Children Services Bd., 47 Ohio App. 3d 119, 547 N.E.2d 997 (1988).

In cases involving children in the temporary legal custody of the Hamilton County Welfare Department, when removal from a natural parent is deemed appropriate by the welfare department, due process requires that parents be given notice prior to removal, with reasons for the removal, and that parents be afforded full opportunity at a hearing to present witnesses and evidence and have a right to a retained attorney, and that the hearing be conducted by a neutral and detached hearing officer who is to state in writing the decision reached and the reasons therefore: Doe v. Staples, 706 F.2d 985 (6th Cir. 1983).

Due process does not require a formal and full-blown adversary hearing in every case involving constitutionally protected liberty or property interests; therefore, the Hamilton County Welfare Department is not required to disclose the identity of persons who complain about parental misconduct, where the welfare department has temporary legal custody of the child and the parent, who has physical custody, is effectively notified of the charges against her and is provided a hearing to confront those charges: Doe v. Staples, 706 F.2d 985 (6th Cir. 1983).

Finding of parental unsuitability

Where a child's best interests under R.C. § 2151.42 were served by granting legal custody under R.C. § 2151.011(B)(19) to the child's relatives due to the mother's mental and/or physical condition pursuant to R.C. § 2151.04(B), the mother's unsuitability was implicit and a separate finding was not required; reasonable efforts to promote a reunification plan were made. In re Reeher, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3152, 2003 Ohio 3470, (2003).

Findings and conclusions of court

Where a magistrate's decision terminating the mother's parental rights and granting custody to the family services agency complied with Ohio statute, there was no deficiency in counsel's failure to seek findings and conclusions from the trial court. In re Teasley, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4580, 2003 Ohio 5079, (2003).

Foster care

Denial of the foster parents' motion to intervene (Ohio R. Civ. P. 24) was not a final appealable order, pursuant to RC § 2905.02(B), since the denial did not affect a substantial right; there was no judgment entry either granting or denying the agency's motion for permanent custody, or granting a disposition and placement of the minor child. Nor did dismissal of the foster parents' motion for custody, pursuant to RC § 2151.353(A)(3), affect a substantial right so as to make the denial of the motion a final appealable order because, since legal custody and permanent custody were alternative disposition choices, RC § 2151.353(A)(3) did not authorize the foster parents to intervene in the adjudicatory permanent custody proceeding (RC § 2151.414) and move for legal custody of the children. In re Fell, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2457, 2005 Ohio 2415, (2005).

Definition of residential facility employed by the general assembly and as used in RC § 5119.22(A)(1)(d)(iii), did not extend to RC § 2151.353(A)(5) and what that chapter of the revised code deals with, which was the juvenile court's disposition of abused, neglected, and dependent children, and therefore did not eliminate foster homes from qualifying as residential care as that term is used in RC § 2151.353(A)(5)(a); thus, in a case where a child suffered from several mental disorders and was placed in foster care, the child's circumstances did not fail to meet the requirements of RC § 2151.353(A)(5)(a) and the trial court did not abuse its discretion in ordering that he be placed in a planned permanent living arrangement. In re Priser, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1160, 2004 Ohio 1315, (2004).

In a case where a child suffered from several mental disorders and was placed in foster care, it did not follow that because the child was thriving and making progress in the family-like setting established by his current foster parents, he could function in any ordinary family-like home where the potential adoptive parents might lack the special skills possessed by the child's current foster parents; thus, pursuant to RC § 2151.353(A)(5)(a), the trial court did not abuse its discretion in determining that the child could not function in a family-like setting due to his special psychological and behavioral problems and needs. In re Priser, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1160, 2004 Ohio 1315, (2004).

In a case where a child suffered from several mental disorders and was placed in foster care, the statutory factors in RC § 2151.414(D)(1) and (2) favored keeping the child in a planned permanent living arrangement pursuant to RC § 2151.353(A)(5)(a) in his current foster home rather than awarding permanent custody to the county child services agency. The child's counselor testified about the disadvantages associated with removing the child from his current foster home, including a loss of security, stability, and trust. In re Priser, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1160, 2004 Ohio 1315, (2004).

Long-term foster care is only an option where requested by an agency: In re Brodbeck, 97 Ohio App. 3d 652, 647 N.E.2d 240 (1994).

Foster parents are not "parties" to juvenile court dispositional proceedings and do not have a right to intervene and move for custody of children who have been in their care and then removed from their home: In re Baatz, 1993 Ohio App. LEXIS 3996 (9th Dist. 1993).

The foster parents were not entitled to be made parties to the proceedings to accept the mother's permanent voluntary surrender of rights: In re Franklin, 88 Ohio App. 3d 277, 623 N.E.2d 720 (1993).

Foster parents who failed to file motion for permanent custody prior to original hearing were not permanently precluded from filing for review: In re Moorehead, 75 Ohio App. 3d 711, 600 N.E.2d 778 (1991).

Requirements for termination of parental rights, commitment to long-term foster care construed: In re Smith Children, 1990 Ohio App. LEXIS 2157 (1990).

Grandparents

Court rejected a father's contention that the trial court abused its discretion by not awarding custody of the father's child to the child's paternal grandparents because the grandparents had no standing to request custody, in that they had withdrawn their motion for legal custody of the child and never refiled their motion. In re M. L., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5893, 2006 Ohio 5931, (2006).

Juvenile court's grant of permanent custody to a county social service agency pursuant to RC §§ 2151.413 and 2151.414 rather than to the children's maternal grandparents was supported by evidence that the agency placement was in the children's best interests, as they were receiving necessary counseling and services; denial of the grandparents' request for custody was not an abuse of discretion, as they had not officially moved for such relief under RC § 2151.353(A)(3), but rather had merely sent correspondence to the juvenile court requesting such relief, and further, there was evidence that the children's best interests would not be served if they lived together due to acting out issues regarding sexual abuse that they suffered. In re Turner, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4832, 2006 Ohio 4906, (2006).

Grandmother's dependency petition and request for temporary custody of her grandchild pursuant to RC §§ 2151.27(A)(1) and 2151.04 was within the juvenile court's subject matter jurisdiction, as the grandmother qualified as "any person" pursuant to RC § 2151.27(A)(1), and RC §§ 2151.27(C) and 2151.353(A)(3) allowed her to seek custody. In re Brown, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3090, 2006 Ohio 3189, (2006).

Maternal grandmother of three minor children lacked standing to challenge a trial court's grant of permanent custody to a county agency under RC § 2151.414, as she had failed to appropriately seek legal custody of the children under RC § 2151.353(A)(3). In re Th.W., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2681, 2005 Ohio 2852, (2005).

Where a mother retained visitation rights after a child was adjudicated dependent, the juvenile court did not have to make a finding of suitability when awarding custody to a grandmother under RC § 2151.353 under a preponderance of the evidence standard of review. In addition, custody was properly awarded to the grandmother because the mother had not been able to provide stable housing or a consistent adequate level of care for the child's medical issues. In re A.W.-G., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2038, 2004 Ohio 2298, (2004).

It was an abuse of discretion to treat the grandmother's letter as anything other than a letter and to use it as the basis for granting permanent custody to the grandmother because the letter was neither in the form of a motion, nor was it served on any of the parties. In re D.D., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 3856, 2004 Ohio 4243, (2004).

Where a custody hearing did not constitute a true dispositional hearing as envisioned by RC § 2151.353, the trial court abused its discretion in granting custody to a maternal grandmother absent a finding that the children's mother was unsuitable or unfit, pursuant to RC § 2151.23(A)(2). In re Mahley, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1571, 2004 Ohio 1772, (2004).

Where there was no evidence that grandparents requested a stay of the child dependency proceedings and where, to the extent that the hearing occurred more than two years after the initial complaint, two RC § 2151.353(G)(1)-(3) extensions appear to have been granted, the lower court was obligated by statute to have a hearing on the grandchild's permanent custody. In re Goff, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5989, 2003 Ohio 6768, (2003).

Awarding custody of the child to the grandmother was proper because both parents were low-functioning and the mother had anger control problems and lacked parenting skills. In re Haywood, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3217, 2003 Ohio 3518, (2003).

Where the trial court denied the grandparents' motion to intervene in a temporary custody proceeding in a separate proceeding from the permanent custody case, the trial court was not required to grant a stay of the permanent custody proceeding pursuant to Ohio R. Civ. P. 62. In re Goff, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5442, 2003 Ohio 6087, (2003).

The court properly found that placing the child with his paternal grandparents was in his best interest. In re Dukes, 81 Ohio App. 3d 145, 610 N.E.2d 513 (1991).

Habeas corpus

Habeas corpus actions may proceed in child custody cases where a remedy by appeal is not speedy enough. However, habeas corpus relief is the exception: McNeal v. Miami County Children's Services Bd., 64 Ohio St. 3d 208, 594 N.E.2d 587 (1992).

Hearings generally

Department of Children and Family Services, the minor child's aunt, and the child's foster parents were entitled to a dispositional hearing, on their motion to modify a prior custody order, and the trial court was required to provide notice to the guardian ad litem of said motion; although the burden rested with the movants to set forth the evidence in support of their motion, and no error could be attributed to the trial court for the movants failing to meet this burden, the movants should not have been precluded from presenting such evidence, if desired. In re G.R., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 886, 2004 Ohio 999, (2004).

Juvenile Rule 34(B) provides that at a dispositional hearing, the court may admit hearsay, opinion and documentary evidence that is material and relevant. Since the focus of the dispositional phase of a neglect or dependency matter is the future care and best interests of the child, RC § 2151.35.3(A), then testimony relative to the child's home environment and parental care is material and relevant to the case. In re Smith, 77 Ohio App. 3d 1, 601 N.E.2d 45 (1991).

Dependency and abuse hearings are required to be bifurcated into separate adjudicatory and dispositional phases because the issues raised and procedures used at each hearing differ. Accordingly, at the adjudicatory phase of dependency and abuse proceedings, the trial court must focus upon whether the child has been proven to be dependent or abused, and must not allow the dispositional issues to dominate the determination of dependency or abuse. In re Pitts, 38 Ohio App. 3d 1, 525 N.E.2d 814 (1987).

Incarcerated parent

Incarcerated parent was denied due process where she did not receive the required notice and opportunity to participate in the proceedings leading to termination of parental rights. A trial court should only grant permanent custody as the initial disposition in extreme situations where reunification is not possible. Prior adjudication of permanent custody as a parent's other children does not result in a de facto termination of parental rights as to the child in question in the proceeding. In re Sheffey, 167 Ohio App. 3d 141, 854 N.E.2d 508, 2006 Ohio 619, (2006).

Visitation with an incarcerated parent is presumptively not in a child's best interest, and the parent bears the burden of proving that visitation is in the child's best interest. In re Erica, 65 Ohio Misc. 2d 17, 640 N.E.2d 623 (CP 1994).

An incarcerated mother's claim that the alleged conflict between the permanent custody procedures of RC Chapter 2151. and the adoption consent requirements of RC §§ 3107.06 and 3107.07 deprive her of due process and equal protection must fail because the two chapters of the Revised Code complement rather than oppose each other. Specifically, once an incarcerated person's parental rights have been terminated by a juvenile court pursuant to RC Chapter 2151., then RC § 3107.07(D) provides that that parent also loses her right to withhold consent to an adoption under RC § 3107.06. In re Dillard, 48 Ohio App. 3d 263, 549 N.E.2d 213 (1988).

Indigent persons

An indigent parent has a right to a transcript of proceedings for purposes of appealing from a state-instituted permanent custody action. State ex rel. Howard v. Ferri, 70 Ohio St. 3d 587, 639 N.E.2d 1189 (1994).

Judicial notice

A court cannot merely take judicial notice of its proceedings in another case in finding that a child is abused, neglected or dependent. In re Knotts, 109 Ohio App. 3d 267, 671 N.E.2d 1357 (1996).

Jurisdiction

Juvenile court did not err by dismissing the father's custody motion, under Ohio R. Juv. P. 18(D), because it unambiguously lacked jurisdiction pursuant to RC § 2151.353(J), since no action had been taken on the matter for over one year. Also, RC § 2151.353(J)(1) applied to vest jurisdiction in the juvenile court in the county in which the legal custodians now resided, and thus, the juvenile court did not have jurisdiction under the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction Act, RC § 3109.22 (repealed and replaced with RC § 3127.15). In re N.W., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2348, 2005 Ohio 2466, (2005).

A juvenile court has the jurisdiction to make a disposition on dependency complaints under RC § 2151.35.3(A) but only on the alternatives listed in the statute. In re Phillips, 1998 Ohio App. LEXIS 1584 (2nd Dist. 1998).

Pursuant to RC § 2151.23(A), the juvenile court has jurisdiction to determine the custody of a child alleged to be abused, neglected, or dependent, when that child is not the ward of any court in this state. This jurisdiction includes children subject to a divorce decree granting custody pursuant to RC § 3109.04. When a juvenile court makes a custody determination under RC §§ 2151.23 and 2151.35.3, it must do so in accordance with RC § 3109.04 (RC § 2151.23F, construed and applied.). In re Poling, 64 Ohio St. 3d 211, 594 N.E.2d 589, 1992 Ohio 144, (1992).

If jurisdiction has been previously acquired over children through custody disposition in a divorce decree, the common pleas court must certify the custody matter to the juvenile court before such court has jurisdiction to determine any subsequent custody issue. Before the juvenile court may determine custody in a neglect proceeding, it must make an adjudication of abuse, neglect or dependency: Moore v. Moore, 1991 Ohio App. LEXIS 472 (4th Dist. 1991).

Revised Code § 2151.23(A)(4) grants jurisdiction to the juvenile court to exercise only those powers given to the probate courts by RC Chapters 5122 and 5123. A probate court can hold a hearing under RC § 5122.15 and subsequently judicially commit a person to a mental health board pursuant to RC § 5122.15(C)(4) only if the judicial commitment proceedings were commenced in accordance with the procedural requirements of RC § 5122.11 and the other requirements of RC §§ 5122.11 through 5122.15 were complied with thereafter: In re Shott, 75 Ohio App. 3d 270, 599 N.E.2d 363 (1991).

Jurisdiction of the juvenile court was proper in a proceeding to terminate parental rights despite the failure to serve the infant's mother when the mother had voluntarily executed a permanent surrender of the child to a private agency and had actual notice of the proceeding via service upon her husband, the legal father: In re Luallen, 27 Ohio App. 3d 29, 27 Ohio B. 30, 499 N.E.2d 358 (1985).

Under the authority derived from RC §§ 2151.23, 2151.27 and 2151.35, the juvenile court has the authority to hear and determine the case of a neglected child notwithstanding the fact that the child is at the time within the continuing jurisdiction of the common pleas court by virtue of a divorce decree: In re Gail, 12 Ohio Misc. 251, 41 Ohio Op. 2d 341, 231 N.E.2d 253 (JC 1967).

Motion for custody

Trial court erred as a matter of law in awarding custody to a relative when the relative failed to file a motion for legal custody before the dispositional hearing. Any person who seeks an award of legal custody of a child must, under the Rules of Juvenile Procedure, file a motion requesting custody prior to the dispositional hearing: In re L.R.T., 165 Ohio App. 3d 77, 844 N.E.2d 914, 2006 Ohio 207, (2006).

Although a magistrate granted legal custody of a mother's child to legal custodians who had failed to make a motion pursuant to RC § 2151.353(A)(3) requesting such custody, the procedural defect was not so harmful as to rise to the level of plain error, as the mother was aware of the initiation of the legal proceedings, the defect was not prejudicial to the mother, and it did not affect the fairness, integrity, or public reputation of the judicial proceedings. In re H.B., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1969, 2006 Ohio 2124, (2006).

Because compliance with the statutory mandates in RC § 2151.01, et seq. and the rules of juvenile procedure is mandatory, and because any person wishing legal custody of a child must, prior to the dispositional hearing, file a written motion requesting such custody, the juvenile court erred as a matter of law in awarding legal custody of the mother's son to his maternal aunt when no such motion for custody had been filed prior to the dispositional hearing. In re C.T., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 916, 2005 Ohio 887, (2005).

The court abused its discretion in awarding legal custody of child to foster parent in the absence of a motion, filed prior to the hearing, requesting legal custody: In re Mayle, 2000 Ohio App. LEXIS 3379 (8th Dist. 2000).

Under RC § 2151.35.3, nonparents cannot be granted legal custody unless they filed a motion for custody prior to the dispositional hearing: In re Perez, 135 Ohio App. 3d 494, 734 N.E.2d 858 (1999).

Neglect and dependency

Where the parties stipulated the children were dependent and awarded the department of children and families protective supervision prior to the father's motion for custody of the minor child, the trial court applied the proper legal standard under RC § 3109.04 when it granted the father's motion. In re Rosier-Lemmon/Rosier Children, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1149, 2004 Ohio 1290, (2004).

Leaving children basically unattended with a loaded, unsecured gun is sufficient to support a finding of neglect and dependency. An order of permanent commitment or long-term foster care may be justified where a parent has repeatedly failed to supervise and provide adequate care for the children: Skeen v. Gullett, 1994 Ohio App. LEXIS 2746 (1994).

A parent's demonstration of lack of commitment toward her child is sufficient to support a finding that the child cannot be placed with the parent within a reasonable time. Testimony that the foster mother would adopt the child satisfies RC § 2151.41.4(D)(1). The time limits specified in RC §§ 2151.35.3 and 2151.41.5 are not unconstitutional as applied to a minor parent: In re McCrary, 75 Ohio App. 3d 601, 600 N.E.2d 347 (1991).

A finding of dependency should be made only upon the presentation of clear and convincing evidence. However, if the parties agree to waive such a hearing and stipulate to certain facts, then JuvR 29(D) must be fully complied with and the facts set forth in the record must sufficiently support a finding of dependency: Elmer v. Lucas Cty. Children Serv. Bd., 36 Ohio App. 3d 241, 523 N.E.2d 540 (1987).

Such certification does not constitute a complaint in the juvenile court that such child is neglected, dependent or abused and those dispositions provided for under RC § 2151.35.3 pertaining to neglected, dependent or abused children, including an award of permanent custody to a county welfare department which has assumed the administration of child welfare, are not applicable to such a child, disposition thereof being subject to and controlled by RC § 3109.04: In re Snider, 14 Ohio App. 3d 353, 14 Ohio B. 420, 471 N.E.2d 516 (1984).

Notice

Because the motion to grant legal custody to the uncle and his wife was filed after the dispositional hearing, it was a motion to modify the prior dispositional order and RC § 2151.415(A)(3) applied. The father participated in the hearing and was aware that his brother and his wife were potential custodians because the father had acquiesced to the temporary custody arrangement and thus, the trial court's reference to RC § 2151.353(A)(3) constituted harmless error. In re McCallum, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 905, 2007 Ohio 995, (Mar. 1, 2007).

Trial court did not err in awarding custody of a mother's son to the son's paternal grandparents after the mother stipulated to a finding of dependency because, while the paternal grandparents never filed a motion seeking custody under RC § 2151.353 or Ohio R. Juv. P. 33, the mother received more than sufficient notice that the grandparents could be awarded custody since the father, in his motion for custody, had requested that custody be awarded either to him or to the grandparents. Further, the transcript of the hearing indicated that the mother fully litigated the issue of granting custody of the son to the grandparents. In re Rumschlag, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1067, 2006 Ohio 1184, (2006).

Where a lack of notice denied the mother her right to defend her parental rights in a full adjudication and deprived her of due process, a permanent custody award of her child to family services was vacated and temporary custody to the agency was reinstated. In re D.H., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5784, 2003 Ohio 6478, (2003).

RC § 2151.414(A)(1) provides that a court shall schedule a hearing and give notice of the filing of the motion, and RC § 2151.353(B) contains a similar notice requirement; a father, whose child was adjudicated as neglected and abused, was provided proper notice of the proceeding by which the father's parental rights were terminated. In re I.M., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 6437, 2003 Ohio 7069, (2003).

Revised Code § 2151.41.7 and JuvR 36(A) allow a court to review a child's placement or custody arrangement at any time. However, a party with current custody of the child is entitled to prior notice that a change of custody will be considered at a hearing ostensibly concerning visitation rights: In re Bowman, 101 Ohio App. 3d 599, 656 N.E.2d 355 (1995).

Where the record clearly demonstrates that a parent had actual notice of the proceedings, fully understood his rights and the nature of the proceedings, and participated throughout, a failure to serve the parent with summons is inconsequential: In re Webb, 64 Ohio App. 3d 280, 581 N.E.2d 570 (1989).

Service by publication, under JuvR 16(A), requires that any notice published in a newspaper of general circulation include, among other things, the last known address of the party whose present whereabouts are unknown and a summary statement of the object of the complaint. Service by publication is a method of last resort and the requirements therefor, as specified in JuvR 16(A), are mandatory and will be strictly enforced. A failure to include such information in the publication-notice will result in defective service (JuvR 16[A], construed): In re Wilson, 21 Ohio App. 3d 36, 21 Ohio B. 38, 486 N.E.2d 152 (1984).

Permanent award to agency

Trial court did not err when it found that awarding a children services agency permanent custody of a mother's son was in the son's best interest where the evidence showed that the agency made reasonable efforts to reunify the mother with the son and provided many services, including providing the mother with one-on-one drug rehabilitation counseling and access to anger management training; that, while the mother had success with her substance abuse issues, concerns were noted regarding the mother's comprehension of the concepts that were taught; that the mother completed only a small number of the anger management and domestic violence classes and had difficulty with comprehension; and that the mother did not have appropriate housing or adequate supplies for the son. In re Norman F., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6720, 2006 Ohio 6810, (2006).

There was no abuse of discretion in finding that granting permanent custody of the child to the agency was in the child's best interest, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D) and RC § 2151.353, because the agency had been working with the parents to remedy the same problems in connection with the older sibling for over a year and neither parent was willing or able to provide a stable home for the newborn child. The father made no attempt to communicate with his newborn child, nor did he inquire as to her well-being; he did not make any attempt to contact the agency regarding the child; he did not attend the adjudication and disposition hearing; and, even though the father was incarcerated, he had an obligation to provide for his child. In re Jamilah P., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1511, 2006 Ohio 1631, (2006).

Trial court's finding that appellants' son was a dependent child under RC § 2151.04 on the ground that appellants had failed to remedy the conditions which led to the son's removal and awarding permanent custody of the son to the family services agency under RC § 2151.353 was unsupported by clear and convincing evidence because the information relied upon was either inconclusive or related to a time period seventeen months to three years prior to the son's birth when the parents two daughters were permanently removed from their custody. No current evidence or testimony was presented to provide any further explanation as to why the son should be deemed dependent. The trial court's dependency determination was based solely on the fact that appellants had previously lost custody of the first two children and on information which was not relative to the parents' unfitness at the time that the son was removed. In re Nicholas P., 169 Ohio App. 3d 570, 863 N.E.2d 1102, 2006 Ohio 6213, (2006).

In a proceeding to terminate a father's parental rights, a trial court did not err in finding that his two children could not be placed with either parent within a reasonable period of time under RC § 2151.414(E) and that granting a motion filed by a county department of job and family services for permanent custody under RC § 2151.353(A)(4) was in the children's best interests under RC § 2151.414(D). Although the father had made significant progress and had substantially complied with his most recent case plan, his compliance with the plan did not entitle him to custody, and the trial court could not ignore his long history of drug involvement and failed rehabilitation, his repeated incarcerations, or his initial failures to actively exercise visitation or to engage in his case plans. In re Gower, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5666, 2006 Ohio 5676, (2006).

Granting permanent custody of the children to the agency was in the best interest of the children because the mother's parental rights had involuntarily been terminated with respect to siblings of the children, the interactions between the children and the mother were very limited as the mother's frequent failures to attend visitations demonstrated a lack of concern for the children.

The mother also failed to complete her case plan because she did not complete her domestic violence counseling. In re G.S., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2389, 2006 Ohio 2530, (2006).

Trial court's determination to grant permanent custody of a mother's 10 children to a county social service agency was supported by clear and convincing evidence, pursuant to RC §§ 2151.353(A)(3) and 2151.414(B)(1)(d) and (D), as the mother was convicted of a sexual offense involving two of her children, the children's aunt who had requested custody was not a suitable placement because her home was too small, she barely knew the children, and it was in their best interests to be placed in the agency's custody. In re Hilyard, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1809, 2006 Ohio 1976, (2006).

Trial court's decision to award the permanent custody of 10 children to a county social service agency rather than to the children's paternal aunt was supported by ample evidence and was in the children's best interest, pursuant to RC §§ 2151.353(A)(3) and 2151.414, as the aunt had a very small home which would not accommodate her present family as well as an additional 10 children, she had been granted visitation rights which she chose to only exercise on a couple of occasions, and she did not believe that the children's father had committed sexual offenses against some of the children, for which he had been convicted and sentenced; the children were in the agency's custody for the requisite period of time under § 2151.414(B)(1)(d), had been placed in foster families, and had all been adjudicated as dependent and/or neglected. In re Hilyard, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1811, 2006 Ohio 1966, (2006).

Permanent custody of a father's son was properly granted to a children services agency under RC § 2151.353 because the father was unable to care for his son, as evidenced by his repeated failure to complete substance abuse treatment, the negative reports from his substance abuse counselor, and his failure to complete the anger management training that was mandated by his overall family case plan. The award of custody to the agency was in the son's best interest, especially since the foster family, which was the only family the son had ever known, had expressed an interest in adopting son. In re C.T., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1791, 2006 Ohio 1944, (2006).

Trial court did not err in finding that it was in the best interest of the children to be placed in permanent custody of the agency, pursuant to RC § 2151.414, rather than to be placed in a planned permanent living arrangement, pursuant to RC § 2151.353(A)(J), and did not err in terminating the father's parental rights. Although the trial court noted that the evidence showed that the son could not be successful in a less restrictive environment and that at the present time there was no adoptive placement for him, the caseworker, guardian ad litem, and the trial court each found that permanent custody was in the best interest of both children. In re Lenix, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1189, 2006 Ohio 1294, (2006).

Trial court did not err in determining that neither a grandmother nor an aunt were suitable placements for a father's 10 children after it determined that his parental rights were to be terminated, and its award to a county social service agency of permanent custody of the children was proper, as relative placement was given appropriate consideration pursuant to RC §§ 2151.353(A)(3), 2151.414(D), and 2151.412(C), to the extent the latter statute was applicable, and neither relative was suitable based on a variety of considerations and factors, as well as their custodial history with these and other children. In re Hilyard, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1807, 2006 Ohio 1965, (2006).

Trial court's findings, pursuant to RC §§ 2151.353(A)(4) and 2151.414(E)(4) and (11) that a mother's one-month-old son should not be placed with the mother within a reasonable time and that permanent custody was in the son's best interest were supported by clear and convincing evidence. The fact that the mother's parental rights to the son's brother had been terminated four years earlier was sufficient under RC § 2151.414(D)(5) and (E)(11) to support the trial court's decision. The trial court examined the mother's circumstances as they existed at the time of the proceedings and found that the mother was unable to understand how to feed the son the proper amount of food at proper intervals, that the mother attended only one-half of the visits provided after the son was removed from her care, and that the mother had failed to remedy unsanitary housing conditions that existed at the time of the removal of the son's older brother. In re Deasean J., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4218, 2006 Ohio 4294, (2006).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying a mother's motion for continuance of a permanent custody hearing in order to allow home studies to be completed on the child's maternal aunt and maternal grandmother because no interested persons had filed a motion seeking custody of the child, as outlined in RC § 2151.353(A)(3); the agency had previously investigated the grandmother as a proposed custody for two of the child's siblings and had denied the request for custody due to an inappropriate person living in the grandmother's house; and the aunt also had been investigated but had failed to attend a course to deal with the child's health issues and had failed to document that the housing authority had given its consent to allow the child to live with the aunt in her apartment, as requested by the child services agency. In re Fortson, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1362, 2006 Ohio 1501, (2006).

Trial court's decision to terminate a mother's parental rights and to place the child in the permanent custody of a county agency was supported by the weight and sufficiency of the evidence and suited the child's best interest pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D), as the child was severely physically disabled, he was in a foster home that provided extensive therapy and medical care and was willing to have him as long as necessary, and the mother's contact with the child was sporadic and was a struggle for her. Placement in a planned permanent living arrangement under RC § 2151.353(A)(f) was properly denied, as there was no evidence that the child could not reside in a family-like setting. In re Wilson, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 5594, 2005 Ohio 6203, (2005).

County social service agency made reasonable efforts to reunify parents with their child for purposes of a permanent custody determination, pursuant to RC § 2151.419(A)(1), where it provided the father with visitation, parenting instruction, financial assistance, and case management; accordingly, the court complied with RC § 2151.353(H) and removal of the child from the parents' home was proper. In re West, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2779, 2005 Ohio 2978, (2005).

Trial court had competent, credible evidence before it that granting permanent custody to the agency was in the children's best interests because the mother did not believe her son's allegations of sexual abuse by her boyfriend, she married the boyfriend soon after the allegations were made, and she had other children removed from her custody due to similar allegations. In re Moore, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 100, 2005 Ohio 136, (2005).

Trial court was authorized to grant permanent custody of the child to the agency because the trial court's October 30, 2003 journal entry made it clear that it was acting pursuant to the authority granted in RC § 2151.353(A)(2) in ordering temporary custody to the agency. Thus, under RC § 2151.353(B), the agency was permitted to file, and the trial court had the authority to grant, a motion for permanent custody. In re Van Atta, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3828, 2005 Ohio 4182, (2005).

Trial court improperly awarded permanent custody (RC § 2151.414 and RC § 2151.353) to the agency without first adjudicating the child dependent. The evidence introduced at the temporary emergency custody hearing did not support a dependency determination and no subsequent hearing was held to determine dependency. In re Nibert, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2641, 2005 Ohio 2797, (2005).

Trial court's decision to award a newborn child's permanent custody to a county social service agency was supported by the evidence, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(E), where the child was initially adjudicated as dependent, pursuant to RC § 2151.353(A)(4), and it was determined that the child could not be placed with either of the child's parents within a reasonable time and that permanent custody in the agency was in the child's best interest, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D), (E). The mother was a heavy smoker, she had no job and no independent living arrangement, she lived with several adults, including the father of the child, who was the subject of sexual child abuse charges, she did not have custody of her other children, and she used drugs and alcohol. In re West, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2780, 2005 Ohio 2977, (2005).

In light of evidence that a father had a problem with cocaine, gave implausible reasons for his positive drug tests, did not complete any of the three main case plan goals, and attended only 19 of 30 visitation sessions for the whole time allotted, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in finding that child's best interests would be served by granting permanent custody to appellee. In re Strychalski, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1364, 2004 Ohio 1542, (2004).

Where the grandmother, who took care of the children, was no longer willing or able to take care of them, the children's mother was deceased, and the children's fathers had not been involved in their lives, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in finding, pursuant to RC § 2151.414, that it was in the children's best interest to be placed in the permanent custody of the Montgomery County Children Services Board; on remand in the case, the trial court did as instructed by the appellate court when the trial court considered the Board's motion for permanent custody in accordance with RC § 2151.353. In re Muldrew, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1781, 2004 Ohio 2044, (2004).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in choosing permanent custody over planned permanent living arrangements for the children, so that they could be adopted if possible. The record indicated that the children were in a family-like therapeutic foster home, and there was nothing to indicate that they should be in residential or institutional care; there was insufficient evidence to demonstrate the children had a significant positive relationship with their mother; the children needed permanency, and there was a chance of adoption for the children. In re Hutzel, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 3942, 2004 Ohio 4337, (2004).

Evidence that (1) children's behavioral problems and developmental delays improved greatly after their being placed in foster care, (2) the foster parents addressed the children's medical problems which the parents had failed to treat, and (3) the parents had limited intelligence and an improvement in their mental health conditions would take intensive treatment for at least one year supported an award of permanent custody to a child protection agency. In re Kitana, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 3612, 2004 Ohio 3963, (2004).

Grant of permanent custody to child services was proper and child services had made reasonable efforts to prevent the removal of the child from the mother; it was in the child's best interest that child services have permanent custody. In re Kierra D., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 257, 2004 Ohio 277, (2004).

Where a trial court found that the child's mother had abandoned her, and that it was in the child's best interests to grant permanent custody to an agency due to the father's drug use and failure to complete his case plan, it properly granted permanent custody of the child to the agency. In re Strychalski, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1364, 2004 Ohio 1542, (2004).

Trial court's order awarding permanent custody of a father's three children to the county department of children and family services was upheld where: (1) the familial bond between him and his children was questionable; (2) he was unable to provide a secure and stable home for them; (3) he failed to remedy the problems that initially caused the children to be removed; (4) he abandoned the children; (5) he was unwilling to provide the basic necessities or prevent the abuse; and (6) he instilled a likelihood that a recurrence of abuse would threaten the children's safety; further, the trial court properly rejected the planned permanent living arrangement set forth in RC § 2151.353(5), finding no significant and positive relationship with either parent and a lack of desire by the children for reunification. In re D.B., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 893, 2004 Ohio 996, (2004).

Trial court properly granted a children's services motion for permanent custody where the mother's parental rights to five other children had been terminated and the father's parental rights to two other children had been terminated. In re Kristiana B., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4768, 2003 Ohio 5268, (2003).

Whether a child cannot be placed with either parent within a reasonable period of time or should not be placed with the parents pursuant to RC § 2151.414(A) or RC § 2151.353(A)(4), the court shall consider all relevant evidence; in an action for termination of parental custody, because a mother failed to successfully complete a reunification program, primarily because she continued to use drugs and failed to regularly visit her children, the termination was affirmed. In re L.A., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4312, 2003 Ohio 4790, (2003).

In a permanent custody proceeding, language in the summons clearly providing an explanation that granting permanent custody to the children services agency would divest the parents of their parental rights is sufficient to satisfy the requirement set forth in RC § 2151.35.3(B): In re Pachin, 50 Ohio App. 3d 44, 552 N.E.2d 655 (1988).

Although a juvenile court has the authority, under RC § 2151.35.3(A)(4), to grant permanent custody of a child immediately to an appropriate state agency upon determination that the child is abused, neglected or dependent, permanent custody should be granted at the initial disposition hearing only under extreme situations where reunification is not possible: In re Smart, 21 Ohio App. 3d 31, 21 Ohio B. 33, 486 N.E.2d 147 (1984).

A finding of parental unfitness is not a mandatory prerequisite to an award of permanent custody to a child welfare agency, although it may enter into a consideration of the child's "best interests." Consideration of "best interests" should not enter into the initial step of adjudicating dependency: In re Cunningham, 59 Ohio St. 2d 100, 13 Ohio Op. 3d 78, 391 N.E.2d 1034 (1979).

Once a child has been found to be "dependent" as defined in RC § 2151.04, the "best interests" of the child are the primary consideration in determining whether an award of permanent custody is justified pursuant to RC § 2151.35.3(A)(4): In re Cunningham, 59 Ohio St. 2d 100, 13 Ohio Op. 3d 78, 391 N.E.2d 1034 (1979).

Where the evidence shows that to return a child to her natural parent would be clearly detrimental to the child, such child is a "dependent child" under RC § 2151.04(C) and the court is authorized to commit the child permanently to the Children's Services Board under RC § 2151.35.3(D), even though the parent might be capable of giving proper care and support to other children: In re Justice, 59 Ohio App. 2d 78, 13 Ohio Op. 3d 139, 392 N.E.2d 897 (1978).

In a hearing concerning the dependency of a child, the trial court need not consider the desires of the mother with regard to its placement prior to the permanent commitment with a county agency: In re Baumgartner, 50 Ohio App. 2d 37, 4 Ohio Op. 3d 22, 361 N.E.2d 501 (1976).

Under RC § 2151.35.3, the filing of a complaint containing a prayer requesting permanent custody of minor children, sufficiently apprising the parents of the grounds upon which the order is to be based, and the service of summons upon the parents, explaining that the granting of such an order permanently divests them of their parental rights, are prerequisite to a valid adjudication that a child is neglected or dependent for the purpose of obtaining an order for permanent custody divesting parental rights: In re Fassinger, 42 Ohio St. 2d 505, 71 Ohio Op. 2d 503, 330 N.E.2d 431 (1975).

The mere allegation in a motion filed by the county welfare department that "it would appear to be in the best interests of said minors that they be placed permanently for adoption" does not state grounds under which a Juvenile Court may lawfully take permanent custody of children from their natural parents. In a hearing conducted pursuant to RC § 2151.35, in which the welfare department seeks to take permanent custody of children from their natural parents, the welfare department has the burden to plead and prove by clear and convincing evidence that the children are presently neglected or dependent. An adjudication of dependency made in a temporary custody hearing does not constitute legal grounds for granting permanent custody of minor children to the welfare department where over 22 months have elapsed between the temporary and permanent custody hearings, and where custody had been returned to the natural parents in the interim period between the temporary and permanent custody hearings. The granting of permanent custody under such circumstances requires a contemporaneous finding of dependency: In re Fassinger, 43 Ohio App. 2d 89, 72 Ohio Op. 2d 292, 334 N.E.2d 5 (1974).

Permanent custody of a dependent child will be granted to the county welfare department if it is for the best interest of a child, despite the well-intentioned concern of the maternal grandparents who wished to adopt the child: In re Baby Girl, 32 Ohio Misc. 217, 61 Ohio Op. 2d 439, 290 N.E.2d 925 (CP 1972).

Planned permanent living arrangement

Since a family services agency did not request a planned permanent living arrangement, the trial court did not have the authority, under RC § 2151.353(A)(5), to place the children in such an arrangement and, as a result, did not err in failing to consider such an arrangement instead of permanent custody. In re Daulton, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5324, 2006 Ohio 5352, (2006).

Because the agency was awarded temporary custody of all three children and filed its permanent custody motion in December 2003, it did not request a planned permanent living arrangement (PPLA); therefore, the trial court did not have the authority to place the children in a PPLA. In re S.R., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4921, 2006 Ohio 4983, (2006), writ of certiorari denied by 127 S. Ct. 2882, 167 L. Ed. 2d 1158, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 6154, 75 U.S.L.W. 3636 (U.S. 2007).

Magistrate's determination, which was adopted by the juvenile court, that a child should be placed in a planned permanent living arrangement was not against the manifest weight of the evidence pursuant to findings made under RC §§ 2151.353(A)(5)(b) and 2151.414, as the mother had limitations in her ability to understand due to permanent brain damage, the child had used drugs in the past, had behavioral problems, had excessive absenteeism from school, and had run away, and the mother had engaged in physical abuse on multiple occasions. In re K.B., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4810 (2006).

Children's services agency did not request the trial court to consider the alternative of placing the child in the planned permanent living arrangement, which was one of the first prerequisites of RC § 2151.415(C)(1). Also, since the child was only two and a half years old, it was unlikely that he needed to be learning the necessary skills for independent living when it was anticipated that he may be adopted or live in a foster home. In re English, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2952, 2006 Ohio 3067, (2006).

After a public children services agency or private child placing agency is granted temporary custody of a child and files a motion for permanent custody, a juvenile court does not have the authority to place the child in a planned permanent living arrangement when the agency does not request this disposition: In re A.B., 110 Ohio St. 3d 230, 852 N.E.2d 1187, 2006 Ohio 4359, (2006).

Based on the clear and unambiguous language of RC § 2151.353(A)(5), where a county social service agency requested permanent custody of a mother's children and not a planned permanent living arrangement (PPLA), the mother's claim that the PPLA was in the best interests of the children rather than the grant of permanent custody lacked merit; the court lacked authority to grant a PPLA where the requirements of § 2151.353(A)(5) were not met. In re M.E., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1689, 2006 Ohio 1837, (2006).

As there was no requirement under RC § 2151.353(A)(5)(b) that a minor child was violent for purposes of a juvenile court's order that he be placed in a planned permanent living arrangement, a mother's claim on appeal that such a finding was not made had no merit. In re K.B., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4810 (2006).

Court of Appeals of Ohio, Eighth Appellate District, Cuyahoga County restates the law in the Eighth District to be that a court may not order a planned permanent living arrangement unless it is requested by a "public children services agency or private child placing agency," pursuant to RC § 2151.353(A)(5); accordingly, a father's request for such a living arrangement failed, as the county had to make the request. In re M.W., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 1273, 2005 Ohio 1302, (2005), criticized by In re A.S., 163 Ohio App. 3d 647, 2005 Ohio 5309, 839 N.E.2d 972, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 4830 (Ohio Ct. App., Summit County 2005), criticized by In re A.B., 2005 Ohio 4936, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 4466 (Ohio Ct. App., Summit County Sept. 21, 2005).

Where a child could not be placed with either parent within a reasonable time as the mother was struggling with a drug addiction, the father had a drug problem that was not being treated, and the mother failed to complete her case plan, the court properly placed the child into the planned permanent living arrangement pursuant to RC §§ 2151.353 and 2151.414(D). In re Wheeler, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3330, 2005 Ohio 3613, (2005).

Child with severe form of Down's Syndrome was properly placed in a planned permanent living arrangement: Miller v. Green County Children's Servs. Bd., 162 Ohio App. 3d 416, 833 N.E.2d 805, 2005 Ohio 4035, (2005).

There was clear and convincing evidence to support a trial court's determination that a child, who suffered from Down's

Syndrome and who had multiple medical problems which required specialized knowledge from a caretaker, should be placed in a planned permanent living arrangement, as he was unable to function in a family-like setting, it would be very difficult to find an adoptive placement, the foster family where he presently was placed was working out well but they had not decided about adoption due to the father's deployment in the military, and it was in the child's best interest, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D), to order such an arrangement. Miller v. Green County Children's Servs. Bd., 162 Ohio App. 3d 416, 833 N.E.2d 805, 2005 Ohio 4035, (2005).

Trial court did not err by not ordering a planned permanent living arrangement instead of awarding appellee family services agency permanent custody of appellant mother's children; as the agency never requested a planned permanent living arrangement, pursuant to RC § 2151.353(A)(5), the trial court could not have ordered such an arrangement. In re K.P., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1494, 2004 Ohio 1674, (2004), appeal denied by 102 Ohio St. 3d 1473, 2004 Ohio 2830, 809 N.E.2d 1159, 2004 Ohio LEXIS 1419 (2004).

Trial court did not err in granting permanent custody of the mother's four children to the county family welfare agency despite the mother's claim that the children should have been placed in a planned permanent living arrangement (PPLA) instead of permanent custody with the county family welfare agency; the trial court could place a child in a PPLA only if the county family welfare agency requested such a placement and the record showed that it did not make any such request. In re B.N., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 4052, 2004 Ohio 4469, (2004).

Court did not err in terminating a mother's parental rights instead of granting a planned permanent living arrangement under RC § 2151.353(A)(5), as (1) the child was under 16, (2) there were no findings that he required institutional care, and (3) while the mother had completed a four-month parenting program, testimony indicated that her interaction with the child remained at times inappropriate and deconstructive. In re R.N., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2275, 2004 Ohio 2560, (2004).

Trial court, in placing a mother's daughter in a permanent planned living arrangement, properly considered RC § 2151.353(A)(5)(b), as it specifically found that the mother suffered from physical and psychological problems for which she failed to obtain appropriate treatment, and that her significant physical, mental and psychological problems rendered her unable to care for her daughter. In re M. B., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2373, 2004 Ohio 2666, (2004).

Trial court's placement of mother's daughter in a permanent planned living arrangement was supported by clear and convincing evidence about the mother's mental health problems, including her overreacting to stimulation, her emotional instability, difficulty in maintaining stress, drinking issues, and a suicide attempt. In re M. B., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2373, 2004 Ohio 2666, (2004).

Where two boys were afraid of their mother, and though they loved her, did not want to live with her, the evidence did not clearly support a finding that they had a significant and positive relationship with their mother; therefore, the trial court did not err by choosing permanent custody with the county over a planned permanent living arrangement, despite the request of the guardian ad litem. In re M.H., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 6445, 2003 Ohio 7053, (2003).

When a child is adjudicated as such, the court may make one of several orders, including, pursuant to RC § 2151.353(A), placing the child in a planned permanent living arrangement under RC § 2151.353(5). In re I.M., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 6437, 2003 Ohio 7069, (2003).

Trial court's placement of the minor child in a Planned Permanent Living Arrangement with the child welfare agency was reversible error, as the agency never requested the placement of the minor child in that arrangement, and such a request was a prerequisite under statutory law before such a placement could be validly made. In re McKee, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5266, 2003 Ohio 5925, (2003).

Planned permanent living arrangement (PPLA) for the minor child properly was granted over mother's objection because her initial agreement had been informed, voluntary and with the advice of counsel, waiving a later claim that it was ill-advised. In re D.B., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3232, 2003 Ohio 3521, (2003).

In an adjudication of a minor child as dependent, none of the situations listed in RC § 2151.353(A)(5) for a planned permanent living arrangement were present because the child was able to function in a family-like setting, and did not require residential or institutional care. In re Beasley, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 2557, 2003 Ohio 2857, (2003).

Trial court did not err when it failed to place a boy in a planned permanent living arrangement where the evidence showed that the boy was capable of living in a family-like setting and none of the other criteria in RC § 2151.353(A)(5)(a)-(c) for such placements were established by the evidence. In re Bounds, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4276, 2003 Ohio 4733, (2003).

Pleadings

Pursuant to RC § 2151.27, in a juvenile action, the complaint shall allege the particular facts upon which the allegation that the child is a neglected, or dependent child is based, and, pursuant to RC § 2151.353(B) and Ohio R. Juv. P. 10(D), shall contain a prayer specifically requesting permanent custody if that is the relief sought by the complainant; a complaint that sought to adjudicate a father's child neglected and abused properly stated the claim against the father. In re I.M., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 6437, 2003 Ohio 7069, (2003).

Prohibition

Where a juvenile court judge had statutory authority to determine permanent custody issues under RC §§ 2151.23(A)(2) and 2151.353(A)(4), and a father had a legal remedy providing adequate relief, the father was foreclosed from pursuing an extraordinary remedy in prohibition. State ex rel. Wells v. Costine, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 530, 2004 Ohio 563, (2004).

Protective supervision

Revised Code § 2151.35.3(C) is properly construed in OAC 5101:2-39-30 and does not impose a limit on the number of extensions of protective supervision orders: In re Collier, 85 Ohio App. 3d 232, 619 N.E.2d 503 (1993).

Reasonable efforts to reunify family

Requirement in RC § 2151.419(A)(1) that a children's services agency make "reasonable efforts" to reunify children removed from their home with their families applied to hearings held pursuant to RC §§ 2151.28, 2151.31(E), 2151.314, 2151.33, and 2151.353, but it did not apply when permanent custody was sought pursuant to RC § 2151.413 or when such a motion was heard pursuant to RC § 2151.414, so it did not apply to an agency's motion for permanent custody of a father's children. In re R.A.M., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3149, 2006 Ohio 3242, (2006).

Where a county agency initially sought permanent custody of a father's child, pursuant to RC § 2151.353 it was not required to show reasonable efforts to reunify the child with her father; further, permanent custody with the agency was shown to be in the child's best interests pursuant to RC § 2151.414(E)(13) and (16), as the father had a history of incarcerations and drug addictions, he did not indicate an intention to change his behavior, and the best interest of the child was served by her custody with the agency for purposes of a stable family environment, potentially with the foster family who wished to adopt her. In re Bodenheimer, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3143, 2006 Ohio 3253, (2006).

Reasonable efforts under RC § 2151.419(A) toward reunification was inapplicable because the permanent custody hearing was unrelated to RC § 2151.353, rather, the hearing was held under RC § 2151.414 pursuant to a motion made under RC § 2151.413(A). In re Samples, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 963, 2006 Ohio 1056, (2006).

Trial court's failure to include a reasonable efforts finding in its decision as to a mother's daughters' disposition in a dependency proceeding was harmless error, as she stipulated to the girls' disposition, which was an implicit agreement by her to all aspects of that disposition; however, it was not harmless error to fail to make a reasonable efforts finding with respect to the mother's son, pursuant to RC §§ 2151.419(A)(1), (B)(1), and 2151.353(H), as no such stipulation was made and while she did not object to the recommended disposition, she never expressly agreed to it. In re Ohm, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3245, 2005 Ohio 3500, (2005).

Evidence relating to the natural mother's parenting history and her inability to comply with prior reunification plans is relevant to a juvenile court's determination of whether to commit a child to the permanent custody of a welfare agency pursuant to RC §§ 2151.35.3 and 2151.41.4. In re Brown, 60 Ohio App. 3d 136, 552 N.E.2d 1217 (1989).

In an action for permanent custody under RC § 2151.35.3(A)(4), permanent custody should only be granted at the initial disposition hearing under extreme situations where reunification is not possible. In re Pachin, 50 Ohio App. 3d 44, 552 N.E.2d 655 (1988).

Revised Code § 2151.41.2 does not require a juvenile court to order a reunification plan when it makes a dispositional order pursuant to RC § 2151.35.3(A)(4). In re Baby Girl Baxter, 17 Ohio St. 3d 229, 17 Ohio B. 469, 479 N.E.2d 257 (1985).

Any time a dependent child is temporarily placed with someone other than a parent, a reunification plan should be formulated. In cases where the child is placed with a relative, pursuant to RC § 2151.35.3(A)(2), the court should formulate the reunification plan itself or appoint an agency with some expertise in the area to formulate one. In re Patterson, 16 Ohio App. 3d 214, 16 Ohio B. 229, 475 N.E.2d 160 (1984).

In a case in which a social welfare agency moves for permanent custody of a child for adoptive placement, if the record reveals that the non-custodial parent has maintained a continuing interest in his or her child's welfare, RC § 2151.41.2(C) places a mandatory duty on the social welfare agency to prepare a comprehensive reunification plan for that non-custodial parent. In re Ball, 5 Ohio App. 3d 56, 5 Ohio B. 152, 449 N.E.2d 490 (1982).

Religion

Trial court did not err in overruling the objections filed by a relative of a child to a magistrate's report that concerned the magistrate's curtailment of the relative's cross-examination of the child's foster mother, who was competing for custody of the child, as to the religious practices of the foster mother and her husband because the foster parents' religious persuasion was irrelevant because the relative still retained parental rights including the right to choose the religion in which the child would be raised. Moreover, it was clear that counsel did not possess a good faith belief that a factual predicate existed for questioning the foster mother about the level of religious observance in her household. In re A. V., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3021, 2006 Ohio 3149, (2006).

Temporary custody

Trial court did not have the authority to grant a third extension of temporary custody because temporary custody of children in the care of a children's services agency was limited to a period of two years—an initial period of one year, followed by up to two extensions of six months each. In re D.J., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6276, 2006 Ohio 6304, (2006).

Despite the fact that the two-year sunset period in RC § 2151.35.3(F) had expired, the trial court retained jurisdiction to enter dispositional orders as to the parties' child since the evidence showed that the child's mother did not substantially mitigate problems which caused the initial order of temporary custody. The evidence showed that the mother suffered from bipolar disorder but did not regularly take her medications, causing her to become physically violent; that the mother worked out of her home as a phone sex operator; and that there was a danger that the child would be present during telephone conversations and would be exposed to sexually oriented material on the mother's computer. In re Shropshire, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3985, 2006 Ohio 4049, (2006).

Trial court did not err in extending an original order of temporary custody for six months, so that a mother could secure appropriate housing and maintain sobriety, as temporary custody could be properly extended so as to exceed a total of two years, as the jurisdictional grant of RC § 2151.35.3(E)(1) was not limited; hence, a judge could enter an order of disposition pursuant to RC § 2151.41.5(A) after the sunset date when the problems that led to the original temporary custody order remained unresolved. In re N.B., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3295, 2003 Ohio 3656, (2003), criticized by In re D.J., 2006 Ohio 6304, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6276 (Ohio Ct. App., Montgomery County Dec. 1, 2006).

Trial court erred when it terminated an action filed by a county department of job and family services which sought a judgment declaring that a child was dependent, without terminating an order it issued earlier which gave temporary custody of the child to the department. In re Snow, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1361, 2004 Ohio 1532, (2004).

Evidence that mother used prescription drugs heavily and provided drugs to minors, was arrested four times in three years, placed her children at risk, and did not comply with court-ordered drug testing or use social services appropriately supported the trial court's award of temporary custody of the children to social services. In re Barnosky, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 994, 2004 Ohio 1127, (Mar. 9, 2004).

The passing of the statutory time period ("sunset date") pursuant to RC § 2151.35.3(F) does not divest juvenile courts of jurisdiction to enter dispositional orders. In re Young Children, 76 Ohio St. 3d 632, 669 N.E.2d 1140 (1996).

The total time an agency can be granted custody of an abused or dependent child is two years. The court's failure to render a decision within the time limit may violate parental due process rights. In re Omosun Children, 106 Ohio App. 3d 813, 667 N.E.2d 431 (1995).

Where a juvenile court grants temporary custody to a children services agency under RC § 2151.35.3, it has continuing jurisdiction until the child reaches eighteen. In re Doe Children, 93 Ohio App. 3d 134, 637 N.E.2d 977 (1994).

The trial court had authority to grant temporary custody of the delinquent child to the children services board and to order placement in a residential treatment facility. In re Lawson, 98 Ohio App. 3d 456, 648 N.E.2d 889 (1994).

The one year limitation upon a temporary custody order runs from the date of request for temporary custody following a disposition of protective supervision pursuant to the original complaint. In re Ward, 75 Ohio App. 3d 377, 599 N.E.2d 431 (1992).

Where a single parent's diabetes adversely affects her child's care and welfare, a court may grant temporary custody to the human services department. The one-year limit in RC § 2151.35.3(F) cannot be strictly applied. In re Ward, 75 Ohio App. 3d 377, 599 N.E.2d 431 (1992).

A court loses jurisdiction to determine the custody of children after the "sunset" date provided by RC § 2151.35.3. RC § 2151.41.5 authorizes no more than two six month extensions. In re Travis Children, 80 Ohio App. 3d 620, 609 N.E.2d 1356 (1992).

Revised Code § 2151.35.3(B) does not require a public children's services agency to be awarded temporary custody before it can move for permanent custody but rather requires a court to adhere to the procedures of RC § 2151.41.4 before it converts a temporary custody order into a permanent one. In re Burkhart, 1991 Ohio App. LEXIS 3937 (12th Dist. 1991).

When an emergency situation exists, the juvenile court may grant temporary custody of a child to the local Children Services Board in an ex parte proceeding. Parker v. Children Services Bd. of Trumbull Cty., 21 Ohio App. 3d 115, 21 Ohio B. 123, 487 N.E.2d 341 (1984).

If a juvenile court commits to the temporary custody of a public children services agency a child who has been adjudicated to be unruly or delinquent pursuant to RC § 2151.35.4(A)(1) or RC § 2152.19(A)(1), respectively, the duration of the temporary custody order is subject to the time limitations set forth in RC § 2151.35.3(F) and RC § 2151.41.5: OAG No. 2003-004 (2003).

If a juvenile court, in making disposition of an unruly or delinquent child pursuant to RC §§ 2151.35.4 or 2151.35.5, places the child into the temporary custody of the county department of human services in accordance with RC § 2151.35.3, the juvenile court is required to hold periodic reviews pursuant to RC § 2151.41.7 and JuvR 36(A): OAG No. 99-041 (1999).

Both the existing juvenile code and the Juvenile Rules require a hearing before a temporary commitment to the Ohio youth commission can be made permanent, which hearing requires the presence of the youth involved: OAG No. 72-071 (1972).

—Termination

Where a natural parent moves to terminate temporary custody in another based on a previous finding of dependency, the parent's present suitability and fitness for the role of parent must be considered in the context of the child's best interests: In re Christopher, 54 Ohio App. 2d 137, 8 Ohio Op. 3d 271, 376 N.E.2d 603 (1977).

Termination of parental rights

Parent who has lost permanent custody of a child does not have standing as a nonparent to file a petition for custody of that child: In re McBride, 110 Ohio St. 3d 19, 850 N.E.2d 43, 2006 Ohio 3454, (2006).

Trial court did not err in terminating a mother's parental rights rather than placing her children in a planned permanent living arrangement pursuant to RC § 2151.353 because the mother suffered from a significant mental problem which interfered with her ability to parent the children, and while the children had a significant bond with the mother, the testimony of the children's case worker and the guardian ad litem established that the children's need for stability was critical. In re Laigle Children, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 756, 2006 Ohio 829, (2006).

Grant of permanent custody to a Children Services Board was in the best interest of the children, as the mother's parental rights to her two other children previously had been terminated under RC §§ 2151.353, 2151.414, or 2151.415, and evidence supported the trial court's findings under the RC § 2151.414(D)(1)-(5) factors, as the mother's interactions with her children were poor and had not progressed, she resisted treatment of her borderline personality disorder and continued to abuse crack cocaine, the older child had bonded with the foster family, the children had been in the Board's custody significant portions of their lives and needed a secure placement. In re J.G., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2237, 2004 Ohio 2513, (2004).

Trial court correctly found, under RC § 2151.353(A)(4), that a child could not be returned to the custody of her parents after the parents severely physically abused the child's sibling and, due to severe and chronic mental illness, would be unable to provide the child with an adequate, permanent, home within one year, and, when given the opportunity, did not support, visit, or communicate with the child. In re Lauren P., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1458, 2004 Ohio 1656, (2004).

Termination of a mother's parental rights and award of custody to appellee department of job and family services was affirmed where, inter alia, the child was placed after not being picked up at day care, where a psychologist expressed significant concerns about the mother's ability to provide a safe and nurturing environment for the child, and cited the mother's multiple health problems, low level of intelligence, and potential for personality disturbance as factors which prevented her from providing adequate parental care, where the mother had lost two prior children in permanent custody cases in another county, where the mother had a history of interacting with men who had lost their own children to permanent custody, and/or had criminal histories, and where the mother had moved four times within the last year and one-half, and relied on family members for transportation. In re Huston, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 6569, 2003 Ohio 7280, (2003).

Termination of parental rights pursuant to RC § 2151.353(A)(3) based on the factors of RC § 2151.414(E)(2) was an abuse of discretion where the evidence did not support the finding that the mother suffered from a chronic mental illness or retardation so severe that she could not provide an adequate home; she had been capable of caring for herself previously, the examining psychologist recommended custody, and there was no evidence of abuse or neglect. In re Jordan, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5424, 2003 Ohio 6071, (2003).

Order terminating parental rights was not against the manifest weight of the evidence that the mother failed to rectify problems that caused the removal of her two other children, including mental health and anger management issues, domestic violence, and her lack of parenting skills, and that she refused to accept a case plan from a caseworker for her third child. In re Foster, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4561, 2003 Ohio 5053, (2003).

The court did not err by terminating the mother's parental rights where, after the children's father was convicted of sexually molesting them and imprisoned, she took up residence with another convicted child molester: In re Kutzli, 71 Ohio App. 3d 843, 595 N.E.2d 1026 (1991).

Evidence that the parents were uncooperative with caseworkers from the children's services agency reflects adversely on the parent's ability to care for their children since the parents are fully aware that failure to abide by the agency's guidelines could result in the divestiture of their rights. The evidence that the father had sexually abused the children was overwhelming. The unsuitability of each parent must be considered separately: In re Pieper Children, 74 Ohio App. 3d 714, 600 N.E.2d 317 (1991).

Transfer from another court

When a case concerning a child is transferred or certified from another court, the certification from the transferring court is deemed to be the complaint: In re Snider, 14 Ohio App. 3d 353, 14 Ohio B. 420, 471 N.E.2d 516 (1984).

§ 2151.35.4] § 2151.354 Disposition of unruly child.

(A) If the child is adjudicated an unruly child, the court may:

(1) Make any of the dispositions authorized under section 2151.353 [2151.35.3] of the Revised Code;

(2) Place the child on community control under any sanctions, services, and conditions that the court prescribes, as described in division (A)(3) of section 2152.19 of the Revised Code, provided that, if the court imposes a period of community service upon the child, the period of community service shall not exceed one hundred seventy-five hours;

(3) Suspend the driver's license, probationary driver's license, or temporary instruction permit issued to the child for a period of time prescribed by the court and suspend the registration of all motor vehicles registered in the name of the child for a period of time prescribed by the court. A child whose license or permit is so suspended is ineligible for issuance of a license or permit during the period of suspension. At the end of the period of suspension, the child shall not be reissued a license or permit until the child has paid any applicable reinstatement fee and complied with all requirements governing license reinstatement.

(4) Commit the child to the temporary or permanent custody of the court;

(5) Make any further disposition the court finds proper that is consistent with sections 2151.312 [2151.31.2] and 2151.56 to 2151.61 of the Revised Code;

(6) If, after making a disposition under division (A)(1), (2), or (3) of this section, the court finds upon further hearing that the child is not amenable to treatment or rehabilitation under that disposition, make a disposition otherwise authorized under divisions (A)(1), (3), (4), and (7) of section 2152.19 of the Revised Code that is consistent with sections 2151.312 [2151.31.2] and 2151.56 to 2151.61 of the Revised Code.

(B) If a child is adjudicated an unruly child for committing any act that, if committed by an adult, would be a drug abuse offense, as defined in section 2925.01 of the Revised Code, or a violation of division (B) of section 2917.11 of the Revised Code, in addition to imposing, in its discretion, any other order of disposition authorized by this section, the court shall do both of the following:

(1) Require the child to participate in a drug abuse or alcohol abuse counseling program;

(2) Suspend the temporary instruction permit, probationary driver's license, or driver's license issued to the child for a period of time prescribed by the court. The court, in its discretion, may terminate the suspension if the child attends and satisfactorily completes a drug abuse or alcohol abuse education, intervention, or treatment program specified by the court. During the time the child is attending a program as described in this division, the court shall retain the child's temporary instruction permit, probationary driver's license, or driver's license, and the court shall return the permit or license if it terminates the suspension.

(C)(1) If a child is adjudicated an unruly child for being an habitual truant, in addition to or in lieu of imposing any other order of disposition authorized by this section, the court may do any of the following:

(a) Order the board of education of the child's school district or the governing board of the educational service center in the child's school district to require the child to attend an alternative school if an alternative school has been established pursuant to section 3313.533 [3313.53.3] of the Revised Code in the school district in which the child is entitled to attend school;

(b) Require the child to participate in any academic program or community service program;

(c) Require the child to participate in a drug abuse or alcohol abuse counseling program;

(d) Require that the child receive appropriate medical or psychological treatment or counseling;

(e) Make any other order that the court finds proper to address the child's habitual truancy, including an order requiring the child to not be absent without legitimate excuse from the public school the child is supposed to attend for five or more consecutive days, seven or more school days in one school month, or twelve or more school days in a school year and including an order requiring the child to participate in a truancy prevention mediation program.

(2) If a child is adjudicated an unruly child for being an habitual truant and the court determines that the parent, guardian, or other person having care of the child has failed to cause the child's attendance at school in violation of section 3321.38 of the Revised Code, in addition to any order of disposition authorized by this section, all of the following apply:

(a) The court may require the parent, guardian, or other person having care of the child to participate in any community service program, preferably a community service program that requires the involvement of the parent, guardian, or other person having care of the child in the school attended by the child.

(b) The court may require the parent, guardian, or other person having care of the child to participate in a truancy prevention mediation program.

(c) The court shall warn the parent, guardian, or other person having care of the child that any subsequent adjudication of the child as an unruly or delinquent child for being an habitual or chronic truant may result in a criminal charge against the parent, guardian, or other person having care of the child for a violation of division (C) of section 2919.21 or section 2919.24 of the Revised Code.

Case plan

If a juvenile court, in making disposition of an unruly or delinquent child pursuant to RC §§ 2151.35.4 or 2151.35.5, places the child into the temporary custody of the county department of human services in accordance with RC § 2151.35.3 and the department provides services to that child, the county department of human services is required to develop and file with the court a case plan pursuant to RC § 2151.41.2 and to hold semiannual reviews of the case plan pursuant to RC § 2151.41.6: OAG No. 99-041 (1999).

Due process

Any construction of RC § 2151.35.4 that would allow commitment of an "unruly" child to the legal custody of the Ohio youth commission would be a violation of due process of law, and therefore an improper construction. Both the existing juvenile code and the juvenile rules require a hearing before a temporary commitment to the Ohio youth commission can be made permanent, which hearing requires the presence of the youth involved: OAG No. 72-071 (1972).

Placement with youth services department

Upon a determination during reviewing hearings held pursuant to RC § 2151.417 and Ohio R. Juv. P. 36(A) that a juvenile was not benefitting from a residential treatment program that he was originally committed to upon being declared a delinquent pursuant to RC § 2151.35(A)(1) and that he was acting out, a juvenile court's placement of the juvenile with the Department of Youth Services was not error pursuant to RC § 2151.354(5) and (6); the juvenile was not amenable to treatment or rehabilitation due to his conduct at the residential treatment facility. In re D.B., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2738, 2006 Ohio 2891, (2006).

Prior law

Under this section a court may make an order permitting an incorrigible child to make his home with his father on certain days of the week, and with his mother on the remaining days of the week, subject to certain conditions and provided that final judgment of commitment to any other person, place or institution should be suspended as long as such child should comply with such conditions, in the opinion of the judge, without losing jurisdiction of such case; and the court may thereafter remove such child from the custody of its parents and commit it to a county children's home: (decided under former analogous section) Children's Home v. Fetter, 90 Ohio St. 110, 106 N.E. 761 (1914).

Temporary custody

If a juvenile court commits to the temporary custody of a public children services agency a child who has been adjudicated to be unruly or delinquent pursuant to RC § 2151.35.4(A)(1) or RC § 2152.19(A)(1), respectively, the duration of the temporary custody order is subject to the time limitations set forth in RC § 2151.35.3(F) and RC § 2151.41.5: OAG No. 2003-004 (2003).

If a juvenile court, in making disposition of an unruly or delinquent child pursuant to RC §§ 2151.35.4 or 2151.35.5, places the child into the temporary custody of the county department of human services in accordance with RC § 2151.35.3, the juvenile court is required to hold periodic reviews pursuant to RC § 2151.41.7 and JuvR 36(A): OAG No. 99-041 (1999).

[SEALING AND EXPUNGEMENT OF RECORDS CONCERNING DELINQUENT AND UNRULY CHILDREN AND JUVENILE TRAFFIC OFFENDERS]

As used in sections 2151.356 [2151.35.6] to 2151.358 [2151.35.8] of the Revised Code:

(A) "Expunge" means to destroy, delete, and erase a record, as appropriate for the record's physical or electronic form or characteristic, so that the record is permanently irretrievable.

(B) "Seal a record" means to remove a record from the main file of similar records and to secure it in a separate file that contains only sealed records accessible only to the juvenile court.

[§ 2151.35.6] § 2151.356 Procedure for sealing records of alleged and adjudicated delinquent and unruly children and adjudicated juvenile traffic offenders.

(A) The records of a case in which a person was adjudicated a delinquent child for committing a violation of section 2903.01, 2903.02, 2907.02, 2907.03, or 2907.05 of the Revised Code shall not be sealed under this section.

(B)(1) The juvenile court shall promptly order the immediate sealing of records pertaining to a juvenile in any of the following circumstances:

(a) If the court receives a record from a public office or agency under division (B)(2) of this section;

(b) If a person was brought before or referred to the court for allegedly committing a delinquent or unruly act and the case was resolved without the filing of a complaint against the person with respect to that act pursuant to section 2151.27 of the Revised Code;

(c) If a person was charged with violating division (E)(1) of section 4301.69 of the Revised Code and the person has successfully completed a diversion program under division (E)(2)(a) of section 4301.69 of the Revised Code with respect to that charge;

(d) If a complaint was filed against a person alleging that the person was a delinquent child, an unruly child, or a juvenile traffic offender and the court dismisses the complaint after a trial on the merits of the case or finds the person not to be a delinquent child, an unruly child, or a juvenile traffic offender;

(e) Notwithstanding division (C) of this section and subject to section 2151.358 [2151.35.8] of the Revised Code, if a person has been adjudicated an unruly child, that person has attained eighteen years of age, and the person is not under the jurisdiction of the court in relation to a complaint alleging the person to be a delinquent child.

(2) The appropriate public office or agency shall immediately deliver all original records at that public office or agency pertaining to a juvenile to the court, if the person was arrested or taken into custody for allegedly committing a delinquent or unruly act, no complaint was filed against the person with respect to the commission of the act pursuant to section 2151.27 of the Revised Code, and the person was not brought before or referred to the court for the commission of the act. The records delivered to the court as required under this division shall not include fingerprints, DNA specimens, and DNA records described under division (A)(3) of section 2151.357 [2151.35.7] of the Revised Code.

(C)(1) The juvenile court shall consider the sealing of records pertaining to a juvenile upon the court's own motion or upon the application of a person if the person has been adjudicated a delinquent child for committing an act other than a violation of section 2903.01, 2903.02, 2907.02, 2907.03, or 2907.05 of the Revised Code, an unruly child, or a juvenile traffic offender and if, at the time of the motion or application, the person is not under the jurisdiction of the court in relation to a complaint alleging the person to be a delinquent child. The motion or application may be made at any time after two years after the later of the following:

(a) The termination of any order made by the court in relation to the adjudication;

(b) The unconditional discharge of the person from the department of youth services with respect to a dispositional order made in relation to the adjudication or from an institution or facility to which the person was committed pursuant to a dispositional order made in relation to the adjudication.

(2) In making the determination whether to seal records pursuant to division (C)(1) of this section, all of the following apply:

(a) The court may require a person filing an application under division (C)(1) of this section to submit any relevant documentation to support the application.

(b) The court may cause an investigation to be made to determine if the person who is the subject of the proceedings has been rehabilitated to a satisfactory degree.

(c) The court shall promptly notify the prosecuting attorney of any proceedings to seal records initiated pursuant to division (C)(1) of this section.

(d)(i) The prosecuting attorney may file a response with the court within thirty days of receiving notice of the sealing proceedings.

(ii) If the prosecuting attorney does not file a response with the court or if the prosecuting attorney files a response but indicates that the prosecuting attorney does not object to the sealing of the records, the court may order the records of the person that are under consideration to be sealed without conducting a hearing on the motion or application. If the court decides in its discretion to conduct a hearing on the motion or application, the court shall conduct the hearing within thirty days after making that decision and shall give notice, by regular mail, of the date, time, and location of the hearing to the prosecuting attorney and to the person who is the subject of the records under consideration.

(iii) If the prosecuting attorney files a response with the court that indicates that the prosecuting attorney objects to the sealing of the records, the court shall conduct a hearing on the motion or application within thirty days after the court receives the response. The court shall give notice, by regular mail, of the date, time, and location of the hearing to the prosecuting attorney and to the person who is the subject of the records under consideration.

(e) After conducting a hearing in accordance with division (C)(2)(d) of this section or after due consideration when a hearing is not conducted, except as provided in division (B)(1)(c) of this section, the court may order the records of the person that are the subject of the motion or application to be sealed if it finds that the person has been rehabilitated to a satisfactory degree. In determining whether the person has been rehabilitated to a satisfactory degree, the court may consider all of the following:

(i) The age of the person;

(ii) The nature of the case;

(iii) The cessation or continuation of delinquent, unruly, or criminal behavior;

(iv) The education and employment history of the person;

(v) Any other circumstances that may relate to the rehabilitation of the person who is the subject of the records under consideration.

(D)(1)(a) The juvenile court shall provide verbal notice to a person whose records are sealed under division (B) of this section, if that person is present in the court at the time the court issues a sealing order, that explains what sealing a record means, states that the person may apply to have those records expunged under section 2151.358 [2151.35.8] of the Revised Code, and explains what expunging a record means.

(b) The juvenile court shall provide written notice to a person whose records are sealed under division (B) of this section by regular mail to the person's last known address, if that person is not present in the court at the time the court issues a sealing order and if the court does not seal the person's record upon the court's own motion, that explains what sealing a record means, states that the person may apply to have those records expunged under section 2151.358 [2151.35.8] of the Revised Code, and explains what expunging a record means.

(2) Upon final disposition of a case in which a person has been adjudicated a delinquent child for committing an act other than a violation of section 2903.01, 2903.02, 2907.02, 2907.03, or 2907.05 of the Revised Code, an unruly child, or a juvenile traffic offender, the juvenile court shall provide written notice to the person that does all of the following:

(a) States that the person may apply to the court for an order to seal the record;

(b) Explains what sealing a record means;

(c) States that the person may apply to the court for an order to expunge the record under section 2151.358 [2151.35.8] of the Revised Code;

(d) Explains what expunging a record means.

(3) The department of youth services and any other institution or facility that unconditionally discharges a person who has been adjudicated a delinquent child, an unruly child, or a juvenile traffic offender shall immediately give notice of the discharge to the court that committed the person. The court shall note the date of discharge on a separate record of discharges of those natures.

[§ 2151.35.7] § 2151.357 Effects of order sealing records; index of sealed records; inspection of sealed records.

(A) If the court orders the records of a person sealed pursuant to section 2151.356 [2151.35.6] of the Revised Code, the person who is subject of the order properly may, and the court shall, reply that no record exists with respect to the person upon any inquiry in the matter, and the court, except as provided in division (D) of this section, shall do all of the following:

(1) Order that the proceedings in a case described in divisions (B) and (C) of section 2151.356 [2151.35.6] of the Revised Code be deemed never to have occurred;

(2) Except as provided in division (C) of this section, delete all index references to the case and the person so that the references are permanently irretrievable;

(3) Order that all original records of the case maintained by any public office or agency, except fingerprints held by a law enforcement agency, DNA specimens collected pursuant to section 2152.74 of the Revised Code, and DNA records derived from DNA specimens pursuant to section 109.573 [109.57.3] of the Revised Code, be delivered to the court;

(4) Order each public office or agency, upon the delivering of records to the court under division (A)(3) of this section, to expunge remaining records of the case that are the subject of the sealing order that are maintained by that public office or agency, except fingerprints, DNA specimens, and DNA records described under division (A)(3) of this section;

(5) Send notice of the order to seal to any public office or agency that the court has reason to believe may have a record of the sealed record;

(6) Seal all of the records delivered to the court under division (A)(3) of this section, in a separate file in which only sealed records are maintained.

(B) Except as provided in division (D) of this section, an order to seal under section 2151.356 [2151.35.6] of the Revised Code applies to every public office or agency that has a record relating to the case, regardless of whether it receives notice of the hearing on the sealing of the record or a copy of the order. Except as provided in division (D) of this section, upon the written request of a person whose record has been sealed and the presentation of a copy of the order and compliance with division (A)(3) of this section, a public office or agency shall expunge its record relating to the case, except a record of the adjudication or arrest or taking into custody that is maintained for compiling statistical data and that does not contain any reference to the person who is the subject of the order.

(C) The court that maintains sealed records pursuant to this section may maintain a manual or computerized index of the sealed records and shall make the index available only for the purposes set forth in division (E) of this section.

(1) Each entry regarding a sealed record in the index of sealed records shall contain all of the following:

(a) The name of the person who is the subject of the sealed record;

(b) An alphanumeric identifier relating to the person who is the subject of the sealed record;

(c) The word "sealed";

(d) The name of the court that has custody of the sealed record.

(2) Any entry regarding a sealed record in the index of sealed records shall not contain either of the following:

(a) The social security number of the person who is subject of the sealed record;

(b) The name or a description of the act committed.

(D) Notwithstanding any provision of this section that requires otherwise, a board of education of a city, local, exempted village, or joint vocational school district that maintains records of an individual who has been permanently excluded under sections 3301.121 [3301.12.1] and 3313.662 [3313.66.2] of the Revised Code is permitted to maintain records regarding an adjudication that the individual is a delinquent child that was used as the basis for the individual's permanent exclusion, regardless of a court order to seal the record. An order issued under section 2151.356 [2151.35.6] of the Revised Code to seal the record of an adjudication that an individual is a delinquent child does not revoke the adjudication order of the superintendent of public instruction to permanently exclude the individual who is the subject of the sealing order. An order to seal the record of an adjudication that an individual is a delinquent child may be presented to a district superintendent as evidence to support the contention that the superintendent should recommend that the permanent exclusion of the individual who is the subject of the sealing order be revoked. Except as otherwise authorized by this division and sections 3301.121 [3301.12.1] and 3313.662 [3313.66.2] of the Revised Code, any school employee in possession of or having access to the sealed adjudication records of an individual that were the basis of a permanent exclusion of the individual is subject to division (F) of this section.

(E) Inspection of records that have been ordered sealed under section 2151.356 [2151.35.6] of the Revised Code may be made only by the following persons or for the following purposes:

(1) By the court;

(2) If the records in question pertain to an act that would be an offense of violence that would be a felony if committed by an adult, by any law enforcement officer or any prosecutor, or the assistants of a law enforcement officer or prosecutor, for any valid law enforcement or prosecutorial purpose;

(3) Upon application by the person who is the subject of the sealed records, by the person that is named in that application;

(4) If the records in question pertain to an alleged violation of division (E)(1) of section 4301.69 of the Revised Code, by any law enforcement officer or any prosecutor, or the assistants of a law enforcement officer or prosecutor, for the purpose of determining whether the person is eligible for diversion under division (E)(2) of section 4301.69 of the Revised Code;

(5) At the request of a party in a civil action that is based on a case the records for which are the subject of a sealing order issued under section 2151.356 [2151.35.6] of the Revised Code, as needed for the civil action. The party also may copy the records as needed for the civil action. The sealed records shall be used solely in the civil action and are otherwise confidential and subject to the provisions of this section;

(6) By the attorney general or an authorized employee of the attorney general or the court for purposes of determining whether a child is a public registry-qualified juvenile offender registrant, as defined in section 2950.01 of the Revised Code, for purposes of Chapter 2950. of the Revised Code.

(F) No officer or employee of the state or any of its political subdivisions shall knowingly release, disseminate, nate, or make available for any purpose involving employment, bonding, licensing, or education to any person or to any department, agency, or other instrumentality of the state or of any of its political subdivisions any information or other data concerning any arrest, taking into custody, complaint, indictment, information, trial, hearing, adjudication, or correctional supervision, the records of which have been sealed pursuant to section 2151.356 [2151.35.6] of the Revised Code and the release, dissemination, or making available of which is not expressly permitted by this section. Whoever violates this division is guilty of divulging confidential information, a misdemeanor of the fourth degree.

(G) In any application for employment, license, or other right or privilege, any appearance as a witness, or any other inquiry, a person may not be questioned with respect to any arrest or taking into custody for which the records were sealed. If an inquiry is made in violation of this division, the person may respond as if the sealed arrest or taking into custody did not occur, and the person shall not be subject to any adverse action because of the arrest or taking into custody or the response.

(H) The judgment rendered by the court under this chapter shall not impose any of the civil disabilities ordinarily imposed by conviction of a crime in that the child is not a criminal by reason of the adjudication, and no child shall be charged with or convicted of a crime in any court except as provided by this chapter. The disposition of a child under the judgment rendered or any evidence given in court shall not operate to disqualify a child in any future civil service examination, appointment, or application. Evidence of a judgment rendered and the disposition of a child under the judgment is not admissible to impeach the credibility of the child in any action or proceeding. Otherwise, the disposition of a child under the judgment rendered or any evidence given in court is admissible as evidence for or against the child in any action or proceeding in any court in accordance with the Rules of Evidence and also may be considered by any court as to the matter of sentence or to the granting of probation, and a court may consider the judgment rendered and the disposition of a child under that judgment for purposes of determining whether the child, for a future criminal conviction or guilty plea, is a repeat violent offender, as defined in section 2929.01 of the Revised Code.

Cross-examination
School district

Cross-examination

Because defendant opened the door to questions regarding his prior juvenile adjudication and attempted to minimize his conduct during that incident, the trial court did not err by allowing the State to cross-examine him about the result of that adjudication; just as with the instant case, defendant denied hitting the victim with a baseball bat. Given his testimony, the State was entitled to question him further and to bring out the result of the adjudication. State v. Edwards, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6944, 2006 Ohio 6987, (Dec. 29, 2006).

School district

When a child was adjudicated to be a delinquent, the record did not support the trial court's order directing a certain school district to bear the cost of educating the child because it did not show that the child's mother was his residential parent and legal custodian when the child was removed from his home or that she lived in the school district when the child was removed, which was the operative date for determining which school district was responsible for the cost of the child's education, under RC § 3313.64(C). In re Emrick, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3118, 2006 Ohio 3235, (June 26, 2006).

[§ 2151.35.8] § 2151.358 Expungement of records.

(A) The juvenile court shall expunge all records sealed under section 2151.356 [2151.35.6] of the Revised Code five years after the court issues a sealing order or upon the twenty-third birthday of the person who is the subject of the sealing order, whichever date is earlier.

(B) Notwithstanding division (A) of this section, upon application by the person who has had a record sealed under section 2151.356 [2151.35.6] of the Revised Code, the juvenile court may expunge a record sealed under section 2151.356 [2151.35.6] of the Revised Code. In making the determination whether to expunge records, all of the following apply:

(1) The court may require a person filing an application for expungement to submit any relevant documentation to support the application.

(2) The court may cause an investigation to be made to determine if the person who is the subject of the proceedings has been rehabilitated to a satisfactory degree.

(3) The court shall promptly notify the prosecuting attorney of any proceedings to expunge records.

(4)(a) The prosecuting attorney may file a response with the court within thirty days of receiving notice of the expungement proceedings.

(b) If the prosecuting attorney does not file a response with the court or if the prosecuting attorney files a response but indicates that the prosecuting attorney does not object to the expungement of the records, the court may order the records of the person that are under consideration to be expunged without conducting a hearing on the application. If the court decides in its discretion to conduct a hearing on the application, the court shall conduct the hearing within thirty days after making that decision and shall give notice, by regular mail, of the date, time, and location of the hearing to the prosecuting attorney and to the person who is the subject of the records under consideration.

(c) If the prosecuting attorney files a response with the court that indicates that the prosecuting attorney objects to the expungement of the records, the court shall conduct a hearing on the application within thirty days after the court receives the response. The court shall give notice, by regular mail, of the date, time, and location of the hearing to the prosecuting attorney and to the person who is the subject of the records under consideration.

(5) After conducting a hearing in accordance with division (B)(4) of this section or after due consideration when a hearing is not conducted, the court may order the records of the person that are the subject of the application to be expunged if it finds that the person has been rehabilitated to a satisfactory degree. In determining whether the person has been rehabilitated to a satisfactory degree, the court may consider all of the following:

- (a) The age of the person;
- (b) The nature of the case;
- (c) The cessation or continuation of delinquency, unruly, or criminal behavior;
- (d) The education and employment history of the person;
- (e) Any other circumstances that may relate to the rehabilitation of the person who is the subject of the records under consideration.

(C) If the juvenile court is notified by any party in a civil action that a civil action has been filed based on a case the records for which are the subject of a sealing order, the juvenile court shall not expunge a record sealed under section 2151.356 [2151.35.6] of the Revised Code until the civil action has been resolved and is not subject to further appellate review, at which time the records shall be expunged pursuant to division (A) of this section.

(D) After the records have been expunged, the person who is the subject of the expunged records properly may, and the court shall, reply that no record exists with respect to the person upon any inquiry in the matter.

Generally

There was no error in the admission of a juvenile's guilty plea and juvenile adjudication for complicity to trafficking in crack cocaine in defendant's criminal trial on a charge of, inter alia, corruption of a juvenile with drugs in violation of RC § 2925.02(A)(4)(c), as the conviction was not used to impeach the juvenile pursuant to Ohio R. Evid. 609(D) and RC § 2151.358(H), but rather, as substantive evidence of defendant's corruption of the minor by his involvement in the drug conduct. There was no violation of Ohio R. Evid. 803(22) where the juvenile had already admitted in his live testimony that he pled guilty to complicity to drug trafficking and then he tried to recant his statement. State v. Simmons, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1442, 2007 Ohio 1570, (Mar. 28, 2007).

Trial court did not impinge upon defendant's Sixth Amendment rights of confrontation and compulsory process. The trial court had already provided defendant with the material evidence (regarding the minor victim's violence towards his family) needed to present his fabrication defense, which he used during the victim's cross-examination to impeach him. Not only was defendant able to cross-examine the victim about the motive, but the victim had already testified that he was incarcerated for those fights. State v. Haverland, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 6322, 2005 Ohio 6997, (Dec. 30, 2005), reversed in part by 109 Ohio St. 3d 411, 2006 Ohio 2394, 848 N.E.2d 809, 2006 Ohio LEXIS 1395 (2006).

During his trial on charges of murder and aggravated murder, the trial court properly prevented defendant from confronting certain witnesses regarding their prior juvenile adjudications because prior adjudications could not be used to impeach the credibility of a juvenile under Ohio R. Evid. 609(D) and RC § 2151.358(H); defendant did not present a plausible showing of any purpose other than to impeach the testimony of the witnesses. State v. Higgins, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5197, 2006 Ohio 5220, (2006).

Trial court properly prevented defendant from cross-examining a State witness with respect to her prior juvenile record, as defendant intended to use that evidence, pursuant to Ohio R. Evid. 404(B), to attack the witness's credibility and character for truthfulness and her general motive to lie, rather than to show bias, for which introduction of such evidence was allowable under the exception to Ohio R. Evid. 609(D) and RC § 2151.358(H). State v. Braxton, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2084, 2005 Ohio 2198, (2005).

The court lawfully denied an application for sealing of records where the juvenile vacillated between accepting and denying responsibility for the offenses and refused to admit culpability at the hearing on the application: In re Anspach, 136 Ohio App. 3d 535, 737 N.E.2d 115 (2000).

The admissibility of a parent's juvenile record is limited only by the evidence rules, except that it cannot be used to impeach the credibility of the child in any action or proceeding under RC § 2151.35.8(H) and EvR 609(D). Thus, the admissibility of the record to prove a pattern of behavior is left to the discretion of the trial court as a relevancy determination under EvR 401 to 403: In re Aarika D., 1998 Ohio App. LEXIS 2368 (6th Dist. 1998).

Revised Code § 2151.31.8 unambiguously limits the sealing of juvenile records until two years after the termination of a juvenile court's order: In re Manuel, 1997 Ohio App. LEXIS 5494 (1997).

Pursuant to EvR 609(D), a juvenile's court records may not be used for the sole purpose of discrediting his character as a witness: State v. Pirman, 94 Ohio App. 3d 203, 640 N.E.2d 575 (1994).

Where the defendant testified as to his law abiding character and that of his street gang, the prosecution could properly cross-examine him concerning his juvenile adjudications: State v. Robinson, 98 Ohio App. 3d 560, 649 N.E.2d 18 (1994).

Admission of evidence in violation of RC § 2151.35.8 is harmless error where there was overwhelming admissible evidence of defendant's guilt: State v. Shedrick, 80 Ohio App. 3d 823, 610 N.E.2d 1147 (1992).

Exclusion of a juvenile record does not violate a defendant's confrontation rights where the evidence would be used only to further a general attack on the witness's credibility: State v. Willman, 77 Ohio App. 3d 344, 602 N.E.2d 323 (1991).

Where a witness has testified in a juvenile proceeding, RC § 2151.35.8(H) prohibits that witness from giving essentially the same testimony in any other criminal case or criminal proceeding (State v. Shedrick [1991], 59 Ohio St.3d 146, 572 NE2d 59, vacated and clarified.); State v. Shedrick, 61 Ohio St. 3d 331, 574 N.E.2d 1065 (1991).

Under RC § 2151.35.8(H), testimony, documents, or exhibits, presented as evidence against a juvenile in a juvenile proceeding, are inadmissible against the juvenile in any other criminal case or criminal proceeding except ones in which the same underlying alleged crime is being adjudicated: State v. Shedrick, 61 Ohio St. 3d 331, 574 N.E.2d 1065 (1991).

A defendant charged with contributing to the unruliness of a minor is not entitled to introduce the child's prior juvenile records into evidence in order to prove that she was already unruly prior to the occasion in question. The child may be cross-examined, however, as to such records if they are relevant to establishing bias on the part of the witness: State v. Lukens, 66 Ohio App. 3d 794, 586 N.E.2d 1099 (1990).

When a juvenile admits the allegations of a juvenile complaint, evidence of the acts which underlie the allegations is not admissible against the juvenile in a subsequent case or proceeding, except as provided in RC § 2151.35.8(H): State v. Hall, 57 Ohio App. 3d 144, 567 N.E.2d 305 (1989).

Evidence of juvenile's prior adjudication of delinquency should not have been admitted since neither sentencing nor probation was involved: In re Johnson, 61 Ohio App. 3d 544, 573 N.E.2d 184 (1989).

Evidence of a defendant's prior adjudications of delinquency predicated on petit theft, otherwise not admissible under RC § 2151.35.8(H), is admissible as prior convictions to enhance the degree of a theft offense to grand theft for the purposes of disposition. The prior adjudications become an element of the present offense and must be proved by the state beyond a reasonable doubt (In re Russell [1984], 12 Ohio St.3d 304, followed); In re Hayes, 29 Ohio App. 3d 162, 29 Ohio B. 191, 504 N.E.2d 491 (1986).

Where there was testimony that a juvenile witness was in the custody of the Ohio youth commission and that he had participated in the crime for which the defendant was being tried, and the defense was able to cross-examine the witness as to his current status and any deals he may have struck with the prosecution, the defense did not have a constitutional right to inquire into prior findings of juvenile delinquency: Mann v. Gray, 622 F. Supp. 1225 (N.D. Ohio 1985).

A juvenile court delinquency adjudication cannot be used to impeach the general credibility of a witness under EvR 609, although it may be admissible in particular cases where it has special significance to possible bias of the witness. The restriction against using such evidence for impeachment of general credibility does not contravene an accused's right to confront and cross-examine adverse witnesses: State v. White, 6 Ohio App. 3d 1, 6 Ohio B. 23, 451 N.E.2d 533 (1982).

Evidence of acts by a defendant, which is otherwise admissible under RC § 2945.59 and which does not constitute part of a disposition or evidence given in court, is not barred by RC § 2151.35.8, even though the evidence tends to show the commission of another crime by the defendant when a juvenile: State

v. Bayless, 48 Ohio St. 2d 73, 2 Ohio Op. 3d 249, 357 N.E.2d 1035 (1976).

Although the general assembly may enact legislation to effectuate its policy of protecting the confidentiality of juvenile records, such enactments may not impinge upon the right of a defendant in a criminal case to present all available, relevant and probative evidence which is pertinent to a specific and material aspect of his defense: State v. Cox, 42 Ohio St. 2d 200, 71 Ohio Op. 2d 186, 327 N.E.2d 639 (1975).

Where it is apparent on appeal that a youth who was adjudicated delinquent, knew of his right to expungement and that the statutory time for expungement had not been met, a claim of error on the part of the lower court in not advising the youth of this right will be regarded as frivolous and not prejudicial: In re Haas, 45 Ohio App. 2d 187, 74 Ohio Op. 2d 231 (1975).

Under Ohio law, juvenile convictions were inadmissible as evidence in a subsequent criminal prosecution, and such convictions could not be used to enhance punishment. [RC § 2151.35] The use by the prosecution of any prior convictions for whatever purpose is prejudicial and cannot be construed as harmless error. This error is of constitutional dimension and use of such a conviction, at a trial for a subsequent offense, for any purpose leading to a conviction for that subsequent offense is violative of the Fourteenth Amendment: Workman v. Cardwell, 60 Ohio Op. 2d 187, 338 F. Supp. 893 (N.D. Ohio 1972).

Where the defense introduces character evidence to the effect that the defendant had never been in any kind of trouble, and where the trial court disallows cross-examination of defendant's witnesses on the subject of prior juvenile court involvement, the introduction of a juvenile record to rebut such evidence is not prejudicial error: State v. Hale, 21 Ohio App. 2d 207, 50 Ohio Op. 2d 340, 256 N.E.2d 239 (1969).

Although Ohio law generally protects a minor from the exposure of his acts in another judicial forum, paragraph (G) of RC § 2151.35 does not prohibit the cross-examination, in a criminal trial, of a defendant, or defendant's witnesses, concerning a prior juvenile record, where the defendant's evidence attempts to establish his good character: State v. Hale, 21 Ohio App. 2d 207, 50 Ohio Op. 2d 340, 256 N.E.2d 239 (1969).

Under this section a minor, tried and found guilty by a juvenile court on a charge of auto theft, is neither charged with a crime nor convicted of a felony, and the judgment rendered therein is not admissible as evidence against him in any other case or proceeding in any other court: Beatty v. Riegel, 115 Ohio App. 448, 21 Ohio Op. 2d 71, 185 N.E.2d 555 (1961).

It is prejudicial error to permit examination of a witness in a negligence action as to convictions and imprisonments with respect to law violations committed in another state, where charges for the offenses involved were heard and disposed of by a juvenile court of such state and, under the laws of such state, denominating a child a criminal because of the adjudication of a juvenile court and denominating such an adjudication a conviction are expressly forbidden: Mason v. Klaserner, 114 Ohio App. 171, 19 Ohio Op. 2d 24, 180 N.E.2d 870 (1961).

The fact that the confessions were used in the juvenile court, did not render them inadmissible in the common pleas court, under this section, because there was but one case or proceeding: State v. Lowder, 79 Ohio App. 237, 34 Ohio Op. 568, 72 N.E.2d 785 (1946).

When a defendant in a criminal case is permitted to introduce evidence of his life history, he waives the protection of this section, and may be cross-examined with reference to the disposition of any charge preferred against him as a juvenile: State v. Marinski, 189 Ohio St. 559, 23 Ohio Op. 50, 41 N.E.2d 387 (1942).

It is prejudicial error to permit cross-examination of a defendant in a criminal case as to the commission of offenses prior to the one for which he is being tried, when such inquiry is predicated upon juvenile court proceedings against him as a juvenile delinquent, examination of this character being within the prohibitions of GC § 1669 [see former RC § 2151.35 (now RC § 2151.35.8)]: Malone v. State, 130 Ohio St. 443, 5 Ohio Op. 59, 200 N.E. 473 (1936).

Driving under influence

A prior adjudication as a juvenile traffic offender for violation of RC § 4511.19(A) does not constitute a "conviction" under RC

§ 4511.99(A)(2). As a result, a person convicted of violating RC § 4511.19(A) as an adult may not be sentenced under the enhanced penalty provided by RC § 4511.99(A)(2) because of the previous juvenile adjudication. Nevertheless, the court may consider the previous juvenile adjudication when sentencing the adult offender, in accordance with RC § 2151.35.8(H): State v. Blogna, 60 Ohio App. 3d 141, 573 N.E.2d 1223 (1990).

Due process

State's failure to seal juvenile record or to notify defendant of his right to have it sealed did not amount to a violation of the due process clause: United States v. Inglesi, 988 F.2d 500 (1993).

Insurance

Criminal acts exclusion in homeowner's policy barred coverage for wrongful death action where insureds' son was adjudicated delinquent notwithstanding the fact that an adjudication of delinquency is not a criminal conviction: Allstate Ins. Co. v. Cutcher, 920 F. Supp. 796 (S.D. 1996).

In an action by an insurance company to declare an automobile liability policy void, the admission into evidence of juvenile court records was not prejudicial error where the insured's own testimony disclosed his arrest for driving while under the influence of intoxicating liquor, the suspension of his driver's license, and the payment of a fine: Allstate Ins. Co. v. Cook, 26 Ohio Op. 2d 192, 324 F.2d 752 (6th Cir. 1963).

This section, providing that evidence received in the juvenile court is not admissible as evidence against the child in any other case or proceeding or any other court, is not applicable to a proceeding against the alleged insurance carrier of the child on a supplemental petition to enforce the insurer's liability: Bingham v. Hartman, 88 Ohio L. Ab. 126, 181 N.E.2d 721 (App 1961).

Public records law

When a record of the adjudication or arrest of a juvenile has been ordered sealed or expunged pursuant to RC § 2151.35.8, such record is not a public record: OAG No. 90-101 (1990).

Sex offender classification

An adjudication of juvenile delinquency based on a sexually oriented offense does not qualify as a prior conviction for purposes of status as a habitual sex offender: State v. Prether, 141 Ohio App. 3d 6, 749 N.E.2d 796 (2001).

Sheriff

Pursuant to RC 2953.321, RC 2953.54, and RC 2151.358, a county sheriff may not disclose to the public information in an investigatory work product report that pertains to a case the records of which have been ordered sealed or expunged pursuant to RC 2953.31-.61 or RC 2151.358, but the sheriff must disclose information in the report that relates to a defendant, suspect, or juvenile offender who has not had this information ordered sealed or expunged, unless one of the exceptions set forth in RC 149.43(A) applies to the information: Opinion No. 2003-025, 2003 Op. Atty Gen. Ohio 198 (2003).

Traffic violations generally

The accumulation of twelve or more traffic violation points within a period of two years as a juvenile driver will support a revocation of driving privileges by the registrar pursuant to RC § 4507.40(K) and is not prohibited by RC § 2151.35.8: Gebell v. Dollison, 57 Ohio App. 2d 198, 9 Ohio Op. 3d 23, 386 N.E.2d 845 (1978).

[§ 2151.35.9] § 2151.359 Control of conduct of parent, guardian, or custodian.

(A)(1) In any proceeding in which a child has been adjudicated an unruly, abused, neglected, or dependent child, on the application of a party, or on the court's own motion, the court may make an order restraining or otherwise controlling the conduct of any parent, guardian, or other custodian in the relationship of that individual to the child if the court finds that an order of that type is necessary to do either of the following:

(a) Control any conduct or relationship that will be detrimental or harmful to the child.

(b) Control any conduct or relationship that will tend to defeat the execution of the order of disposition made or to be made.

(2) The court shall give due notice of the application or motion under division (A) of this section, the grounds for the application or motion, and an opportunity to be heard to the person against whom an order under this division is directed. The order may include a requirement that the child's parent, guardian, or other custodian enter into a recognizance with sufficient surety, conditioned upon the faithful discharge of any conditions or control required by the court.

(B) The authority to make an order under division (A) of this section and any order made under that authority is in addition to the authority to make an order pursuant to division (C)(2) of section 2151.354 [2151.35.4] or division (A)(7)(b) of section 2152.19 of the Revised Code and to any order made under either division.

(C) A person's failure to comply with any order made by the court under this section is contempt of court under Chapter 2705. of the Revised Code.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

Generally

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in ordering a parent, whose children had been placed in protective supervision due to neglect, to submit to drug testing and to allow the department of human services into her home upon reasonable appearance or request; nor did the court exceed its authority in prohibiting the parent's boyfriend from being present when the children are home, where there have been past problems with the boyfriend with whom the mother resided, which have created a danger for the children: In re Daum, 1995 Ohio App. LEXIS 1516 (3rd Dist. 1995).

Revised Code § 2151.35.9 authorizes an order that the mother not allow the children to have any contact or communication with the father where the father was found to have abused the children. An order prohibiting any contact between the parents is, however, overly broad and an undue restriction on marital rights. A court may order a parent to submit to drug testing and to waive any privilege concerning her treatment for bipolar disorder and drug abuse: In re Pieper, 85 Ohio App. 3d 318, 619 N.E.2d 1059 (1993).

A court should not order a parent to undergo sexual offender therapy as a condition of continued visitation without making any finding that the parent committed abuse: In re Sarah H., 86 Ohio App. 3d 455, 621 N.E.2d 545 (1993).

The juvenile court has no jurisdiction to regulate the conduct of a pregnant adult for the purpose of protecting the health of her unborn child: Cox v. Franklin Cty. Court of Common Pleas, 42 Ohio App. 3d 171, 537 N.E.2d 721 (1988).

[§ 2151.35.10] § 2151.3510 Notice of intended commitment order.

Before a juvenile court issues an order of disposition pursuant to division (A)(1) of section 2151.354 [2151.35.4] or 2152.19 of the Revised Code committing an unruly or delinquent child to the custody of a public children services agency, it shall give the agency notice in the manner prescribed by the Juvenile Rules of the intended dispositional order.

[§ 2151.35.14] § 2151.3514 Alcohol or other drug testing and treatment of parent or other caregiver.

(A) As used in this section:

(1) "Alcohol and drug addiction program" has the same meaning as in section 3793.01 of the Revised Code;

(2) "Chemical dependency" means either of the following:

(a) The chronic and habitual use of alcoholic beverages to the extent that the user no longer can control the use of alcohol or endangers the user's health, safety, or welfare or that of others;

(b) The use of a drug of abuse to the extent that the user becomes physically or psychologically dependent on the drug or endangers the user's health, safety, or welfare or that of others.

(3) "Drug of abuse" has the same meaning as in section 3719.011 [3719.01.1] of the Revised Code.

(4) "Medicaid" means the program established under Chapter 5111. of the Revised Code.

(B) If the juvenile court issues an order of temporary custody or protective supervision under division (A) of section 2151.353 [2151.35.3] of the Revised Code with respect to a child adjudicated to be an abused, neglected, or dependent child and the alcohol or other drug addiction of a parent or other caregiver of the child was the basis for the adjudication of abuse, neglect, or dependency, the court shall issue an order requiring the parent or other caregiver to submit to an assessment and, if needed, treatment from an alcohol and drug addiction program certified by the department of alcohol and drug addiction services. The court may order the parent or other caregiver to submit to alcohol or other drug testing during, after, or both during and after, the treatment. The court shall send any order issued pursuant to this division to the public children services agency that serves the county in which the court is located for use as described in section 340.15 of the Revised Code.

(C) Any order requiring alcohol or other drug testing that is issued pursuant to division (B) of this section shall require one alcohol or other drug test to be conducted each month during a period of twelve consecutive months beginning the month immediately following the month in which the order for alcohol or other drug testing is issued. Arrangements for administering the alcohol or other drug tests, as well as funding the costs of the tests, shall be locally determined in accordance with sections 340.033 [340.03.3] and 340.15 of the Revised Code. If a parent or other caregiver required to submit to alcohol or other drug tests under this section is not a recipient of Medicaid, the agency that refers the parent or caregiver for the tests may require the parent or caregiver to reimburse the agency for the cost of conducting the tests.

(D) The certified alcohol and drug addiction program that conducts any alcohol or other drug tests ordered in accordance with divisions (B) and (C) of this section shall send the results of the tests, along with the program's recommendations as to the benefits of continued treatment, to the court and to the public children services agency providing services to the involved family, according to federal regulations set forth in 42 C.F.R. Part 2, and division (B) of section 340.15 of the Revised Code. The court shall consider the results and the recommendations sent to it under this division in any adjudication or review by the court, according to section 2151.353 [2151.35.3], 2151.414 [2151.41.4], or 2151.419 [2151.41.9] of the Revised Code.

Admission of drug tests
Number of drug tests allowable

Admission of drug tests

Mother's claim that positive drug tests were improperly admitted at trial without expert testimony failed because she did not object to the admission of this evidence at the hearing; regardless, even if the tests were improperly admitted, they were not prejudicial, as her failure to complete 109 of the 122 required tests alone demonstrated her failure to comply with a case plan. In re Davis, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 3670 (2004), appeal denied by 103 Ohio St. 3d 1496, 2004 Ohio 5605, 816 N.E.2d 1081, 2004 Ohio LEXIS 2586 (2004).

Number of drug tests allowable

One drug test per month is a required minimum under Ohio Rev. Code Ann § 2151.3514(B), and the statute does not restrict a trial court's authority to order more tests than one test per month for a period of 12 consecutive months. In re Davis, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 3670 (2004), appeal denied by 103 Ohio St. 3d 1496, 2004 Ohio 5605, 816 N.E.2d 1081, 2004 Ohio LEXIS 2586 (2004).

Trial court did not violate RC § 2151.3514(B) by ordering a mother to submit to one to two drug tests per week, as it was imperative to determine that she was no longer using crack cocaine in order to determine her child's best interest. § 2151.35.15 § 2151.3515 Definitions.

As used in sections 2151.3515 [2151.35.15] to 2151.3530 [2151.35.30] of the Revised Code:

(A) "Deserted child" means a child whose parent has voluntarily delivered the child to an emergency medical service worker, peace officer, or hospital employee without expressing an intent to return for the child.

(B) "Emergency medical service organization," "emergency medical technician-basic," "emergency medical technician-intermediate," "first responder," and "paramedic" have the same meanings as in section 4765.01 of the Revised Code.

(C) "Emergency medical service worker" means a first responder, emergency medical technician-basic, emergency medical technician-intermediate, or paramedic.

(D) "Hospital" has the same meaning as in section 3727.01 of the Revised Code.

(E) "Hospital employee" means any of the following persons:

(1) A physician who has been granted privileges to practice at the hospital;

(2) A nurse, physician assistant, or nursing assistant employed by the hospital;

(3) An authorized person employed by the hospital who is acting under the direction of a physician described in division (E)(1) of this section.

(F) "Law enforcement agency" means an organization or entity made up of peace officers.

(G) "Nurse" means a person who is licensed under Chapter 4723. of the Revised Code to practice as a registered nurse or licensed practical nurse.

(H) "Nursing assistant" means a person designated by a hospital as a nurse aide or nursing assistant whose job is to aid nurses, physicians, and physician assistants in the performance of their duties.

(I) "Peace officer" means a sheriff, deputy sheriff, constable, police officer of a township or joint township police district, marshal, deputy marshal, municipal police officer, or a state highway patrol trooper.

(J) "Physician" and "physician assistant" have the same meanings as in section 4730.01 of the Revised Code.

(1) Perform any act necessary to protect the child's health or safety;

(2) Notify the public children services agency of the county in which the agency, hospital, or organization is located that the child has been taken into possession;

(3) If possible, make available to the parent who delivered the child forms developed under section 2151.3529 [2151.35.29] of the Revised Code that are designed to gather medical information concerning the child and the child's parents;

(4) If possible, make available to the parent who delivered the child written materials developed under section 2151.3529 [2151.35.29] of the Revised Code that describe services available to assist parents and newborns;

(5) If the child has suffered a physical or mental wound, injury, disability, or condition of a nature that reasonably indicates abuse or neglect of the child, attempt to identify and pursue the person who delivered the child.

(B) An emergency medical service worker who takes possession of a child shall, in addition to any act performed under division (A)(1) of this section, perform any medical service the worker is authorized to perform that is necessary to protect the physical health or safety of the child.

[§ 2151.35.23] § 2151.3523 Civil and criminal immunity of parent and of person or entity taking possession of deserted child.

(A) A parent does not commit a criminal offense under the laws of this state and shall not be subject to criminal prosecution in this state for the act of voluntarily delivering a child under section 2151.3516 [2151.35.16] of the Revised Code.

(B) A person who delivers or attempts to deliver a child who has suffered any physical or mental wound, injury, disability, or condition of a nature that reasonably indicates abuse or neglect of the child is not immune from civil or criminal liability for abuse or neglect.

(C) A person or governmental entity that takes possession of a child pursuant to section 2151.3516 [2151.35.16] of the Revised Code or takes emergency temporary custody of and provides temporary emergency care for a child pursuant to section 2151.3518 [2151.35.18] of the Revised Code is immune from any civil liability that might otherwise be incurred or imposed as a result of these actions, unless the person or entity has acted in bad faith or with malicious purpose. The immunity provided by this division does not apply if the person or governmental entity has immunity from civil liability under section 9.86, 2744.02, or 2744.03 of the Revised Code for the action in question.

(D) A person or governmental entity that takes possession of a child pursuant to section 2151.3516 [2151.35.16] of the Revised Code or takes emergency temporary custody of and provides temporary emergency care for a child pursuant to section 2151.3518 [2151.35.18] of the Revised Code is immune from any criminal liability that might otherwise be incurred or imposed as a result of these actions, unless the person or entity has acted in bad faith or with malicious purpose.

(E) Divisions (C) and (D) of this section do not create a new cause of action or substantive legal right against a person or governmental entity, and do not affect any immunities from civil liability or defenses established by another section of the Revised Code or available at common law, to which a person or governmental entity may be entitled under circumstances not covered by this section.

(C) If the department of job and family services determines that money in the putative father registry fund created under section 2101.16 of the Revised Code is more than is needed for its duties related to the putative father registry, the department may use surplus moneys in the fund for costs related to the development and publication of forms and materials promulgated pursuant to divisions (A) and (B) of this section.

Except as provided in section 2151.361 [2151.36.1] of the Revised Code, when a child has been committed as provided by this chapter or Chapter 2152. of the Revised Code, the juvenile court shall issue an order pursuant to Chapters 3119., 3121., 3123., and 3125. of the Revised Code requiring that the parent, guardian, or person charged with the child's support pay for the care, support, maintenance, and education of the child. The juvenile court shall order that the parents, guardian, or person pay for the expenses involved in providing orthopedic, medical, or surgical treatment for, or for special care of, the child, enter a judgment for the amount due, and enforce the judgment by execution as in the court of common pleas.

Any expenses incurred for the care, support, maintenance, education, orthopedic, medical, or surgical treatment, and special care of a child who has a legal settlement in another county shall be at the expense of the county of legal settlement if the consent of the juvenile judge of the county of legal settlement is first obtained. When the consent is obtained, the board of county commissioners of the county in which the child has a legal settlement shall reimburse the committing court for the expenses out of its general fund. If the department of job and family services considers it to be in the best interest of any delinquent, dependent, unruly, abused, or neglected child who has a legal settlement in a foreign state or country that the child be returned to the state or country of legal settlement, the juvenile court may commit the child to the department for the child's return to that state or country.

Any expenses ordered by the court for the care, support, maintenance, education, orthopedic, medical, or surgical treatment, or special care of a dependent, neglected, abused, unruly, or delinquent child or of a juvenile traffic offender under this chapter or Chapter 2152. of the Revised Code, except the part of the expense that may be paid by the state or federal government or paid by the parents, guardians, or person charged with the child's support pursuant to this section, shall be paid from the county treasury upon specifically itemized vouchers, certified to by the judge. The court shall not be responsible for any expenses resulting from the commitment of children to any home, public children services agency, private child placing agency, or other institution, association, or agency, unless the court authorized the expenses at the time of commitment.

Generally

Costs of a juvenile's detention in a juvenile facility could be imposed on a parent or guardian, under RC § 2151.36. In re Williams, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4583, 2006 Ohio 4657, (2006).

Child support orders issued pursuant to RC § 2151.36 must be based on the trial court's own determination and must be made part of the record. An appellate court reversed a decision of the trial court that ordered a parent to pay for surgery performed on her son while he was in the temporary custody of the children services board because a child support worksheet was not included in the record. On remand the trial court was directed to hold a hearing to determine if the parent was financially able to pay for the surgery and if the surgery was medically necessary. In re Mundy, 1998 Ohio App. LEXIS 223 (1998).

A juvenile court lacks jurisdiction to order that a delinquent child be cared for in a private mental health facility at the expense of the department of mental health and of an organization of community mental health boards. In re Hoodlet, 72 Ohio App. 3d 115, 593 N.E.2d 478 (1991).

A juvenile court does not possess the authority to require the Ohio department of mental health to pay the psychiatric costs associated with the care of a child who is placed in a private non-public psychiatric institution. Lozano v. Ohio Dep't of Mental Health, 66 Ohio App. 3d 583, 585 N.E.2d 889 (1990).

By the enactment of this section and GC § 1639-57 (RC § 2151.10) the legislature has granted to the juvenile court authority commensurate with its enlarged responsibility for the welfare of neglected, dependent or delinquent children. The court may obligate the county for the payment of expenses necessary to the proper discharge of its responsibility but it is not contemplated that such action will be taken where the welfare of such children is subserved adequately by their commitment to private or municipal institutions that voluntarily assume the expenses resulting therefrom: Cleveland v. Gorman, 87 Ohio App. 36, 42 Ohio Op. 278, 89 N.E.2d 605 (1949).

Unless a dependent child is committed to an institution designated by this section, or a family home, and in conformity with the juvenile court code, no payment for the care and board of such child is authorized, as there is no commitment under the law: 1937 OAG No. 983 (1937).

Age of majority

Revised Code §§ 2151.01.1 and 2151.36 authorize an order requiring the parents to pay the costs of the child's support up to age twenty-one: In re Hinko, 84 Ohio App. 3d 89, 616 N.E.2d 515 (1992).

Educational costs

The court cannot place a child in a specific school when it commits a child to the department of youth services pursuant to RC § 2151.35.5. The same prohibition applies to the disposition of parole violators. Thus an order requiring the department to pay the child's expenses at an out-of-state school is unlawful: In re Sanders, 72 Ohio App. 3d 655, 595 N.E.2d 974 (1991).

When, pursuant to RC § 2151.35.5, a juvenile court commits a delinquent child to an out-of-state private residential facility, the cost of educating the child is paid with funds from the state subsidy provided in RC § 2151.35.7; if such subsidy is insufficient, any remaining educational expense is to be paid by the court as provided in RC § 2151.36: OAG No. 89-006 (1989).

Where, under division (B) of RC § 2151.35, a juvenile court commits a child to a specialized school in another state, the court, under RC § 2151.36, must itself pay expenses occasioned by the commitment and authorized by the court at the time of commitment, which expenses are paid out of funds appropriated to the court by the board of county commissioners under RC § 2151.10; and pursuant to RC § 2151.36, the court may order the parents, guardian, or person charged with the child's support to reimburse the court for such payments: 1962 OAG No. 2938 (1962).

While the duty rests upon the board of education of a school district in which a juvenile detention home is located to employ and provide such teachers and such incidental facilities as are necessary to furnish instruction to children confined in such home, such board of education may recover from the county commissioners the cost and expense involved in so doing: 1946 OAG No. 1200 (1946).

Legal settlement

Application of RC § 2151.36, regarding a party responsible for the costs of supporting a minor child in detention, turned on the phrase "legal settlement," and this phrase appeared periodically in the Ohio Revised Code, but it was not defined. Several courts construed the phrase to mean living in an area with some degree of permanency greater than a visit lasting a few days or weeks, and RC § 2151.06 stated that a child had the same "legal settlement" as a "legal guardian" or "custodian." In re Williams, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4583, 2006 Ohio 4657, (2006).

Parent's incarceration

Financial circumstances of the parents were irrelevant to whether or not they should have been to pay expenses pursuant to RC § 2151.36. A parent's incarceration did not result in an alteration of that parent's child support, and a trial court properly denied a father's request to suspend his obligation due to his current incarceration. In re Pease, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2622, 2006 Ohio 2785, (2006).

Payment by county

Chapter 7 trustee's objection to a county juvenile court's priority claim for the detention costs for the debtors' child was sustained and the claim was allowed as a general unsecured claim because, pursuant to the pre-Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 version of 11 U.S.C.S. § 507(a)(7), only debts owed to a debtor's spouse, former spouse, or child are entitled to priority. In re Stipes, 2007 Bankr. LEXIS 906 (2007).

When a child in the legal custody of another county's children's services board was found to have violated his probation, RC § 2151.36 did not authorize the trial court to order the board to pay the child's housing costs because, while the board had legal custody of the child and the county in which the board was situated was the child's legal settlement, there was no evidence in the record that the trial court obtained the consent of the juvenile court for the county in which the board was situated, so the statutory criteria for ordering the board to pay the child's costs were not satisfied. In re Williams, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4583, 2006 Ohio 4657, (2006).

A committing juvenile court may, under this section, at the time of commitment, obligate the county for such expenses as are authorized and approved by the judge of the juvenile court for the care of a delinquent child committed to the department of mental hygiene and correction for placement in a private family home or institution operating under such rules and regulations as are adopted by the department: 1956 OAG No. 7007 (1956).

Where a crippled child has been committed to the division of social administration under GC § 1352-8 (RC § 5103.12), by the juvenile court of a county in which such child does not have legal settlement, the division of social administration is authorized, under such section, to meet the expense of such care from funds allocated from the federal children's bureau to the state of Ohio for the care of crippled children. In such case, in the event that such child has, or subsequently acquires, legal settlement in a county other than the county from which commitment was ordered, the county of legal settlement can be charged with the expense thus incurred only after the consent of the juvenile court of the county of legal settlement has been obtained, as provided in GC § 1639-34 (RC § 2151.36): 1952 OAG No. 1839 (1952).

Where a crippled child has been committed to the division of social administration for care under GC § 1352-8 (RC § 5103.12), and such child has, or subsequently acquires, legal settlement in another county, the committing court should, in the ordinary case, certify such case under GC § 1639-34 (RC § 2151.36), to the juvenile court of such other county for further proceedings. Following such certification, and until the juvenile court of such other county otherwise orders, the division of social administration may continue to extend care to such child under the original order of commitment, and the cost of such care must be borne by the county of legal settlement: 1952 OAG No. 1839 (1952).

Moneys paid into the county welfare board for the support of dependent children, which moneys are collected from the parents of such children, should be paid into the county treasury to the credit of the general fund, such payment amounting to a reimbursement of the county fund for public funds expended for the care of dependent children: 1938 OAG No. 1843 (1938).

The county in which a juvenile court assumes jurisdiction of a child and declares such child to be dependent, will be responsible for the support of such child: 1935 OAG No. 4172 (1935).

Temporary custody

Trial court did not err by ordering parents of a dependent child to pay child support while the child was in the temporary custody of a county agency. In re Day, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3253, 2003 Ohio 3544, (2003).

Termination of parental rights

A child welfare board may not legally request support payments from parents whose children have been taken from them permanently by the courts: OAG No. 66-148 (1966).

Worksheet

The child support worksheet must be completed by the court itself. Deviations from the schedule must be supported by findings of fact. In re Krechting, 108 Ohio App. 3d 435, 670 N.E.2d 1081 (1996).

[§ 2151.36.1] § 2151.361 Order where adopted child is placed into temporary custody or committed.

(A) If the parents of a child enter into an agreement with a public children services agency or private child placing agency to place the child into the temporary custody of the agency or the child is committed as provided by this chapter, the juvenile court, at its discretion, may issue an order pursuant to Chapters 3119., 3121., 3123., and 3125. of the Revised Code requiring that the parents pay for the care, support, maintenance, and education of the child if the parents adopted the child.

(B) When determining whether to issue an order under division (A) of this section, the juvenile court shall consider all pertinent issues, including, but not limited to, all of the following:

(1) The ability, of the parents to pay for the care, support, maintenance, and education of the child;

(2) The chances for reunification of the parents and child;

(3) Whether issuing the order will encourage the reunification of the parents and child or undermine that reunification;

(4) Whether the problem underlying the agreement to place the child into temporary custody existed prior to the parents' adoption of the child and whether the parents were informed of the problem prior to that adoption;

(5) Whether the problem underlying the agreement to place the child into temporary custody began after the parents' adoption of the child;

(6) Whether the parents have contributed to the child's problems;

(7) Whether the parents are part of the solution to the child's problems.

[§ 2151.36.2] § 2151.362 School district liability for cost of education; state subsidy where placement is in private facility.

(A)(1) In the manner prescribed by division (C)(1) or (2) of section 3313.64 of the Revised Code, as applicable, the court, at the time of making any order that removes a child from the child's own home or that vests legal or permanent custody of the child in a person other than the child's parent or a government agency, shall determine the school district that is to bear the cost of educating the child. The court shall make the determination a part of the order that provides for the child's placement or commitment. That school district shall bear the cost of educating the child unless and until the department of education determines that a different district shall be responsible for bearing that cost pursuant to division (A)(2) of this section. The court's order shall state that the determination of which school district is responsible to bear the cost of educating the child is subject to re-determination by the department pursuant to that division.

(2) If, while the child is in the custody of a person other than the child's parent or a government agency, the department of education determines that the place of residence of the child's parent has changed since the court issued its initial order, the department may name a different school district to bear the cost of educating the child. The department shall make this new determination, and any future determinations, based on evidence received from the school district currently responsible to bear the cost of educating the child. If the department finds that the evidence demonstrates to its satisfaction that the residence of the child's parent has changed since the court issued its initial order under division (A)(1) of this section, or since the department last made a determination under division (A)(2) of this section, the department shall name the district in which the child's parent currently resides or, if the parent's residence is not known, the district in which the parent's last known residence is located. If the department cannot determine any Ohio district in which the parent currently resides or has resided, the school district designated in the initial court order under division (A)(1) of this section, or in the most recent determination made by the department under division (A)(2) of this section, shall continue to bear the cost of educating the child.

(B) Whenever a child is placed in a detention facility established under section 2152.41 of the Revised Code or a juvenile facility established under section 2151.65 of the Revised Code, the child's school district as determined by the court or the department, in the same manner as prescribed in division (A) of this section, shall pay the cost of educating the child based on the per capita cost of the educational facility within the detention home or juvenile facility.

(C) Whenever a child is placed by the court in a private institution, school, or residential treatment center or any other private facility, the state shall pay to the court a subsidy to help defray the expense of educating the child in an amount equal to the product of the daily per capita educational cost of the private facility, as determined pursuant to this section, and the number of days the child resides at the private facility, provided that the subsidy shall not exceed twenty-five hundred dollars per year per child. The daily per capita educational cost of a private facility shall be determined by dividing the actual program cost of the private facility or twenty-five hundred dollars, whichever is less, by three hundred sixty-five days or by three hundred sixty-six days for years that include February twenty-ninth. The state shall pay seventy-five per cent of the total subsidy for each year quarterly to the court. The state may adjust the remaining twenty-five per cent of the total subsidy to be paid to the court for each year to an amount that is less than twenty-five per cent of the total subsidy for that year based upon the availability of funds appropriated to the department of education for the purpose of subsidizing courts that place a child in a private institution, school, or residential treatment center or any other private facility and shall pay that adjusted amount to the court at the end of the year.

Generally

Under RC § 2151.35.7, the juvenile court is required to follow RC § 3313.64(C)(2) in determining the school district that is to bear the cost of educating the child; thus, the juvenile court properly found that the Marion City School District was required to pay for a child's tuition where his parents were residing within the district boundaries at the time he was removed from their home: In re Feters, 1998 Ohio App. LEXIS 867 (12th Dist. 1998).

In determining which school district shall bear the cost of educating a delinquent child who has been committed to the permanent custody of the Department of Youth Services, the court, in complying with JuvR 34(C), is to follow the procedure set forth in RC §§ 2151.35.7 and 3313.64(C)(2): Christman v. Washington Court House School Dist., 30 Ohio App. 3d 228, 30 Ohio B. 386, 507 N.E.2d 384 (1986).

Similar earlier proceedings by the Juvenile Court of another county do not prevent a child from thereafter becoming a school resident in a county to which he moves with his family: In re Laricchiuta, 16 Ohio App. 2d 164, 45 Ohio Op. 2d 456, 243 N.E.2d 111 (1968).

The school board of the district in which a child has a school residence at the time of his placement in another district must pay his tuition, whether such placement was by order of court or by the child welfare board in whose care the parent had voluntarily left him: In re Laricchiuta, 16 Ohio App. 2d 164, 45 Ohio Op. 2d 456, 243 N.E.2d 111 (1968).

A mother's continuing receipt of aid to dependent children from one county after moving to another does not prevent her children from becoming school residents of a district in the county to which she moved with them: In re Laricchiuta, 16 Ohio App. 2d 164, 45 Ohio Op. 2d 456, 243 N.E.2d 111 (1968).

A child becomes a "school resident" in a school district as soon as he begins to reside therein as the child or ward of a resident. No specific period of residence is required by RC § 3313.64 to entitle him to free schooling in such district: In re Laricchiuta, 16 Ohio App. 2d 164, 45 Ohio Op. 2d 456, 243 N.E.2d 111 (1968).

Subsequent proceedings by the juvenile court declaring a child neglected will not end the obligation of the district of his school residence to continue paying his tuition: In re Laricchiuta, 16 Ohio App. 2d 164, 45 Ohio Op. 2d 456, 243 N.E.2d 111 (1968).

When a juvenile court commits a neglected child to the temporary custody of a children services board, RC § 2151.35.7 requires the court to determine, in the manner prescribed by RC § 3313.64(C)(2), the school district that is to bear the cost of educating the child. Where the children services board, retaining legal custody of the child, places the child to live with a relative in another state which is a party to the Interstate Compact on the Placement of Children, RC § 5103.20, art. V(A) imposes upon the children services board, as the sending agency, the financial responsibility for assuring payment to the receiving state of the cost of the child's out-of-state public school tuition. In the absence of statutory direction as to the manner in which payment for the receiving state's tuition will be made by the responsible school district, as determined in the manner prescribed by RC § 3313.64(C)(2), the juvenile court may, in the exercise of its discretion, direct the manner in which payment will be made: OAG No. 89-092 (1989).

If a welfare agency has placed a child in a kindergarten program outside the district of the residence of the child's parents, the parents will be responsible for the tuition if they are able to pay. If they are not able to pay, the welfare agency will be responsible for the tuition, even if the board of education of the parents' residence has made no provision for a kindergarten program: OAG No. 72-099 (1972).

If the juvenile court, pursuant to RC § 2151.35.7, removes a child of kindergarten age from the home of its parents and places it under the custody of a welfare agency, and that agency then places the child in a kindergarten program in a school district other than that of the child's parents, RC § 5153.16(D), places the responsibility for payment of the tuition on the welfare agency: OAG No. 72-099 (1972).

A child of kindergarten age is included within the meaning of the word "child" as it is used in RC § 2151.35.7: OAG No. 72-099 (1972).

A board of education which does not have a kindergarten program as part of its curriculum is neither obligated nor permitted to assume the cost of tuition for a child under six years of age who resides within its district and attends a kindergarten program in another school district: OAG No. 72-099 (1972).

When a county child welfare board assumes control of a school age child and such child is placed by the board in the county children's home or in a foster home, the child's district of school residence prior to the board's assumption of control must pay tuition to another school district in which the child subsequently attends school: OAG No. 66-077 (1966).

Under this section the juvenile court "shall, at time of placing the child, determine which school district must bear the cost of educating the child while he is residing at such place as the court directs": 1963 OAG No. 553 (1963).

Where under RC § 2151.35 a juvenile court commits a child to a specialized school in another state, the court, under RC § 2151.36, must itself pay expenses occasioned by the commitment and authorized by the court at the time of commitment, which expenses are paid out of funds appropriated to the court by the board of county commissioners under RC § 2151.10; and pursuant to RC § 2151.36 the court may order the parents, guardian, or person charged with the child's support to reimburse the court for such payments: 1962 OAG No. 2938 (1962).

Children with disabilities

Under RC § 3313.64(C)(2), the local school district in which the parent of a handicapped child resided at the time that the child was removed from the parent's custody must bear the costs of educating the child: In re Humerick, 137 Ohio App. 3d 45, 738 N.E.2d 31 (2000).

Detention or juvenile facility

Juvenile Rule 34(C) and RC § 2151.35.7 require a court that commits a child to the custody of the Department of Youth Services to determine which school district shall bear the cost of educating the child: OAG No. 88-023 (1988).

Revised Code § 2151.35.7 does not require the school district of residence of a child placed in a detention home by a juvenile court to pay the cost of nonacademic summer activities provided for the child by the detention home: OAG No. 85-028 (1985).

Pursuant to RC § 2151.35.7, when a child is placed in a detention home established under RC § 2151.34, the child's school district, as determined by the court, is responsible for paying the cost of the education of the child (1963 OAG No. 553, p.552, and No. 261, p.326, overruled to the extent that they are inconsistent with this conclusion): OAG No. 80-101 (1980).

Foster care

A foster home is not an educational facility within the meaning of RC § 2151.35.7, and the section has no application to a foster home: OAG No. 70-166 (1970).

Special needs

Revised Code §§ 2151.35.7 and 3313.64(C)(2) do not make any distinctions for children with special needs; both statutes refer to a "child," which would include children with special needs: In re Feters, 1998 Ohio App. LEXIS 867 (12th Dist. 1998).

State subsidy

When, pursuant to RC § 2151.35.5, a juvenile court commits a delinquent child to an out-of-state private residential facility, the cost of educating the child is paid with funds from the state subsidy provided in RC § 2151.35.7; if such subsidy is insufficient, any remaining educational expense is to be paid by the court as provided in RC § 2151.36: OAG No. 89-006 (1989).

§ 2151.37 Institution receiving children required to make report.

At any time the juvenile judge may require from an association receiving or desiring to receive children, such reports, information, and statements as he deems necessary. He may at any time require from an association or institution reports, information, or statements concerning any child committed to it by such judge under sections 2151.01 to 2151.54, inclusive, of the Revised Code.

§ 2151.38 Duration of dispositional order.

Subject to sections 2151.353 [2151.35.3] and 2151.412 [2151.41.2] to 2151.421 [2151.42.1] of the Revised Code, and any other provision of law that specifies a different duration for a dispositional order, all dispositional orders made by the court under this chapter shall be temporary and shall continue for a period that is designated by the court in its order, until terminated or modified by the court or until the child attains twenty-one years of age.

Constitutionality

This section, providing that the jurisdiction of the juvenile court with respect to a child shall cease when such child is committed to the permanent care of an institution is constitutional: State v. Clevenger, 19 Ohio App. 2d 306, 48 Ohio Op. 2d 416, 251 N.E.2d 159 (1969).

Age of majority

Where an adjudicated delinquent child becomes twenty-one years of age during the pendency of appeals from his adjudication, all jurisdiction of the juvenile court terminates by operation of RC § 2151.38 so that the court has no authority even to vacate its previous order of commitment, which was suspended by an appellate court: In re J.F., 17 Ohio Misc. 40, 46 Ohio Op. 2d 49, 242 N.E.2d 604 (JC 1968).

Applicability

Revised Code § 2151.38 is not applicable to, nor does it bar the filing of, a motion to vacate the required judicial consent to an agreement surrendering permanent custody of a child to a county children services board pursuant to RC §§ 5103.15 and 5153.16(B): In re Miller, 61 Ohio St. 2d 184, 15 Ohio Op. 3d 211, 399 N.E.2d 1262 (1980).

Juvenile Court consent to an agreement surrendering permanent custody of a child to a county children services board, pursuant to RC §§ 5103.15 and 5153.16(B), is not an adversary proceeding, nor is such judicial consent a "commitment" of the child into the board's custody for purposes of RC § 2151.38: In re Miller, 61 Ohio St. 2d 184, 15 Ohio Op. 3d 211, 399 N.E.2d 1262 (1980).

Commitment to agency

Children committed by a juvenile court to a county department of welfare (human services) pursuant to RC Chapter 2151., either permanently or temporarily, remain the responsibility of the department until they reach the age of twenty-one, unless the court, upon a proper application, terminates the order of commitment at an earlier date: OAG No. 75-035 (1975).

Continuing jurisdiction

Juvenile court's transfer of a delinquent juvenile's placement from a residential treatment program to the Division of Youth Services was within the court's authority under RC § 2152.16(A)(1), as it had continuing jurisdiction once the juvenile was adjudicated as delinquent pursuant to RC §§ 2151.23 and 2151.38: In re D.B., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2738, 2006 Ohio 2891, (2006).

Pursuant to Ohio's statutory scheme, a juvenile adjudicated delinquent prior to age 18 remains a child in the eyes of the juvenile court until age 21. The juvenile court's exercise of its continuing jurisdiction regarding the parole violation was lawful:

In re Gillespie, 150 Ohio App. 3d 502, 782 N.E.2d 140, 2002 Ohio 7025, (2002), appeal denied by 98 Ohio St. 3d 1513, 2003 Ohio 1572, 786 N.E.2d 63, 2003 Ohio LEXIS 842 (2003).

It is apparent from this section that the juvenile court's jurisdiction of a child continues until the child is twenty-one years of age: Calogeras v. Calogeras, 82 Ohio L. Ab. 438, 10 Ohio Op. 2d 441, 163 N.E.2d 713 (JC 1959).

Court's release of child

A juvenile court has no authority pursuant to RC § 2151.38(B) or (C) to release a child committed to the Department of Youth Services under RC § 2151.35.5(A)(4)-(6) for institutional care after expiration of the applicable minimum period of institutionalization. The effect of RC § 2151.38(A), therefore, is that the juvenile court's jurisdiction to release a child terminates when the child has completed the minimum period of institutionalization: OAG No. 93-079 (1993).

If a request for early release is made pursuant to one of the procedures specified in RC § 2151.38(B) prior to expiration of the minimum period of institutionalization imposed under RC § 2151.35.5(A)(4)-(6), and the hearing is rescheduled or continued beyond the expiration of the minimum period of institutionalization, the juvenile court does not acquire or retain jurisdiction to grant an early release after that date. The court's jurisdiction over releases after the minimum period of confinement is limited to that set out in RC § 2151.38(C): OAG No. 93-079 (1993).

Credit for time served

An adjudged delinquent who is confined as an adult in an adult jail may be granted credit for time served while waiting his dispositional hearing: In re Smith, 32 Ohio App. 3d 82, 513 N.E.2d 1387 (1986).

Due process

Revised Code § 2151.38, which establishes the parole provisions for juveniles in Ohio, comports with the requirements of the due process clause, and does not mandate a full-scale adversarial adjudicatory hearing in juvenile parole revocation cases: In re Long, 24 Ohio App. 3d 32, 24 Ohio B. 55, 492 N.E.2d 878 (1985).

Educational costs

The court cannot place a child in a specific school when it commits a child to the department of youth services pursuant to RC § 2151.35.5. The same prohibition applies to the disposition of parole violators. Thus an order requiring the department to pay the child's expenses at an out-of-state school is unlawful: In re Sanders, 72 Ohio App. 3d 655, 595 N.E.2d 974 (1991).

Home furlough

Where the Department of Youth Services wishes to grant a home furlough to a child who has been committed to the legal custody of the Department of Youth Services for institutionalization or institutionalization in a secure facility under RC § 2151.35.5(A)(4) or (5), the Department may not, for the purpose of such furlough, allow the child to leave the institution in which he has been placed, prior to the expiration of the minimum period prescribed by the statutory provision under which he was committed, unless the court which committed the child approves of such early release in accordance with RC § 2151.38(B); once such a child has been institutionalized or institutionalized in a secure facility for the minimum period prescribed by the statutory provision under which he was committed, the Department may, in accordance with RC §§ 2151.38(C) and 5139.06, allow the child to leave the institution in which he was placed and return home, without prior approval of the court which committed the child: OAG No. 88-062 (1988).

Where the Department of Youth Services wishes to grant a home furlough to a child who has been committed to the legal custody of the Department of Youth Services for institutionalization in a secure facility under RC § 2151.35.5(A)(6), the Department may not, for the purpose of such furlough, allow the child to leave the institution in which he has been placed, prior to the child's attainment of the age of twenty-one years, unless the court which committed the child approves of such early release in accordance with RC § 2151.38(B): OAG No. 88-062 (1988).

Parole revocation

The determination of whether a violation of the terms and conditions of a juvenile's parole constitutes a serious violation for purposes of revoking that parole is to be made at the discretion of the trial court: In re Long, 24 Ohio App. 3d 32, 24 Ohio B. 55, 492 N.E.2d 878 (1985).

Payment by county

When a juvenile court acquires jurisdiction over a dependent child the jurisdiction continues until the child becomes twenty-one years of age, regardless of the residence of the parents; the county in which such court is situated is responsible for its support: 1937 OAG No. 891 (1937).

Permanent award to agency

The juvenile court's jurisdiction is terminated where a child is committed permanently to the county child welfare board and such fact requires a dismissal of an application for modification and change of custody by the child's mother: In re Howell, 74 Ohio L. Ab. 217, 140 N.E.2d 347 (JC 1956).

No person, association or agency, public or private, of another state, incorporated or otherwise, shall place a child in a family home or with an agency or institution within the boundaries of this state, either for temporary or permanent care or custody or for adoption, unless such person or association has furnished the department of job and family services with a medical and social history of the child, pertinent information about the family, agency, association, or institution in this state with whom the sending party desires to place the child, and any other information or financial guaranty required by the department to determine whether the proposed placement will meet the needs of the child. The department may require the party desiring the placement to agree to promptly receive and remove from the state a child brought into the state whose placement has not proven satisfactorily responsive to the needs of the child at any time until the child is adopted, reaches majority, becomes self-supporting or is discharged with the concurrence of the department. All placements proposed to be made in this state by a party located in a state which is a party to the interstate compact on the placement of children shall be made according to the provisions of sections 5103.20 to 5103.22 of the Revised Code.

Every county, township, or municipal official or department, including the prosecuting attorney, shall render all assistance and co-operation within his jurisdictional power which may further the objects of sections 2151.01 to 2151.54 of the Revised Code. All institutions or agencies to which the juvenile court sends any child shall give to the court or to any officer appointed by it such information concerning such child as said court or officer requires. The court may seek the co-operation of all societies or organizations having for their object the protection or aid of children.

On the request of the judge, when the child is represented by an attorney, or when a trial is requested the prosecuting attorney shall assist the court in presenting the evidence at any hearing or proceeding concerning an alleged or adjudicated delinquent, unruly, abused, neglected, or dependent child or juvenile traffic offender.

CASE NOTES AND OAGConfidentiality of information

Where no fingerprints or photographs of a juvenile have been taken in connection with a first-time drug or alcohol offense, a law enforcement agency may share with other law enforcement agencies or local schools personal information regarding such offenses by a juvenile, as the law enforcement agency deems such sharing appropriate to carry out its duties and to promote the goals of RC Chapter 2151., including the prevention and control of juvenile delinquency: OAG No. 87-010 (1987).

This section concerned parent or custodian charged with control of child; liability and searches during probation period; order to exercise control.

The effective date is set by section 5 of SB 179.

[§ 2151.41.2] § 2151.412 Case plan for each child; changes; priorities.

(A) Each public children services agency and private child placing agency shall prepare and maintain a case plan for any child to whom the agency is providing services and to whom any of the following applies:

(1) The agency filed a complaint pursuant to section 2151.27 of the Revised Code alleging that the child is an abused, neglected, or dependent child;

(2) The agency has temporary or permanent custody of the child;

(3) The child is living at home subject to an order for protective supervision;

(4) The child is in a planned permanent living arrangement.

Except as provided by division (A)(2) of section 5103.153 [5103.15.3] of the Revised Code, a private child placing agency providing services to a child who is the subject of a voluntary permanent custody surrender agreement entered into under division (B)(2) of section 5103.15 of the Revised Code is not required to prepare and maintain a case plan for that child.

(B)(1) The director of job and family services shall adopt rules pursuant to Chapter 119. of the Revised Code setting forth the content and format of case plans required by division (A) of this section and establishing procedures for developing, implementing, and changing the case plans. The rules shall at a minimum comply with the requirements of Title IV-E of the "Social Security Act," 94 Stat. 501, 42 U.S.C. 671 (1980), as amended.

(2) The director of job and family services shall adopt rules pursuant to Chapter 119. of the Revised Code requiring public children services agencies and private child placing agencies to maintain case plans for children and their families who are receiving services in their homes from the agencies and for whom case plans are not required by division (A) of this section. The agencies shall maintain case plans as required by those rules; however, the case plans shall not be subject to any other provision of this section except as specifically required by the rules.

(C) Each public children services agency and private child placing agency that is required by division (A) of this section to maintain a case plan shall file the case plan with the court prior to the child's adjudicatory hearing but no later than thirty days after the earlier of the date on which the complaint in the case was filed or the child was first placed into shelter care. If the agency does not have sufficient information prior to the adjudicatory hearing to complete any part of the case plan, the agency shall specify in the case plan the additional information necessary to complete each part of the case plan and the steps that will be taken to obtain that information. All parts of the case plan shall be completed by the earlier of thirty days after the adjudicatory hearing or the date of the dispositional hearing for the child.

(D) Any agency that is required by division (A) of this section to prepare a case plan shall attempt to obtain an agreement among all parties, including, but not limited to, the parents, guardian, or custodian of the child and the guardian ad litem of the child regarding the content of the case plan. If all parties agree to the content of the case plan and the court approves it, the court shall journalize it as part of its dispositional order. If the agency cannot obtain an agreement upon the contents of the case plan or the court does not approve it, the parties shall present evidence on the contents of the case plan at the dispositional hearing. The court, based upon the evidence presented at the dispositional hearing and the best interest of the child, shall determine the contents of the case plan and journalize it as part of the dispositional order for the child.

(E)(1) All parties, including the parents, guardian, or custodian of the child, are bound by the terms of the journalized case plan. A party that fails to comply with the terms of the journalized case plan may be held in contempt of court.

(2) Any party may propose a change to a substantive part of the case plan, including, but not limited to, the child's placement and the visitation rights of any party. A party proposing a change to the case plan shall file the proposed change with the court and give notice of the proposed change in writing before the end of the day after the day of filing it to all parties and the child's guardian ad litem. All parties and the guardian ad litem shall have seven days from the date the notice is sent to object to and request a hearing on the proposed change.

(a) If it receives a timely request for a hearing, the court shall schedule a hearing pursuant to section 2151.417 [2151.41.7] of the Revised Code to be held no later than thirty days after the request is received by the court. The court shall give notice of the date, time, and location of the hearing to all parties and the guardian ad litem. The agency may implement the proposed change after the hearing, if the court approves it. The agency shall not implement the proposed change unless it is approved by the court.

(b) If it does not receive a timely request for a hearing, the court may approve the proposed change without a hearing. If the court approves the proposed change without a hearing, it shall journalize the case plan with the change not later than fourteen days after the change is filed with the court. If the court does not approve the proposed change to the case plan, it shall schedule a hearing to be held pursuant to section 2151.417 [2151.41.7] of the Revised Code no later than thirty days after the expiration of the fourteen-day time period and give notice of the date, time, and location of the hearing to all parties and the guardian ad litem of the child. If, despite the requirements of division (E)(2) of this section, the court neither approves and journalizes the proposed change nor conducts a hearing, the agency may implement the proposed change not earlier than fifteen days after it is submitted to the court.

(3) If an agency has reasonable cause to believe that a child is suffering from illness or injury and is not receiving proper care and that an appropriate change in the child's case plan is necessary to prevent immediate or threatened physical or emotional harm, to believe that a child is in immediate danger from the child's surroundings and that an immediate change in the child's case plan is necessary to prevent immediate or threatened physical or emotional harm to the child, or to believe that a parent, guardian, custodian, or other member of the child's household has abused or neglected the child and that the child is in danger of immediate or threatened physical or emotional harm from that person unless the agency makes an appropriate change in the child's case plan, it may implement the change without prior agreement or a court hearing and, before the end of the next day after the change is made, give all parties, the guardian ad litem of the child, and the court notice of the change. Before the end of the third day after implementing the change in the case plan, the agency shall file a statement of the change with the court and give notice of the filing accompanied by a copy of the statement to all parties and the guardian ad litem. All parties and the guardian ad litem shall have ten days from the date the notice is sent to object to and request a hearing on the change.

(a) If it receives a timely request for a hearing, the court shall schedule a hearing pursuant to section

2151.417 [2151.41.7] of the Revised Code to be held no later than thirty days after the request is received by the court. The court shall give notice of the date, time, and location of the hearing to all parties and the guardian ad litem. The agency shall continue to administer the case plan with the change after the hearing, if the court approves the change. If the court does not approve the change, the court shall make appropriate changes to the case plan and shall journalize the case plan.

(b) If it does not receive a timely request for a hearing, the court may approve the change without a hearing. If the court approves the change without a hearing, it shall journalize the case plan with the change within fourteen days after receipt of the change. If the court does not approve the change to the case plan, it shall schedule a hearing under section 2151.417 [2151.41.7] of the Revised Code to be held no later than thirty days after the expiration of the fourteen-day time period and give notice of the date, time, and location of the hearing to all parties and the guardian ad litem of the child.

(F)(1) All case plans for children in temporary custody shall have the following general goals:

(a) Consistent with the best interest and special needs of the child, to achieve a safe out-of-home placement in the least restrictive, most family-like setting available and in close proximity to the home from which the child was removed or the home in which the child will be permanently placed;

(b) To eliminate with all due speed the need for the out-of-home placement so that the child can safely return home.

(2) The director of job and family services shall adopt rules pursuant to Chapter 119. of the Revised Code setting forth the general goals of case plans for children subject to dispositional orders for protective supervision, a planned permanent living arrangement, or permanent custody.

(G) In the agency's development of a case plan and the court's review of the case plan, the child's health and safety shall be the paramount concern. The agency and the court shall be guided by the following general priorities:

(1) A child who is residing with or can be placed with the child's parents within a reasonable time should remain in their legal custody even if an order of protective supervision is required for a reasonable period of time;

(2) If both parents of the child have abandoned the child, have relinquished custody of the child, have become incapable of supporting or caring for the child even with reasonable assistance, or have a detrimental effect on the health, safety, and best interest of the child, the child should be placed in the legal custody of a suitable member of the child's extended family;

(3) If a child described in division (G)(2) of this section has no suitable member of the child's extended family to accept legal custody, the child should be placed in the legal custody of a suitable nonrelative who shall be made a party to the proceedings after being given legal custody of the child;

(4) If the child has no suitable member of the child's extended family to accept legal custody of the child and no suitable nonrelative is available to accept legal custody of the child and, if the child temporarily cannot or should not be placed with the child's parents, guardian, or custodian, the child should be placed in the temporary custody of a public children services agency or a private child placing agency;

(5) If the child cannot be placed with either of the child's parents within a reasonable period of time or should not be placed with either, if no suitable member of the child's extended family or suitable nonrelative is available to accept legal custody of the child, and if the agency has a reasonable expectation of placing the child for adoption, the child should be committed to the permanent custody of the public children services agency or private child placing agency;

(6) If the child is to be placed for adoption or foster care, the placement shall not be delayed or denied on the basis of the child's or adoptive or foster family's race, color, or national origin.

(H) The case plan for a child in temporary custody shall include at a minimum the following requirements if the child is or has been the victim of abuse or neglect or if the child witnessed the commission in the child's household of abuse or neglect against a sibling of the child, a parent of the child, or any other person in the child's household:

(1) A requirement that the child's parents, guardian, or custodian participate in mandatory counseling;

(2) A requirement that the child's parents, guardian, or custodian participate in any supportive services that are required by or provided pursuant to the child's case plan.

(I) A case plan may include, as a supplement, a plan for locating a permanent family placement. The supplement shall not be considered part of the case plan for purposes of division (D) of this section.

Generally

Trial court did not err in determining that neither a grandmother nor an aunt were suitable placements for a father’s 10 children after it determined that his parental rights were to be terminated, and its award to a county social service agency of permanent custody of the children was proper, as relative placement was given appropriate consideration pursuant to RC §§ 2151.353(A)(3), 2151.414(D), and 2151.412(G), to the extent the latter statute was applicable, and neither relative was suitable based on a variety of considerations and factors, as well as their custodial history with these and other children. In re Hilyard, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1807, 2006 Ohio 1965, (2006).

Court rejected a father’s contention that a family services agency did not use reasonable efforts to assist him in completing his case plan because the evidence showed that the father was provided with a case plan that required him to enroll in a long term batterer’s treatment program, to undergo extensive outpatient treatment for substance abuse problems, to submit to weekly urine screens, to complete parenting classes, and to obtain employment. The father, however, failed to do comply with the case plan. In re Davidson-Rush, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4781, 2006 Ohio 4873, (2006).

Permanent custody of a mother’s three children was properly granted to family services agency as the award was in the children’s best interests. Since the children’s grandparents had little contact with the children, since the children had been doing well with their foster parents, who wished to adopt them, and since placement with the grandparents would have facilitated the mother and father with continued involvement with the children which could place the children in danger, the trial court did not err in failing to place the children with their grandparents under RC § 2151.412(G). In re Bodenheimer, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3131, 2006 Ohio 3245, (2006).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion by finding, in a custody proceeding involving a minor child’s relative and the child’s foster mother, that considerations related to stability and continuity of care were overriding factors especially where the child had been raised since birth by the same foster family that was seeking legal custody, and notwithstanding the fact both parties seeking legal custody appeared to be suitable custodians. While placement with a suitable family member was one factor to consider under RC § 2151.412(G), it was not dispositive. In re A. V., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3021, 2006 Ohio 3149, (2006).

Father’s contention that a trial court erred by failing to comply with RC § 2151.412(G)(5) before granting permanent custody of the father’s child to a children’s services agency was rejected because there is no requirement that a trial court consider this statute in determining whether to grant permanent custody as the statute deals with the creation and implementation of a case plan, not the determination of whether to grant permanent custody of a child to an agency. Even so, neither the father nor any of his family members filed a motion with the trial court requesting that the trial court grant them custody. In re Alexander, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 7005, 2006 Ohio 7083, (2006).

Failure to include a child’s father in a case plan concerning the child was not fatal, under RC § 2151.412(F)(1)(b), because the father was included in a substantially similar case plan in a previous case regarding the child’s siblings and half sibling, and, although he completed that case plan’s objectives, he refused to acknowledge the problem which barred the subject child’s safe return home. In re Hortsmann, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2089, 2005 Ohio 2168, (2005).

Language of RC § 2151.412, regarding placing a child who has been abandoned, of whom custody has been relinquished, or whose parents are incapable of caring for the child or have a detrimental effect on the health, safety and best interest of the child, with a public children’s services agency or a private child placement agency is precatory rather than mandatory, and sets forth criteria a court should consider in determining placement of the child. In re Gaugler, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 3756, 2004 Ohio 4114, (2004).

RC § 2151.412(G), regarding placing custody of an abused or neglected child with an extended family member, sets out general, discretionary priorities to guide the court, and while the guidelines may be helpful to the juvenile court, it is not obligated to follow them. In re Halstead, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 902, 2005 Ohio 403, (2004).

Language of RC § 2151.412(G) indicating a preference for awarding custody of a child to a relative before a non-relative is precatory, not mandatory. In re Halstead, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 902, 2005 Ohio 403, (2004).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in failing to grant custody of the child to the grandmother, and in terminating all parental rights as to her grandchild, because, although she was considered, she was found to be of borderline intelligence, had some health problems, no job, and had a history of domestic violence and sexual abuse in her home. In re Cohoon, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 4020, 2004 Ohio 4430, (2004).

RC § 2151.412 requires a public children's service agency to prepare and maintain a case plan for any child for which the agency has temporary or permanent custody; in an action to grant permanent custody to a county agency of two minor children, despite the fact that the county agency did not complete a case plan for the children's father, the father was not prejudiced by any failure to file a case plan, and therefore, had no standing to appeal. In re McCann, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 260, 2004 Ohio 283, (2004).

The court's failure to journalize the case plan constituted harmless error. In re Brown, 142 Ohio App. 3d 193, 755 N.E.2d 365 (2001).

A parent has standing to assert that custody should have been granted to a relative rather than permanently to a children services agency. RC § 2151.41.2 does not require a court to favor a relative, rather than the children services agency, in granting custody. In re Hiatt, 86 Ohio App. 3d 716, 621 N.E.2d 1222 (1993).

Where evidence showed that agency had formulated and followed a case plan, lower court's failure to adopt and journalize plan was harmless error. In re Beasley, 1993 Ohio App. LEXIS 5410 (1993).

There is no need to implement a reunification plan when it would be futile to do so: Elmer v. Lucas Cty. Children Serv. Bd., 36 Ohio App. 3d 241, 523 N.E.2d 540 (1987).

If a juvenile court, in making disposition of an unruly or delinquent child pursuant to RC §§ 2151.35.4 or 2151.35.5, places the child into the temporary custody of the county department of human services in accordance with RC § 2151.35.3 and the department provides services to that child, the county department of human services is required to develop and file with the court a case plan pursuant to RC § 2151.41.2 and to hold semiannual reviews of the case plan pursuant to RC § 2151.41.6: OAG No. 99-041 (1999).

Applicability

Where a grandmother filed a dependency petition regarding a child pursuant to RC § 2151.27(A) and no children services agency provided services in the matter, the juvenile court did not commit any error in failing to comply with the case plan requirement of RC § 2151.412(A), as it had no applicability to the dependency action where the agency was not involved. In re Brown, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3090, 2006 Ohio 3189, (2006).

Revised Code § 2151.41.2, requiring the children services agency to issue an "initial reunification plan" and a "comprehensive reunification plan," is not applicable where the temporary custody arrangement was voluntarily entered into by the parents and the agency and the original request of the agency was for permanent custody. In re Pachin, 50 Ohio App. 3d 44, 552 N.E.2d 655 (1988).

Revised Code §§ 2151.41.2 and 2151.41.4 are applicable only where the child or children have previously been determined dependent, neglected or abused, their temporary custody has been committed to a children services board, a welfare department or a certified organization, and an order is sought changing temporary to permanent custody. These sections are not applicable where the original request was for permanent custody, and an order of temporary custody was issued pending hearing on the complaint as provided by RC § 2151.33: In re Covert, 17 Ohio App. 3d 122, 17 Ohio B. 185, 477 N.E.2d 678 (1984).

Contagious disease of parent

Where a mother contracted a contagious disease, a county agency properly temporarily terminated her visitation with the children, pending an indication that she had taken the necessary medication in order to not expose the children to the disease.

Although the agency erred in terminating phone contact between the mother and her children pending her submission to a drug screening, as that was a substantive change that required modification of the case plan, pursuant to RC § 2151.412(E)(2), such did not require reversal of the trial court's grant of permanent custody to the agency under RC § 2151.414(C), as reasonable efforts at reunification had been made under RC § 2151.419(A)(1) and evidence supported the trial court's decision. In re Townsend, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2355, 2005 Ohio 2473, (2005).

Foster care

When a child had been placed with certain foster parents since he was 10 weeks old, and developed a strong bond with the foster parents, it was not an abuse of discretion for a juvenile court to award the child's custody to the foster parents, instead of awarding custody to the child's aunt and uncle, who also sought custody, and had spent 18 hours with the child, despite the preference for placing children with extended family members, in RC § 2151.412(G). In re Halstead, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 902, 2005 Ohio 403, (2004).

Where there are visitations and an ongoing relationship between children in foster home placement and their mother, the likelihood that the foster parents will become the "psychological parents" of these children is quite negligible. In re Neglected Children, 65 Ohio Misc. 7, 18 Ohio Op. 3d 283, 416 N.E.2d 669 (CP 1979).

Incarcerated parent

There was no support for an incarcerated mother's argument that the duty of the children's services agency with custody of her children to make reasonable efforts to reunite her with her children included the duty to monitor or evaluate her efforts at reunification during her incarceration absent contact by her with the agency to make the agency aware of her efforts. In re Vance, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 6328, 2003 Ohio 6991, (2003).

When a mother whose parental rights were terminated complained that the children's services agency with custody of her children did not provide her with reunification services, under RC § 2151.412(F)(1)(b), after she was incarcerated, given the mother's significant involvement with the agency before her incarceration, her lack of commitment to using the resources, including parenting education, offered her, her continuous criminal activity, and her chance to tell her caseworker of programs she was involved in while incarcerated and to provide information about these programs, the agency had no further obligation to provide services to her while she was incarcerated. In re Vance, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 6328, 2003 Ohio 6991, (2003).

Privileges

Under RC § 4732.19 and RC § 2317.02(B), the testimony of the psychologist who conducted the mother's evaluation for the permanent custody proceeding was admissible as part of the case plan journalized under RC § 2151.412. In re Morales/Mendez Children, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6349, 2006 Ohio 6403, (2006).

Where court-ordered treatment or services were ordered as part of a case plan journalized under RC § 2151.41.2 and/or were necessary or relevant to the proceedings under RC § 2151, a biological father's waiver of the statutory psychologist-client privilege was in effect when his psychologist testified; therefore, the trial court properly allowed the testimony because the communications were exempt under RC §§ 2317.02(B)(1)(b), 4732.19. In re Aristotle R., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 189, 2004 Ohio 217, (2004).

In the absence of a specific statutory waiver or exception, the testimonial privileges established under RC § 2317.02(B)(1) (concerning communications between a physician and patient), RC § 4732.19 (concerning communications between a licensed psychologist and client), and RC § 2317.02(G) (concerning communications between a licensed counselor or licensed social worker and client) are applicable to communications made by a parent in the course of treatment ordered as part of a reunification plan in an action for dependency and neglect. In re Wieland, 89 Ohio St. 3d 535, 733 N.E.2d 1127, 2000 Ohio 233, (2000).

Reunification plan

In a parental rights termination proceeding pursuant to RC § 2151.414, the trial court was not required to make a finding that the county social service agency made reasonable efforts to reunite the child with the mother pursuant to RC § 2151.419(A)(2), as two of her other minor children had been involuntarily removed from her care previously. The trial court made the requisite findings regarding both parents' lack of success in completing their case plans and the reasonable efforts made by the agency pursuant to RC § 2151.412, which was based on the parents' inability or unwillingness to provide an adequate permanent home and stable living conditions to raise the child, and the fact that they were dependents of society due to their situations, including the mother's mental illnesses and her refusal to take her medication. In re Shifflet, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3521, 2006 Ohio 3576, (2006).

Because the children's services agency sought an award of permanent custody as the initial disposition, it was not required to file a case plan aimed at reunification (under RC § 2151.412(C)), unless the basis for the award was predicated upon RC § 2151.414(E)(1), which could not be determined since the trial court did not even identify the factors prescribed in RC § 2151.414(E) as the basis for its final order. In re Allbery, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 5866, 2005 Ohio 6529, (2005).

Although the county child welfare agency was statutorily required to develop case plans for children in their custody and the case plans should have included objectives for each of the parents, the trial court did not err in awarding permanent custody to the county child welfare agency without attempting to reunify the child with the mother, as its attempt to reunify the minor child with the mother would have been futile given the mother's little or no contact with the child for more than eight years, especially since testimony indicated the attempted reunification would have been traumatic for the minor child. In re Leitwein, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1131, 2004 Ohio 1296, (2004).

Where an unidentified biological parent does not voluntarily step forward and identify himself as the parent of abused, neglected or dependent children and request that he be reunited with the children, such a parent is not denied due process of law when he is not provided with a comprehensive reunification plan prior to the court's divesting him of his parental rights. If, however, it comes to the social welfare agency's attention, through a paternity suit or otherwise, and prior to the court's granting permanent custody to the social welfare agency, that a previously unidentified individual is the biological parent of the children, the social welfare agency must acknowledge the fact of the children's biological parentage and include said parent as a party to the permanent custody proceedings: Garabrant v. Lucas Cty. Children Services Bd., 47 Ohio App. 3d 119, 547 N.E.2d 997 (1988).

Where a child is temporarily committed under JuvR 7, the court is not required to order a reunification plan: In re Maloney, 24 Ohio St. 3d 22, 24 Ohio B. 18, 492 N.E.2d 805 (1986).

Ordinarily, a comprehensive reunification plan must include regular and frequent visitation and communication or other contact between the parents and child. However, in exceptional cases it is within the discretion of the juvenile court to deny visitation: In re Jones, 29 Ohio App. 3d 176, 29 Ohio B. 206, 504 N.E.2d 719 (1985).

Revised Code § 2151.41.2 does not require a juvenile court to order a reunification plan when it makes a dispositional order pursuant to RC § 2151.35.3(A)(4): In re Baby Girl Baxter, 17 Ohio St. 3d 229, 17 Ohio B. 469, 479 N.E.2d 257 (1985).

Any time a dependent child is temporarily placed with someone other than a parent, a reunification plan should be formulated. In cases where the child is placed with a relative, pursuant to RC § 2151.35.3(A)(2), the court should formulate the reunification plan itself or appoint an agency with some expertise in the area to formulate one: In re Patterson, 16 Ohio App. 3d 214, 16 Ohio B. 229, 475 N.E.2d 160 (1984).

In a case in which a social welfare agency moves for permanent custody of a child for adoptive placement, if the record reveals that the non-custodial parent has maintained a continuing interest in his or her child's welfare, RC § 2151.41.2(C) places a mandatory duty on the social welfare agency to prepare a comprehensive reunification plan for that non-custodial parent: In re Ball, 5 Ohio App. 3d 56, 5 Ohio B. 152, 449 N.E.2d 490 (1982).

Section 3 of Am. Sub. H.B. No. 695, concerning the phase-in of RC §§ 2151.41.2, 2151.41.3 and 2151.41.4, requires that a written comprehensive reunification plan be included in the second annual review made after the effective date of the Act (October 24, 1980), of any child who is in temporary custody upon such effective date pursuant to court order under RC Chapter 2151, or pursuant to RC § 5103.15: In re Smith, 7 Ohio App. 3d 75, 7 Ohio B. 88, 454 N.E.2d 171 (1982).

Where children are adjudged neglected under RC § 2151.03 and committed to the temporary custody of a social agency, the agency should plan for the rehabilitation and reunification of the children with their family and the court should insist that the agency make a conscientious effort to bring the plan to fruition before considering the alternative of adoptive placement: In re Neglected Children, 65 Ohio Misc. 7, 18 Ohio Op. 3d 283, 416 N.E.2d 669 (CP 1979).

Termination of parental rights

Finding that permanent custody by Allen County Children's Services Board (CSB) was in the two children's best interests was proper as the mother failed to bond with the children, the CSB had had temporary custody for more than 12 of the last 22 consecutive months, the mother was involved with a known felon, whose children had been removed, and two experts opined that the mother could not adequately parent; while the mother had stable housing, which was a requirement of her case plan, she had not obtained it until after the permanent custody motion was filed. In re Hershberger, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 455, 2005 Ohio 429, (2005).

Mother failed continuously and repeatedly to substantially remedy the conditions causing her children to be placed outside of their home and follow a set case plan, thus, supporting the trial court's grant of permanent custody to children services by clear and convincing evidence. The mother, among other things, failed to visit the children on occasions, expressed hostility towards and was uncooperative with children services and others providing assistance to her children, overdosed on illegal drugs while the children were at home, and failed to provide food or other basic necessities. In re Archer, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2551, 2004 Ohio 2916, (2004).

Mother's claim that a trial court erred in granting permanent custody of her minor child to a children services board lacked merit, as she did not object to the board's failure to file a case plan until 39 days after filing the complaint, although it was required to file same within 30 days pursuant to RC § 2151.412(C), nor did she object that the initial case plan allegedly did not address the problems giving rise to the child's removal. Further, the court found that the mother did not comply with most of her case plan requirements and that the board provided services in support of her case plan regarding housing and parenting skills. In re P. C., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1088, 2004 Ohio 1230, (2004).

Evidence that (1) children's behavioral problems and developmental delays improved greatly after their being placed in foster care, (2) the foster parents addressed the children's medical problems which the parents had failed to treat, and (3) the parents had limited intelligence and an improvement in their mental health conditions would take intensive treatment for at least one year supported an award of permanent custody to a child protection agency. In re Kitana, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 3612, 2004 Ohio 3963, (2004).

Termination of a mother's parental rights and award of custody to appellee department of job and family services was affirmed where, inter alia, the child was placed after not being picked up at day care, where a psychologist expressed significant concerns about the mother's ability to provide a safe and nurturing environment for the child, and cited the mother's multiple health problems, low level of intelligence, and potential for personality disturbance as factors which prevented her from providing adequate parental care, where the mother had lost two prior children in permanent custody cases in another county, where the mother had a history of interacting with men who had lost their own children to permanent custody, and/or had criminal histories, and where the mother had moved four times within the last year and one-half, and relied on family members for transportation. In re Huston, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 6569, 2003 Ohio 7280, (2003).

Termination of father's parental rights reversed where trial court did not find that reunification was futile, where trial court did not require guardian ad litem's report to be timely filed, where children's services failed to timely file case plan showing whether father agreed to abide by children's services instructions, and where children's services contributed to appearance of futility of reunification by its conduct: Isaac v. Montgomery County Children's Servs. Bd. (In re Richard), 1994 Ohio App. LEXIS 5612 (1994).

Visitation

Given the trauma caused by the visitation, the son's compelling concerns, and the recommendation of his counselor and guardian ad litem, the trial court did not err in terminating the mother's visitation with her son, who had been found dependent. In re Unger Children, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2291, 2005 Ohio 2414, (2005).

[§ 2151.41.3] § 2151.413 Agency may file motion requesting permanent custody.

(A) A public children services agency or private child placing agency that, pursuant to an order of disposition under division (A)(2) of section 2151.353 [2151.35.3] of the Revised Code or under any version of section 2151.353 [2151.35.3] of the Revised Code that existed prior to January 1, 1989, is granted temporary custody of a child who is not abandoned or orphaned may file a motion in the court that made the disposition of the child requesting permanent custody of the child.

(B) A public children services agency or private child placing agency that, pursuant to an order of disposition under division (A)(2) of section 2151.353 [2151.35.3] of the Revised Code or under any version of section 2151.353 [2151.35.3] of the Revised Code that existed prior to January 1, 1989, is granted temporary custody of a child who is orphaned may file a motion in the court that made the disposition of the child requesting permanent custody of the child whenever it can show that no relative of the child is able to take legal custody of the child.

(C) A public children services agency or private child placing agency that, pursuant to an order of disposition under division (A)(5) of section 2151.353 [2151.35.3] of the Revised Code, places a child in a planned permanent living arrangement may file a motion in the court that made the disposition of the child requesting permanent custody of the child.

(D)(1) Except as provided in division (D)(3) of this section, if a child has been in the temporary custody of one or more public children services agencies or private child placing agencies for twelve or more months of a consecutive twenty-two month period ending on or after March 18, 1999, the agency with custody shall file a motion requesting permanent custody of the child. The motion shall be filed in the court that issued the current order of temporary custody. For the purposes of this division, a child shall be considered to have entered the temporary custody of an agency on the earlier of the date the child is adjudicated pursuant to section 2151.28 of the Revised Code or the date that is sixty days after the removal of the child from home.

(2) Except as provided in division (D)(3) of this section, if a court makes a determination pursuant to division (A)(2) of section 2151.419 [2151.41.9] of the Revised Code, the public children services agency or private child placing agency required to develop the permanency plan for the child under division (K) of section 2151.417 [2151.41.7] of the Revised Code shall file a motion in the court that made the determination requesting permanent custody of the child.

(3) An agency shall not file a motion for permanent custody under division (D)(1) or (2) of this section if any of the following apply:

(a) The agency documents in the case plan or permanency plan a compelling reason that permanent custody is not in the best interest of the child.

(b) If reasonable efforts to return the child to the child's home are required under section 2151.419 [2151.41.9] of the Revised Code, the agency has not provided the services required by the case plan to the parents of the child or the child to ensure the safe return of the child to the child's home.

(c) The agency has been granted permanent custody of the child.

(d) The child has been returned home pursuant to court order in accordance with division (A)(3) of section 2151.419 [2151.41.9] of the Revised Code.

(E) Any agency that files a motion for permanent custody under this section shall include in the case plan of the child who is the subject of the motion, a specific plan of the agency's actions to seek an adoptive family for the child and to prepare the child for adoption.

(F) The department of job and family services may adopt rules pursuant to Chapter 119. of the Revised Code that set forth the time frames for case reviews and for filing a motion requesting permanent custody under division (D)(1) of this section.

Constitutionality

With respect to termination of parental rights, RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d) is constitutional on its face and RC § 2151.413 and RC § 2151.414 do not violate a parent's equal protection rights because they do not distinguish between groups of parents or treat similarly situated parents differently. The mother's unsupported assertions of unconstitutionality were insufficient to satisfy her burden, particularly in light of the well-recognized presumption of constitutionality. In re SW, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2829, 2006 Ohio 2958, (2006), writ of certiorari denied by 127 S. Ct. 1152, 166 L. Ed. 2d 999, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 1222, 75 U.S.L.W. 3384 (U.S. 2007).

That trial courts may come to different conclusions in different cases based upon different facts with respect to termination of parental rights under RC §§ 2151.413 and 2151.414 does not create a violation of the Equal Protection Clause; those statutes do not distinguish between groups of parents or treat similarly situated parents differently. In re B.L., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 1136, 2005 Ohio 1151, (2005), writ of certiorari denied by 546 U.S. 945, 126 S. Ct. 443, 163 L. Ed. 2d 337, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 7453, 74 U.S.L.W. 3229 (2005).

Generally

Because the agency filed its permanent custody motion more than 12 months after the child was placed in temporary custody, the trial court did not err in denying the mother's motion to dismiss the permanent custody motion. In re SW, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2829, 2006 Ohio 2958, (2006), writ of certiorari denied by 127 S. Ct. 1152, 166 L. Ed. 2d 999, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 1222, 75 U.S.L.W. 3384 (U.S. 2007).

Where a father's mother did not file a motion requesting legal custody of the father's children, pursuant to RC § 2151.353(A)(3), prior to the dispositional hearing wherein the children's permanent custody was granted to a county social service agency, the trial court was without authority to grant the custody of the father's children to his mother. In re Z.Y., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 260, 2006 Ohio 300, (2006).

Juvenile court's grant of permanent custody to a county social service agency pursuant to RC §§ 2151.413 and 2151.414 rather than to the children's maternal grandparents was supported by evidence that the agency placement was in the children's best interests, as they were receiving necessary counseling and services. Denial of the grandparents' request for custody was not an abuse of discretion, as they had not officially moved for such relief under RC § 2151.353(A)(3), but rather had merely sent correspondence to the juvenile court requesting such relief, and further, there was evidence that the children's best interests would not be served if they lived together due to acting out issues regarding sexual abuse that they suffered. In re Turner, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4532, 2006 Ohio 4906, (2006).

Trial court did not err in denying the mother's motion to dismiss the permanent custody motion because the plain language of RC § 2151.413(D)(1) allows an agency to calculate the period of time that a child has been in the temporary custody using any period of a consecutive 22-month period, calculated from the time the child was adjudicated or 60 days after removal of the child from the home. In re S.R., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4921, 2006 Ohio 4983, (2006), writ of certiorari denied by 127 S. Ct. 2882, 167 L. Ed. 2d 1158, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 6154, 75 U.S.L.W. 3636 (U.S. 2007).

Before a public children-services agency or private child-placing agency can move for permanent custody of a child on RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d) grounds, the child must have been in the temporary custody of an agency for at least 12 months of a consecutive 22-month period. In re C.W., 104 Ohio St. 3d 163, 818 N.E.2d 1176, 2004 Ohio 6411, (2004).

Where a child had not been in an agency's custody for 12 months when it sought permanent custody, under RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(a), the trial court had to, and did, find that she could not be placed with either parent within a reasonable time or should not be so placed; it was not required to also find that she had been in the agency's care for 12 months out of a consecutive 22-month period. In re Strychalski, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1364, 2004 Ohio 1542, (2004).

Trial court did not err in awarding county child welfare agency the permanent custody of the mother's minor child, as statutory law permitted the county child welfare agency, which had temporary custody of a child, to file a motion requesting permanent custody of the minor child. In the minor child's case, the evidence showed that the minor child could not be placed with either parent within a reasonable amount of time and that permanent custody with the county child welfare agency was in the child's best interest. In re Leitwein, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1131, 2004 Ohio 1296, (2004).

Finding that a child was in an agency's temporary custody for at least 12 months of a consecutive 22-month period precluded a determination required by RC § 2151.414(E) of whether parents had remedied conditions which caused removal of child; the trial court was not required to conduct an analysis under RC § 2151.414(E)(1), and an order terminating parental rights was affirmed. In re L.D., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 3655, 2004 Ohio 4000, (2004).

Child services agencies have no authority to file a motion for permanent custody of children on the basis that the children have been in the temporary custody of the agency for 12 or more months of a consecutive 22 month period prior to expiration of the entire 12-month period. A trial court's order granting the Wayne County Children Services Board's petition for permanent custody of three children and termination of their father's parental rights was reversed where the evidence clearly showed, and the trial court explicitly found, that the children were in temporary custody for only 10 months when the petition was filed. In re K. G., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1290, 2004 Ohio 1421, (2004).

There was no error in terminating a parent's parental rights because legal custody of her children never had reverted to her; any temporary custody awarded to a county department of job and family services had not lapsed during an appeal by the parent where the trial court had continued the department's temporary custody of the children for 30 days. In re Robinson, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4954, 2003 Ohio 5528, (2003).

Appeals court affirmed a termination of parental rights to one child adjudicated as abused under RC § 2151.031 and one adjudicated as dependent under RC § 2151.04 where substantial evidence, including the mother's abuse, alcohol use, and encouragement of theft, supported the trial court's best interest findings under RC § 2151.414(D). In re Large, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4772, 2003 Ohio 5275, (2003).

RC § 2151.413 permits a public child services agency that has temporary custody of a child to file a motion requesting permanent custody of the child, and RC § 2151.414(A)(1) requires the trial court to hold a hearing regarding the motion for permanent custody; the order to grant permanent custody of a minor child to the child services department was affirmed because the evidence provided at hearing supported the finding that a legally secure permanent placement could not be achieved without terminating the parents' custody. In re Riley, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3658, 2003 Ohio 4109, (2003).

The mother's homelessness and unstable relationships showed that awarding permanent custody to the agency was in the best interest of the children. In re Joshua B., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 2797, 2003 Ohio 3096, (2003).

Former RC § 2151.41.3(A) required that a children services agency seeking permanent custody of a child must have had temporary custody of the child for at least six months immediately preceding the filing of the motion for permanent custody. In re Hayes, 79 Ohio St. 3d 46, 679 N.E.2d 680 (1997).

Former RC § 2151.41.3, requiring an agency to wait six months before moving for permanent custody, was intended to allow time for the case plan to work. Lorain County Children Servs. v. Keene, 118 Ohio App. 3d 535, 693 N.E.2d 833 (1997).

In order to file a motion for permanent custody under RC § 2151.41.3(A), a children services agency must have current temporary custody pursuant to RC § 2151.35.3(A)(2). In re Miller, 101 Ohio App. 3d 199, 655 N.E.2d 252 (1995).

The extension of a temporary custody order by agreement of the parties did not require the children services agency to wait an additional six months from the time of the extension to file for permanent custody. In re Stokes, 1994 Ohio App. LEXIS 4018 (7th Dist. 1994).

Revised Code § 2151.41.3 does not provide the only method of obtaining permanent custody. RC § 2151.35 also allows the court to grant the agency permanent custody on the initial complaint of the agency. A complaint seeking shelter care pending adjudication allows the agency to subsequently file an amended complaint seeking permanent custody and the amended complaint will relate back as though the agency had initially sought permanent custody as allowed by RC § 2151.35: In re Massengill, 76 Ohio App. 3d 220, 601 N.E.2d 206 (1992).

Adoption

Revised Code § 2151.41.3(E) does not require the agency to file an adoption plan either at any specific time or before permanent custody is granted: In re Cavender, 2001 Ohio App. LEXIS 1262 (12th Dist. 2001).

Amended case plan

The mother was not prejudiced by the fact that the children services agency did not file an amended case plan until the second day of trial, seven months after it moved for permanent custody: In re MacFarland, 1994 Ohio App. LEXIS 334 (9th Dist. 1994).

Appeal

Where a father's request for an order requiring a county agency to take permanent custody of his minor children pursuant to RC § 2151.413(C) was denied by the trial court, such order was not final and appealable pursuant to RC § 2505.02(B)(2) because a substantial right was not affected in the special proceeding pursuant to RC ch. 2151. As the father sought to have his parental rights terminated, he could have brought a declaratory judgment action under RC § 2721.03, a mandamus action under RC § 2731.04, or sought appropriate relief under other statutory provisions, as the statutory scheme under RC ch. 2151 was for preservation and restoration of parental rights, and accordingly, the appeal required dismissal. In re DeVore, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4349, 2006 Ohio 4432, (2006).

Denial of motion

Although children had been in temporary custody of the county child services department for nearly two years, the trial court found that permanently severing the minor children's parental relationships was not in their best interests, particularly where, in light of the parents' divorce, the county department should have provided the father additional time to show that he was able to provide the children with a stable and nurturing home. In re Cunningham, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 720, 2004 Ohio 787, (2004).

Where, upon hearing a motion requesting permanent custody of a child, a court decides to deny the motion, the court may proceed in accordance with RC § 2151.41.5 and make any disposition listed in that statute, including placement of a child in long-term foster care: In re McDaniel, 1993 Ohio App. LEXIS 806 (4th Dist. 1993).

Hearing

In the permanent custody hearing, the magistrate erred by admitting the probation officer's hearsay testimony that the laboratory reports indicated that the mother's urine samples tested positive for marijuana; the reports were not admitted into evidence, the probation officer did not perform the tests or testify as to how the tests were performed, and the probation officer's testimony was offered to prove the truth of the matter asserted, that the mother tested positive for marijuana. In re McLemore, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 591, 2004 Ohio 680, (2004).

In considering a motion filed by a public children services agency requesting permanent custody of a child, the trial court is required to hold a hearing regarding the motion, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(A)(1), to determine whether the child's best interests would be served by permanently terminating the parental relationship and by awarding permanent custody to the agency. In re Riley, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3657, 2003 Ohio 4108, (2003).

Incarcerated parent

Trial court properly used the length of the father's incarceration as a relevant factor in the determination of the best interests of the children in terminating a father's parental rights; also, the trial court could have terminated the father's parental rights because of the length of time the children were in the temporary custody of the agency but the court was required to terminate the father's parental rights for failure to follow the case plan and for showing a lack of commitment to the children. In re Myers, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 493, 2004 Ohio 539, (2004).

Notice

Revised Code § 2151.41.3 was violated where the mother did not receive notice of the dependency hearing: In re Brown, 98 Ohio App. 3d 337, 648 N.E.2d 576 (1994).

Planned permanent living arrangement

Because the agency filed a permanent custody motion pursuant to RC § 2151.413(D)(1) before the mother filed her planned permanent living arrangement (PPLA) motion, there the trial court did not err in denying her motion. Pursuant to RC § 2151.415(A), a party cannot file a PPLA motion when the court is required to make a permanent custody determination under RC § 2151.413(D)(1). In re SW, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2829, 2006 Ohio 2958, (2006), writ of certiorari denied by 127 S. Ct. 1152, 166 L. Ed. 2d 999, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 1222, 75 U.S.L.W. 3384 (U.S. 2007).

Res judicata

Since a mother did not appeal from a trial court's award of permanent custody, res judicata barred the mother from challenging in her appeal from the trial court's later decision dismissing her motion for alternative disposition the trial court's award of permanent custody. Even if the mother had asserted assignments of error addressing the trial court's adoption of the magistrate's decision, the mother failed to file objections to the decision, and thus, pursuant to Ohio R. Juv. P. 40(E)(3)(d), she was precluded from assigning as error the trial court's adoption of the findings of fact and conclusions of law from that decision. In re K.B., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2967, 2006 Ohio 3104, (2006).

Retroactivity

The 1996 amendment to RC § 2151.41.3, eliminating the requirement that a children services agency have temporary custody for at least six months before filing for permanent custody, did not apply to pending cases: In re Brenna E., 124 Ohio App. 3d 143, 705 N.E.2d 728 (1997).

Reunification provisions

RC § 2151.419(A)(1) does not apply in a hearing on a motion for permanent custody filed pursuant to RC § 2151.413. However, except for some narrowly defined statutory exceptions, the state must still make reasonable efforts to reunify the family during the child custody proceedings prior to the termination of parental rights. If the agency has not established that reasonable efforts have been made prior to the hearing on a motion for permanent custody, then it must demonstrate such efforts at that time: In re C.F., 113 Ohio St. 3d 73, 862 N.E.2d 816, 2007 Ohio 1104, (2007).

Court rejected a mother's contention that a children services agency failed to make reasonable efforts to implement the assigned case plan. The "reasonable efforts" requirement in RC § 2151.419 is not applicable to permanent custody cases involving RC §§ 2151.413 and 2151.414. In re V.M., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4370, 2006 Ohio 4461, (2006), affirmed by 113 Ohio St. 3d 161, 2007 Ohio 1254, 863 N.E.2d 167, 2007 Ohio LEXIS 788 (2007).

Requirement in RC § 2151.419(A)(1) that a children's services agency make "reasonable efforts" to reunify children removed from their home with their families applied to hearings held pursuant to RC §§ 2151.28, 2151.31(E), 2151.314, 2151.33, and 2151.353, but it did not apply when permanent custody was sought pursuant to RC § 2151.413 or when such a motion was heard pursuant to RC § 2151.414, so it did not apply to an agency's motion for permanent custody of a father's children. In re R.A.M., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3149, 2006 Ohio 3242, (2006).

Permanent custody sought subsequent to adjudication in a separate motion made under RC § 2151.413 is not subject to a hearing held under any of the statutes referred to in RC § 2151.419(A). Thus, RC § 2151.419(A) does not apply to permanent custody sought under RC § 2151.413 after adjudication and initial disposition. In re Samples, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 963, 2006 Ohio 1056, (2006).

Father's reliance on RC § 2151.419(A)(1) in a parental rights termination proceeding involving his two children was misplaced, as it did not apply to the father's situation where the motion for permanent custody of his children was filed by an agency under RC § 2151.413. Accordingly, a reasonable efforts determination was not required and further, as the father was incarcerated, any such efforts would have been futile for purposes of reunification. In re Z.Y., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 260, 2006 Ohio 300, (2006).

Since a permanent custody hearing was held pursuant to a motion filed under RC § 2151.413, the statute requiring that a children services agency make reasonable efforts at reunification, RC § 2151.419(A), did not apply, and thus, the trial court was not required to find that the agency made reasonable efforts at reunification before awarding the agency permanent custody of the father's children. In re Bradley, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2276, 2006 Ohio 2367, (2006).

Because a children services' board filed its motion for permanent custody under RC § 2151.413, the "reasonable efforts" requirement of RC § 2151.419(A) was not applicable; therefore, the trial court had authority to grant permanent custody to the board under RC § 2151.414(B)(1) when it found, inter alia, that the mother had abandoned the child during the mother's incarceration and that she had failed to secure permanent housing. In re S.P., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 1104, 2005 Ohio 1079, (2005).

Because the agency sought permanent custody of one of the children under RC § 2151.413, the trial court was not required to comply with RC § 2151.419(B)(1) by entering a specific listing of the facts leading to its decision. In re Miller, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 875, 2005 Ohio 856, (2005).

Mother's claim on appeal that a trial court erred in terminating her parental rights over her minor child without first making a finding that the agency had used reasonable and diligent efforts to reunify the mother with her child lacked merit, as there was no such finding required under RC § 2151.419, as such did not apply to permanent custody hearings under RC § 2151.414. The trial court followed the statutory requirements of RC § 2151.414 prior to granting the permanent custody motion under RC § 2151.413, and there was no duty on the agency to prove that it exerted reasonable and diligent efforts towards reunification under RC § 2151.414. In re C.W., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 6093, 2005 Ohio 6739, (2005).

Trial court properly found that the child services board was not required to attempt to reunite a minor child with her mother and father; the mother, who was incarcerated, had parental rights terminated for five different children on two prior occasions and the father for two children on one occasion. In re Richardson, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1876, 2004 Ohio 2170, (2004).

There was clear, convincing evidence supporting termination of parental rights based on the parents' inability to provide an adequate living environment; while the agency was not required to reunite the child and her parents, efforts to reunite were made. In re Jackson, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 497, 2004 Ohio 542, (2004).

Ordinarily, at the time of a RC § 2151.413 filing, a child services agency will either have already complied with the requirement that it make a reasonable effort to return the child to its natural parent or parents, or the agency will have properly determined that any such effort would be futile, and the trial court will have made its findings accordingly; thus, a child services agency is not required to prove compliance with RC § 2151.419(A) when proceeding with a motion for permanent custody pursuant to RC § 2151.413. In re Christian, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 6662, 2003 Ohio 7333, (2003).

On its face, RC § 2151.419(A) is not applicable to motions to modify a disposition to permanent custody pursuant to RC § 2151.413. In re Christian, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 6662, 2003 Ohio 7333, (2003).

A children services board seeking permanent custody under RC § 2151.41.3 must satisfy the reasonable efforts requirement of RC § 2151.41.9 with respect to a natural parent whenever: (1) the board has not previously satisfied the reasonable efforts requirement with respect to that parent; and (2) the parent has not waived or abandoned his rights as a natural parent. In re Stevens, 1993 Ohio App. LEXIS 3526 (2nd Dist. 1993).

Section 3 of Am. Sub. H.B. No. 695, concerning the phase-in of RC §§ 2151.41.2, 2151.41.3 and 2151.41.4, requires that a written comprehensive reunification plan be included in the second annual review made after the effective date of the Act (October 24, 1980), of any child who is in temporary custody upon such effective date pursuant to court order under RC Chapter 2151. or pursuant to RC § 5103.15: In re Smith, 7 Ohio App. 3d 75, 7 Ohio B. 88, 454 N.E.2d 171 (1982).

(A)(1) Upon the filing of a motion pursuant to section 2151.413 [2151.41.3] of the Revised Code for permanent custody of a child, the court shall schedule a hearing and give notice of the filing of the motion and of the hearing, in accordance with section 2151.29 of the Revised Code, to all parties to the action and to the child's guardian ad litem. The notice also shall contain a full explanation that the granting of permanent custody permanently divests the parents of their parental rights, a full explanation of their right to be represented by counsel and to have counsel appointed pursuant to Chapter 120. of the Revised Code if they are indigent, and the name and telephone number of the court employee designated by the court pursuant to section 2151.314 [2151.31.4] of the Revised Code to arrange for the prompt appointment of counsel for indigent persons.

The court shall conduct a hearing in accordance with section 2151.35 of the Revised Code to determine if it is in the best interest of the child to permanently terminate parental rights and grant permanent custody to the agency that filed the motion. The adjudication that the child is an abused, neglected, or dependent child and any dispositional order that has been issued in the case under section 2151.353 [2151.35.3] of the Revised Code pursuant to the adjudication shall not be readjudicated at the hearing and shall not be affected by a denial of the motion for permanent custody.

(2) The court shall hold the hearing scheduled pursuant to division (A)(1) of this section not later than one hundred twenty days after the agency files the motion for permanent custody, except that, for good cause shown, the court may continue the hearing for a reasonable period of time beyond the one-hundred-twenty-day deadline. The court shall issue an order that grants, denies, or otherwise disposes of the motion for permanent custody, and journalize the order, not later than two hundred days after the agency files the motion.

If a motion is made under division (D)(2) of section 2151.413 [2151.41.3] of the Revised Code and no dispositional hearing has been held in the case, the court may hear the motion in the dispositional hearing required by division (B) of section 2151.35 of the Revised Code. If the court issues an order pursuant to section 2151.353 [2151.35.3] of the Revised Code granting permanent custody of the child to the agency, the court shall immediately dismiss the motion made under division (D)(2) of section 2151.413 [2151.41.3] of the Revised Code.

The failure of the court to comply with the time periods set forth in division (A)(2) of this section does not affect the authority of the court to issue any order under this chapter and does not provide any basis for attacking the jurisdiction of the court or the validity of any order of the court.

(B)(1) Except as provided in division (B)(2) of this section, the court may grant permanent custody of a child to a movant if the court determines at the hearing held pursuant to division (A) of this section, by clear and convincing evidence, that it is in the best interest of the child to grant permanent custody of the child to the agency that filed the motion for permanent custody and that any of the following apply:

(a) The child is not abandoned or orphaned or has not been in the temporary custody of one or more public children services agencies or private child placing agencies for twelve or more months of a consecutive twenty-two month period ending on or after March 18, 1999, and the child cannot be placed with either of the child's parents within a reasonable time or should not be placed with the child's parents.

(b) The child is abandoned.

(c) The child is orphaned, and there are no relatives of the child who are able to take permanent custody.

(d) The child has been in the temporary custody of one or more public children services agencies or private child placing agencies for twelve or more months of a consecutive twenty-two month period ending on or after March 18, 1999.

For the purposes of division (B)(1) of this section, a child shall be considered to have entered the temporary custody of an agency on the earlier of the date the child is adjudicated pursuant to section 2151.28 of the Revised Code or the date that is sixty days after the removal of the child from home.

(2) With respect to a motion made pursuant to division (D)(2) of section 2151.413 [2151.41.3] of the Revised Code, the court shall grant permanent custody of the child to the movant if the court determines in accordance with division (E) of this section that the child cannot be placed with one of the child's parents within a reasonable time or should not be placed with either parent and determines in accordance with division (D) of this section that permanent custody is in the child's best interest.

(C) In making the determinations required by this section or division (A)(4) of section 2151.353 [2151.35.3] of the Revised Code, a court shall not consider the effect the granting of permanent custody to the agency would have upon any parent of the child. A written report of the guardian ad litem of the child shall be submitted to the court prior to or at the time of the hearing held pursuant to division (A) of this section or section 2151.35 of the Revised Code but shall not be submitted under oath.

If the court grants permanent custody of a child to a movant under this division, the court, upon the request of any party, shall file a written opinion setting forth its findings of fact and conclusions of law in relation to the proceeding. The court shall not deny an agency's motion for permanent custody solely because the agency failed to implement any particular aspect of the child's case plan.

(D) In determining the best interest of a child at a hearing held pursuant to division (A) of this section or for the purposes of division (A)(4) or (5) of section 2151.353 [2151.35.3] or division (C) of section 2151.415 [2151.41.5] of the Revised Code, the court shall consider all relevant factors, including, but not limited to, the following:

(1) The interaction and interrelationship of the child with the child's parents, siblings, relatives, foster caregivers and out-of-home providers, and any other person who may significantly affect the child;

(2) The wishes of the child, as expressed directly by the child or through the child's guardian ad litem, with due regard for the maturity of the child;

(3) The custodial history of the child, including whether the child has been in the temporary custody of one or more public children services agencies or private child placing agencies for twelve or more months of a consecutive twenty-two month period ending on or after March 18, 1999;

(4) The child's need for a legally secure permanent placement and whether that type of placement can be achieved without a grant of permanent custody to the agency;

(5) Whether any of the factors in divisions (E)(7) to (11) of this section apply in relation to the parents and child.

For the purposes of this division, a child shall be considered to have entered the temporary custody of an agency on the earlier of the date the child is adjudicated pursuant to section 2151.28 of the Revised Code or the date that is sixty days after the removal of the child from home.

(E) In determining at a hearing held pursuant to division (A) of this section or for the purposes of division (A)(4) of section 2151.353 [2151.35.3] of the Revised Code whether a child cannot be placed with either parent within a reasonable period of time or should not be placed with the parents, the court shall consider all relevant evidence. If the court determines, by clear and convincing evidence, at a hearing held pursuant to division (A) of this section or for the purposes of division (A)(4) of section 2151.353 [2151.35.3] of the Revised Code that one or more of the following exist as to each of the child's parents, the court shall enter a finding that the child cannot be placed with either parent within a reasonable time or should not be placed with either parent:

(1) Following the placement of the child outside the child's home and notwithstanding reasonable case planning and diligent efforts by the agency to assist the parents to remedy the problems that initially caused the child to be placed outside the home, the parent has failed continuously and repeatedly to substantially remedy the conditions causing the child to be placed outside the child's home. In determining whether the parents have substantially remedied those conditions, the court shall consider parental utilization of medical, psychiatric, psychological, and other social and rehabilitative services and material resources that were made available to the parents for the purpose of changing parental conduct to allow them to resume and maintain parental duties.

(2) Chronic mental illness, chronic emotional illness, mental retardation, physical disability, or chemical dependency of the parent that is so severe that it makes the parent unable to provide an adequate permanent home for the child at the present time and, as anticipated, within one year after the court holds the hearing pursuant to division (A) of this section or for the purposes of division (A)(4) of section 2151.353 [2151.35.3] of the Revised Code;

(3) The parent committed any abuse as described in section 2151.031 [2151.03.1] of the Revised Code against the child, caused the child to suffer any neglect as described in section 2151.03 of the Revised Code, or allowed the child to suffer any neglect as described in section 2151.03 of the Revised Code between the date that the original complaint alleging abuse or neglect was filed and the date of the filing of the motion for permanent custody;

(4) The parent has demonstrated a lack of commitment toward the child by failing to regularly support, visit, or communicate with the child when able to do so, or by other actions showing an unwillingness to provide an adequate permanent home for the child;

(5) The parent is incarcerated for an offense committed against the child or a sibling of the child;

(6) The parent has been convicted of or pleaded guilty to an offense under division (A) or (C) of section 2919.22 or under section 2903.16, 2903.21, 2903.34, 2905.01, 2905.02, 2905.03, 2905.04†, 2905.05, 2907.07, 2907.08, 2907.09, 2907.12††, 2907.21, 2907.22, 2907.23, 2907.25, 2907.31, 2907.32, 2907.321 [2907.32.1], 2907.322 [2907.32.2], 2907.323 [2907.32.3], 2911.01, 2911.02, 2911.11, 2911.12, 2919.12, 2919.24, 2919.25, 2923.12, 2923.13, 2923.161 [2923.16.1], 2925.02, or 3716.11 of the Revised Code and the child or a sibling of the child was a victim of the offense or the parent has been convicted of or pleaded guilty to an offense under section 2903.04 of the Revised Code, a sibling of the child was the victim of the offense, and the parent who committed the offense poses an ongoing danger to the child or a sibling of the child.

(7) The parent has been convicted of or pleaded guilty to one of the following:

(a) An offense under section 2903.01, 2903.02, or 2903.03 of the Revised Code or under an existing or former law of this state, any other state, or the United States that is substantially equivalent to an offense described in those sections and the victim of the offense was a sibling of the child or the victim was another child who lived in the parent's household at the time of the offense;

(b) An offense under section 2903.11, 2903.12, or 2903.13 of the Revised Code or under an existing or former law of this state, any other state, or the United States that is substantially equivalent to an offense described in those sections and the victim of the offense is the child, a sibling of the child, or another child who lived in the parent's household at the time of the offense;

(c) An offense under division (B)(2) of section 2919.22 of the Revised Code or under an existing or former law of this state, any other state, or the United States that is substantially equivalent to the offense described in that section and the child, a sibling of the child, or another child who lived in the parent's household at the time of the offense is the victim of the offense;

(d) An offense under section 2907.02, 2907.03, 2907.04, 2907.05, or 2907.06 of the Revised Code or under an existing or former law of this state, any other state, or the United States that is substantially equivalent to an offense described in those sections and the victim of the offense is the child, a sibling of the child, or another child who lived in the parent's household at the time of the offense;

(e) A conspiracy or attempt to commit, or complicity in committing, an offense described in division (E)(7)(a) or (d) of this section.

(8) The parent has repeatedly withheld medical treatment or food from the child when the parent has the means to provide the treatment or food, and, in the case of withheld medical treatment, the parent withheld it for a purpose other than to treat the physical or mental illness or defect of the child by spiritual means through prayer alone in accordance with the tenets of a recognized religious body.

(9) The parent has placed the child at substantial risk of harm two or more times due to alcohol or drug abuse and has rejected treatment two or more times or refused to participate in further treatment two or more times after a case plan issued pursuant to section 2151.412

[2151.41.2] of the Revised Code requiring treatment of the parent was journalized as part of a dispositional order issued with respect to the child or an order was issued by any other court requiring treatment of the parent.

(10) The parent has abandoned the child.

(11) The parent has had parental rights involuntarily terminated pursuant to this section or section 2151.353 [2151.35.3] or 2151.415 [2151.41.5] of the Revised Code with respect to a sibling of the child.

(12) The parent is incarcerated at the time of the filing of the motion for permanent custody or the dispositional hearing of the child and will not be available to care for the child for at least eighteen months after the filing of the motion for permanent custody or the dispositional hearing.

(13) The parent is repeatedly incarcerated, and the repeated incarceration prevents the parent from providing care for the child.

(14) The parent for any reason is unwilling to provide food, clothing, shelter, and other basic necessities for the child or to prevent the child from suffering physical, emotional, or sexual abuse or physical, emotional, or mental neglect.

(15) The parent has committed abuse as described in section 2151.031 [2151.03.1] of the Revised Code against the child or caused or allowed the child to suffer neglect as described in section 2151.03 of the Revised Code, and the court determines that the seriousness, nature, or likelihood of recurrence of the abuse or neglect makes the child's placement with the child's parent a threat to the child's safety.

(16) Any other factor the court considers relevant.

(F) The parents of a child for whom the court has issued an order granting permanent custody pursuant to this section, upon the issuance of the order, cease to be parties to the action. This division is not intended to eliminate or restrict any right of the parents to appeal the granting of permanent custody of their child to a movant pursuant to this section.

Constitutionality

Because Ohio's permanent custody statutory scheme reconciles a parent's constitutional right with the state's parens patriae interest in providing for the security and welfare of children under its jurisdiction, it does not unconstitutionally deprive parents of their parental rights. In re S.R., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4921, 2006 Ohio 4983, (2006), writ of certiorari denied by 127 S. Ct. 2882, 167 L. Ed. 2d 1158, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 6154, 75 U.S.L.W. 3636 (U.S. 2007).

Court had previously weighed the assertion that RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d) was unconstitutional since it created an irrebuttable presumption of parental unfitness, and on each occasion, it had found the argument to lack merit. There was no reason to diverge from this precedent, and thus, the court found that § 2151.414(B)(1)(d) is not unconstitutional. In re V.M., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4370, 2006 Ohio 4461, (2006), affirmed by 113 Ohio St. 3d 161, 2007 Ohio 1254, 863 N.E.2d 167, 2007 Ohio LEXIS 788 (2007).

RC § 2151.414 did not deprive a parent of due process rights in a parental rights termination proceeding, as due process guarantees and safeguards were incorporated to protect the rights of the parents as well as the need of the State to protect the interests of the children. In re Morris, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3122, 2006 Ohio 3231, (2006).

With respect to termination of parental rights, RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d) is constitutional on its face and RC § 2151.413 and RC § 2151.414 do not violate a parent's equal protection rights because they do not distinguish between groups of parents or treat similarly situated parents differently. The mother's unsupported assertions of unconstitutionality were insufficient to satisfy her burden, particularly in light of the well-recognized presumption of constitutionality. In re SW, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2829, 2006 Ohio 2958, (2006), writ of certiorari denied by 127 S. Ct. 1152, 166 L. Ed. 2d 999, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 1222, 75 U.S.L.W. 3384 (U.S. 2007).

Trial court erred by terminating the mother's parental rights as it neither adhered to, nor complied with the basic procedural safeguards mandated within RC § 2151.414 and RC § 2151.353. By denying the mother proper notice, a recitation of her rights, and proper participation in the proceedings, as well as by denying her a continuance, and failing to appoint her counsel during the hearing for neglect and dependency, as required by Ohio R. Juv. P. 4, the trial court did not comply with the basic constitutional requirements set forth in both the Ohio and United States Constitutions. In re Sheffey, 167 Ohio App. 3d 141, 854 N.E.2d 508, 2006 Ohio 619, (2006).

Mother failed to rebut the presumption of constitutionality of the reunification provision in the permanent custody statute, RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d), regarding a child having been in the temporary custody of the children's services agency for 12 of the previous 22 months. In re Unger Children, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2291, 2005 Ohio 2414, (2005).

Although trial courts may come to different conclusions in different cases based upon different facts with respect to termination of parental rights under RC §§ 2151.413 and 2151.414 does not create a violation of the Equal Protection Clause; those statutes do not distinguish between groups of parents or treat similarly situated parents differently. In re B.L., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 1136, 2005 Ohio 1151, (2005), writ of certiorari denied by 546 U.S. 945, 126 S. Ct. 443, 163 L. Ed. 2d 337, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 7453, 74 U.S.L.W. 3229 (2005).

Revised Code § 2151.41.4 represents a reasonable attempt to safeguard the rights of children and does not on its face violate the equal protection rights of mentally disabled parents: In re Moore, 2000 Ohio App. LEXIS 4009 (12th Dist. 2000).

Proceeding with a permanent custody hearing pursuant to amended RC § 2151.41.4 where a temporary custody order exists is not an ex post facto application since the amendments to the statute are essentially procedural: Sanders v. Motorists Ins. Cos., 1991 Ohio App. LEXIS 1878 (1991).

Revised Code § 2151.41.4 is not per se unconstitutional when applied to retarded parents: In re Cannon, 1990 Ohio App. LEXIS 5896 (1990).

Generally

RC § 2151.419(A)(1) does not apply in a hearing on a motion for permanent custody filed pursuant to RC § 2151.413. However, except for some narrowly defined statutory exceptions, the state must still make reasonable efforts to reunify the family during the child custody proceedings prior to the termination of parental rights. If the agency has not established that reasonable efforts have been made prior to the hearing on a motion for permanent custody, then it must demonstrate such efforts at that time. The trial court satisfied its duty under RC § 2151.414(D) and properly exercised its discretion to consider the wishes of the children as expressed through their guardian ad litem. The statute does not impose the additional requirement that the trial court also consider whether the children want to testify or whether testifying would be detrimental to them: In re C.F., 113 Ohio St. 3d 73, 862 N.E.2d 816, 2007 Ohio 1104, (2007).

Prior adjudication of permanent custody does not constitute a de facto termination of parental rights as to children born later. The trial court erred in finding the child to be dependent where the agency failed to provide current, affirmative evidence of the parents' unfitness and inability to care for the child: In re Nicholas P., 169 Ohio App. 3d 570, 863 N.E.2d 1102, 2006 Ohio 6213, (2006).

When, in a permanent custody case, a mother appealed the trial court's conclusion that her child could not or should not be placed with a parent, under RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(a), because the mother did not remedy the conditions that brought her child into care, under RC § 2151.414(E)(1), it was unnecessary to address this argument because the trial court also found, under RC § 2151.414(E)(11), that the mother had her parental rights terminated as to the child's sibling and the child's father demonstrated a lack of commitment to the child in that he failed to regularly support, visit or communicate with the child, under RC § 2151.414(E)(14), and abandoned the child, under RC § 2151.414(E)(10), which the mother did not contest, and these uncontested findings were sufficient to statutorily compel the trial court, under RC § 2151.414(E), to find that the child could not or should not be placed with a parent, nor did the mother contest that such a finding was statutorily compelled. In re P. B., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5420, 2006 Ohio 5419, (2006).

When the parental rights of a mother to four of her five prior children had been involuntarily terminated, and permanent custody of her sixth child was being sought, the trial court had to find, under RC § 2151.414(E)(11), that the child could not be returned to her within a reasonable time or should not be returned. In re M.C., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 944, 2006 Ohio 1041, (2006).

In a permanent custody hearing, if a child was not abandoned or orphaned, the focus turned to whether the child could not be placed with either parent within a reasonable period of time or should not be placed with the parents, and, under RC § 2151.414(E), the trial court had to consider all relevant evidence before making this determination, and was required to enter such a finding if it determined, by clear and convincing evidence, that one or more of the factors enumerated in RC § 2151.414(E)(1) through (16) existed with respect to each of the child's parents. In re Bentley, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2991, 2006 Ohio 3133, (2006).

Trial court did not err when it adopted the closing argument of the children's service's agency into its permanent custody judgment because the findings were consistent with the evidence presented. Also, the error in the judgment entry was not evidence that the court was acting as an impartial fact finder when there was additional evidence on the record to support the decision to find that the mother had abandoned her daughter. In re Kangas, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3380, 2006 Ohio 3433, (2006).

Trial court properly determined that a family services department used reasonable efforts to assist a mother in completing her case plan and used reasonable efforts to prevent the removal of the mother's child. The record was replete with evidence to establish that, although the mother worked on her case plan, she made no progress toward alleviating the core concerns despite the department's reasonable efforts to reunify the family. In re Mastache, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6853, 2006 Ohio 6937, (2006).

Trial court did not err in awarding permanent custody to the agency where the mother and all of the children had severe emotional issues that would require therapy for a considerable length of time and the children's behaviors prevented them from being able to live together. The children were not entitled to appointment of independent counsel where they expressed conflicting feelings about returning home: In re Graham, 167 Ohio App. 3d 284, 854 N.E.2d 1126, 2006 Ohio 3170, (2006).

Trial court's decision awarding permanent custody of a mother's three children to a family services agency was not deficient on the ground that it failed to specifically address all of the factors set forth in RC § 2151.414(D). Trial court stated it had considered all of the factors of § 2151.414(D), and the trial court's finding, read in toto, supported such a statement given the nature of the testimony presented during the dispositional hearings. In re Bodenheimer, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3131, 2006 Ohio 3245, (2006).

Because both parents' prior loss of permanent custody of the child's six siblings satisfied the predicate of RC § 2151.414(E)(11), the trial court was required to enter a finding that the child could not be placed with either parent within a reasonable time or should not be placed with either parent. In re Melchizedek M., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2961, 2006 Ohio 3062, (2006).

Incarcerated parent was denied due process where she did not receive the required notice and opportunity to participate in the proceedings leading to termination of parental rights. A trial court should only grant permanent custody as the initial disposition in extreme situations where reunification is not possible. Prior adjudication of permanent custody as a parent's other children does not result in a de facto termination of parental rights as to the child in question in the proceeding: In re Sheffey, 167 Ohio App. 3d 141, 854 N.E.2d 508, 2006 Ohio 619, (2006).

Right to file a petition for child custody is substantive, and JuvR 10 must be read in conjunction with the limitations expressed in RC §§ 2151.414(F) and 2151.353(E)(2): In re McBride, 110 Ohio St. 3d 19, 850 N.E.2d 43, 2006 Ohio 3454, (2006).

There was sufficient evidence from which a trial court could conclude that a mother was unable to provide for her son's needs, in that she did not have stable housing and could not provide evidence that she had a job. Thus, the trial court's decision granting permanent custody to the mother was supported by sufficient evidence. In re D.B., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 483, 2006 Ohio 522, (2006).

Since the children were in the temporary custody of the agency for more than 12 months out of a consecutive 22-month period under RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d), the trial court was required only to determine the best interests of the children by clear and convincing evidence. Trial court's finding that a five-year-old was too young to express her wishes was not supported by clear and convincing evidence. The agency made sufficient efforts to accommodate a parent's inability to speak English by providing him with an interpreter and a Spanish-speaking attorney. In re Lopez, 166 Ohio App. 3d 688, 852 N.E.2d 1266, 2006 Ohio 2251, (2006).

Clear and convincing evidence supported a trial court's judgment granting a child's permanent custody to an agency because, under RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(a), the child had been in an agency's custody for more than 12 months of a consecutive 22-month period, and she could not or should not be placed with her parents, given her father's history of sexual offenses and low cognitive functioning. In re King, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 707, 2006 Ohio 780, (2006).

Trial court found by clear and convincing evidence that a child could not be placed with her parents within a reasonable time due to the applicability of RC § 2151.414(E)(2), (9), (12), and (15), as the parents were addicted to substances of abuse, had been arrested and incarcerated multiple times each, had severe mental histories, failed in their case plans with a goal of reunification, and had another daughter removed from their custody. In re Morris, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3122, 2006 Ohio 3231, (2006).

There was no error in finding that the children could not be placed with the mother within a reasonable time or in terminating her parental rights, under RC § 2151.414(E), because the mother failed to substantially remedy the conditions that caused her children to be removed from the home. The mother did nothing about her alcohol and drug dependency, her involvement in violent relationships, and her lack of stability. In re T. E., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 204, 2006 Ohio 254, (2006).

Finding that the two children were more bonded with the foster parents than their biological parents was not against the manifest weight of the evidence. Although there was some evidence that the mother had a strong relationship with her daughters, that factor alone was not sufficient to find that the trial court's judgment was against the manifest weight of the evidence because the trial court found, under RC § 2151.414(D), that the mother's inability to guarantee the safety of her children overrode the fact that she may have been bonded with her children. The mother had consistently failed to both recognize threats to the children's safety and to take all reasonable steps to protect the children from those threats. In re Jones, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3256, 2006 Ohio 3364, (2006).

It was not error for a trial court to find there was clear and convincing evidence that awarding permanent custody of a mother's children to an agency was in their best interests, under RC § 2151.414(D) because merely granting the agency their legal custody would allow the mother to impede and possibly manipulate the stability of the children's placements through residual rights association and available future court actions. In re Graham, 167 Ohio App. 3d 284, 854 N.E.2d 1126, 2006 Ohio 3170, (2006).

Award of permanent custody of parents' children to a children services agency pursuant to RC § 2151.414 was in the best interests of the children because the mother never made progress on her case plan, and while the father initially made progress, he continued to have problems with domestic violence and eventually failed to regularly visit the children. Moreover, the children's foster family expressed a desire to adopt three of the four children, and the fourth child was in the foster care of another family and had made significant strides since joining the family. In re A. S., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2868, 2006 Ohio 2977, (2006).

Grant of permanent custody of a father's child to a children services agency under RC § 2151.414 was in the child's best interests. While the father had been given almost two years, he had done almost nothing to work toward reunification with the child; instead, during the two-year period, the father had been convicted of domestic violence and had tested positive for marijuana use. In re Z. D., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2858, 2006 Ohio 2978, (2006).

Common pleas court's decision that granting permanent custody to a county children services agency was in the best interests of the children under RC § 2151.414(D) was not against the manifest weight of the evidence. The mother had demonstrated a lack of commitment to her children by choosing abusive relationships without recognizing the effect of the relationships on her children, and while in the mother's care, the children suffered significant emotional trauma because of their unstable environment. In re D.B., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 410, 2006 Ohio 479, (2006).

Trial court's grant of permanent custody to a county social service agency was proper where RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d) applied to one child, § 2151.414(B)(1)(a) applied to three other children, § 2151.414(E) applied to the parents with respect to all of the children, and it was in the children's best interests upon consideration of all of the relevant factors, including those listed in RC § 2151.414(D); the mother had a severe mental illness, the children were previously removed from her care, and there was no commitment by either father. In re M.E., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1689, 2006 Ohio 1837, (2006).

Where a father was not able to take custody of his children due to his incarceration, he failed to communicate with the children despite his time in prison, the mother was unable to have custody due to her severe chemical dependency problems, and further, where the children had bonded with the foster family and it was found to be in their best interests to terminate the father's parental rights and to grant permanent custody to the county social service agency, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(B), (D) and (E), such decision was affirmed on appeal. The father showed no commitment toward the children, had did not make any provisions for them, he was incarcerated and had an extensive criminal history, and the permanent custody determination was in their best interests. In re Z.Y., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 260, 2006 Ohio 300, (2006).

Trial court's finding that it was in the best interest of a mother's son that a county children services agency should be given permanent custody of the son was proper in light of the fact that the son's foster family expressed an interest in adopting the son, the son had developed an attachment to his foster family, and the mother was absent during the early months of the son's psychological and emotional development. In re V.H., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 488, 2006 Ohio 532, (2006).

Trial court's determination that it was in the best interest of the children to grant permanent custody to the children's services agency was not against the manifest weight of the evidence because the father had failed to complete the requirements of the prior case plans, both children had extensive developmental problems and the father was unwilling and/or unable to meet the children's needs, the father did not have even basic parenting skills, and there was a family that was willing to adopt both children. In re Zurfley/Chatman/Black Children, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 602, 2006 Ohio 683, (2006).

It was in the child's best interest to grant permanent custody to the agency RC § 2151.414(D) because the father had missed over half of the visitations and most of the doctor's appointments, the home was filthy and inadequate for a child, the father did not even know how to change the child's diaper or change her clothing, the child was not bonded with the father but had bonded with her foster parents, and they were considering adopting her. In re H.M.S., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 614, 2006 Ohio 701, (2006).

Record reflected competent, credible evidence for the trial court to have found that an award of permanent custody to the agency was in the best interest of the children, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D), because there was very little bonding between the children and the parents, the children had not spent any significant time living with the parents, and the children were bonded to each other and their foster family and wanted to be adopted by them. In re J.S., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 615, 2006 Ohio 702, (2006).

There was clear and convincing evidence, under RC § 2151.414, that permanent custody was in the children's best interests as the mother minimized the children's abuse, refused to acknowledge the abuse until trial, tried to coach them out of their stories, continued her relationship with the children's abuser, and forced the children to spend time in their abuser's presence. The simplest section to apply was RC § 2151.414(E)(6) because the mother pled guilty and was convicted of four violations of RC § 2919.22(A) against her four children. In re Samples, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 963, 2006 Ohio 1056, (2006).

Sufficient evidence supported a trial court's finding that, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D), it was in the best interest of a mother's son to be permanently placed in the custody of a children services agency since the son was in need of a legally secure placement given the mother's failure to maintain a stable living situation and her failure to remain sober; the mother failed to make progress toward the case plan goals, failing to address substance abuse issues, not completing parenting classes, and discontinuing counseling; and the son had spent only the first two months of his life in the mother's custody and had bonded with his foster family. In re J.S., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1050, 2006 Ohio 1150, (2006).

There was no abuse of discretion in finding that granting permanent custody of the child to the agency was in the child's best interest, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D) and RC § 2151.353, because the agency had been working with the parents to remedy the same problems in connection with the older sibling for over a year and neither parent was willing or able to provide a stable home for the newborn child. The father made no attempt to communicate with his newborn child, nor did he inquire as to her well-being; he did not make any attempt to contact the agency regarding the child; he did not attend the adjudication and disposition hearing; and, even though the father was incarcerated, he had an obligation to provide for his child. In re Jamilah P., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1511, 2006 Ohio 1631, (2006).

Granting permanent custody of the children to the agency was in the best interest of the children because the mother's parental rights had involuntarily been terminated with respect to siblings of the children, the interactions between the children and the mother were very limited as the mother's frequent failures to attend visitations demonstrated a lack of concern for the children. The mother also failed to complete her case plan because she did not complete her domestic violence counseling. In re G.S., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2389, 2006 Ohio 2530, (2006).

There was no error in granting permanent custody of the mother's children to the agency because the trial court did not rely solely upon the mother's poverty to determine the permanent custody award. The trial court noted that the mother admitted her inability to care for the children and determined that the children's best interests warranted granting the agency permanent custody. Thus, the trial court did not rely upon one factor alone, but looked to all of the statutory factors to determine that the agency should receive permanent custody of the two children. In re Link, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 476, 2006 Ohio 529, (2006).

Grant of permanent custody of a mother's daughter to a children services agency was in the daughter's best interest. While the mother had completed anger management and parenting classes, she was not implementing what she learned, and more significantly, the mother repeatedly ran away from authorities, demonstrating that she was placing her own wants and needs ahead of those of her daughter. In re M. R., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2406, 2006 Ohio 2558, (2006).

Termination of a father's parental rights was in the best interest of his son because the father had spent more than half of the son's life having no involvement with him, he did not seem to be working toward reuniting with his child, he had a long history of domestic violence and had not completed anger management classes that were part of his case plan, and the son was in need of a legally secure placement. In re J. N., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2410, 2006 Ohio 2557, (2006).

Record contained competent and credible evidence supporting a trial court's conclusion, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(A) and (B), that it was in the best interest of two children to be placed in the permanent custody of a children services agency. The evidence showed that the children had been in the temporary custody of the agency for over 37 months out of the last 41 months; that the children had poor interaction and relationships with the mother and father due to the mother's mental handicaps and the father's anger management issues; that the children had successful relationships with their foster family; and that, because of the children's developmental delays, they needed special care and a permanent, structured environment which the parents could not provide. In re Elliott, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1527, 2006 Ohio 1618, (2006).

Clear and convincing evidence showed it was in the best interest of a mother's children, under RC § 2151.414(D), to grant their permanent custody to an agency because the mother did not make adequate progress toward the goals of her case plan as (1) she did not initiate or complete many of its components, (2) while she attended anger management counseling, she was discharged because she did not admit that there was an anger management problem in her family, despite its history of domestic violence and the children's violence, (3) she did understand the need to secure adequate housing, to help the family financially, or a need to behave appropriately in the children's presence, (4) she was unemployed, (5) she lived at a campground, despite its rule that she could not live there more than 60 days at a time, and (6) she did not recognize the mental health issues her children faced or their need for treatment. In re T.C., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 35, 2006 Ohio 61, (2006).

Nothing prohibited the trial court from considering and relying upon evidence that occurred after the children's services agency filed the permanent custody request. The court could properly have considered the mother's conduct, as well as other relevant evidence, when it considered the children's best interests. In re Brown, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2719, 2006 Ohio 2863, (2006).

While a trial court properly concluded that a father's child could not or should not be placed with the father within a reasonable time due to the fact that the father had previously had his parental rights involuntarily terminated, the evidence did not support the trial court's determination that granting permanent custody to the family services agency was in the child's best interest because the reason that the child was removed from his mother's care had nothing to do with the father; however, the father and the child were never given a chance to develop any type of custodial history together. Moreover, the guardian ad litem opined that a case plan should be developed for the father and stated that he could not recommend permanent custody to the agency until the parents were given an opportunity to work on their problems. In re Banks, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 7009, 2006 Ohio 7082, (2006).

Because neither the father nor his brother filed a motion requesting legal custody of the children prior to the dispositional hearing, the trial court was not required to consider the father's brother as a placement option, pursuant to RC § 2151.353, in the permanent custody proceeding. Assuming, arguendo, that the father or the father's brother had a proper motion before the trial court, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in not granting legal custody to father's brother because the brother and his girlfriend were not able to adequately care for the children. In re Zurfley/Chatman/Black Children, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 602, 2006 Ohio 683, (2006).

Upon a permanent custody petition, clear and convincing evidence supported the trial court's determination that the younger child could not be placed with the father within a reasonable time as the father failed continuously and repeatedly to substantially remedy the conditions causing the child to be placed outside the home, and he was incarcerated for an offense committed against one of the children. In re Miller, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 875, 2005 Ohio 856, (2005).

While the trial court nominally followed the statutory machinery of the best interest analysis, it did not make specific, meaningful findings under RC § 2151.414(D)(1) relating to the interrelationship of the children with the mother, in that it failed to mention the ample testimony from the department's witnesses regarding the strong bond between the mother and the children, and it failed to consider relevant evidence pertaining to § 2151.414(D)(1), (2), and (4), including the fact that the mother's son stated that he wanted to live with the mother. Furthermore, the trial court made no finding as to why placement with the mother could not be achieved, which was especially important in light of the fact that the mother had progressed in, if not met, each of her case plan goals. In re Janson, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 6027, 2005 Ohio 6712, (2005).

Termination of parental rights constituted error where the agency did not properly prove the elements of RC § 2151.414(E)(1), (2), (3), (4), or (12). The children were denied proper legal representation by their guardian ad litem: In re Alexis Kaye K., 160 Ohio App. 3d 32, 825 N.E.2d 1148, 2005 Ohio 1380, (2005).

Clear and convincing evidence supported the determination that a child was in the custody of a county social service agency for at least 12 months out of a consecutive 22-month period, and that it was in the child's best interest to grant permanent custody to the agency and to terminate the parental rights of the mother and father. The trial court considered the factors under RC § 2151.414(D)(1)-(5), including that the mother had other children removed pursuant to § 2151.414(E)(11), that she had not succeeded at some of the primary issues in her case plan such as addressing her substance abuse and mental health issues, and the child had bonded with his foster family who wished to adopt him. In re C.W., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 6093, 2005 Ohio 6739, (2005).

Trial court properly considered the factors under RC § 2151.414(D) in determining that it was in the child's best interest that permanent custody be awarded to a county children services board, including the fact that the father had only visited the child once prior to the hearing, that the child had bonded with her foster family, that the father had a history of felony convictions and repeated incarcerations, and that the father had tested positive for cocaine the week before the hearing. In re Woods, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3284, 2005 Ohio 3561, (2005).

Agency presented clear and convincing evidence, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D), that it was in the best interests of the children to be placed in the permanent custody of the agency because the mother did not complete any aspect of her case plan; she continued to live with the father; she failed to follow mental health recommendations and attend parenting classes; and she had previously lost permanent custody of one child, and surrendered custody of another child. In re Zink, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3214, 2005 Ohio 3460, (2005).

Evidence supported a trial court's determination that a grant of permanent custody of a father's child to a county social service agency was in the child's best interest, pursuant to the factors under RC § 2151.414(E), where the mother did not have custody of her other children, she used drugs and alcohol, she and the father had a long history with the agency, the father was the subject of sexual abuse charges, and factors under § 2151.414(E)(4), (11), and (16) further supported the finding that the child could not and should not be returned to either parent within a reasonable time. In re West, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2779, 2005 Ohio 2978, (2005).

There was clear and convincing evidence to support the trial court's award of permanent custody as being in the child's best interest, under RC § 2151.414(D), because the mother failed to take advantage of the services provided by refusing to allow a parent-aide into the home and failing to attend out-patient drug treatment. She continued to test positive for marijuana; failed to find stable and clean housing; failed to find steady employment; and failed to consistently attend the child's medical and therapy appointments. Because the child suffered from numerous medical conditions, she needed constant attention and help and she needed a safe and secure home so as not to injure herself or become ill and the mother failed to demonstrate that she was capable or willing to provide her child with the care and home she needed and deserved. In re P.S., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3766, 2005 Ohio 4157, (2005).

Agency presented clear and convincing evidence, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D), that it was in the best interests of the children to be placed in the permanent custody of the agency because the father failed to take any responsibility for the situations which resulted in the removal of the children; did not comply with any aspect of his case plan; threatened the agency and the caseworkers; he had mental health problems that were potentially dangerous to the children; he admitted to drug use; and he had a criminal record which included a conviction for child endangering, which resulted in the involuntary termination of his parental rights with respect to his other children. In re Zink, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3214, 2005 Ohio 3460, (2005).

Finding that permanent custody by Allen County Children's Services Board (CSB) was in the two children's best interests was proper as the mother failed to bond with the children, the CSB had had temporary custody for more than 12 of the last 22 consecutive months, the mother was involved with a known felon, whose children had been removed, and two experts opined that the mother could not adequately parent; while the mother had stable housing, she had not obtained it until after the permanent custody motion was filed. In re Hersherberger, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 455, 2005 Ohio 429, (2005).

Evidence supported a trial court's determination that termination of parental rights was in a child's best interest, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D), where it reviewed the statutory factors and found that there was a lack of communication and interaction between the child and his parents, the child had a good relationship with his foster parents, he had been living apart from the parents for more than half of his life, the child had severe medical needs which were not being met by his parents, and certain of the findings of RC § 2151.414(E) existed. In re B.L., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 1136, 2005 Ohio 1151, (2005), writ of certiorari denied by 546 U.S. 945, 126 S. Ct. 443, 163 L. Ed. 2d 337, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 7453, 74 U.S.L.W. 3229 (2005).

Clear and convincing evidence was available at the time of disposition for the trial court's consideration of each of the RC § 2151.414(D) factors, and the evidence supported a finding that a grant of permanent custody was in the child's best interests. The mother had voluntarily admitted herself for psychiatric hospitalization when she became afraid of physically harming her son (she admitted to thoughts of suffocating him with a pillow and cutting the throats of two other young children in the home); the child had significant developmental delays but an adoptive home had been identified that was able to meet his special needs; and the guardian ad litem report was properly before the trial court for consideration, under Ohio R. Juv. P. 34(B)(2), as it was relevant and material. In re Erich L., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2748, 2005 Ohio 2945, (2005).

Clear and convincing evidence supported the finding that permanent custody with the agency was in the child's best interest because, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D)(1), regarding the interaction and interrelationship of the child, the mother had not demonstrated an ability to meet the special needs of her son and the evidence weighed in favor of termination. The child had a problem making attachments with people and he exhibited angry outbursts, tantrums, manipulative behavior, cruelty to animals, and sexual behavior. In re D.M., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 6067, 2005 Ohio 6740, (2005).

Trial court's decision, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D), awarding permanent custody of a mother's four children to a county children services board was not against the manifest weight of the evidence, in that, while the mother did complete portions of her case plan, she failed to complete the majority of the case plan requirements; the evidence showed that the mother could not provide a secure environment for the children; the mother had not participated in individual counseling as recommended, had not maintained stable employment or housing, and continued to lack understanding of critical parenting skills; and the children had been in the temporary custody of the board well over the 12 or more months of the consecutive 22-month period in § 2151.414(B)(1). In re S.B., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3591, 2005 Ohio 3889, (2005), dismissed by 2005 Ohio 6428, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 5783 (Ohio Ct. App., Butler County Dec. 5, 2005).

Trial court's failure to specifically discuss each of the factors of RC § 2151.414(D) when it rendered its decision to grant permanent custody of a mother's children to a social services agency was not reversible error, as there was no statutory requirement that a trial court had to list those factors or conditions that it found applicable before making its determination that a child could not be placed with either parent, or that permanent custody was in the child's best interest. In re Ch. O., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 1024, 2005 Ohio 1013, (2005).

While a juvenile court is required to consider all of the enumerated factors pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D), the Third District Court of Appeals of Ohio does not require that each factor be specifically discussed in the judgment entry; while there must be some indication on the record that all of the factors in the statute were considered, a juvenile court is not required to utter any magic or talismanic wording to pass statutory muster. In re Hersherberger, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 455, 2005 Ohio 429, (2005).

Where the mother had her parental rights to the child's siblings terminated, the trial court was required to enter a finding that the child could not be placed with the mother within a reasonable period of time. Since the trial court needed to find one factor to enter a finding that the children should not be placed with the parent within a reasonable period of time, any error of the requirement that the mother have no contact with the father was harmless. In re Spangler, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3210, 2005 Ohio 3450, (2005).

Juvenile court did not err in failing to include a specific written discussion of the RC § 2151.414(D)(5) factors as it clearly considered the RC § 2151.414(D) factors; even if such a discussion was required, any error was harmless as the RC § 2151.414(E)(7)-(11) factors were inapplicable. In re Hershberger, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 455, 2005 Ohio 429, (2005). Court found that RC 2151.414(E)(1) and (16) applied to biological mother because she had continuously and repeatedly failed to substantially remedy the substantive abuse and inadequate child care problems which prompted the removal of her sons, despite the establishment of a case plan for eventual reunification of the mother and children, which required the mother to obtain a drug and mental health diagnostic assessment and apply for and maintain adequate housing. In re Denzel M., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 3620, 2004 Ohio 3982, (2004).

Juvenile court erred in terminating the parental rights of the mother and in granting permanent custody of the minor child to the county children's services board, as the conflicting and problematic opinions of the multiple witnesses at the permanent custody hearing, plus the evidence showing that the mother had only a limited opportunity to show that she had the ability to care for the minor child, meant that the required clear and convincing evidence did not support the termination of the mother's parental rights. In re K. S., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2370, 2004 Ohio 2660, (2004).

Trial court did not err in awarding county child welfare agency the permanent custody of the mother's minor child, as statutory law permitted the county child welfare agency, which had temporary custody of a child, to file a motion requesting permanent custody of the minor child. In the minor child's case, the evidence showed that the minor child could not be placed with either parent within a reasonable amount of time and that permanent custody with the county child welfare agency was in the child's best interest even though placement with the family was preferred whenever possible. In re Leitwein, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1131, 2004 Ohio 1296, (2004).

Pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D), a juvenile court must find clear and convincing evidence of both prongs of a two-prong test prior to terminating parental rights; in an action to terminate parental rights, the trial court found that the first prong of a permanent custody test was satisfied because a minor child had been in county custody for more than 12 of the 24 months prior to the hearing and that an award of permanent custody to the county was in the best interests of the minor child because the father had failed to make efforts to establish an ongoing relationship with his daughter. In re T. S., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 13, 2004 Ohio 32, (2004).

Though a trial court properly found that a father had abandoned his child, it erred in terminating his parental rights as it failed to make findings showing it considered all the factors of RC § 2151.414 in determining the best interest of the child. In re Cravens, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2109, 2004 Ohio 2356, (2004).

Failure by a trial court to make explicit findings that permanent custody is in the best interest of the child amounts to reversible error if it is raised by either of the parents on appeal of a termination decision. Where neither parent whose rights were terminated challenged the fact that a trial court did not make explicit findings, the appellate court would not address that issue and, instead, confined its review to whether there was evidence before the trial court to support a finding that permanent custody was in the child's best interest. In re T.O., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1423, 2004 Ohio 1605, (2004).

Agency's motion for permanent custody did not require the additional findings pursuant to RC § 2151.414(E) because the juvenile court found that the children had been in foster care for 18 consecutive months prior to the permanent custody hearing, and that the children were abandoned. In re Morgan, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 3653, 2004 Ohio 4018, (2004).

Although the trial court erred as a matter of law when it based its finding for permanent custody on RC § 2151.414(E)(1), that reasonable efforts to reunify the parent and child were exercised, the error was harmless because there was competent, credible evidence to support the trial court's finding that, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(E)(4), the mother demonstrated a lack of commitment toward the child. In re Nibert, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 379, 2004 Ohio 429, (2004).

Where a child had not been in an agency's custody for 12 months when it sought permanent custody, under RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(a), the trial court had to, and did, find that she could not be placed with either parent within a reasonable time or should not be so placed; it was not required to also find that she had been in the agency's care for 12 months out of a consecutive 22-month period. In re Strychalski, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1364, 2004 Ohio 1542, (2004).

Pursuant to RC § 2151.414(B)(1), when a state agency moves for permanent custody, the trial court is first required to determine by clear and convincing evidence that it is in the best interest of the child to grant permanent custody of the child to the agency that filed the motion, and in making that determination, the court must consider the factors enumerated in RC § 2151.414(D); in an appeal by a grandmother from the grant of permanent custody of two grandchildren, the trial court properly analyzed the statutory criteria for granting permanent custody to the county, and found clear and convincing evidence to do so. In re McCann, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 260, 2004 Ohio 283, (2004).

Award of permanent custody to a county children services board was reversed where the parents did not complete their case plan in large part because they lacked a reliable form of transportation, and the board did not provide sufficient transportation assistance and made very little effort to schedule visitations closer to or in the parents' home; the parents did not have an adequate opportunity to show that they could provide legally secure placement following the initial removal, and there was not clear and convincing evidence in the record that the parents could not provide a legally secure home, under RC § 2151.414(D). In re Knuckles, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3926, 2003 Ohio 4418, (2003).

Award of permanent custody to a family services agency was supported by clear and convincing evidence that the children could not, within a reasonable time period, be placed with the children's mother who did not comply with her case plan or provide any corroborating documentation or witnesses for her claims; the trial court was required to enter a finding that the children could not be placed with the mother within a reasonable time if any of the factors set forth in RC § 2151.414(E) applied, and, in the instant case, the trial court specifically found that the mother failed continuously and repeatedly to substantially remedy the conditions that caused the children to be removed from the home. In re D. F., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 2883, 2003 Ohio 3221, (2003).

Trial court is not required to determine, in a parental rights termination proceeding under RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d), that the parent is expressly unfit to raise his child, nor is there any requirement that a trial court acknowledge that a parent has a constitutional right to raise his own child, because once a finding is made that the 12-month time requirement has been satisfied, the court goes on to the next step, which is the best interests analysis; RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d) does not deprive a parent of fundamentally fair procedures, and the "fundamental liberty interest" that a parent has in the care, custody, and management of a child and the "basic civil right" to raise his or her children is not absolute and is always subject to the ultimate welfare of the child. In re Stillman, 155 Ohio App. 3d 333, 801 N.E.2d 475, 2003 Ohio 6228, (2003).

Trial court did not violate the biological father's constitutionally-protected liberty interest in the care and custody of his daughter by granting permanent custody of the daughter to the county children's welfare agency, as the State proved by clear and convincing evidence that granting permanent custody of the daughter in the county children's welfare agency was in the best interest of the daughter and that the daughter could not be placed with the parents within a reasonable amount of time. In re Baby Girl Elliott, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5220, 2003 Ohio 5876, (2003).

Permanent custody award was affirmed where, although a GAL failed to issue a written report, no objection was made at the hearing and, there was no manifest injustice to have warranted the use of the plain error doctrine; the award was supported by sufficient evidence where the trial court heard enough testimony before the GAL's oral report to conclude that the mother failed continuously and repeatedly to substantially remedy the conditions causing her child to be placed outside her home. In re R. C., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 6433, 2003 Ohio 7062, (2003).

Where the juvenile court's findings of fact and conclusions of law stated in part that all three children at issue were in need of a safe and permanent home which neither of their parents were able and/or unwilling to provide, the juvenile court amply considered whether the legally secure placement of the children could be obtained without the grant of permanent custody to the county children services department. In re Christian, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 6662, 2003 Ohio 7333, (2003).

Award of custody to a parent was proper despite a private agency's motion for permanent custody where the parent was willing and enthusiastic and had bonded with the child, where a legally secure placement was possible, and where the agency had delayed in permitting visitation with the parent and was reluctant in its attempts to reunify the child and the parent. In re J. H., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5016, 2003 Ohio 5611, (2003).

In a termination of parental rights proceeding, substantial completion of case plan does not preclude a grant of permanent custody to a social services agency, and the appellate court must consider whether a parent substantially remedies the conditions that cause a child's removal under RC § 2151.414(E)(1). In re Conn, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4804, 2003 Ohio 5344, (2003).

Issues concerning extension of temporary custody essentially become moot after a court grants an agency's motion for permanent or legal custody. The mother's compliance with the case plan was immaterial where returning the children to her would subject them to violence by her husband. In re Nice, 141 Ohio App. 3d 445, 751 N.E.2d 552, 2001 Ohio 3214, (2001).

The evidence clearly supported the award of permanent custody to the agency. In re Nicholas H., 137 Ohio App. 3d 442, 738 N.E.2d 896 (2000).

In a proceeding for termination of parental rights, the parent should have been permitted to rebut the testimony of the guardian ad litem. Public agencies should assist a parent in implementing a reunification plan. In re Sadiku, 139 Ohio App. 3d 263, 743 N.E.2d 507 (2000).

Termination of parental rights was proper where the sole parent was not providing for the special needs of a child with Down's syndrome and was not cooperating with the case plan. The court is not required to consider placement with a relative before granting permanent custody. In re Patterson, 134 Ohio App. 3d 119, 730 N.E.2d 439 (1999).

Permanent custody may not be granted unless the trial court finds clear and convincing evidence that one or more of the eight enumerated factors in RC § 2151.414(E) exist. In re William S., 75 Ohio St. 3d 95, 661 N.E.2d 738, 1996 Ohio 182, (1996).

Leaving children basically unattended with a loaded, unsecured gun is sufficient to support a finding of neglect and dependency. An order of permanent commitment or long-term foster care may be justified where a parent has repeatedly failed to supervise and provide adequate care for the children. Skeen v. Gullett, 1994 Ohio App. LEXIS 2746 (1994).

A court is required to grant permanent custody to a children services agency where there is clear and convincing evidence meeting the statutory criteria. In re Doe Children, 93 Ohio App. 3d 134, 637 N.E.2d 977 (1994).

Admission of testimony of the mother's psychiatrist in violation of RC §§ 2317.02 and 4732.19 at the hearing on termination of parental rights was prejudicial. Parents' constitutional rights may not be abridged by a cursory judgment. The court is required by the statute to find, by clear and convincing evidence, that certain criteria have been met, and the court must state those findings on the record, such that it is clear to all parties that the decision is supported by the facts. In re Brown, 98 Ohio App. 3d 337, 648 N.E.2d 576 (1994).

Revised Code § 2151.414(E) does not limit the trial court's determination of whether a child cannot be placed with either of his parents within a reasonable period of time or should not be placed with his parents to the specified factors, but explicitly notes that the court "shall consider all relevant evidence". In re Kasler, 1991 Ohio App. LEXIS 2673 (4th Dist. 1991).

Evidence that the parents were uncooperative with caseworkers from the children's services agency reflects adversely on the parent's ability to care for their children since the parents are fully aware that failure to abide by the agency's guidelines could result in the divestiture of their rights. The evidence that the father had sexually abused the children was overwhelming. The unsuitability of each parent must be considered separately. In re Pieper Children, 74 Ohio App. 3d 714, 600 N.E.2d 317 (1991).

Before a trial court may terminate parental rights and grant permanent custody to a county children services board, RC § 2151.414(A) requires the trial court to determine: (1) that the board has made a good faith effort to implement the initial and subsequent reunification plans; (2) that the parents have acted so as to leave the child without adequate parental care and that they will continue to do so in the near future; and (3) that it is in the best interests of the child to permanently terminate parental rights. In re Lay, 43 Ohio App. 3d 78, 539 N.E.2d 664 (1987).

Before temporary custody can be converted to permanent custody, RC § 2151.414 requires a court to examine the factors listed in RC § 2151.414(A)(1) through (3). In re Jones, 29 Ohio App. 3d 176, 29 Ohio B. 206, 504 N.E.2d 719 (1985).

Revised Code § 2151.414(A) lists numerous determinations to be made by the juvenile court during a hearing upon a motion for permanent custody, but the statute does not require these determinations to be listed in the court's judgment entry, and thus, the failure to do so is not error. Such determinations would be appropriately included within the court's findings of fact and conclusions of law, if they were requested by any of the parties pursuant to RC § 2151.414(B). In re Covin, 8 Ohio App. 3d 139, 8 Ohio B. 196, 456 N.E.2d 520 (1982).

Children of a family have a right to the companionship of their siblings. The role of the State should be to do everything that can be done to keep the children of a family together so that they may enjoy the advantages of mutual companionship, love and protection. In re Neglected Children, 65 Ohio Misc. 7, 18 Ohio Op. 3d 283, 416 N.E.2d 669 (CP 1979).

Abandonment

Agency's motion for permanent court commitment under RC § 2151.414 was properly granted as the mother had abandoned the child, as defined in RC § 2151.011(C), in that she had no contact with the child for more than ninety days. The fact that the mother later resumed contact with the child after the period of abandonment was immaterial, and the mother's attempt to justify the abandonment with her contention that she was working on her sobriety was insufficient justification for maintaining no contact with the child. In re D.P., 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1550, 2007 Ohio 1703, (2007).

Situations may exist in which abandonment, for permanent custody determinations can be established without the passage of 90 days. However, before a department of children's services initiates a motion for permanent custody on the grounds of presumed abandonment, 90 days must have passed without visit or contact before such motion can be initiated. In re Scullion Children, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 888, 2007 Ohio 929, (Mar. 2, 2007).

Although the trial court's finding of abandonment was against the manifest weight of the evidence, since 90 days had not passed without visit or contact by the mother before the motion was filed, the determination of permanent custody of the children with the agency did not require reversal because the trial court found an alternate, independent ground for terminating parental rights in that the children could not, or should not, be placed with either parent. In re Scullion Children, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 888, 2007 Ohio 929, (Mar. 2, 2007).

Since a trial court made a finding that a mother's child had been abandoned under RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(b), which the mother did not dispute, the trial court was not required to make a finding that the agency made reasonable case planning efforts under RC § 2151.419(A)(1). In re Stafford, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 826, 2007 Ohio 928, (Mar. 5, 2007).

Termination of a mother's parental rights was warranted since the mother had abandoned her daughter under RC § 2151.011(C), in that she failed to maintain contact with her for more than 90 days. In re M. R., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2406, 2006 Ohio 2558, (2006).

Evidence supported trial court's finding that a mother had not abandoned her children who had been removed from her custody, where the children were placed with the children's maternal aunt and uncle, and the evidence presented included the mother's making contact with the aunt several times, but the aunt either forgot or simply decided not to tell the children; the same evidence that supported the finding that the children had not been abandoned sufficiently supported the trial court's conclusion that the children could or should be placed with mother within a reasonable time, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(E). In re N.B., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3295, 2003 Ohio 3656, (2003), criticized by In re D.J., 2006 Ohio 6304, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6276 (Ohio Ct. App., Montgomery County Dec. 1, 2006).

As children were abandoned by their parents pursuant to RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(b), the fact that the trial court also found that termination of the parents' rights was proper because the children were within the agency's custody for the requisite period of time under § 2151.414(B)(1)(d) was harmless error where the calculation of the time period was erroneous; the custody award was in the best interests of the children pursuant to § 2151.414(D). In re Franklin, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4737, 2006 Ohio 4841, (2006).

Mother's substance abuse caused her to abandon her children and she could not rely upon her substance abuse as a justification for the children's abandonment. In re Phillips, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3453, 2005 Ohio 3774, (2005).

Trial court properly found that three children were abandoned and could not be placed with their mother within a reasonable time where the mother had not had contact with the children for a nine-month period, which was well beyond the statutory 90-day period, and the mother failed to rebut the presumption of abandonment; the trial court was not required to show that the children were in a child services board's custody for 12 or more months of a consecutive 22-month period. In re Phillips, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3453, 2005 Ohio 3774, (2005).

Because a children services' board filed its motion for permanent custody under RC § 2151.413, the "reasonable efforts" requirement of RC § 2151.419(A) was not applicable; therefore, the trial court had authority to grant permanent custody to the board under RC § 2151.414(B)(1) when it found, inter alia, that the mother had abandoned the child during the mother's incarceration and that she had failed to secure permanent housing. In re S.P., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 1104, 2005 Ohio 1079, (2005).

Although the trial court found three statutory reasons to justify the decision to grant permanent custody of a father's five children to a county agency, and the father only appealed the finding of abandonment under RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(b), in the interests of justice, the court reviewed that finding and determined that it was not against the manifest weight of the evidence. The record revealed that the father was aware that the children were in foster care and not with the mother, and although he admitted that he could have contacted them, instead he chose not to, nor did he provide any child support for them. In re Bailey Children, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2783, 2005 Ohio 2981, (2005).

Because both prongs of the permanent custody test were satisfied, the trial court properly terminated the mother's parental rights and placed the child in the permanent custody of the agency, pursuant to RC § 2151.414. The fact that the mother had not visited the child for more than eight months was sufficient to support a presumptive finding of abandonment, under RC § 2151.011(C), and the evidence demonstrated that the mother kept moving and did not inform the agency of her whereabouts. In re B. C. M., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 1735, 2005 Ohio 1818, (2005).

As a father failed to visit or communicate with his child for 90 days, and the trial court found that a family services agency did not interfere with his attempts at visitation, the father failed to present any evidence which would rebut the presumption of abandonment, as contained in RC § 2151.011(C); therefore, the trial court properly found he had abandoned the child. In re Cravens, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2109, 2004 Ohio 2356, (2004).

Where the mother wanted the child to remain in foster care until he was 18, would not permit him to return home, and refused to cooperate with children services or to participate in reunification efforts, the mother had effectively abandoned the child, permitting the award of permanent custody to the county children services. In re Beasley, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3207, 2003 Ohio 3462, (2003).

The court lawfully awarded permanent custody of the baby to the children services agency where the mother abandoned it in the trash and neither the mother nor the father nor any of the grandparents demonstrated a level of commitment to the baby that would militate against the award of permanent custody. In re Baby Girl Doe, 149 Ohio App. 3d 717, 778 N.E.2d 1053, 2002 Ohio 4470, (2002), appeal denied by 97 Ohio St. 3d 1425, 2002 Ohio 5820, 777 N.E.2d 278, 2002 Ohio LEXIS 2759 (2002).

The children were presumptively abandoned where the mother did not visit them for more than ninety days while they were in foster care. Thus the agency was not required to prove that it made sufficient reunification efforts. The best interests of the children supported the award of permanent custody where the parent was an active drug user who had made no effort to quit and obtain a stable situation. In re Starkey, 150 Ohio App. 3d 612, 782 N.E.2d 665, 2002 Ohio 6892, (2002).

Adequate parental care

The term "adequate parental care" does not require that both parents must be found capable of providing such care; the failure of one parent to provide adequate parental care does not automatically mean the failure of both. In re Lay, 43 Ohio App. 3d 78, 539 N.E.2d 664 (1987).

Revised Code § 2151.41.4 sets out several factors to be considered in determining the existence of adequate parental care. They include, inter alia, the extent to which the parents have conformed to court-ordered reunification plans; their existing mental and emotional status; and any physical, emotional, or mental neglect of the child. In re Lay, 43 Ohio App. 3d 78, 539 N.E.2d 664 (1987).

Admissions

Trial court's failure to comply with JuvR 29(D), concerning admissions, constitutes plain error in cases involving termination of parental rights. In re A.C., 160 Ohio App. 3d 457, 827 N.E.2d 824, 2005 Ohio 1742, (2005).

Juvenile Rule 34 does not require the court to engage in a colloquy with a parent in a RC § 2151.41.4 proceeding. A parent's admission in a dispositional hearing that a child's best interest would be served by permanent placement elsewhere than with the parent is not a matter that requires protections similar to JuvR 29(D). In re Lakes, 149 Ohio App. 3d 128, 776 N.E.2d 510, 2002 Ohio 3917, (2002).

Noncompliance with JuvR 29(D) rendered the termination of parental rights invalid. In re Etter, 134 Ohio App. 3d 484, 731 N.E.2d 694 (1998).

Adoption, generally

The adoptability of a child is only one of a number of relevant factors that the court must consider in a permanent custody case and the fact that a child has special needs does not mandate a finding that the child could not be adopted. In re Seymour, 1994 Ohio App. LEXIS 3375 (4th Dist. 1994).

Where a court finds ample cause for termination of parental rights, it will not be deterred from doing so by the fact that siblings may be adopted separately. In re Justice, 1993 Ohio App. LEXIS 3871 (1993).

Agency custody for 12 months

Father's sole assignment of error, contending that the trial court erred in finding that his children could not be placed with either parent within a reasonable time, was without merit because the trial court never made this finding. Instead, the trial court found that RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d) applied as the children had been in the agency's temporary custody for more than 12 months of a consecutive 22-month period. In re Sowers, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1740, 2007 Ohio 1935, (Apr. 17, 2007).

Trial court's finding, which no party appealed, that the children of a mother and a father had been in the custody of the family services agency for 12 or more months in a consecutive 22-month period, coupled with a showing that permanent custody was in the children's best interest, provided a sufficient basis for the court to affirm the trial court's judgment granting the agency's motion for permanent custody. In re Marple, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1696, 2007 Ohio 1879, (2007).

Because the termination of parental rights is the family law equivalent of the death penalty, a trial court's failure to enter an appropriate RC § 2151.414(B)(1) finding constitutes plain error. Trial courts have the mandatory duty to fully comply with the permanent custody statutes and may not award permanent custody without making the requisite findings. In re McCain, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1297, 2007 Ohio 1429, (Mar. 23, 2007).

Trial court committed plain error in finding that RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d) applied to a permanent custody case. Pursuant to § 2151.414(B)(1)(d), the child entered the temporary custody of the agency sixty days after she was removed from her home, which was June 28, 2005. When the agency filed the permanent custody motion in May of 2006, the child had not continuously been in the agency's custody for twelve months of a consecutive twenty-two month period. In re McCain, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1297, 2007 Ohio 1429, (Mar. 23, 2007).

When a trial court determined, in permanent custody proceedings, that a child had been in the custody of an agency for 12 or more months of a consecutive 22-month period, under RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d), and the record supported this determination, it did not then have to go on and determine whether the child could or should be placed with a parent, under RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(a). In re J.W., — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1273, 2007 Ohio 1419, (Mar. 27, 2007).

When a trial court calculated whether a mother's children had been in an agency's custody for more than 12 months of a 22-month period, under RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d), it was error to find, under RC § 1.45, that any portion of a month the children were in the agency's custody was counted as a full month because, in counting months, pursuant to § 1.45, the statute explicitly required computation "from a particular day" until "the same numerical day in the concluding month," so the statute did not provide that a portion of a month could be counted as an entire month. In re A. C., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3264, 2006 Ohio 3337, (2006).

When a trial court calculated whether a mother's children had been in an agency's custody for more than 12 months of a 22-month period, under RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d), the operative beginning date was 60 days after they were removed from their home, and the operative ending date was the date on which the agency filed a motion for their permanent custody. In re A. C., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3264, 2006 Ohio 3337, (2006).

Trial court did not err when it granted permanent custody of the mother's children to the agency because, although R.C. § 2151.414(B)(1)(a) did not apply, the trial court properly found that R.C. § 2151.414(B)(1)(d) was applicable because the children had been in the temporary custody of the agency for a period in excess of 12 of the prior 22 consecutive months. In re Canterucci Children, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4910, 2006 Ohio 4969, (2006).

When a trial court calculated whether a mother's children had been in an agency's custody for more than 12 months of a 22-month period, under RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d), the mother conceded that it was not error for the trial court to combine the period during which the children were in the agency's custody in a prior case with the period during which the children were in the agency's custody during the current case. In re A. C., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3264, 2006 Ohio 3337, (2006).

Trial court properly found that the requirement of RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d) was satisfied because, at the time the agency filed its motion, the child had been in the custody of the agency for 12 months of a consecutive 22-month period. In re SW, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2829, 2006 Ohio 2958, (2006), writ of certiorari denied by 127 S. Ct. 1152, 166 L. Ed. 2d 999, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 1222, 75 U.S.L.W. 3384 (U.S. 2007).

RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d) was inapplicable to a father's child with respect to a permanent custody proceeding, as the child's temporary custody with a county children service agency was terminated and legal custody of the child was returned to the mother, such that the child was only in the temporary custody of the agency for eight months and 16 days. In re Miajanigue W, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6271, 2006 Ohio 6295, (2006).

In permanent custody proceedings, a trial court improperly found that a mother's youngest child could not be placed with either parent within a reasonable time because RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(a) was inapplicable since all three of the mother's children had been in the temporary custody of a county children's services agency for 12 of the 22 prior months. The trial court's alternate finding under RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d), however, was independently sufficient as a basis to grant the agency's motion for permanent custody. In re Parks, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5836, 2006 Ohio 5891, (2006).

Award of permanent custody of a mother's child to a children services agency was supported by the trial court's finding, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d), that the child had been in the temporary custody of the agency for a period in excess of twelve of the prior twenty-two consecutive months. In re Parks, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5835, 2006 Ohio 5890, (2006).

Award of permanent custody of a mother's child to a children services agency was supported by the trial court's finding, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d), that the child had been in the temporary custody of the agency for a period in excess of twelve of the prior twenty-two consecutive months. In re Elder, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5834, 2006 Ohio 5889, (2006).

While a mother contended on appeal that the trial court erred when it found that the mother's children could not be placed with her within a reasonable period of time, since the children were in the custody of the agency for twelve or more months of a consecutive twenty-two month period, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(B), the trial court did not need to determine that the children could not or should not be placed with the mother within a reasonable period of time. In re K.R., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5751, 2006 Ohio 5801, (2006).

Trial court's decision that permanent custody should be granted pursuant to RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d) was not against the manifest weight of the evidence since the record contained evidence that the child had been in the temporary custody of the family services agency for more than 12 months. The father's arguments that the father's home was never investigated to determine whether it would be a proper placement and that he was never added to the case plan were irrelevant to a determination under § 2151.414(B)(1)(d). In re Weaver, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5665, 2006 Ohio 5677, (2006).

Trial court's decision made the requisite finding that the children were in the custody of the agency for 12 months of a consecutive 22-month period and the evidence supported the trial court's findings. Since the motion was brought pursuant to RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d), the court's holding was premised on RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d), which the evidence supported and thus, the trial court did not violate the mother's equal protection and due process rights through its reference to whether or not the children could be placed with the parents. In re S.R., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4921, 2006 Ohio 4983, (2006), writ of certiorari denied by 127 S. Ct. 2882, 167 L. Ed. 2d 1158, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 6154, 75 U.S.L.W. 3636 (U.S. 2007).

While a trial court found, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(a) that a mother's children could not or should not be placed with the mother within a reasonable period of time, this subsection was not applicable to the case since, under § 2151.414(B)(1)(a), the children must not have been in the temporary custody of the agency for 12 or more months of a consecutive 22-month period, and the children had been in the agency's custody for more than 12 of the prior 22 consecutive months. The court agreed with the trial court's finding that § 2151.414(B)(1)(d), which allowed the grant of permanent custody if the children had been in the temporary custody of the agency for 12 of the prior 22 consecutive months, was applicable to the case. In re Canterucci Children, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4910, 2006 Ohio 4969, (2006).

Trial court determined that there was some controversy as to the use of RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d) and it also made findings regarding § 2151.414(B)(1)(a) with respect to a grant of permanent custody of parents' child to a county agency; although the additional consideration under § 2151.414(B)(1)(d) was not necessary because the adjudication was to have been based on § 2151.414(B)(1)(a), the additional finding was merely harmless

Termination of a father's parental rights was proper on the ground that the father's son had been in the permanent custody of the agency for 12 months out of a consecutive 22-month period. Thus, the fact that the evidence did not support a finding of abandonment under RC § 2151.011(C), in that the caseworker and the foster mother testified that the father made one telephone call to the son during his three-month absence, did not require reversal of the permanent custody order. In re J. N., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2410, 2006 Ohio 2557, (2006).

Since a mother's children had been in the temporary custody of a children services agency for more than 12 out of the last 22 months, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d), the trial court was not required to make a finding that the children could not be returned within a reasonable time. In re Chestnut, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 611, 2006 Ohio 684, (2006).

Children services agency was properly awarded permanent custody of a mother's child pursuant to RC § 2151.414. Since the evidence showed that the child had been in the custody of the agency for more than 12 months of a consecutive 22-month period under § 2151.414(B)(1)(d), the trial court was not required to address the mother's compliance with her case plan. In re S.M., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2386, 2006 Ohio 2529, (2006).

Where a mother did not dispute the fact that three of her minor children had been in the temporary custody of a county social service agency for 12 or more months out of the past 22 months, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d), but she disputed that such was an appropriate basis for termination of her parental rights, such argument lacked merit, as it was a statutorily authorized basis for termination. The trial court had also found support for termination pursuant to § 2151.414(B)(1)(a), and as such, § 2151.414(B)(1)(d) was merely an additional, cumulative reason for termination. In re Amber M.L., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3804, 2005 Ohio 4172, (2005).

When an agency sought permanent custody of a child based on an allegation, under RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d), that the child had been in its custody for 12 of the last 22 months, the time period between the filing of the agency's motion making that allegation and the hearing on the motion did not apply to a calculation of the 12-month time period, and, as the agency filed its permanent custody motion less than 12 months after it received temporary custody of the child, the requirements of the statute were not met, but the child's mother did not raise this error at trial, so it was waived, and, given the fact that the mother had died, it was not appropriate to apply a plain error analysis. In re Roberts, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2656, 2005 Ohio 2843, (2005).

There was no violation of RC § 2151.414(B)(1) on the ground that permanent custody was granted before the expiration of the 12-month period from the time of placement of the child because § 2151.414(B)(1)(a) authorized an award of permanent custody if the child could not be placed with either of her parents within a reasonable time and did not require the expiration of a 12-month period. In re Woods, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3284, 2005 Ohio 3561, (2005).

Trial court's finding, under RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d), that the children had been in the temporary custody of the agency for 12 of the previous consecutive 22 months, was independently sufficient to use as a basis to grant the agency's motion for permanent custody and was not against the manifest weight of the evidence. In re Langford, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2196, 2005 Ohio 2304, (2005).

Where a mother's child had been in the temporary custody of an agency for 12 months out of a consecutive 22-month period, it was unnecessary on appeal to review the trial court's determination that the child could not and should not be returned to the mother's custody within a reasonable time, as the initial finding was sufficient on its own, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d), to support the grant of permanent custody to the agency. In re Lewis/Louk Children, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2233, 2005 Ohio 2344, (2005).

As a mother's children had been in the custody of a social services agency for 12 or more months of a consecutive 22-month period, as required by RC § 2151.414(B), the trial court was not obligated to make a determination under RC § 2151.414(E) that the mother had failed continuously and repeatedly to substantially remedy the conditions that caused the children to be removed from her home; rather, the trial court only had to make a best interests of the children determination, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D), which it did upon a finding that the mother could not stay off of drugs and had committed criminal acts. In re Ch. O., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 1024, 2005 Ohio 1013, (2005).

Where appellant mother's children had been in the custody of a children's services agency for 16 of the previous 22 consecutive months, the trial court did not err in finding that the requirement of RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d) had been met. In re Joiner, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1017, 2004 Ohio 1158, (2004), appeal denied by 102 Ohio St. 3d 1425, 2004 Ohio 2003, 807 N.E.2d 368, 2004 Ohio LEXIS 998 (2004).

Trial court properly granted permanent custody to a children service agency and terminated the rights of the parents, based on RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d), where the parties' two minor daughters had been in the agency's custody for 12 or more months of a consecutive 22-month period ending on or after March 18, 1999, and termination was in the children's best interests; the trial court was not required to determine whether the children could or should have been placed with either parent within a reasonable time, given that the first factor was found, and further, the children appeared very happy in their foster care arrangement, having bonded with the family. In re Brown, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 3667, 2004 Ohio 4044, (2004), appeal denied by 103 Ohio St. 3d 1495, 2004 Ohio 5605, 816 N.E.2d 1081, 2004 Ohio LEXIS 2585 (2004).

Finding that a child was in an agency's temporary custody for at least 12 months of a consecutive 22-month period precluded a determination required by RC § 2151.414(E) of whether parents had remedied conditions which caused removal of child; the trial court was not required to conduct an analysis under RC § 2151.414(E)(1), and an order terminating parental rights was affirmed. In re L.D., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 3655, 2004 Ohio 4000, (2004).

Pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D), a juvenile court must find clear and convincing evidence of both prongs of a two-prong test prior to terminating parental rights; in an action to terminate parental rights, the trial court found that the first prong of a permanent custody test was satisfied because a minor child had been in county custody for more than 12 of the 24 months prior to the hearing and such was in the best interest of the child. In re T. S., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 13, 2004 Ohio 32, (2004).

Before a public children-services agency or private child-placing agency can move for permanent custody of a child on RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d) grounds, the child must have been in the temporary custody of an agency for at least 12 months of a consecutive 22-month period. In re C.W., 104 Ohio St. 3d 163, 818 N.E.2d 1176, 2004 Ohio 6411, (2004).

Child services agencies have no authority to file a motion for permanent custody of children on the basis that the children have been in the temporary custody of the agency for 12 or more months of a consecutive 22 month period prior to expiration of the entire 12-month period. A trial court's order granting the Wayne County Children Services Board's petition for permanent custody of three children and termination of their father's parental rights was reversed where the evidence clearly showed, and the trial court explicitly found, that the children were in temporary custody for only 10 months when the petition was filed. In re K. G., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1290, 2004 Ohio 1421, (2004).

Pursuant to RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d), when a child has been in a children services agency's temporary custody for 12 or more months of a consecutive 22 month period ending on or after March 18, 1999, a trial court need not find that the child cannot or should not be placed with either parent within a reasonable time, and instead, may consider only the best interests of the child; the trial court was not required to find that the child cannot or should not be placed with either parent within a reasonable time based upon the amount of time that a minor child was in foster care and separated from his mother and father because of their inability to properly raise the child. In re Riley, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3657, 2003 Ohio 4108, (2003).

Where children were adjudicated dependent within 60 days of being removed from their parents' home, the statutory calculation pursuant to RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d) began on the date of adjudication; from that date to the date of the permanent custody hearing the children were in temporary custody of the children's services agency for 17 months, which was statutorily sufficient. In re Sessoms, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4775, 2003 Ohio 5281, (2003).

Basis existed for granting permanent custody to the county welfare agency on its motion to obtain permanent custody of the minor children of the parents, as the children had been in the temporary custody of one or more public service agencies for 12 months or more of a consecutive 22-month period and the relevant factors used to determine the best interests of the children appeared to weigh in favor of granting permanent custody, but the trial court's failure to consider two statutory best interest factors required that the case be remanded for new findings of fact and conclusions of law regarding those factors. In re Myers, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 2492, 2003 Ohio 2776, (2003).

Appeal

When, in a permanent custody case, a trial court erroneously used the time between filing and hearing the permanent custody motion to find the subject children were in the custody of a children's services agency for more than 12 of the last 22 months, under RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d), requiring a remand, a new evidentiary hearing was not required on remand because the record from the prior hearing allowed the trial court to find, under RC § 2151.414(B)(1), that the children could not be returned to either parent within a reasonable time. In re Arnold, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2608, 2006 Ohio 2794, (2006).

Mother's failure to file objections to a magistrate's decision at the trial court level and her failure to provide the trial court with a transcript or affidavit precluded the appellate court from considering the transcript she submitted on appeal in support of her claim that the trial court erred by failing to consider and weigh the best interest factors contained in RC § 2151.414(D). In re Maxwell, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 472, 2006 Ohio 527, (2006).

Where the appellate court reversed and remanded based on the admission of inadmissible hearsay evidence at the first hearing on termination of parental rights, the trial court should have conducted an entirely new hearing. In re Walker, 162 Ohio App. 3d 303, 833 N.E.2d 362, 2005 Ohio 3773, (2005).

Trial court did not show in its judgment entry that it engaged in the requisite analysis under RC § 2151.414(E) before terminating the father's parental rights. Therefore, it could not be determined on review whether the judgment was against the manifest weight of the evidence, or whether a timely filed case plan and reasonable efforts at reunification were required for a valid order. Mother facing possible termination of parental rights could appeal from the adjudicatory ruling after that hearing or after the case was disposed of by the dispositional hearing. In re A.C., 160 Ohio App. 3d 457, 827 N.E.2d 824, 2005 Ohio 1742, (2005).

Denial of the foster parents' motion to intervene (Ohio R. Civ. P. 24) was not a final appealable order, pursuant to RC § 2905.02(B), since the denial did not affect a substantial right; there was no judgment entry either granting or denying the agency's motion for permanent custody, or granting a disposition and placement of the minor child. Nor did dismissal of the foster parents' motion for custody, pursuant to RC § 2151.353(A)(3), affect a substantial right so as to make the denial of the motion a final appealable order because, since legal custody and permanent custody were alternative disposition choices, RC § 2151.353(A)(3) did not authorize the foster parents to intervene in the adjudicatory permanent custody proceeding (RC § 2151.414) and move for legal custody of the children. In re Fell, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2457, 2005 Ohio 2415, (2005).

Grant of permanent custody was required to be reversed where the trial court adopted a magistrate's decision which failed to discuss all five factors contained in RC § 2151.414(D)(1) through (5). In re Bentley, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 3180, 2004 Ohio 3513, (2004).

Appeals court affirmed termination of parental rights (TPR) and transfer of permanent custody to a children's services board (CSB) under RC § 2151.414(B); after a remand, the trial court made its findings independently of the magistrate's findings, making the magistrate's findings moot. Applicability Strictures of RC § 2151.414(E)(1) were not pertinent to a case involving a trial court's grant of legal custody of a mother's four children to the children's grandparents because § 2151.414(E)(1) is applicable only in those cases in which a public children services agency seeks permanent custody of a child. In re Christopher M., — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 975, 2007 Ohio 1040, (Mar. 9, 2007).

Where children had been removed from their mother's care and adjudicated as neglected, and thereafter, the social service agency that had temporary custody of the children sought to modify the custody to permanent custody, RC § 2151.353 was not applicable; rather, the proceeding was governed by RC § 2151.414(B). In re Ch. O., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 1024, 2005 Ohio 1013, (2005).

Revised Code §§ 2151.41.2 and 2151.41.4 are applicable only where the child or children have previously been determined dependent, neglected or abused, their temporary custody has been committed to a children services board, a welfare department or a certified organization, and an order is sought changing temporary to permanent custody. These sections are not applicable where the original request was for permanent custody, and an order of temporary custody was issued pending hearing on the complaint as provided by RC § 2151.33. In re Covert, 17 Ohio App. 3d 122, 17 Ohio B. 185, 477 N.E.2d 678 (1984).

Best interest of child

While a juvenile court is not required to enumerate and discuss every statutory factor listed in RC § 2151.414(D) in making a best interest determination, there must be some indication in the record that the court at least considered all of the required factors. In re G.N., 170 Ohio App. 3d 76, 866 N.E.2d 32, 2007 Ohio 126, (2007).

Judgment awarding permanent custody of a child under RC § 2151.414 to a children services agency was improper because the trial court failed to address all relevant factors in determining the best interest of child, specifically failing to address the interaction and interrelationship of the child with either parent, failing to consider the child's need for a legally secure permanent placement, and failing to set forth its reason for acting against the guardian ad litem's recommendation that the agency's motion for permanent custody be denied. In re D.H., — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1605, 2007 Ohio 1762, (Apr. 16, 2007).

In light of the extended period of time that the children of a mother and a father had been in the custody of the family services agency, the mother's ten-year alcohol problem, the father's history of domestic violence, the lack of extended family support, the young ages of the children, and the report of the guardian ad litem, the trial court's decision to permanently sever the parental relationship as in the best interest of the children was supported by reliable, credible and competent evidence. In re Marple, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1696, 2007 Ohio 1879, (2007).

As there was sufficient evidence to support termination of parental rights under RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(a), the fact that the parents' child was not living in the agency's custody for the requisite period of time when the motion for permanent custody was made was inconsequential under § 2151.414(B)(1)(d), although there was sufficient time to meet the requirements when an amended motion for that relief was filed. The best interest of the child pursuant to § 2151.414(D) was satisfied by termination of parental rights, as the relationship between the parties was minimal, the child was more talkative and bonded closer with her foster parents, and guardian ad litem for each of the parents and for the child all recommended permanent custody be granted to the agency. In re L.M., — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1462, 2007 Ohio 1596, (Apr. 5, 2007).

Award of permanent custody of a father's children to a family services agency was properly found to be in the children's best interest as the evidence showed that the children had been heavily involved with the agency for an extensive portion of their young life; that the father had an unmistakable pattern of inappropriate parenting, removal from the home, "half-hearted progress" by the parents sufficient to return the children to the home, relapse, and then yet another removal from the home; and that the father's extensive history of drug and alcohol abuse precluded him from providing a legally secure, permanent home for the children. In re Joseph C.P., 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1397, 2007 Ohio 1528, (2007).

When, in a permanent custody proceeding, a trial court did not, as required by RC § 2151.414(D)(2), determine whether the child could express his wishes and, if so, what those wishes were, this was reversible error because, inter alia, it was impossible, without this information, to determine whether the child should have separate legal counsel due to having a position which conflicted with that of his guardian ad litem. In re J.W., — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1273, 2007 Ohio 1419, (Mar. 27, 2007).

When, in a permanent custody proceeding, a trial court stated that "the wishes of the child are not expressed and not inconsistent with the position of the Guardian ad Litem (GAL). The maturity of the child is age 4," this was insufficient to find the child's wishes, as required by RC § 2151.414(D)(2), because it did not address the child's wishes or whether he was capable of expressing those wishes, and there was no evidence in the record regarding these issues, as, inter alia, the GAL's report and testimony did not indicate whether the child could express his wishes and, if so, what they were. In re J.W., — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1273, 2007 Ohio 1419, (Mar. 27, 2007).

Trial court committed reversible error when it granted an agency permanent custody of a child because it did not, as required by RC § 2151.414(D)(2), determine whether the child was mature enough to express his wishes regarding permanent custody, and, if he was, whether those wishes conflicted with the position of his guardian ad litem. In re J.W., — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1273, 2007 Ohio 1419, (Mar. 27, 2007).

Grant of permanent custody of a mother's five- and one-half-year old child to a children services agency was in the child's best interest under RC § 2151.414(D) as the child lived in a loving foster home and shared a strong bond with her foster family while she did not share a strong bond with her mother and her mother's boyfriend, the guardian ad litem recommended that the agency be granted permanent custody, and the child, who had lived in the agency's custody for over two years, needed a permanent, secure home, which the mother could not provide as her mental health and the medical needs of her two younger special needs children interfered with her ability to properly care for the child. In re Johnston, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 796, 2007 Ohio 907, (Feb. 26, 2007).

Evidence supported a trial court's finding that granting permanent custody of parents' children to a children services agency was in the children's best interest under RC § 2151.414 as the evidence showed that the children had been in the custody of the agency for 23 consecutive months; that the parents missed more than 100 of the more than 200 visits with their children; that the parents failed to complete additional parenting classes that were recommended; that they failed to follow through on counseling as required by the case plan; and that they failed to provide a safe, clean, and healthy environment for their children. In re Sowers, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1740, 2007 Ohio 1935, (Apr. 17, 2007).

Permanent court commitment was in the best interest of a mother's child as the mother had drug and alcohol use issues, never had any drug treatment, and admitted marijuana usage with nonchalant indifference at trial. Additionally, the mother had abandoned the child without any contact for two substantial periods, she lacked stable housing, and her employment was unsteady and less than occasional. In re D.P., 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1550, 2007 Ohio 1703, (2007).

While a mother's children had been in the temporary custody of a family services agency for more than 12 months of a consecutive 22-month period, there was no indication that the trial court considered the factors listed in RC § 2151.414(D) when determining whether an award of permanent custody to the agency was in the children's best interest; thus, the order awarding permanent custody to the agency was improper. In re A.F., — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1509, 2007 Ohio 1646, (Apr. 9, 2007).

Trial court's award of permanent custody of six of a mother's children to a children services agency and of the seventh child to her father was in the children's best interest. The testimony showed that the mother's retardation prevented her from having adequate parenting skills; that, despite the efforts of the agency and other professionals, the mother had shown no improvement since the children were first removed from the home four years earlier; and that the mother did not have the ability to improve in the future. In re Buck, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1358, 2007 Ohio 1491, (Mar. 22, 2007).

Record revealed sufficient competent, credible evidence to support a finding that permanent custody was in the child's best interest because, at the time of the hearing, she was nearly six years old and had been in the agency's custody her entire life. She was in a specialized foster home and in therapy for ADHD, PTSD, and behavioral problems and her foster parents wanted to adopt her. In re T.W., 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1320, 2007 Ohio 1441, (2007).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying the request for an extension of time or in finding that it was in the children's best interest to grant permanent custody to the agency because placement with the paternal aunt and her husband was considered, but it was in the children's best interest to create immediate permanency in their lives. There was a concern with adding four children, ages one year to five years, to the new marriage and blended family of the aunt and her new husband and the children had little time to get to know the husband. In re Avon, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1306, 2007 Ohio 1431, (Mar. 23, 2007).

Trial court's determination that it was in the best interest of the children to grant permanent custody to the department was not against the manifest weight or sufficiency of the evidence because the psychologist's report detailed the severe trauma and abuse the children suffered at the hands of their mother. The case worker testified that the children were improving in their foster home, and that there was interest in adopting them. In re Scullion Children, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 888, 2007 Ohio 929, (Mar. 2, 2007).

Award of permanent custody of a mother's child to a children services agency was in the child's best interest as the child had been in the same foster home since shortly after her birth, she was doing well in the foster home, and the mother had not visited with the child for a period of more than six months. In re Stafford, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 826, 2007 Ohio 928, (Mar. 5, 2007).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion by concluding that granting permanent custody to the agency was in the child's best interests because the mother had her parental rights terminated with respect to siblings of the child. Only one of the best interest factors set forth in RC § 2151.414(D) had to be resolved in favor of the award of permanent custody in order for the trial court to terminate parental rights. In re Z.T., 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 759, 2007 Ohio 827, (2007).

Trial court's finding that permanent custody was in the best interest of a mother's child was supported by the evidence. The evidence showed that the child had only interacted with the mother for 17 hours over a 44-month period, that there was little bonding between the mother and the child, that the child was in need of a legally secure placement, that the mother continued to exhibit difficulties with anger management and drug and alcohol addiction, and that the child enjoyed a loving and stable environment with her foster family. In re V.M., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4370, 2006 Ohio 4461, (2006), affirmed by 113 Ohio St. 3d 161, 2007 Ohio 1254, 863 N.E.2d 167, 2007 Ohio LEXIS 788 (2007).

Trial court did not err in finding that it was in the best interest of the child for permanent custody to be granted to the agency, based on RC § 2151.414(D) and (E), because the mother failed to cooperate with the prior case plan, placement with relatives was unavailable, and the child had never been with nor bonded to the mother and was in a home placement with his siblings and available for adoption. The mother had clearly not benefited from the past services and information provided to her as she continued to display extreme impatience and administer severe and inappropriate discipline toward the children. In re Craig, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2908, 2006 Ohio 3026, (2006), writ of certiorari denied by 127 S. Ct. 1816, 167 L. Ed. 2d 327, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 3103, 75 U.S.L.W. 3497 (U.S. 2007).

Trial court had sufficient evidence to find by clear and convincing evidence that the child's best interests were served by placing him in the permanent custody of the agency to facilitate his adoption into a permanent home because the child was bonded to his foster parents and foster siblings, the mother repeatedly missed visits with the child and grew more distant, and the child was too young to give a valid opinion of his wishes. Also, because housing, employment, domestic violence, and drug abuse were remaining issues in the mother's life, permanently placing the child with her was not a viable option. In re SW, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2829, 2006 Ohio 2958, (2006), writ of certiorari denied by 127 S. Ct. 1152, 166 L. Ed. 2d 999, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 1222, 75 U.S.L.W. 3384 (U.S. 2007).

Trial court properly concluded that it was in a child's best interest to grant permanent custody of her to a children's services agency. The evidence showed that the child shared a loving relationship with her foster parents and had become integrated into the family, that the guardian ad litem recommended that the trial court award the agency permanent custody, and that the child had been in her foster home since April of 2005 and was shuffled among relative placements before that time. In re McCain, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1297, 2007 Ohio 1429, (Mar. 23, 2007).

Grant of permanent custody of three children of a mother and a father to a children's services agency was properly found to be in the children's best interest under RC § 2151.414. The record showed that the mother did not complete the requirements of her case plan and did not interact with the children during visits while the father had an extensive criminal record with multiple incarcerations. In re Cutright, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 996, 2007 Ohio 1079, (Mar. 8, 2007).

Evidence supported the determination that custody with the grandparents, after the mother's parental rights were terminated, was not in the children's best interest because the grandmother had refused to sign release forms allowing the agency to assess the current emotional health of the subject children's older siblings and the grandfather had not demonstrated any interest in the children. In re Reardon Children, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 567, 2006 Ohio 629, (2006).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion by denying the grandmother's motion for legal custody in the permanent custody proceeding because the evidence indicated that the grandparents had acted inappropriately during visits with the children by arguing with the parents, the grandparents refused to allow the agency case workers into their house for a home study to determine whether their house was appropriate for children, and the grandparents testified that they lied to agency workers while the mother absented herself for a year with one of her children. There was also concern about grandfather's alcohol consumption and failure to successfully complete alcohol counseling and, if granted custody, the grandparents would have allowed the parents back into their house. In re J.S., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 615, 2006 Ohio 702, (2006).

Where a county agency initially sought permanent custody of a father's child, pursuant to RC § 2151.353 it was not required to show reasonable efforts to reunify the child with her father; further, permanent custody with the agency was shown to be in the child's best interests pursuant to RC § 2151.414(E)(13) and (16), as the father had a history of incarcerations and drug addictions, he did not indicate an intention to change his behavior, and the best interest of the child was served by her custody with the agency for purposes of a stable family environment, potentially with the foster family who wished to adopt her. In re Bodenheimer, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3143, 2006 Ohio 3253, (2006).

Trial court's finding, in a permanent custody case, that it was in a child's best interest to grant her permanent custody to an agency properly considered, under RC § 2151.414(D)(1), the child's interaction with the child's mother, and a grant of permanent custody was proper because the evidence demonstrated that the mother's erratic behavior negatively affected her ability to interact with the child and that the mother showed very poor judgment in matters that had a direct bearing on the mother's ability to provide for the child's safety and well-being. In re P. B., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5420, 2006 Ohio 5419, (2006).

Trial court's finding that a grant of custody of a mother's two children to a children's services agency was in the children's best interests was supported by the evidence. The case worker's testimony showed that the mother and the children did not have a strong bond but that the children did have a strong bond with their foster mother. In re Canterucci Children, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4910, 2006 Ohio 4969, (2006).

There was clear and convincing evidence to support the grant of permanent custody of the child to the agency, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(a) and (E) because the mother was very obsessed with the medical concerns of her daughter and blew them out of proportion (even calling 911 once when the child had a cold); the record would also have supported a finding under RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d). Further, the trial court's grant of permanent custody of the child to the agency was made in the consideration of the child's best interests and did not constitute an error or an abuse of discretion because, although the mother had made marked progress in her psychiatric treatment, she had reverted to her earlier hostile behavior and unwarranted fixation on the child's medical status. In re Kyler-Lowther, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4744, 2006 Ohio 4836, (2006).

Termination of the father's parental rights was in the best interest of the children because the children were bonded with each other and with the mother but not with the father. While the evidence supported a finding that the father could not provide a legally secure permanent placement for the children, the agency failed to present clear and convincing evidence that the mother could not provide a permanent home for her children because the mother had never harmed her children and she always provided sufficient housing and care for the children. In re E. T., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2308, 2006 Ohio 2413, (2006).

Evidence supported a trial court's finding that an award of permanent custody to a children services agency was in the child's best interest. The child stated that he wanted to stay with his foster parents, and the evidence showed that no bond existed between the child and the mother. In re S.M., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2386, 2006 Ohio 2529, (2006).

Competent, credible evidence supported a trial court's finding, under RC § 2151.414(D), that it was in a child's best interests to grant her permanent custody to an agency because (1) she was doing well in her foster home and was developmentally on track, (2) she was well bonded with her foster family and less bonded or comfortable with her parents, (3) the interaction between the child and her foster parents was more positive than the interaction between the child and her father, as she was resistant to the father during visits and he did not display appropriate parenting, under RC § 2151.414(D)(1). In re King, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 707, 2006 Ohio 780, (2006).

Trial court did not err when it found that awarding a children services agency permanent custody of a mother's son was in the son's best interest where the evidence showed that the agency made reasonable efforts to reunify the mother with the son and provided many services, including providing the mother with one-on-one drug rehabilitation counseling and access to anger management training; that, while the mother had success with her substance abuse issues, concerns were noted regarding the mother's comprehension of the concepts that were taught; that the mother completed only a small number of the anger management and domestic violence classes and had difficulty with comprehension; and that the mother did not have appropriate housing or adequate supplies for the son. In re Norman F., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6720, 2006 Ohio 6810, (2006).

Trial court properly concluded that permanent custody was in the best interests of a mother's children because the evidence showed that the mother had not demonstrated the ability to care for one of the children, who was autistic; that the children began to experience significant behavioral problems upon being returned to their mother; that the mother had tested positive for cocaine use; and that she had been inconsistent with her mental health medication. In re Morales, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6356, 2006 Ohio 6384, (2006).

Weight of the evidence did support a finding that legal custody to the friend was in the child's best interest because the trial court was persuaded by the fact that the mother had visited with her child only seven times in the previous three years, and that she had made the choice to move to Minnesota and leave her daughter behind. Therefore, the mother had not maintained her bond and her relationship with her daughter. In re S.J., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6335, 2006 Ohio 6381, (2006).

Evidence supported the trial court's decision to award the agency permanent custody of the child because the child could not and should not have been returned to either parent within a reasonable time since the mother had previously had her parental rights terminated with respect to two children, she voluntarily relinquished custody of two other children, and the father never been involved in the child's life. The trial court carefully analyzed the best interest factors and found that the mother abused cocaine while breast feeding, the child tested positive for cocaine, and the only father figure the child had known was the mother's abusive boyfriend. In re Harness, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6311, 2006 Ohio 6359, (2006).

Clear and convincing evidence supported trial court's award of permanent custody of a father's child to a county children service agency and the termination of his parental rights pursuant to RC § 2151.414(E)(4) and (14), based on the lack of visitation, support, and communication that the father had with his child and the best interest of the child pursuant to § 2151.414(D). In re Mijanigue W, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6271, 2006 Ohio 6295, (2006).

Clear and convincing evidence supported a trial court's finding that an award of permanent custody of a father's children to a children services agency was in the children's best interest under RC § 2151.414(D). The children, who were ages three and one, were in need of a legally secure placement, and because of the father's drug addiction and their mother's incarceration, this goal could not be achieved without a grant of permanent custody to the agency. In re Christopher G., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6267, 2006 Ohio 6294, (2006).

Evidence supported a determination that it was in the child's best interest to grant permanent custody to a county children service agency pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D) and to terminate the parental rights of the child's mother, as the parents had no relationship with the child, the child was too young to indicate what was in his best interest although the guardian ad litem opined that the best interest of the child was served by custody with the agency, the child was not in the agency's temporary custody for 20 months but he had been out of the mother's care for his entire life, and the mother and legal custodian were both inappropriate caregivers for the child. In re I. J., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6257, 2006 Ohio 6263, (2006).

Grant of permanent custody of a father's child to a children services agency was in the child's best interest, in that the evidence showed that the child was thriving in the care of her maternal aunt and uncle and that the aunt and uncle, who had adopted the child's half brother, had expressed an interest in adopting the child. In re M. L., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5893, 2006 Ohio 5931, (2006).

Mother did not show that a trial court's finding that the award of permanent custody of the mother's child to a family services agency was in the child's best interest under RC § 2151.414 was erroneous. The agency did not have to prove that it investigated and ruled out the potential placement of the child with all known relatives, even those who had not shown an interest in caring for the child. In re C.W., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5653, 2006 Ohio 5635, (2006).

Evidence showed that granting a family services agency permanent custody of a mother's three children was in the children's best interests, in that two of the children had bonded with their foster parents, the children had been in the temporary custody of the agency for 12 or more months of a consecutive 22-month period, and the children needed a legally secure permanent placement. In re Coon, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5621, 2006 Ohio 5629, (2006).

RC § 2151.414(D) does not give special weight to any of the factors listed therein for determining the best interest of a child. A court need not determine that termination of parental rights is the only option. In re Schaefer, 111 Ohio St. 3d 498, 857 N.E.2d 532, 2006 Ohio 5513, (2006).

In a termination of parental rights proceeding under RC § 2151.414, the evidence supported the trial court's determination that the award of permanent custody to the agency was in the child's best interests. The court noted that, while the child's aunt expressed some interest in the child and a home study was commenced, she was uncooperative and also made no effort to contact the child. In re Wilks, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5396, 2006 Ohio 5404, (2006).

Testimony supported the trial court's finding that granting permanent custody to the agency was in the children's best interest because the case worker testified that the children did not have a strong bond with their mother but did have a significant bond with their foster mother. The children had no separation issues after leaving the mother, acted differently than they did outside the presence of their mother, and a therapist testified that the mother displayed a lack of enthusiasm about visiting with her children, a lack of energy during the visits, and a lack of expressing verbal cues to the children and reciprocity. In re Canterbury Children, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4910, 2006 Ohio 4969, (2006).

Trial court had sufficient evidence to find by clear and convincing evidence that the children's best interests were served by placing them in the permanent custody of the agency, under R.C. § 2151.414, to facilitate permanent placement for them because the parents failed to establish a stable and safe home and income sufficient to meet the children's needs and failed to remedy the situation that caused the removal of the children. Because at the time that the agency filed its motion for permanent custody, the children had been in the agency's custody of for 12 months of a consecutive 22-month period, the trial court properly found that the requirement of R.C. § 2151.414(B)(1)(d) was satisfied. In re S.R., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4921, 2006 Ohio 4983, (2006), writ of certiorari denied by 127 S. Ct. 2882, 167 L. Ed. 2d 1158, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 6154, 75 U.S.L.W. 3636 (U.S. 2007).

Juvenile court's grant of permanent custody to a county social service agency pursuant to RC §§ 2151.413 and 2151.414 rather than to the children's maternal grandparents was supported by evidence that the agency placement was in the children's best interests, as they were receiving necessary counseling and services. Denial of the grandparents' request for custody was not an abuse of discretion, as they had not officially moved for such relief under RC § 2151.353(A)(3), but rather had merely sent correspondence to the juvenile court requesting such relief, and further, there was evidence that the children's best interests would not be served if they lived together due to acting out issues regarding sexual abuse that they suffered. In re Turner, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4832, 2006 Ohio 4906, (2006).

Grant of permanent custody of a father's children to a family services agency was in the best interest of the children. The children were doing well in a foster home where they had been since they were removed from their father's home, and there was another foster home interested in adopting the children. In re Davidson-Rush, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4781, 2006 Ohio 4873, (2006).

Trial court did not err in finding that it was in the child's best interest that it grant permanent custody of the child to the agency, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D), because the father did not have a strong connection with the child and, although he claimed that he wanted custody of his son, his actions and inactions demonstrated otherwise. He admitted that he did not comply with the case plan, that he voluntarily terminated visitation, that he moved without informing the agency, and that he refused to let the case worker into his residence. In re Oaks, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4787, 2006 Ohio 4857, (2006).

Trial court's finding that it was in the best interest of the child to grant permanent custody to the agency, under R.C. § 2151.414, was not against the manifest weight of the evidence because, during the course of the case plan, the father moved to Arizona without prior notification to the agency, discontinued psychiatric treatment, and was incarcerated for 90 days. Upon his return from Arizona, his involvement in treatment programs was at best sporadic and inconsistent and he continued to live with his mother, who had a long history with the agency, and the father had not exercised any visitation with his infant daughter in almost

Grant of custody of a mother's two children was in the children's best interest. While the mother was dealing with stressors other than those involved in simply taking care of the children, the mother appeared to place blame on others and, despite her efforts and counseling for two years, was still unable to cope with and solve problems on her own. In re Charles B., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4712, 2006 Ohio 4801, (2006).

Termination of the mother's parental rights was in the best interest of the child, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D), because there was no bond between the mother and her child and the child had several medical conditions that required special care, including asthma, numerous allergies, and serious skin condition, and the mother had no idea how to treat his conditions. Additionally, the mother had a serious mental illness and consistently failed to take her medication and to be treated. In re E. H., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4648, 2006 Ohio 4724, (2006).

Best interest factors favored an award of legal custody to the relatives because the agency presented substantial evidence that it was in the children's best interest based on the fact that the mother had pled guilty to child endangerment and the mother's continued inability to obey the law demonstrated that she was unable to provide the children stability and routine. Further, each of the children has adjusted well to living with the relatives and had shown marked improvement in both their behaviors and academic achievements when placed in a stable environment; the mother had never been able to provide such an environment. In re T. A., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4397, 2006 Ohio 4468, (2006).

Trial court's finding that it was in the children's best interest to grant permanent custody to the agency pursuant to RC § 2151.414, was not against the manifest weight of the evidence because the agency used reasonable efforts to reunify the family and the mother failed to remain drug free, testing positive for marijuana a mere two weeks before the hearing. The evidence also indicated that it was the third removal of the children from mother's home; the children had been in mother's custody for only two of the last 12 years; and the issues which caused the first removal in 1994, remained at the time of the instant permanent custody hearing. In re Hinkley/Altier Children, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3790, 2006 Ohio 3827, (2006).

Record contained some evidence that the children's best interests were served by awarding permanent custody to the agency because of the mother's failure to provide a stable, permanent home for the children, which demonstrated a lack of commitment to her children. Additionally, she gave birth to two additional children during the pendency of the case; she surrendered the three older children to the agency's custody because she could not properly care for them, yet now claimed that she could care for two infants and her three older children. In re Pettiford, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3572, 2006 Ohio 3647, (2006).

Record contained competent, credible evidence to support the trial court's judgment granting permanent custody of the mother's two children to the agency because attempts at reunification with the children had been unsuccessful. The children needed a safe and secure environment, the mother demonstrated an unwillingness to work with professionals in order to provide such an environment for her children, and, although the children may have been bonded with the mother, evidence in the record established that they thrived while in the care of foster parents. In re Jones, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3255, 2006 Ohio 3363, (2006).

Grant of permanent custody of a father's nine-year-old daughter to a children services agency was in the daughter's best interest. The evidence showed that the daughter stated that she wanted to live with her foster parent and that the daughter had not had a stable, permanent home for more than one-half of her life, and the daughter deserved more than to be placed into an environment where there was no guarantee that the parents would be able to properly parent the daughter. In re Gallion, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3095, 2006 Ohio 3204, (2006).

Record supported the trial court's finding that granting permanent custody to the agency was in the child's best interests, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D). The inadequacy of the home and failure of the mother to provide for the basic needs of the child, her failure to maintain stable housing and employment, as well as her repeated failures to commit to the requirements of the case plan all demonstrated that a legally secure placement could only be achieved by granting permanent custody to the agency. In re English, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2952, 2006 Ohio 3067, (2006).

Record supported the trial court's finding that granting permanent custody to the agency was in the children's best interests. The lack of supervision, the inadequacy of the home, and failure of the parents to provide for the basic needs of the children, their failure to maintain stable housing and employment, as well as the parents' repeated failures to commit to the requirements of the case plan all demonstrated that a legally secure placement could only be achieved by granting permanent custody to the agency, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D)(4). In re Shrider, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2641, 2006 Ohio 2792, (2006).

Determination that an award of permanent custody to a family services agency, not the children's paternal grandmother, was in the children's best interests under RC § 2151.414 was proper as the evidence showed that the grandmother had allowed the father to have unauthorized access to the children; that the grandmother had repeatedly characterized the daughter as slow or learning disabled and as a liar who could not be trusted; that, for some time, she had dismissed the daughter's allegations of sexual abuse against the father; and that the daughter had never verbalized any interest in living with, or being visited by, the grandmother. In re McCluskey, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3970, 2006 Ohio 4034, (2006).

Trial court properly concluded that the grant of permanent custody was in the best interests of a mother's children because the evidence showed that the mother had failed to comply with most of her case plan, including the plan's requirements that she complete psychiatric counseling and that she undergo chemical dependency treatment; that the guardian ad litem testified that the mother was unable to provide a stable home for the children, noting that the mother's four boys shared similar stories and had similar violent tendencies; and that the mother had never been observed applying anything that she may have learned in the parenting classes. In re A. T., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3883, 2006 Ohio 3919, (2006).

Trial court's best interest determination pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D)(1)-(5) in a parental rights termination proceeding concerning the father's minor son included findings that the child was removed at birth and seven months later he had a minimal relationship with relatives, the guardian ad litem recommended termination, the foster home that the child had resided in since birth provided him a good home, the mother's other children were not in her custody and two of three had been the subject of involuntary termination proceedings, and the father had criminal violations for non-support and domestic violence; as to RC § 2151.414(E)(7)-(11), the trial court relied on the termination of the mother's parental rights over her other two children and a host of other factors. In re Shifflet, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3521, 2006 Ohio 3576, (2006).

Permanent custody of a mother's three children was properly granted to family services agency as the award was in the children's best interests. Since the children's grandparents had little contact with the children, since the children had been doing well with their foster parents, who wished to adopt them, and since placement with the grandparents would have facilitated the mother and father with continued involvement with the children which could place the children in danger, the trial court did not err in failing to place the children with their grandparents under RC § 2151.412(G). In re Bodenheimer, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3131, 2006 Ohio 3245, (2006).

Trial court's consideration of the factors relevant to its disposition of a child in a parental rights termination proceeding was supported by the evidence pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D) where the child's grandparents were not deemed suitable alternatives to custody with a county agency due to the child's severe medical problems, the fact that the grandparents' habit of smoking would exacerbate the medical issues, as well as the fact that the grandfather had been previously convicted of domestic violence, the grandmother had severe back problems, and they lost their home to a recent bankruptcy. In re Morris, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3122, 2006 Ohio 3231, (2006).

Competent, credible evidence supported a trial court's finding that, by clear and convincing evidence, children could not be placed with their father within a reasonable time and should not be placed with him, under RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(a), because, under RC § 2151.414(E)(4), the father showed a lack of commitment to completing a case plan designed to reunify him with the children because (1) he was unemployed at the time of trial, (2) he did not have adequate housing, (3) his parental education course was cancelled after he missed four sessions, (4) he refused three of four drug tests, and, when he was tested, he tested positive for methamphetamine and marijuana, and (5) he stopped visiting the children due to an outstanding arrest warrant, and, when he was eventually arrested and incarcerated, further visits could not occur. In re R.A.M., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3149, 2006 Ohio 3242, (2006).

Trial court did not err in determining that neither a grandmother nor an aunt were suitable placements for a father's 10 children after it determined that his parental rights were to be terminated, and its award to a county social service agency of permanent custody of the children was proper, as relative placement was given appropriate consideration pursuant to RC §§ 2151.353(A)(3), 2151.414(D), and 2151.412(G), to the extent the latter statute was applicable, and neither relative was suitable based on a variety of considerations and factors, as well as their custodial history with these and other children. In re Hilyard, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1807, 2006 Ohio 1965, (2006).

Child's best interests require permanency and a safe and secure environment. In re T.W., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 5964, 2005 Ohio 6633, (2005).

There was clear and convincing evidence to support the trial court's determination that termination of a mother's parental rights in two minor children, and a grant of permanent custody to a county social service agency, was in the children's best interests pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D), as the mother had not provided appropriate and safe housing, although she completed a parenting class program her skills were not enhanced, she did not meet the children's needs, and it was questionable whether she would have the skills to properly parent the children in the foreseeable future. The mother did not complete the goals of her case plan, and under a best interest analysis, the children were bonded with their foster family and they had gained stability there. In re Rollison, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 6073, 2005 Ohio 6769, (Dec. 19, 2005).

Trial court's finding that the best interests of a father's five children were to grant their permanent custody to a county agency was not against the manifest weight of the evidence, as the children had various psychological and behavioral problems, there were no relatives willing to take placement of them, and the children were properly receiving services for the first time, as they were within the temporary custody of the agency; further, the father was an uninvolved parent. In re Bailey Children, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2783, 2005 Ohio 2981, (2005).

In a termination of parental rights proceeding, a trial court properly found that it was in the best interests of a mother's children to terminate her parental rights based on (1) her lack of cooperation with her treatment plan, (2) her severe substance abuse, (3) her frequent incarcerations, (4) her inability to provide a safe and stable home for the children, (5) her two convictions for endangering one of the children, (6) her current drug trafficking charges, and (7) her domestic violence with her husband. In re Walker, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 5893, 2005 Ohio 6563, (2005).

Custody of the child to the agency was in the child's best interest, pursuant to RC § 2151.414, because, although the cousin was a very giving and caring person, she had too much on her plate and had spread herself too thin already for custody of the child. She also had budgeting issues and was unable to set parameters for the children and to stick to them. In re Woods, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3286, 2005 Ohio 3563, (2005).

Termination of a father's parental rights was in a child's best interest where: (1) the father had made little progress on his case plan, (2) the father could not provide for the child's Attention Deficit/Hyperactivity Disorder, (3) the father's housing might not be suitable for the child, (4) the child was doing well in foster care, (5) the parties agreed that the child should live with another child, who was in foster care, and (6) the father had not visited the child during a six-month period. In re J. O., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2298, 2005 Ohio 2399, (2005).

When considering the placement of a child in the context of a permanent custody proceeding, the mere existence of the child's good relationship with proposed custodians is insufficient, as, overall, the court is concerned with the best interest of the child, not the mere existence of a relationship. In re T.W., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 5964, 2005 Ohio 6633, (2005).

Although a blood relationship and family unity are factors to consider when determining the best interest of a child in a permanent custody proceeding, neither one is controlling. In re T.W., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 5964, 2005 Ohio 6633, (2005).

Trial court's decision, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D), that permanent custody was in the best interest of a mother's four children was supported by competent evidence, in that the children had been in foster care for a long time; the children viewed their foster parents as the parental figures in their lives; while the mother seemed to have a bond with the children, the relationship was observed by caseworkers to be more that of a sibling than of a parent; the children separated easily from the mother when the visits were over; the children needed a secure, permanent placement due to the abuse that they had suffered; the father of two of the children had been found guilty of unlawful sexual conduct with a minor and sexual battery while living with the mother and the children; and the children's guardian ad litem advocated that the motion for permanent custody be granted. In re S.B., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3591, 2005 Ohio 3889, (2005), dismissed by 2005 Ohio 6428, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 5783 (Ohio Ct. App., Butler County Dec. 5, 2005).

In a permanent custody proceeding in which the great-uncle and great-aunt of the subject children sought their custody, the trial court appropriately found, under RC § 2151.414(D), that the children's best interests were served by granting their permanent custody to an agency, with continued placement in the children's foster home. While the great-uncle and great-aunt had a positive bond with the children, they did not believe that the children's parents had harmed them, despite the parents being convicted of child endangerment and attempted murder regarding the children due to the father's physical abuse of them and the mother allowing the father to have access to one of the children after he had abused the other one. In re T.W., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 5964, 2005 Ohio 6633, (2005).

Termination of a mother's parental rights was in the best interests of three children where: (1) the children did not bond with their mother, but had bonded to their foster mother, (2) a child services agency had temporary custody of the children for 16 months of a consecutive 22-month period ending on or after March 18, 1999, (3) the children did not wish to be returned to their mother unless the situation changed drastically, and it had not, (4) the children had emotional difficulties resulting from their mother's relationship with one partner, and (5) the mother had abandoned the children. In re Donell F., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3806, 2005 Ohio 4175, (2005).

Trial court's finding that the best interest of the child was served by granting permanent custody to the agency was not against the manifest weight of the evidence because, as a whole, the evidence indicated that the interaction between the mother and her daughter was traumatic; the daughter was strongly bonded to her foster parents; the mother was not mentally capable of rectifying the problems which led to the daughter's temporary custody with the agency; and the daughter's need for a legally secure permanent placement with a safe, stable home environment could not be achieved without a grant of permanent custody to the agency. In re Unger Children, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2291, 2005 Ohio 2414, (2005).

Trial court's finding that it was in the children's best interests for permanent custody to be granted to the agency was supported by sufficient evidence because the mother had a difficult time supervising the children during visitation and her bond with one child was very strained; that same child refused to attend visits during the last several months and became sullen and withdrawn after visiting with her mother; the mother did not attend the visitation the week of the trial; and the guardian ad litem recommended that the agency's motion for permanent custody be granted. In re Langford, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2196, 2005 Ohio 2304, (2005).

Based upon the evidence and the report of the guardian ad litem, the trial court's decision to grant permanent custody to the agency, pursuant to RC § 2151.414, was supported by clear and convincing evidence and was in the children's best interests. The mother's housing and financial stability were inadequate, she would need assistance in assuming the care of even one child (as she was mildly retarded and the children had psychiatric problems), and there had been incidents of domestic violence with her current husband. In re Jesus, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2152, 2005 Ohio 2266, (2005).

There was clear and convincing evidence that the child could not be reunited with her mother and that it was in the child's best interest to grant permanent custody with the agency and to terminate her parental rights, pursuant to RC § 2151.414. Although the mother completed most of her case plan goals, and had a stable income, she violated the no-contact order by living with her boyfriend (who had gone to prison for molesting one of the mother's other children), which showed that she was not able to put the child's needs above her own desires and the child's safety. In re D. B., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 1972, 2005 Ohio 2016, (2005).

Clear and convincing evidence supported the conclusion that an award of permanent custody to the agency was in the best interest of the children. Pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D), the trial court determined that the mother could not properly deal with her children's behavioral problems; the children had been removed from her care on numerous occasions; she had physically abused them; none of the relatives who filed motions for legal custody had any cognizable right to associate with them, stood in loco parentis to the children, or expressed any interest in them; and none of the other relatives were a suitable placement. In re Nicholas A., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2028, 2005 Ohio 2104, (2005).

Trial court clearly had an adequate basis to find that it was in the child's best interests, under RC § 2151.414(D), to be placed in the legal custody of her aunt and uncle, pursuant to RC § 2151.415(A)(3). The child was removed when she was five months old upon discovery of physical injuries, she had lived outside her mother's home for 18 months, the guardian ad litem strongly recommended legal custody be granted to the relatives, the father was incarcerated and the mother failed to remedy the conditions that resulted in the child being removed from the home, the mother had unresolved issues concerning her impulse control and self-esteem, and the mother had not ended her relationship with the boyfriend who was suspected of physically abusing the child, despite a court order. In re Starks, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 1824, 2005 Ohio 1912, (2005).

Trial court properly found that permanent custody with the agency was in the child's best interest, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D), because the evidence indicated that she had been in the custody of the agency since her birth, had never lived with her mother, and that her relationship with her mother was "nonexistent." In contrast, the guardian ad litem testified that the child was in an adoptive home and bonded to her foster family. In re D.W., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 1793, 2005 Ohio 1867, (2005).

Best interest factors clearly weighed in favor of permanent custody to the agency because the mother had minimal interaction with the child, he had never met his siblings, and the only family he had ever known was his foster family. Also, the mother had little contact with the child, did essentially nothing to work toward reunification, and admittedly had a serious problem with cocaine addiction, yet she did not take even the first step toward resolving that problem. In re B. C. M., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 1735, 2005 Ohio 1818, (2005).

There was ample evidence before the trial court from which it could reasonably have concluded that permanent custody was in the best interests of the children, pursuant to RC § 2151.414. The evidence demonstrated that, while the children were living with the mother, their needs, especially their medical needs, were not being met and the agency had received 49 referrals on the family, involving allegations that the mother had left her children with inappropriate caregivers, that she failed to return home or to pick up her children when she was expected, and there were also concerns of alcohol usage by the mother. In re A. B., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 1244, 2005 Ohio 1273, (2005).

Permanent custody of the 11-month-old twins was in the best interests of the children because there was no error in the trial court's finding that, following physical abuse, the children needed a permanent, stable home and that granting permanent custody to the agency would facilitate that need. The children's wishes were also noted, as expressed through their guardian ad litem. In re Mark B., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 1209, 2005 Ohio 1220, (2005).

Determination that it was in the best interest of the children to be permanently placed in the custody of the agency was supported by clear and convincing evidence. Both the amended magistrate's decision and the trial court's judgment entry stated that the factors contained in RC § 2151.414(D) were considered, and that the best interest of the children would be served by a grant of permanent custody to the agency. In re Bentley, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 1195, 2005 Ohio 1257, (2005).

Termination of a father's parental rights and an award of permanent custody to the Franklin County Children's Services were in the best interest of a child as permanent custody was the only available avenue for the child to have a secure and permanent placement; the child's respite care provider showed an interest in adopting her and would provide a secure home. In re M.B., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 987, 2005 Ohio 986, (2005).

After making the finding that the children had been in the temporary custody of the agency for 12 months of a 22-month period, the trial court determined permanent custody to the agency was in the best interest of the children by considering all the relevant factors listed in RC § 2151.414(D); specifically, the trial court found that the children had had no contact with any paternal relatives, the father's sister did not have the ability to provide care for the children, and the father's repeated incarceration precluded him from providing care for his child. In re Davis, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 357, 2005 Ohio 411, (2005).

Trial court had competent, credible evidence before it that granting permanent custody to the agency was in the children's best interests because the mother did not believe her son's allegations of sexual abuse by her boyfriend, she married the boyfriend soon after the allegations were made, and she had other children removed from her custody due to similar allegations. In re Moore, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 100, 2005 Ohio 136, (2005).

Trial court erred in terminating a father's parental rights as it failed to make findings showing it considered all the factors of RC § 2151.414 in determining the best interest of the child. In re Cravens, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2109, 2004 Ohio 2356, (2004).

Trial court properly determined by clear and convincing evidence that termination of the parents' parental rights and permanent custody with a county agency was in the two minor children's best interest, as the evidence showed that children could not be placed with either of the parents within a reasonable time or that such placement was in the children's best interests. In re Hollon, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2508, 2004 Ohio 2866, (2004).

Where the grandmother, who took care of the children, was no longer willing or able to take care of them, the children's mother was deceased, and the children's fathers had not been involved in their lives, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in finding, pursuant to RC § 2151.414, that it was in the children's best interest to be placed in the permanent custody of the Montgomery County Children Services Board; on remand in the case, the trial court did as instructed by the appellate court when the trial court considered the Board's motion for permanent custody in accordance with RC § 2151.353. In re Muldrew, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1781, 2004 Ohio 2044, (2004).

Where an older child expressed a desire to stay with her foster parents, both children were developmentally behind at the time of removal, one child had behavioral problems and was behind in school as well as her immunization, the younger child was not walking or talking at the time of removal, and both children had made significant advances on those issues at the time of the hearing, the trial court properly found that, based on the best interests of the children, they were in need of a legally secure permanent placement. In re Paris, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1707, 2004 Ohio 1962, (2004).

Grant of permanent custody to a Children Services Board was in the best interest of the children, as the mother's parental rights to her two other children previously had been terminated under RC §§ 2151.353, 2151.414, or 2151.415, and evidence supported the trial court's findings under the RC § 2151.414(D)(1)-(5) factors, as the mother's interactions with her children were poor and had not progressed, she resisted treatment of her borderline personality disorder and continued to abuse crack cocaine, the older child had bonded with the foster family, the children had been in the Board's custody significant portions of their lives and needed a secure placement. In re J.G., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2237, 2004 Ohio 2513, (2004).

Although a mother visited her child regularly, the best interests of the child required the termination of the mother's parental rights pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D)(1)-(4) and the grant of permanent custody to Lorain County Children's Services as a result of the mother's failure to comply with most of the case plan set out for her by not showing any improvement in her parenting skills, failing to establish an emotional connection with the child, the child's increased aggressive behavior toward the mother, and the mother's failure to attend to her mental health issues. In re V.Y., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1442, 2004 Ohio 1606, (2004).

Trial court did not err in finding that it was in the best interest of the children pursuant to RC § 2151.414 to grant permanent custody where the stepfather, in part, was moderately mentally retarded and the stepfather's coping style led to ineffective parenting; the children had special needs and required a structured environment that the stepfather and mother could not provide, and the children thrived in foster care. In re Caine, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2035, 2004 Ohio 2270, (2004).

It was in the children's best interest for permanent custody to be granted to the agency because, although the parents loved their children, the evidence indicated that they did not interact appropriately with them, had a very difficult time controlling all five of their children at the same time, had a pattern of poor supervision, a lack of discipline, and a difficult time following through with any discipline strategies they were taught, and when the children returned to foster care after the failed attempt at reunification, they showed signs of neglect; further, the parents had been noncompliant when it came to doing what was required to meet the children's basic needs. In re Myers, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 637, 2004 Ohio 657, (2004).

Order terminating a mother's parental rights and awarding permanent custody of her child to a children services board was reversed where the trial court made no findings as to whether the custody award was in the best interests of the child. In re M.B., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 564, 2004 Ohio 597, (2004).

Testimony from a caseworker from the Department of Children and Families stating that the father had no contact with the Department regarding his children, provided them no care, custody, control, or involvement in the 18 months preceding the best interest hearing, when coupled with an indirect expression from the children that they supported an award of permanent custody to the Department as such would be in their best interest, supported the trial court's best interest finding. In re Foresha/Kinkel Children, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 547, 2004 Ohio 578, (2004).

Competent, credible evidence of the strength of the child's bond to his foster parents and siblings and the limited interaction between father and son supported the conclusion that permanent custody with foster parents was in the child's best interest. In re Wright, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 960, 2004 Ohio 1094, (2004).

There was sufficient evidence for the trial court to conclude that permanent custody of the children served their best interest because there was no evidence to indicate the mother had any ability to parent the children now or in the future; both children could not and should not be placed with the mother within a reasonable time; despite diligent reasonable efforts by the agency to remedy the problems which caused removal of the children, the mother failed continually and repeatedly for a period of six months or more to substantially remedy the conditions causing their removal; and the mother demonstrated a lack of commitment towards the children and had failed to provide an adequate home for them. In re Hutzel, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 3942, 2004 Ohio 4337, (2004).

Award of permanent custody to the agency was proper as the testimony showed by clear and convincing evidence that it was in the best interests of the children to have them permanently removed from the mother because the children had been abandoned and had been in foster care for 18 consecutive months prior to the permanent custody hearing. The juvenile court also properly considered the interrelationship of the children with the mother; the mother's relationship with her abusive husband, as well as the effect that relationship had on the children; the wishes of the children; the children's history, noting the mother's past relationships with men who had abused the children; the children's need for legal security, noting the children had great potential and were very adoptable, as well as that they needed and deserved a stable future; and the mother's inability to provide that type of stability. In re Morgan, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 3653, 2004 Ohio 4018, (2004).

Mother's great aunt was found not to be a suitable placement for infant child instead of the agency in a termination of parental rights case, even though the great aunt was a licensed foster parent because the child had been injured (a scalding accident) while the mother and child stayed in her home and because the great aunt had not exercised the visitation to which she was entitled; the child was also doing well with the child's current foster parents. In re Nelson, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 242, 2004 Ohio 268, (2004).

Order terminating a father's parental rights was upheld because the father admitted an inability to handle the children and that they were doing better in foster care; it took the father, who was schizophrenic and an admitted alcoholic, nearly two years to begin the individual counseling ordered in the original case plan. Hence, termination of parental rights was in the best interest of the children pursuant to RC § 2151.414(B)(1). In re Bradley John B., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1175, 2004 Ohio 1328, (2004).

Since the evidence showed that the minor son had been in the custody of the county family welfare agency for 12 or more months of a consecutive 22-month period ending on or after March 18, 1999, and because it showed that the best interest of the child dictated a legally secure permanent placement away from the mother, the trial court did not err in terminating her parental rights in the minor son. In re Krems, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2584, 2004 Ohio 2449, (2004).

Where a trial court found that the child's mother had abandoned her, and that it was in the child's best interests to grant permanent custody to an agency due to the father's drug use and failure to complete his case plan, it properly granted permanent custody of the child to the agency. In re Strychalski, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1364, 2004 Ohio 1542, (2004).

Evidence that (1) a child had little bonding with his mother, (2) his father failed to have any contact with him for his first 19 months, (3) the guardian ad litem believed it was in the child's best interest to grant permanent custody to a children's services agency, (4) the child had been in the custody of a foster family since birth and had bonded with them, and (5) the mother failed to comply with a case plan and failed to show she had quit using illegal drugs was sufficient to show that granting the agency permanent custody was in the child's best interest under RC § 2151.414(D). In re Davis, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 3670 (2004), appeal denied by 103 Ohio St. 3d 1496, 2004 Ohio 5605, 816 N.E.2d 1081, 2004 Ohio LEXIS 2586 (2004).

Evidence that (1) children's behavioral problems and developmental delays improved greatly after their being placed in foster care, (2) the foster parents addressed the children's medical problems which the parents had failed to treat, and (3) the parents had limited intelligence and an improvement in their mental health conditions would take intensive treatment for at least one year supported an award of permanent custody to a child protection agency. In re Kitana, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 3612, 2004 Ohio 3963, (2004).

Trial court properly entered a judgment that terminated the mother's parental rights in her minor son, as the trial court followed the proper procedure in doing so by scheduling a hearing and providing notice to interested parties, and as the evidence produced at that hearing showed that termination was in the best interest of the child since the best interest of the minor son dictated a legally secure permanent placement away from the mother, and as the minor son had been in the temporary custody of the county family welfare agency for more than 12 months of a consecutive 22-month period. In re Krems, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2250, 2004 Ohio 2446, (2004).

Where a mother was unable to provide her children with the basic necessities of medical care, food, clothing, and a stable home and failed to follow through with a case plan, the trial court did not err in granting permanent custody of the children to a county agency. In re Brock, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4964, 2003 Ohio 5543, (2003).

Evidence that a mother failed to cooperate in family counseling, refused to address the sex abuse of her two boys by their older brother, and failed to recognize the boys' special needs, was sufficient to show that the boys could not be reunited with their mother in a reasonable period of time. In re M.H., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 6445, 2003 Ohio 7053, (2003).

Trial court properly terminated a mother's parental rights because the record, which included the mother's repeated failures properly to care for the children and the fact that a grandmother's home was not a viable place for the children, supported the finding that termination was in the children's best interest. In re Schueler, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3127, 2003 Ohio 3443, (2003).

Trial court's findings concerning best interests and its decision to grant permanent custody to the agency was not against the manifest weight of the evidence as the older child became upset after visits with her mother, the younger child was disengaged and had little attachment with her mother, the children were bonded with their foster parents, and the older child indicated that she did not want to return to the mother's custody. In re Utt Children, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4063, 2003 Ohio 4576, (2003).

Evidence that the parent had not taken the actions necessary to regain her children, who were flourishing in foster care, and had failed to challenge the trial court's findings supported trial court's award of permanent custody to a department of job and family services. In re Robinson, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4954, 2003 Ohio 5528, (2003).

Award of the permanent custody of children to the county and termination of the parents' rights were affirmed where the mother failed to show that she remedied the conditions that resulted in the children's removal under RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d) and the manifest weight and sufficiency of the evidence supported the decision. In re Conn, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4804, 2003 Ohio 5344, (2003).

There was sufficient evidence in the record to support the trial court's determination to terminate a mother's parental rights in her minor child, and the evidence was clear and convincing that such action was in the child's best interests pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D) and (E); the child had been removed from the mother's home and placed in the custody of the agency for over two years, the mother had mental illnesses, had exhibited little affection for the child, the child had bonded with her foster family, and the mother was uncooperative during the parenting program. In re R.K., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5675, 2003 Ohio 6333, (2003).

Four of five of the relevant best-interest-of-the-children factors supported the trial court's finding that terminating the mother's parental rights in her older child and her twin children was in their best interests, and, thus, the trial court did not err in finding that clear and convincing evidence existed to support the finding that granting permanent custody of those children to the county welfare agency was proper. In re C.H., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 6190, 2003 Ohio 6854, (2003).

Determination that it was in the child's best interest to grant the agency permanent custody was supported by competent, credible evidence; the father failed to utilize many of the services the agency made available to him, he was tardy in initiating the process for making the court-ordered child support payments, he did not make his first payment until after the agency initiated permanent custody proceedings, and, finally, he was informed that if he did not successfully and timely complete the objectives in the case plan, his parental rights could be terminated. In re Salsgiver, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5708, 2003 Ohio 6420, (2003).

Findings that the mother's children could not or should not be placed with her within a reasonable time and that the grant of permanent custody to the State was in the children's best interest were proper and well supported; the children had been in state care for 12 or more of the past consecutive 22 months, the mother was often in jail, the paternal grandparents were interested in adopting the two younger children and those children were doing well under their care and re-integration with the mother was likely to cause the older child increased emotional stress. In re Hull, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5705, 2003 Ohio 6352, (2003).

Trial court may grant permanent custody to a social services agency if a hearing is held and it is shown by clear and convincing evidence that it is in the best interest of the child to grant such custody, and if any of the factors of RC § 2151.414(B)(1) have been met; further, the trial court must assess the factors of RC

Trial court can only grant permanent custody of a minor child to a social service agency upon initially determining that one of four conditions of RC § 2151.414(B)(1) exists, and then upon a determination by clear and convincing evidence that it is in the best interests of the child to make such a permanent custody award; clear and convincing evidence is an intermediate standard of proof, being more than a mere preponderance but not to the extent of such certainty as is required beyond a reasonable doubt, nor does it mean clear and unequivocal. In re R.K., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5675, 2003 Ohio 6333, (2003).

Trial court acted properly after evidence that the children had been sexually and physically abused and the mother continued to put them in situations where they could be harmed demonstrated that transferring permanent custody to the county department of job and family services was in the best interest of the child. In re Tiffany Y., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5564, 2003 Ohio 6203, (2003).

Grant of permanent custody to the family services department was proper where the department had had custody of the child for nearly 25 months at the time of the hearing, the child had had no interaction with his parents since his removal, the guardian ad litem recommended the custody, and the father was convicted of rape and sexual battery against another child. In re Goff, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5444, 2003 Ohio 6089, (2003).

In granting custody to the child's maternal great grandmother, the trial court used the RC § 2151.414(D) factors properly to determine that the grant of custody was in the child's best interest; the great grandmother provided a stable home, the child was doing well in the placement, and the great grandmother intended to allow the child and the former primary caregiver to maintain a relationship. In re Rowe, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5403, 2003 Ohio 6062, (2003).

Termination of parental rights was in the best interest of the children because both parents failed to remedy the problems that initially caused the children to be removed from the home, including the lack of stable housing and the mother's disobedience of an order not to contact the father, who had a history of domestic violence. In re Blunt, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5028, 2003 Ohio 5646, (2003).

There was some competent, credible evidence that granting permanent custody to the agency was in the children's best interests as the mother's history of placing her children in harm's way outweighed her minimal, tardy efforts to comply with the case plan. In re West, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5650, 2003 Ohio 6299, (2003).

Termination of the mother's parental rights was in the best interest of the child because the mother had difficulty bonding with the child, refused to talk with her during visitation, could only concentrate on one child at a time, and refused to continue to feed her after the child spit up on her; the evidence reflected that the child needed a legally-secure placement. In re Estep, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4565, 2003 Ohio 5084, (2003).

Order terminating a mother's parental rights was reversed because the trial court failed to consider the factors enumerated in RC § 2151.414(D) in deciding that placing the child in the permanent custody of a county child services board was in the child's best interest. In re C. M., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4553, 2003 Ohio 5040, (2003).

Trial court did not err under RC § 2151.414(D) in finding that it was in the children's best interests to place them in the agency's permanent custody; the mother showed little progress on any of the goals in her case plan, the children had been residing outside of the mother's house for large portions of their lives and the children bonded with the foster parent. In re J. B., — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4310, 2003 Ohio 4786, (Sept. 10, 2003).

Where a mother's immaturity and failure to cooperate made it difficult to provide for a child's needs and the child could not be returned to the mother within a reasonable time, pursuant to the factors of RC § 2151.414(D), permanent custody with a county children's services agency was in the child's best interest. In re Duvall, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3816, 2003 Ohio 4313, (2003).

With respect to termination of parental rights, if a juvenile court determines that one of the four circumstances listed in RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(a)-(d) is present, then the juvenile court must proceed to the second prong of the analysis regarding the child's best interests. In re Meyer, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4090, 2003 Ohio 4605, (2003), appeal dismissed by 2004 Ohio 1724, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1535 (Ohio Ct. App., Ashtabula County Jan. 30, 2004), criticized by In re S.B., 2005 Ohio 3163, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2941 (Ohio Ct. App., Cuyahoga County June 23, 2005).

There was sufficient evidence to support the trial court's finding that it was in the children's best interests pursuant to RC § 2151.414 that the mother's parental rights were terminated, as the children had special needs, the mother was a drug addict and had an unstable lifestyle, the children were in need of a secure placement, and the children had bonded with their foster family. In re Marlow, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3976, 2003 Ohio 4456, (2003).

Awarding permanent custody to the father was in the child's best interest, and the benefits of stability and permanence significantly outweighed the potential harm of severing the bond with the biological parents, who had inherent intellectual, attitudinal, and psychological limitations that rendered reunification efforts meaningless. In re Matuszczak, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 2609, 2003 Ohio 2892, (2003).

Pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D)(1), one of the factors that the trial court must consider in determining whether permanent custody is in the child's best interest is the child's interaction with his parents and other caregivers; in an action adjudicating a minor child to be dependent, because the minor's mother ignored recommendations of caseworkers, and failed to complete a reunification plan, family court found permanent county custody was in the child's best interest. In re Beasley, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 2557, 2003 Ohio 2857, (2003).

A parent's opinion that she is a good parent and does not need to cooperate in remedying numerous parenting deficiencies is not sufficient to preclude a grant of permanent custody under RC § 2151.414 where it is clearly in the child's best interests. The court is not required to provide findings of fact and conclusion of law unless requested. In re Eppinger, 1994 Ohio App. LEXIS 681 (8th Dist. 1994).

An otherwise "fit" parent may be found unsuitable when an award of custody to the parent would be detrimental to the child. In re Higby, 81 Ohio App. 3d 466, 611 N.E.2d 403 (1992).

Burden of proof

A state seeking permanent custody must prove its allegations by clear and convincing evidence. It is not incumbent on an objecting parent to prove anything. In re Mesko, 1997 Ohio App. LEXIS 1645 (7th Dist. 1997).

Case plan, generally

Court rejected the mother's contention that a county children services agency failed in its obligation to provide child visitation. While the caseworker conceded that she failed to provide visitation as required by the case plan approved by the trial court, the caseworker's lack of diligence in implementing the case plan did not constitute reversible error because permanent custody proceedings had already been implemented at the time that the mother finally contacted the caseworker and because, despite the caseworker's efforts to contact the mother, she did not know the mother's whereabouts prior to the time that the mother contacted her. In re V.H., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 488, 2006 Ohio 532, (2006).

Upon a permanent custody petition, clear and convincing evidence supported the finding that the father failed to remedy the conditions that caused the younger child's removal because, although the father completed one case plan, he failed to successfully complete the subsequent case plan; further, the record supported the conclusion that the successful completion of the case plan, in 2002, did not remedy the problems that caused the child to be removed in 2003. In re Miller, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 875, 2005 Ohio 856, (2005).

Parent's compliance with the case plan is only one element to be considered by a trial court in considering the best interests of the children in a termination of parental rights proceeding pursuant to RC § 2151.414(E). In re Conn, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4804, 2003 Ohio 5344, (2003).

Any failure to inform a parent at the initial shelter-care hearing of the possible consequences of failing to conform to the case plan was cured well before his parental rights were terminated: In re Moore, 153 Ohio App. 3d 641, 795 N.E.2d 149, 2003 Ohio 4250, (2003).

Child's right to counsel

In proceedings that granted a motion filed by a county children's services agency for permanent custody of a mother's three children under RC § 2151.414(B)(1), a trial court did not err in failing to appoint an attorney for each child. The appointment of separate attorneys was required only when a conflict existed between the role of a guardian ad litem and that of an attorney under Ohio R. Juv. P. 4(C)(2), and no evidence was presented to show that a conflict existed between the performance of the children's attorney as their appointed counsel under RC § 2151.352 and her role as their guardian ad litem. In re Parks, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5836, 2006 Ohio 5891, (2006).

Trial court did not err by not appointing, pursuant to Ohio R. Juv. P. 4(C)(2), a separate attorney and a separate guardian ad litem to represent a mother's child in a permanent custody proceeding because there was no evidence that a conflict existed between the attorney's performance as the children's guardian ad litem and as their attorney. In re Parks, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5835, 2006 Ohio 5890, (2006).

Trial court did not err by not appointing, pursuant to Ohio R. Juv. P. 4(C)(2), a separate attorney and a separate guardian ad litem to represent a mother's child in a permanent custody proceeding because there was no evidence that a conflict existed between the attorney's performance as the children's guardian ad litem and as their attorney. In re Elder, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5834, 2006 Ohio 5889, (2006).

Trial court did not err in appointing the guardian ad litem (GAL) to serve in a dual capacity as GAL and as legal counsel for the children in a permanent custody proceeding instead of appointing an independent attorney to represent the children. Neither the trial court nor the parties identified a conflict with the dual representation, and the court could discern no conflict. In re B.K., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4359, 2006 Ohio 4424, (2006).

Trial court did not err in not appointing an attorney to represent a mother's children in a permanent custody proceeding since the statements by the two older children that they loved their mother and missed her did not constitute evidence that they had an affirmative desire to live with their mother on a permanent basis that was in conflict with their guardian ad litem's recommendation that permanent custody be granted to the agency. Moreover, the second oldest son lacked maturity to understand the proceedings. In re A. T., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3883, 2006 Ohio 3919, (2006).

Trial court erred by failing to appoint the child's guardian ad litem to act as her attorney and did not make any determination as to whether the child possessed the competency and maturity to express her own wishes. However, the error did not require reversal because the child's wishes were evidenced by the guardian ad litem's report and witness testimony and were consistent with the guardian ad litem's recommendation. In re Kangas, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3380, 2006 Ohio 3433, (2006).

In a permanent custody hearing, a magistrate adequately considered the issue of whether independent counsel should be appointed for a mother's children and properly found such counsel was not required because the children made conflicting statements about whether or not they wanted to live with their mother. In re Graham, 167 Ohio App. 3d 284, 854 N.E.2d 1126, 2006 Ohio 3170, (2006).

Under the circumstances, appointment of counsel for the children in the permanent custody proceeding was not required because the children lacked the necessary maturity to give any credible testimony to the court about their wishes with regard to custody. In re Shrider, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2641, 2006 Ohio 2792, (2006).

Trial court erred by failing to appoint counsel after a possible conflict became known between the child's wishes and the recommendation of the guardian ad litem during the permanent custody hearing and thus, the child was entitled to counsel pursuant to RC § 2151.352, as clarified by Ohio R. Juv. P. 4(A) and Ohio R. Juv. P. 2(Y). An attorney would have been required to provide zealous representation for his client and make every legitimate effort to secure an order allowing the child to have continued contact with her father, which the guardian ad litem could not do and remain consistent with his recommendation. In re H.R., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1472, 2006 Ohio 1595, (2006).

Trial court did not commit plain error in failing to appoint independent counsel for the children because the record did not disclose any conflict between the wishes of the children and the recommendations of the guardian ad litem. In re Reardon Children, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 567, 2006 Ohio 629, (2006).

Without any evidence of the children's wishes before it (in the permanent custody hearing pursuant to RC § 2151.414), the trial court did not make, and could not have made, the meaningful determination required as to whether the children needed separate counsel, pursuant to RC § 2151.352, as clarified by Ohio R. Juv. P. 4(A) and Ohio R. Juv. P. 2(Y). The guardian ad litem's report, which was filed during the hearing, did not take a position on what the best interest of the children was. In re T.V., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3884, 2005 Ohio 4280, (2005).

Pursuant to RC § 2151.352, as clarified by JuvR 4(A) and JuvR 2(Y), a child who is the subject of a juvenile court proceeding to terminate parental rights is a party to that proceeding and, therefore, is entitled to independent counsel in certain circumstances: In re Williams, 101 Ohio St. 3d 398, 805 N.E.2d 1110, 2004 Ohio 1500, (2004).

Community control conditions

Where the offender was convicted of felonious assault against her children, a condition of community control that she not have any contact with those children was reasonably related to the crimes for which she was convicted and to her rehabilitation: State v. McClure, 159 Ohio App. 3d 710, 825 N.E.2d 217, 2005 Ohio 777, (2005).

Contagious disease of parent

Where a mother contracted a contagious disease, a county agency properly temporarily terminated her visitation with the children, pending an indication that she had taken the necessary medication in order to not expose the children to the disease; although the agency erred in terminating phone contact between the mother and her children pending her submission to a drug screening, as that was a substantive change that required modification of the case plan, pursuant to RC § 2151.412(E)(2), such did not require reversal of the trial court's grant of permanent custody to the agency pursuant to RC § 2151.414(C), as reasonable efforts at reunification had been made under RC § 2151.419(A)(1) and evidence supported the trial court's decision. In re Townsend, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2355, 2005 Ohio 2473, (2005).

Continuance

In a termination of parental rights proceeding, the trial court did not err in denying the father's request for an extension of time to attempt to regain custody of the child because, at the time that the adjudicatory hearing was scheduled in the matter, the father agreed to immediately proceed to the dispositional hearing following adjudication. Further, the father's testimony during the adjudication hearing showed that, even if the trial court had granted his request for a continuance, the father would not have cooperated with the family services agency, in that the father asserted that he had a God-given right to permanent custody of his child and that the agency had no reason to ask him to fulfill certain requirements to gain custody of his child. In re Weaver, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5665, 2006 Ohio 5677, (2006).

Mother's prior failures to appear at court hearings and the fact that she was represented by counsel compelled the conclusion that the trial court did not err in denying the mother's motions for a continuance of a permanent custody hearing under Ohio R. Juv. P. 23. In re Distafano, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4347, 2006 Ohio 4430, (2006).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying the mother's request for a continuance for the permanent custody hearing because the mother called the court but gave multiple excuses as to why she could not attend. Additionally, the mother had failed to attend the previous three review hearings and her attorney had not spoken to her for four months. In re Brown, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3892, 2006 Ohio 3933, (2006).

Trial court did not err in denying a mother's motion for a continuance of a permanent custody hearing because one continuance had already been granted at the mother's request, the attorney had three months to consult with the imprisoned mother, and there is no requirement in RC § 2151.414 that a court appointed special advocate be present at the hearing. In re Hickman, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2784, 2006 Ohio 2867, (2006).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying a mother's motion for continuance of a permanent custody hearing in order to allow home studies to be completed on the child's maternal aunt and maternal grandmother because no interested persons had filed a motion seeking custody of the child, as outlined in RC § 2151.353(A)(3); the agency had previously investigated the grandmother as a proposed custody for two of the child's siblings and had denied the request for custody due to an inappropriate person living in the grandmother's house; and the aunt also had been investigated but had failed to attend a course to deal with the child's health issues and had failed to document that the housing authority had given its consent to allow the child to live with the aunt in her apartment, as requested by the child services agency. In re Fortson, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1362, 2006 Ohio 1501, (2006).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in overruling a motion for a continuance of a termination of a mother's parental rights hearing filed by the mother's attorney because there was no evidence that the mother was unavoidably absent from the hearing. In re Laigle Children, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 756, 2006 Ohio 829, (2006).

Trial court acted within its discretion to deny the continuance as the mother failed to establish that her absence at the hearing was unavoidable. Merely claiming to be tired, weak, or nervous, without further evidence, did not justify continuing a trial scheduled months in advance. In re Kangas, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3380, 2006 Ohio 3433, (2006).

There was no abuse of discretion in a trial court's refusal to grant continuances in a parental rights termination proceeding, as the father had "adopted" the child and had not opposed the trial court's proceeding in the matter despite an issue having been raised as to the true identity of the child's biological father, and accordingly, he could not show prejudice or raise the issue for argument on appeal. Denial of a continuance based on an alleged conflict of interest by his attorney was also proper, as the fact that the attorney also represented the mother's sister, from whom the father had stolen a vehicle and who did not like the father, did not create a conflict and there was no prejudice where the sister did not testify at the parental rights termination hearing. In re S.R., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2108, 2006 Ohio 2273, (2006).

Trial court's refusal to stay the proceedings despite the absence of the grandparents was proper where their presence or absence would not have affected the trial court's termination of a father's parental rights to his child; the grandparents' inclusion in the proceedings would have been inconsequential. In re Goff, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5442, 2003 Ohio 6087, (2003).

Where the guardian ad litem appointed for a parent who fled to China with a child was also an attorney, the court did not err by terminating parental rights without granting a continuance so that new counsel could be appointed for the parent to replace counsel who withdrew due to lack of communication with the parent: In re Zhang, 135 Ohio App. 3d 350, 734 N.E.2d 379 (1999).

Death of child

Court of common pleas, juvenile division, erred when it determined that the court lacked jurisdiction to adjudicate the issue of abuse when the child was deceased; the technicality of death did not rob children of statutory protection as the statutory protections afforded siblings extended to afterborn children. In re Darling, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 6640, 2003 Ohio 7184, (2003).

Dependency determination

Trial court improperly awarded permanent custody (RC § 2151.414 and RC § 2151.353) to the agency without first adjudicating the child dependent. The evidence introduced at the temporary emergency custody hearing did not support a dependency determination and no subsequent hearing was held to determine dependency. In re Nibert, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2641, 2005 Ohio 2797, (2005).

Disability of child

Trial court's determination that it was in the best interest of a child to grant permanent custody to a family services department was not against the manifest weight of the evidence as the evidence showed that the child's mother was unable to handle the child's special medical conditions, that the child's foster family wished to adopt the child, and that the child was doing well with her foster family. In re Mastache, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6853, 2006 Ohio 6937, (2006).

While it was clear that a mother loved her son, it was in the son's best interest that the family services agency be granted permanent custody. The son had been somewhat abandoned by his mother during visitation after the birth of his sister, the son suffered from several developmental problems requiring a great deal of care and therapy, the son was bonded with his foster parents, and the mother had never demonstrated an ability to adequately care for the son. In re C.E., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4747, 2006 Ohio 4827, (2006).

Trial court's decision to terminate a mother's parental rights and to place the child in the permanent custody of a county agency was supported by the weight and sufficiency of the evidence and suited the child's best interest pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D), as the child was severely physically disabled, he was in a foster home that provided extensive therapy and medical care and was willing to have him as long as necessary, and the mother's contact with the child was sporadic and was a struggle for her. Placement in a planned permanent living arrangement under RC § 2151.353(A)(J) was properly denied, as there was no evidence that the child could not reside in a family-like setting. In re Wilson, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 5594, 2005 Ohio 6203, (2005).

Clear and convincing evidence, under RC § 2151.414(D), showed it was in the best interest of a child with special medical needs to grant her permanent custody to an agency because (1) she interacted well with her foster parents, with whom she was bonded, (2) they provided for her special needs, and (3) she had improved both mentally and physically since being in the agency's temporary custody. In re Barnes, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 6190, 2005 Ohio 6862, (2005).

Clear and convincing evidence supported a trial court's findings that a child who had special medical needs could not be returned to her minor mother within a reasonable time and should not be placed with either parent, under RC § 2151.414(B), because the minor mother was unable to address her own psychological needs, let alone the needs of a child with serious medical problems. In re Barnes, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 6190, 2005 Ohio 6862, (2005).

There was clear and convincing evidence to support a trial court's determination that a child, who suffered from Down's Syndrome and who had multiple medical problems which required specialized knowledge from a caretaker, should be placed in a planned permanent living arrangement, as he was unable to function in a family-like setting, it would be very difficult to find an adoptive placement, the foster family where he presently was placed was working out well but they had not decided about adoption due to the father's deployment in the military, and it was in the child's best interest, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D), to order such an arrangement. Miller v. Green County Children's Servs. Bd., 162 Ohio App. 3d 416, 833 N.E.2d 805, 2005 Ohio 4035, (2005).

Where a child who suffered from severe behavioral disorders that his parents could not control had been in a child service board's (CSB) temporary custody for almost three years at the time of the hearing on its motion for permanent custody, the trial court's finding that it was in the child's best interest to be in the CSB's permanent custody was not against the manifest weight of evidence; the remote possibility that a relative might have been found with whom the child could be placed did not cause this factor to outweigh the other factors that the trial court considered. In re C.W., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1778, 2004 Ohio 2040, (2004).

Termination of a parent's rights is proper where a child has ongoing special needs and the parent has failed to demonstrate a commitment to rearing the child or to learning the skills necessary to meet the special needs. In re Wise, 96 Ohio App. 3d 619, 645 N.E.2d 812 (1994).

Discovery

Full discovery is necessary to meet the "best interests of the child" standard in matters involving children. The restrictive nature of JuvR 24 does not obviate the necessity or right of liberal discovery in permanent custody cases. RC § 5153.17 does not preclude discovery in such a case. Parties have a right to access and copy original children services agency documents, rather than a computer disc containing the documents. In re Jeter, 118 Ohio Misc. 2d 101, 769 N.E.2d 911, 2001 Ohio 4362, (2001).

Due process

Multiple failures by both appointed counsel, and the trial court, led to a complete denial of the mother's right to counsel and related due process rights during her permanent custody hearing. The mother had a right to be present or participate at the hearing and the trial court had a duty to read the mother's rights to her on the record, and to obtain a knowing waiver of those rights. At the time of the hearing, counsel had not spoken to the mother in eight months, counsel failed to attend review hearings, failed to participate in discovery, failed to challenge hearsay evidence, and failed to cross-examine effectively the State's witnesses. In re Roque, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6961, 2006 Ohio 7007, (2006).

Under the circumstances, the trial court violated the mother's due process rights where it refused to allow witnesses proffered by the mother to testify at the permanent custody hearing on the basis that they had not filed a motion for custody. In re Beatty, 167 Ohio App. 3d 730, 856 N.E.2d 1042, 2006 Ohio 3698, (2006), appeal dismissed for want of debatable question by 113 Ohio St. 3d 1207, 2007 Ohio 860, 862 N.E.2d 839, 2007 Ohio LEXIS 507 (2007).

Courts must carefully avoid circumventing the fundamentally important adjudicatory stage when terminating parental rights because omitting the adjudicatory hearing from the process is a substantial deprivation of a parent's due process rights and renders the process fundamentally unfair. The adjudicatory stage requires stringent application of the Ohio Rules of Evidence and forbids any consideration of the child's best interests. In re Nibert, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2641, 2005 Ohio 2797, (2005).

Evidence generally

Any error committed by admitting the psychologist's report constituted harmless error because the evidence supported the trial court's decision to award the agency permanent custody even without the report since the trial court cited both RC § 2151.414(E)(1) and (E)(2) in determining that the children could not or should not be placed with either parent and the psychological report was relevant to the (E)(2) factor. Thus, even without the report, the record still supported an RC § 2151.414(E)(1) finding. In re Link, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 476, 2006 Ohio 529, (2006).

In permanent custody hearing, there was no error in admission of the testimony of one of the children's teachers that the child had claimed that the mother had hit her with a clothes hanger because, although it was hearsay, the testimony was admissible under Ohio R. Evid. 803(3) as a statement of the declarant's then existing physical condition. The child's explanation to her teacher and the school nurse was consistent with, and supported, the conclusion they reached after observing the marks on her body. In re Malaya H., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 6309, 2005 Ohio 7010, (2005).

Admittance of a referral report from a children's services agency was proper because the witness, in laying the business records foundation under Ohio R. Evid. 803(6), testified as to the procedure of creating the report, that the report was kept in the normal course of the agency's business, and that it was the agency's regular practice to make such a report; moreover, as the report was primarily cumulative of other evidence, appellant mother was not prejudiced by its admission. In re Joiner, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1017, 2004 Ohio 1158, (2004), appeal denied by 102 Ohio St. 3d 1425, 2004 Ohio 2003, 807 N.E.2d 368, 2004 Ohio LEXIS 998 (2004).

Trial court's consideration of evidence regarding the husband was well within its discretion under RC § 2151.414(D)(1). The husband was a factor in the children's lives, due to the fact that he was married to the mother. In re Morgan, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 3653, 2004 Ohio 4018, (2004).

The court-ordered psychological examination of the parent was inadmissible hearsay. The evidence, including the parent's refusal to cooperate with the case plan, supported termination of parental rights: In re Mack, 148 Ohio App. 3d 626, 774 N.E.2d 1243, 2002 Ohio 4161, (2002).

Juvenile Rule 34(I) specifically states that the rules of evidence apply at a hearing on a motion for permanent custody. The report of the psychological evaluation of the parents constituted inadmissible hearsay: In re Washington, 143 Ohio App. 3d 576, 758 N.E.2d 724 (2001).

For purposes of RC § 2151.41.4, how a parent mistreats another child is relevant to the custody determination: In re Hiatt, 86 Ohio App. 3d 716, 621 N.E.2d 1222 (1993).

Court may admit evidence of a parent's abuse of his children from a former marriage, as well as of the child in question: Babcock, 1990 Ohio App. LEXIS 850 (1990).

Evidence relating to the natural mother's parenting history and her inability to comply with prior reunification plans is relevant to a juvenile court's determination of whether to commit a child to the permanent custody of a welfare agency pursuant to RC §§ 2151.35.3 and 2151.41.4: In re Brown, 60 Ohio App. 3d 136, 573 N.E.2d 1217 (1989).

Hearsay is not admissible in adversarial juvenile court proceedings at which a parent, charged with neglecting his or her children, may lose custody of the children: In re Vickers Children, 14 Ohio App. 3d 201, 14 Ohio B. 228, 470 N.E.2d 438 (1983).

Evidence insufficient

Because there was no evidence that the grandfather could not provide legally secure permanent placement, the termination of the mother's parental rights was an abuse of discretion. The agency failed to present clear and convincing evidence that termination of the mother's parental rights was in the child's best interest as it failed to show that no suitable relative was available for placement, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D). In re Schaefer, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 1193, 2005 Ohio 1258, (2005), appeal dismissed in part by 105 Ohio St. 3d 1556, 2005 Ohio 2481, 828 N.E.2d 113, 2005 Ohio LEXIS 1086 (2005), reversed by 111 Ohio St. 3d 498, 2006 Ohio 5513, 857 N.E.2d 532, 2006 Ohio LEXIS 3065 (2006).

Trial court's finding that a mother was unsuitable under RC § 2151.414(E)(14) was unfounded. While the mother had been unable to find suitable housing as required by her case plan, her efforts in maintaining employment, keeping in touch with her children, and seeking out housing despite the obstacles she faced showed a determined willingness to reunify her family. In re Cassandra, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2600, 2006 Ohio 2767, (2006).

Trial court's judgment entry did not show that it considered the statutory factors required for a valid order granting permanent custody, under RC § 2151.414(E). Also, the trial court did not engage in the best interest of the child analysis or consider the factors codified in RC § 2151.414(D) because nothing in the judgment entry indicated that it engaged in a wide-range best interest analysis as it pertained to the children's placement with the mother. In re Allbery, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 5866, 2005 Ohio 6529, (2005).

Juvenile court erred in terminating the parental rights of the mother and in granting permanent custody of the minor child to the county children's services board, as the conflicting and problematic opinions of the multiple witnesses at the permanent custody hearing, plus the evidence showing that the mother had only a limited opportunity to show that she had the ability to care for the minor child, meant that the required clear and convincing evidence did not support the termination of the mother's parental rights. In re K. S., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2370, 2004 Ohio 2660, (2004).

Where a trial court's findings were contradicted by the record and a county children's services agency did not show that a mother failed to substantially remedy the condition that caused the children to be removed from the home, the trial court erred in terminating the mother's parental rights under RC § 2151.414(E)(1)-(16). In re Rashaun B., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 6812, 2004 Ohio 7349, (2004).

There was sufficient evidence presented to support the trial court's decision to not grant the agency's motion for permanent custody because even though the children had been in the temporary custody of the agency for more than 12 of a consecutive 22-month period, the evidence showed that the mother had made enough progress with her case plan to justify the trial court's decision that reunification could be a realistic possibility. Although the mother suffered from a psychological disorder that may have made it difficult for her to properly function as a parent, and may have missed some visitations, the evidence demonstrated that the children retained a positive relationship with her and the mother had made strides toward becoming a better parent, had completed most of her case plan, and had taken steps to remedy the conditions that caused the children to be removed. In re Cutright, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1360, 2004 Ohio 1524, (2004).

Trial court properly examined the factors in RC § 2151.414(E), and determined it was in the children's best interests to deny the county child services department's motion for permanent custody where the court essentially decided that the evidence failed to show that the children could not be afforded a legally secure permanent placement without awarding the department permanent custody; the court found that the father had made progress and deserved a chance to show that he could provide the children with a legally secure permanent placement, and although the department complained that the father had already had sufficient time to demonstrate that he could provide the children with such a placement, the trial court found that placement with the father was not hopeless. In re Cunningham, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 720, 2004 Ohio 787, (2004).

Placement of a boy in the permanent custody of a child services agency was not established by clear and convincing evidence to be in the boy's best interest where the evidence failed to show abandonment of the boy by his mother, but did show that the boy wanted to live with his mother, that sexual abuse charges against the mother had been dismissed and her record expunged, and that the mother had complied with counseling requirements in the boy's case plan as soon as financial assistance was provided to her for such counseling; thus, the trial court's order of permanent custody was reversed. In re Bounds, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4276, 2003 Ohio 4733, (2003).

The termination of a mother's parental rights pursuant to RC § 2151.414(E) was reversed because it was error for the trial court to predicate its decision on the mother's past failures without affording her the time to attempt to complete the case plan. In re Johns, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3278, 2003 Ohio 3621, (2003).

Termination of parental rights under RC § 2151.414(E)(1) and (4) was an abuse of discretion because no clear and convincing evidence supported termination based on those factors; the mother had worked to comply with her case plan, was in a living situation with her parents, who expressed a desire to help, and she had no criminal record or other substantiated reports of problems in caring for her child. In re Jordan, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5424, 2003 Ohio 6071, (2003).

Termination of mother's parental rights reversed where mother had substantially remedied the problems that had caused the children to be removed: In re Sara H., 1994 Ohio App. LEXIS 5649 (6th Dist. 1994).

Evidence sufficient

Although trial court's finding that the children of a mother and a father had been in the custody of the family services agency for 12 or more months in a consecutive 22-month period provided a sufficient basis for the court to affirm the trial court's judgment granting the agency's motion for permanent custody, the trial court's further finding that the children could not be placed with either parent within a reasonable period of time was supported by evidence showing that the mother had struggled with severe alcohol addiction for years prior to the agency's involvement and had led to instability in her housing, drunken driving convictions, and domestic violence in the presence of her children, and that the father had a criminal history of violence and substance abuse and lacked commitment to any ongoing treatment program as set forth in the case plan. In re Marple, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1696, 2007 Ohio 1879, (2007).

There was clear and convincing evidence to demonstrate that a mother's child could not be placed with the mother within a reasonable period of time or should not be placed with her, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(a) as the mother failed continuously and repeatedly to remedy the conditions of her drug abuse, homelessness, and unemployment; failed to utilize the medical psychiatric, psychological, and other social and rehabilitative services and material resources made available to her by the children services agency; failed to follow through on treatment for her mental health and chemical abuse; and attended only seven full visits with her child out of the 14 to 16 visits scheduled. In re D.P., 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1550, 2007 Ohio 1703, (2007).

There was no error in granting permanent custody of the child to the agency because the child could not be placed with either parent within a reasonable time because both demonstrated a lack of commitment by failing to regularly support, visit, or communicate with the child when able to do so. The mother had lost custody of her other children and the father was in prison and thus, unable to care for the child for at least 16 years. In re T.W., 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1320, 2007 Ohio 1441, (2007).

In rendering its judgment in a permanent custody matter, the trial court must either specifically address each of the required considerations set forth in RC § 2151.414(D) in its judgment entry, or otherwise provide some affirmative indication in the record that the court has considered the specific factors listed in § 2151.414(D). In re D.H., — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1605, 2007 Ohio 1762, (Apr. 16, 2007).

There was no error in permitting the testimony of the social worker regarding the removal of the child in the permanent custody proceeding because RC § 2151.35(B)(2)(b) permitted the trial court to admit any evidence that was material and relevant. Even if hearsay had been barred, under either exception to hearsay, Ohio R. Evid. 803(6) (business records) or Ohio R. Evid. 803(8) (public records), the social worker's testimony concerning statements made during the course of the agency's investigation were admissible since the contents of her file, including the statement by the cousin, had been compiled as part of the social worker's activities. In re Z.T., 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 759, 2007 Ohio 827, (2007).

There was competent, credible evidence to support the trial court's conclusion that the child could not or should not be placed with either parent within a reasonable period of time for the permanent custody determination because the mother had not completed her case plan by addressing her substance abuse and parenting issues. Also, the mother had not regularly supported, communicated with, or visited with the child and, even without the visitation component, the evidence showed without contradiction that the mother was not employed, nor had she provided any financial support for the child. In re Z.T., 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 759, 2007 Ohio 827, (2007).

There was clear and convincing evidence to support termination of parental rights pursuant to RC § 2151.414(E)(1) where the mother and father were both mildly mentally retarded, the father was a convicted sex offender who was not supposed to be around minors and yet he was around the child, and the mother did not understand the importance of keeping the father away from the child. Due to the father's probation conditions regarding being kept away from children, and the refusal of the mother and father to live apart, the child could not be reunited with them. In re L.M., — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1462, 2007 Ohio 1596, (Apr. 5, 2007).

Weight of the evidence supported a juvenile court's termination of a mother's parental rights over her three minor children pursuant to RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d) and (D), as the children were in the temporary custody of a social service agency for the requisite period of time and termination of the mother's rights was in their best interests. They were exposed to continuing acts of domestic violence between the parents despite years of trying to stop the cycle and the mother's repeated promises to separate herself from the father, only to return to him, and the children felt a lot of fear from living at home. In re L.S., — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1455, 2007 Ohio 1583, (Apr. 4, 2007).

Trial court's award of permanent custody of six of a mother's children to a children services agency and of the seventh child to her father was supported by competent, credible evidence as the children had been in the temporary custody of the agency for at least 12 months of a consecutive 22-month period. Moreover, the trial court properly found that the children could not be placed with the mother within a reasonable time because the testimony showed that the mother's retardation prevented her from having adequate parenting skills; that, despite the efforts of the agency and other professionals, the mother had shown no improvement since the children were first removed from the home; and that the mother did not have the ability to improve in the future. In re Buck, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1358, 2007 Ohio 1491, (Mar. 22, 2007).

Record clearly supported a trial court's decision awarding permanent custody of a father's children to a family services agency. Pursuant to the factors set forth in RC § 2151.414(E), the trial court found that the father had failed to remedy the conditions of substance abuse and lack of stability that led to removal of the children and that he did not appear willing to provide an adequate permanent home for the children. In re Joseph C.P., 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1397, 2007 Ohio 1528, (2007).

Juvenile court's finding that two sons could not be placed with either of their parents within a reasonable time or should not be placed with either parent was supported by clear and convincing evidence where: (1) despite the reasonable case planning and diligent efforts to assist the father by a child services agency (CSA), the father failed to substantially remedy the conditions that initially caused the sons to be placed outside the home, (2) the father failed to engage in the offered substance abuse treatment, continued using cocaine, declined to seek stable housing or employment, failed to meet with his caseworker on a monthly basis, and was, within months after allowing the CSA to take temporary custody of his sons, incarcerated for committing a criminal offense, and (3) the fact that the father completed an illiteracy course and participated in a drug abuse program while incarcerated was insufficient evidence to establish that the father substantially remedied the circumstances that initially caused his children to be placed in the temporary custody of the CSA. In re Jason S., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 643, 2006 Ohio 726, (2006).

Evidence in a permanent custody case showed, under RC § 2151.414(D)(4), that the child's need for a secure permanent placement could only be met by granting permanent custody to an agency because, under RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(a), the child could not or should not be placed with a parent and no relative came forward to be considered for the child's custody, so it was in the child's best interest to grant the child's permanent custody to an agency. In re P.B., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5420, 2006 Ohio 5419, (2006).

Trial court did not err in finding that a mother's child could not be placed with the mother within a reasonable period of time. The evidence showed that the mother had made little progress on her case plan as the mother missed numerous parenting classes, continued to use drugs, was evicted from her home, and was incarcerated on a parole violation. In re Mastache, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6853, 2006 Ohio 6937, (2006).

Parental rights were terminated in accordance with Ohio's statutory system, pursuant to RC § 2151.414, and due process requirements because the parents' history resulted in the involuntary termination of their parental rights to six other children. Their history included extensively documented incidents of domestic violence, some occurring in front of their children, and child endangerment charges for leaving the children unsupervised and the father had an extensive criminal history. In re Melchizedek M., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2961, 2006 Ohio 3062, (2006).

Trial court's award of permanent custody of a child to a child services agency (CSA) was proper as the child could not be placed with the mother within a reasonable time since: (1) the mother was unable to self-care and care for others, (2) the mother lacked a support system, other than the father, who was a registered sex offender, (3) the mother failed to retain or utilize parenting materials, (4) the mother lacked stable and safe housing for the child, had lost her HUD housing, had had her telephone service terminated, and lived in a residence with no designated area for the child, and (5) the guardian ad litem strongly recommended that permanent custody be granted to the CSA. In re King, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 704, 2006 Ohio 781, (2006).

Trial court did not err in finding the child to be dependent, pursuant to RC § 2151.04(D), because the trial court's decision was based upon present evidence that was sufficient to carry the burden of proof. The trial court found that it had taken permanent custody of three children of whom the mother and her violent boyfriend were the parents; despite the permanent removal of her children, the mother had not distanced herself enough from the boyfriend to ensure her own safety; the mother violated court orders, designed for her own protection, to continue her relationship with her boyfriend; the mother failed to complete any previous case plan in any significant way; and the mother had made almost no progress emotionally, psychologically, or intellectually. In re Bourne, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 340, 2006 Ohio 396, (2006).

Termination of the mother's parental rights was warranted because the mother failed to remedy the conditions that caused the children to be removed; the mother's substance abuse and housing problems had not been addressed, she was unable to demonstrate parenting skills or a commitment to the children, and she had unresolved mental health issues. Specifically, she did not complete drug treatment and continued to use drugs, she did not have stable housing, she was not in treatment or taking medication for her mental illness, and she failed to maintain regular contact with the children through visitation. In re D.G., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5588, 2006 Ohio 5575, (2006).

Trial court's decision to grant permanent custody to the agency, pursuant to RC § 2151.414, was supported by competent, credible evidence because the children, who suffered from ongoing emotional and behavioral issues, had a greater and more significant bond to their foster home than to either biological parent. The father had been twice incarcerated during the case and, at the time of the best interests hearing, he had not established paternity of the two children. In re Peterson, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1370, 2006 Ohio 1500, (2006).

Clear and convincing evidence supported a trial court's finding under RC § 2151.414(E)(1) that a mother's four children could not be placed with the mother within a reasonable time because the evidence showed that, while the mother did complete certain aspects of her case plan, she continuously and repeatedly was unable to implement what she learned through counseling and parenting classes. The mother never dealt with the mental health issues that caused her to become involved in situations that endangered the children. In re Devon J., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4050, 2006 Ohio 4130, (2006).

Trial court properly determined that the child could not be, or should not be, placed with the father within a reasonable time because it found that the father never attempted, started, or completed the requirements set out by the case plan; he had only had 11 visits with the child before voluntarily terminating his visits; and the father failed to maintain contact with the agency and refused to make his home available for a home study. In re Oaks, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4787, 2006 Ohio 4857, (2006).

There was sufficient evidence to support the trial court's conclusions that the children could not be placed with the parents within a reasonable time, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(E), because there was ample evidence that the parents failed to remedy the unsatisfactory conditions in their home. The parents also failed to show a commitment to the children by fulfilling the goals of the case plan or regularly attending visitations with the children. In re Shrider, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2641, 2006 Ohio 2792, (2006).

Trial court's finding that a father's child could not be placed with the father within a reasonable time was supported by clear and convincing evidence. The evidence showed that, despite the agency's referrals, the father had not completed drug treatment, had not received domestic violence counseling, was not employed, and was not prepared to provide a home for the child. In re M. L., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5893, 2006 Ohio 5931, (2006).

Judgment granting permanent custody of a father's three children to agency was not against the manifest weight of the evidence. The father had been to prison three times, he had demonstrated a lack of commitment to the children by failing to regularly support or communicate with them, and he had conceded that his housing situation was not suitable for the children. In re Salsberry, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3191, 2006 Ohio 3273, (2006).

Applying the test laid out in RC § 2151.414(B)(1), the trial court properly found that the child could not, or should not, be placed with either parent within a reasonable time because, although the agency provided reasonable case planning and diligent efforts to assist the mother, the mother failed continuously and repeatedly to substantially remedy the conditions causing the child to be placed outside the home. The mother did not show a commitment toward the child by fulfilling the goals of the case plan in that she admitted to using drugs and tested positive for drugs in every one of the 16 drug tests performed, she had a history of domestic violence, and she failed to obtain and maintain suitable, adequate, and appropriate housing for her son. In re English, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2952, 2006 Ohio 3067, (2006).

Permanent custody of a mother's two children was properly awarded to a children's services agency under RC § 2151.414. Evidence of the mother's drug use under a time of stress, the lack of understanding regarding the son's need for medical treatments, the previous loss of custody of the mother's other five children, the mother's repeated incarcerations, and her lack of judgment in leaving her children in the care of inappropriate caretakers supported the trial court's findings under § 2151.414(E)(1), (2), (4), (11), (13), and (14). In re Charles B., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4712, 2006 Ohio 4801, (2006).

Even if clear and convincing evidence did not support the trial court's RC § 2151.414(E)(2) finding that the mother had chronic and severe mental and emotional illness and suffered from substance abuse, ample other evidence supported the trial court's finding that the children could not be placed with either parent within a reasonable time. The trial court found that RC § 2151.414(E)(1) supported a finding that the children could not be placed with either parent within a reasonable time and the mother did not challenge that finding. In re Link, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 476, 2006 Ohio 529, (2006).

Trial court's finding that the children could not or should not be returned to the mother within a reasonable time, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(a), was not against the manifest weight of the evidence because the mother failed to remedy the conditions that led to the children's removal. The mother's actions demonstrated a lack of commitment to the children because she had been unwilling to provide an adequate permanent home for the children. In re Pettiford, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3572, 2006 Ohio 3647, (2006).

Grant of permanent custody, under RC § 2151.414, of a mother's children to a family services agency was proper. The trial court's finding that the children could not be placed with the mother within a reasonable time was supported by evidence that the mother did not react to problematic sexual behavior that the children demonstrated and that she did not follow through with discipline. In re Thornton Children, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2400, 2006 Ohio 2519, (2006).

Clear and convincing evidence supported a trial court's decision to place a father's two children in the permanent custody of a county job and family services agency under RC § 2151.414(D), (E)(4), (10), (16); the father had no contact with them or the agency for nearly a year while they were in the agency's temporary custody, left the area while they were on visitation status with the mother, saw them after his return only in a therapeutic context where no bonding was apparent, and did not find steady work or a stable home. In re Francisco, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5839, 2006 Ohio 5888, (2006).

Record contained clear and convincing evidence to support the trial court's decision granting permanent custody of a mother's two children to a family services agency. The evidence showed that the children could not or should not be placed with the mother within a reasonable period of time, in that the evidence showed that the mother failed to attend counseling for a six-month period, that she minimized her own responsibility for the children's emotional problems, and that, while the mother had worked to complete the majority of her case plan, she had not addressed the core concerns of abuse and neglect that were involved in the case. In re Daulton, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5324, 2006 Ohio 5352, (2006).

Sufficient evidence supported a trial court's finding, by clear and convincing evidence, that children could not be placed with their mother within a reasonable time, and that the children should not be placed with their mother, under RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(a), because the children had severe emotional problems requiring extensive therapy, and the mother's own sexual victimization precluded her from being able to handle the children's issue. In re Graham, 167 Ohio App. 3d 284, 854 N.E.2d 1126, 2006 Ohio 3170, (2006).

Evidence showed that a mother had failed to alleviate the conditions which led to the placement of her child with a children services agency, in that the evidence revealed that the mother failed to consistently visit the child, that she had numerous criminal convictions, and that the child would be at risk with the mother. The trial court did not err in determining that the child could not be placed with either parent within a reasonable time. In re Parks, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5835, 2006 Ohio, 5890, (2006).

Trial court did not err in finding that the children should not be returned to their mother because there was clear and convincing evidence that, despite reasonable case planning and diligent efforts by the agency, the mother failed to remedy the problems that caused the twins to be placed outside her home, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(E)(1). The mother suffered from chronic mental illness that prevented her from exercising appropriate judgments about the welfare of her children, she frequently missed visitation, and she failed to pay any financial support for the children for months after support was ordered, when she had a full-time job. In re E.H., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 348, 2006 Ohio 416, (2006).

Trial court did not err in concluding, under RC § 2151.414(E)(1) that a mother's son could not be placed with the mother within a reasonable time. Despite attending training programs, housekeeping and safety issues remained, the mother continued to be at a loss with respect to child care whenever non-routine issues arose, the mother had never lived on her own, and the mother was unaware of the son's severe developmental delays until she was told. In re C.E., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4747, 2006 Ohio 4827, (2006).

Trial court did not err in awarding a children services agency permanent custody of a mother's son even though awarding legal custody to the son's foster mother was a possibility. The son had been in the custody of others since days after his birth, he had bonded with his foster mother, the foster mother had expressed an interest in adopting the son, and the son needed a secure and permanent placement. In re Norman F., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6720, 2006 Ohio 6810, (2006).

Permanent custody of a father's children was properly granted to a family services agency upon a finding that the children could not be placed with the father within a reasonable period of time. The father failed to enroll in treatment programs required by his case plan, failed to submit to weekly urine screenings, failed to obtain employment, and admitted to using marijuana daily. In re Davidson-Rush, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4781, 2006 Ohio 4873, (2006).

In permanent custody proceedings, a trial court's determination placing a mother's youngest child in the permanent custody of a county children's services agency under RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d) was not against the manifest weight or sufficiency of the evidence; the child had been in the agency's custody for more than 12 of the past 22 months, the mother had visited inconsistently, she had failed to complete case plan objectives or to minimize the risks that led to their removal, she had a criminal history, and all three children were in a placement with the same foster parents, who wished to adopt them. In re Parks, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5836, 2006 Ohio 5891, (2006).

In a proceeding to terminate a father's parental rights, a trial court did not err in finding that his two children could not be placed with either parent within a reasonable period of time under RC § 2151.414(E) and that granting a motion filed by a county department of job and family services for permanent custody under RC § 2151.353(A)(4) was in the children's best interests under RC § 2151.414(D). Although the father had made significant progress and had substantially complied with his most recent case plan, his compliance with the plan did not entitle him to custody, and the trial court could not ignore his long history of drug involvement and failed rehabilitation, his repeated incarcerations, or his initial failures to actively exercise visitation or to engage in his case plans. In re Gower, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5666, 2006 Ohio 5676, (2006).

Permanent custody of a father's son was properly awarded to a family services agency. The father had refused to undergo a psychological evaluation even though he knew why he needed to be evaluated, and thus, he could not complain that the agency had never provided him with tailored services. In re C.E., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4747, 2006 Ohio 4827, (2006).

Trial court's decision to deny the agency's motion for permanent custody as to the oldest daughter was against the manifest weight of the evidence and was not supported by clear and convincing evidence because, at nine years of age she may have been able to feed and bathe herself, there was no evidence that she would be able to protect herself from the known felons that the mother had residing in her residence, or that the mother intended to stop residing with known felons. In re Jones, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3255, 2006 Ohio 3363, (2006).

Trial court's determination to grant permanent custody of a mother's 10 children to a county social service agency was supported by clear and convincing evidence, pursuant to RC §§ 2151.353(A)(3) and 2151.414(B)(1)(d) and (D), as the mother was convicted of a sexual offense involving two of her children, the children's aunt who had requested custody was not a suitable placement because her home was too small, she barely knew the children, and it was in their best interests to be placed in the agency's custody. In re Hilyard, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1809, 2006 Ohio 1976, (2006).

Trial court's decision not to return legal custody to the boyfriend was reasonable because, since he was not the child's father, the procedural protections of RC § 2151.414, regarding termination of parental rights, did not apply to him. It was against the best interest and welfare of the child to be placed with the boyfriend because he had repeatedly placed the child at risk, had recently lost legal custody of one of his own children, and had two others removed from his care and adjudicated neglected and dependent. In re Kenny B., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 893, 2006 Ohio 968, (2006).

There was sufficient evidence for termination of the father's parental rights, under RC § 2151.414(E)(1), as the father failed continuously and repeatedly to substantially remedy the conditions causing the child to be placed outside the home in that he missed over half of the visitations, he did not know how to change his daughter's diaper, and had limited interaction with her during visitations. However, the condition of the home and the father's hygiene were the biggest problem and were clearly not temporary problems. In re H.M.S., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 614, 2006 Ohio 701, (2006).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in granting custody of a father's child to a children's services agency because the evidence revealed that the father had been convicted of three counts of gross sexual imposition, which is one of the offenses listed in RC § 2151.414(E)(7)(d) as relevant to a consideration of whether a grant of permanent custody to an agency is in a child's best interest. In re Alexander, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 7005, 2006 Ohio 7083, (2006).

Trial court's findings that the children could not be placed with the mother within a reasonable time and that the grant of permanent custody was in the children's best interest were supported by the record as the evidence showed that the children suffered from developmental delays, including bed wetting, severe temper tantrums, and aggression. While the mother had made progress toward the completion of her case plan services, the evidence showed that she had made little progress with dealing with the children's mental health issues, that she had missed visitations, and that she failed to take any responsibility for the children's removal from their home. In re Turner, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6767, 2006 Ohio 6793, (2006).

Evidence supported the granting of permanent custody of the children to the agency under because neither parent had completed their case plan. Among other things, the mother had not addressed her alcoholism and was dating a known sex offender and the father failed to find appropriate housing and failed to complete his domestic violence treatment. Also, the trial court did not err in finding that the agency made reasonable efforts to reunite the children with the mother because the social worker testified regarding the steps taken to assist the mother in making progress on the case. In re Sherman, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6436, 2006 Ohio 6485, (2006).

Record contained sufficient competent and credible evidence from which the trial court could determine that a mother's three children could not be placed with the mother within a reasonable time, in that the evidence showed that the mother had not engaged in recommended mental health counseling, that she was not taking necessary medication, that she had not seen her psychiatrist for two months, that she had not maintained consistent employment, that she was living in a one-bedroom apartment with her boyfriend, that she had a history of abusing marijuana but had not completed treatment sessions, and that she had demonstrated a lack of commitment towards the children by failing to regularly support visit with them. In re Coon, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5621, 2006 Ohio 5629, (2006).

Trial court's termination of a mother's parental rights pursuant to RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(a) and (E)(1), (2), (4), and (14) was supported by clear and convincing evidence that it was in the children's best interests and that they could not and should not be placed with either parent within a reasonable time, as the mother's attempts to remedy her shortcomings, including a relapse of her alcohol abuse, was "too little, too late," the children had progressed developmentally since being removed from the mother's home, and they had bonded with their caregivers; further, there was no suitable relative for placement. In re Jordan R., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5468, 2006 Ohio 5470, (2006).

Permanent custody of father's son was properly granted to agency under RC § 2151.414 since the evidence showed that permanent custody of the father's daughter had been granted to the agency shortly before the son's birth, and the case manager continued to emphasize ongoing concerns with the refusal of the father and the son's mother to see anything wrong with their behaviors. The record and the transcripts from the daughter's case supported the trial court's determinations under RC §§ 2151.04(D) and 2151.414(D) and the corresponding grant of permanent custody of the son to the agency. In re Lowther, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4731, 2006 Ohio 4837, (2006).

Evidence that a mother had not enrolled in a counseling program for her substance abuse problem, that she was still using illegal substances as late as the month before her parental rights were terminated, and that the mother had told the social worker that she neither intended to seek counseling for her drug usage nor intended to attend parenting classes indicated unwillingness on the part of the mother to comply with the court-ordered case plan and to make the lifestyle changes necessary for her to raise her child. RC § 2151.414(E)(1) and (2) applied. Moreover, evidence that the mother had not visited with the child once since the agency assumed custody of the child, that she did not once ask about the child's medical condition and did not provide any support for the child, and that the mother failed to keep her address and phone number current with the agency, making her unavailable for much of the year constituted a failure to demonstrate a commitment to the child under § 2151.414(E)(4). In re Distafano, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4347, 2006 Ohio 4430, (2006).

Trial court's findings, pursuant to RC §§ 2151.353(A)(4) and 2151.414(E)(4) and (11) that a mother's one-month-old son should not be placed with the mother within a reasonable time and that permanent custody was in the son's best interest were supported by clear and convincing evidence. The fact that the mother's parental rights to the son's brother had been terminated four years earlier was sufficient under RC § 2151.414(D)(5) and (E)(11) to support the trial court's decision. The trial court examined the mother's circumstances as they existed at the time of the proceedings and found that the mother was unable to understand how to feed the son the proper amount of food at proper intervals, that the mother attended only one-half of the visits provided after the son was removed from her care, and that the mother had failed to remedy unsanitary housing conditions that existed at the time of the removal of the son's older brother. In re Deasean J., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4218, 2006 Ohio 4294, (2006).

Trial court's grant of permanent custody of a child to a county agency was not against the manifest weight of the evidence pursuant to RC § 2151.414, as she had been adjudicated as dependent, the parents were addicted to substances of abuse and were each incarcerated for a long period of time with no indication that they would be eligible for early release, they had not satisfied their case plans for purposes of reunification, and it was in the child's best interest to be placed in the agency's custody rather than with her grandparents, as she needed stability and they would not have met her needs on a number of issues. In re Morris, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3122, 2006 Ohio 3231, (2006).

Permanent custody of a father's children was properly granted to a children services agency under RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(a) because the evidence established that the children had been in the agency's custody for 12 months out of the previous 22 months. The grant was in the children's best interests because the children did not interact well when together, the father was not permitted to have contact with them, and the children were afraid of the father. In re Brown, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2713, 2006 Ohio 2865, (May 26, 2006).

Permanent custody of a mother's daughter was properly granted to family services agency under RC § 2151.414 because the evidence showed that the mother was unwilling to provide for daughter's needs. She was a convicted sex offender; lived with her boyfriend, who was subject to certain outstanding arrest warrants and who possibly used drugs in the home; had missed 15 out of 44 scheduled visits with her daughter; and had eventually discontinued all contact with the agency and her daughter. In re Darnell, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2659, 2006 Ohio 2839, (2006).

Permanent custody of a mother's children was properly awarded to a children services agency under RC § 2151.414 because the mother failed to make progress in dealing with her housing and employment issues, and the evidence showed that the award was in the best interests of the children, especially since they had been in the agency's custody for more than 12 months of a consecutive 22-month period. In re Foreman, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2316, 2006 Ohio 2426, (May 17, 2006).

Award of permanent custody of a father's children to a children services agency pursuant to RC § 2151.414(E)(4) was supported by clear and convincing evidence. The evidence showed that the father lived in a small, cluttered apartment with lawnmowers in the kitchen, that he used his stove to heat his residence because his gas had been shut off for numerous years, and that the father did not have sufficient income to provide for the children. In re Bradley, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2276, 2006 Ohio 2367, (2006).

Trial court's termination of a mother's parental rights over two children and its grant of permanent custody to a county social service agency was supported by clear and convincing evidence, as reasonable efforts were made by the agency in affording the mother drug and mental health treatment programs for several years in her case plan, her chemical dependency rendered her unable to provide a home for the children, and her repeated incarcerations prevented her from providing care to them, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(E)(1), (2), and (13); further, the custody award was in their best interests based on the statutory factors under § 2151.414(D), as they were in need of permanent placement in order to facilitate adoption. In re Jasmine H., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2068, 2006 Ohio 2234, (2006).

In granting a motion filed by a county children's services agency for permanent custody of one of a mother's three children, the trial court did not err in determining that the child could not be placed with either parent within a reasonable time under RC § 2151.414(E). The record contained clear and convincing evidence that the mother had failed substantially and continuously to alleviate the conditions that led to the placement of her children with the agency and that she showed an inability or unwillingness to correct those problems. In re Parks, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5836, 2006 Ohio 5891, (2006).

Trial court's determination that a mother had not remedied the conditions that caused the removal of her children, such that permanent custody to a county agency was properly granted under RC § 2151.414(E)(1), was supported by the evidence that the person who had physically abused the children was allowed to remain at the mother's residence even after she had a court order that prohibited the children from having contact with him. In re Franklin, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4737, 2006 Ohio 4841, (2006).

There was ample evidence before a trial court from which it could conclude that a child's mother failed to substantially remedy the condition that caused the agency to remove the child from the home and that the mother demonstrated a lack of commitment toward the child or an unwillingness to provide an adequate, permanent home for the child, in that the mother failed to make any progress on her case plan until the motion for permanent custody was filed, some 16 months after the child was removed from her home, attending only half of the scheduled visits with the child until the motion was filed. She was involved in an abusive relationship, had lived in seven or eight different locations during the proceedings, and had made little effort to obtain employment. In re A. K., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4245, 2006 Ohio 4307, (2006).

Competent, credible evidence supported a trial court's finding that a child could not or should not be placed with her father, under RC § (E)(1) and (16) because he had a history of sexual offenses and low cognitive ability, but (1) attended only seven of 22 available counseling appointments, (2) did not retain or use "hands-on" parenting information provided to him by a parenting educator, (3) had not complied with adult sex offender treatment, and (4) was described as having significant difficulties internalizing basic coping skills and had been blatantly oppositional to treatment. In re King, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 707, 2006 Ohio 780, (2006).

Considering that the child had been in foster care for 22 months of her 31-month lifetime as of the dispositional hearing for permanent custody, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in finding that the child's need for a legally secure placement could not be accomplished without granting permanent custody to the agency. Although the record indicated that two potentially suitable relatives expressed some interest in adopting the child, no relative expressed any such interest until the child had been in the temporary custody of the agency for 16 months and no party had filed a motion requesting legal custody of the child at any point during the 22 months that she had been in the temporary custody of the agency as of the commencement of the dispositional hearing, as required by the Rules of Juvenile Procedure. In re H.M., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 726, 2006 Ohio 819, (2006).

Trial court's decision to terminate the mother and father's parental rights and to grant permanent custody of the children to the agency was supported by clear and convincing because the father was incarcerated much of the time the agency was involved with the family and did not follow through with any case plan services and, although the mother completed services, she was not able to implement the concepts taught in parenting class. The mother insisted that she planned to remain with the father, despite a history of domestic violence, regardless of what the agency thought, she allowed the father to violate the civil protection order issued against him, and had unsupervised contact with her children contrary to court orders. In re Malaya H., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 6309, 2005 Ohio 7010, (2005).

Termination of a mother's parental rights was justified, under RC § 2151.414(E)(4), because her attendance at only 13 of 43 visits with her children, held both at the child protection agency's offices and at her home, showed her lack of commitment to the children. In re Walker, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 5893, 2005 Ohio 6563, (2005).

Record supported, by clear and convincing evidence, the trial court's findings, under RC § 2151.414(E), that the children could not be placed with the mother within a reasonable time because, despite the agency's assistance, the mother was unable to provide a safe environment for the 11-month-old twins. The mother was unwilling to provide an adequate permanent home for the children and was unwilling to protect the children from physical abuse or neglect because, once the abuse had occurred, the mother did not seek prompt medical attention even though the children were in obvious discomfort and, despite the father's violent temper, the mother allowed him to remain alone with the children after she signed a safety plan agreeing not to do so. In re Mark B., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 1209, 2005 Ohio 1220, (2005).

Termination of a mother's parental rights to her five children was in the children's best interest because (1) the two youngest children had never lived with her; (2) the three oldest children were sexually abused by the mother and her husband when they lived with the mother; (3) the children's guardian ad litem recommended that termination was in their best interest; and (4) the children required a legally secure, permanent, placement which could not be obtained without granting their permanent custody to an agency as their maternal grandmother's home was not an appropriate placement as the home had a history of violence, the three oldest children were sexually abused while living there, and the grandmother denied the abuse had occurred, despite the children's parents' guilty pleas. In re C. D. Children, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 152, 2005 Ohio 158, (2005).

When a father was convicted of causing physical harm to one of his children, and, upon his return from prison, causing physical harm to his other child, and the mother was convicted of child endangerment for allowing the father to have access to the second child, a trial court properly found that the children could not and should not be placed with the parents within a reasonable time, under RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(a). In re T.W., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 5964, 2005 Ohio 6633, (2005).

Trial court did not err in determining that permanent placement with a children services department was in the best interest of a father's son under § 2151.414(D), in that the father continued to smoke around the child despite the dangerous effects of smoke on the son's respiratory conditions, the father failed to appear for many of his son's pediatrician appointments, he attended only half of the sessions held to address the son's developmental issues, and he failed to maintain employment. The trial court's further finding that the son could not be placed with the father within a reasonable time was supported by sufficient evidence because the findings showed that the father failed to use the many services provided so that he could adequately parent the son and show the necessary commitment to meet the son's special needs. In re C.F., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 5911, 2005 Ohio 6559, (2005).

Clear and convincing evidence supported the trial court's determination to adopt the magistrate's finding that a mother's rights to her four minor children should be terminated in favor of a grant of permanent custody to a county agency, as the children were in the custody of the agency for 12 or more of the prior 22 months, which was sufficient to satisfy the requirements of RC § 2151.414(B)(1). Additionally, the mother did not fulfill the requirements of her case plan and she was not fit to raise the children, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(E)(1), (16), as she did not take prescription medication to combat her depression, she continued a relationship with a man whom she had been domestically abused by despite an order that she stay away from him, she did not take the necessary parenting course or attend necessary counseling for domestic violence, and she did not maintain employment and was not financially responsible. In re McKinney, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 5590, 2005 Ohio 6199, (2005).

There was no error in granting permanent custody of the mother's child to the agency because the agency diligently pursued the goal of reunification by making health services available and by monitoring the mother's use of those services and her progress; the agency proved by clear and convincing evidence that the child could not be placed with his mother within a reasonable time because the mother had borderline personality disorder and had made no progress in her treatment; and granting permanent custody to the agency was in the child's best interests, under RC § 2151.414(D), because the evidence showed that the child's relationship with his mother was destructive and that the mother's boyfriend was verbally, emotionally, and physically abusive of the child. In re Van Atta, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3828, 2005 Ohio 4182, (2005).

Clear and convincing evidence supported a trial court's determination that a mother's parental rights to three of her children should be terminated, pursuant to RC § 2151.414, where § 2151.414(B)(1)(a) and (d) were found applicable, and the weight of the evidence supported findings with respect to § 2151.414(E)(1), (4), and (13). The trial court's determination that § 2151.414(E)(2) provided support was error, as it was not shown that the mother's mental disorders were so severe as to render her incapable of providing an adequate and stable home for the children. In re Amber M.L., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3804, 2005 Ohio 4172, (2005).

Trial court's decision granting permanent custody of parents' two children to a children services board was not against the manifest weight of the evidence because the trial court found that it was in the children's best interest to grant permanent custody to the board and that, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(E)(1), the parents had failed continuously and repeatedly to substantially remedy the conditions causing the removal of the children, in that the father had not engaged the services required by the case plan and, while the mother had engaged in some services, she had failed to terminate her contact with the father but, instead, became pregnant with the father's child during the pendency of the case. In re Rhyann B., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3555, 2005 Ohio 3867, (2005).

Trial court's findings that three children could not be placed with their mother within a reasonable amount of time and that it was in their best interest to grant a children services board (CSB) permanent custody were not against the manifest weight of the evidence where: (1) the children had been in the temporary custody of the CSB for over two years, (2) the mother did not have contact with the children for 11 months, (3) she tested positive for cocaine four times after she resumed contact with the children, (4) the children got along well with each other and were flourishing in their foster home, and (5) the children desired to be with their mother, but only if she had control over her substance abuse problem, which the mother had been unable to do. In re Culp, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3469, 2005 Ohio 3764, (2005).

Clear and convincing evidence supported a trial court's termination of a father's parental rights over his child, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(E)(4), (11), and (16), where he demonstrated a lack of commitment toward the child when he was released from a treatment facility and failed to contact her, his rights to one of the child's siblings had been previously terminated, and he had repeated problems with chemical dependency, had a criminal history, and had obligations to other children, all which would require a lot of attention over a long period of time. In re Danielle E., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2236, 2005 Ohio 2349, (2005).

Juvenile court's termination of a mother's parental rights was proper under RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(a) where: (1) the mother emotionally and intellectually failed to realize her responsibility and to accept responsibility for the children's abuse and neglect, (2) the mother did not show appropriate emotional affect and blamed the children for the removal, (3) the mother substantially failed to show appropriate parenting skills as required under the Case Plan, (4) the terms of her criminal probation did not allow her to have contact with the children during her probation, and (5) the mother suffered from a significant emotional deficit and chronic illness. In re Nelson, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 5926, 2005 Ohio 6600, (2005).

Trial court found clear and convincing evidence to support its determination that permanent custody should be granted to a county social services agency, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D), where the grant of custody was in the children's best interests, they had spent a great deal of time in the agency's custody, the parents had special needs and limitations which prohibited them from adequately parenting their children, and the children could not be placed with either parent within a reasonable time. In re McHugh Children, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2235, 2005 Ohio 2345, (2005).

Trial court found that children's best interests would be served by terminating their mother's parental rights and granting permanent custody to a social services agency, which had temporary custody for more than 12 months out of a consecutive 22-month period, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d), as the mother failed to complete important elements of her case plan, including keeping the abusive father away from the children and keeping her home drug-free, the children had bonded with their foster families and expressed desires to live with them, and consideration was given to the factors of § 2151.414(D). In re Faulk, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 1315, 2005 Ohio 1352, (2005).

Where a child had been in a county agency's custody for 12 or more months of a consecutive 22-month period ending after March 18, 1999, and the trial court also found that the child had established a good relationship with her foster family, that a legally secure placement could not be achieved without a grant of permanent custody, that the parents' problems eclipsed those of the child, that the parents showed a lack of commitment toward the child, and that termination of parental rights was in the child's best interest, the court's findings were based on the evidence and the factors of RC § 2151.414(D) and (E). In re M.W., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 1273, 2005 Ohio 1302, (2005), criticized by In re A.S., 163 Ohio App. 3d 647, 2005 Ohio 5309, 839 N.E.2d 972, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 4830 (Ohio Ct. Parental rights were terminated because the father resorted to domestic violence in front of the children and did not cooperate with child services agency employees and the mother, who cooperated with child services agency employees, failed to protect the children from their father. In re Delfino L. M., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 287, 2005 Ohio 320, (2005).

Termination of a father's parental rights was proper under RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(a) as he had eight months to comply with a case plan and a magistrate's directives, yet he enrolled in domestic violence classes only one month before the annual review, did not attend substance abuse treatment, and took a drug screen only on the day of the annual review. In re M.B., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 987, 2005 Ohio 986, (2005).

Juvenile court properly terminated a mother's parental rights. The fact that the findings were not aligned with specific RC § 2151.414(E) conditions was not reversible error. In re Donell F., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3806, 2005 Ohio 4175, (2005).

Record supported the trial court's findings that the child should not be placed with either parent because the parents had failed, for over six months, to remedy the conditions that had caused the child to be placed outside the home, had failed to provide basic necessities for her, had failed to visit or communicate with her, and had shown an unwillingness to provide an adequate permanent home for her, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(E)(1) and (4). In re D.W., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 1793, 2005 Ohio 1867, (2005).

Trial court's determination that parents' rights in their minor son should be terminated, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(E), was supported by the evidence that the parents continuously and repeatedly failed to substantially remedy the conditions that caused their son to be placed outside of the home, that the parents showed a lack of commitment toward the child, and that the father abandoned him by failing to see him for more than a year and a half, pursuant to RC § 2151.011(C); only one of the factors of RC § 2151.414(E) was necessary for the determination that the child could not and should not be placed with his parents. In re B.L., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 1136, 2005 Ohio 1151, (2005), writ of certiorari denied by 546 U.S. 945, 126 S. Ct. 443, 163 L. Ed. 2d 337, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 7453, 74 U.S.L.W. 3229 (2005).

Finding under RC § 2151.414(E)(3), that the mother committed abuse as described in RC § 2151.03, was supported by clear and convincing evidence because, after one of her 11-month-old twins had been abused by violent shaking, the mother did not seek medical help for the children until the agency intervened and because the child had suffered previous physical abuse. In re Mark B., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 1209, 2005 Ohio 1220, (2005).

Permanent custody was in the best interest of the child because there was clear and convincing evidence that the child could not be placed with the mother within a reasonable time, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(E). The mother repeatedly withheld medical treatment from the child, placed the child at substantial risk of harm due to drug abuse, had her parental rights involuntarily terminated with respect to three other children, and the mother failed to fully exercise her visitation rights with her son. In re Burton, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 3652, 2004 Ohio 4021, (2004), appeal denied by 103 Ohio St. 3d 1495, 2004 Ohio 5605, 816 N.E.2d 1081, 2004 Ohio LEXIS 2584 (2004).

Due to the mother's long history of abusing alcohol and crack cocaine, her inability to maintain a sustained period of sobriety, the continued and changing custody placements the children had experienced, the mother's inability to provide a stable home and to remain employed, and the considerable benefits the children received while in foster care, termination of the mother's parental rights was proper and was in the best interest of both of her children. In re J.O., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1851, 2004 Ohio 2121, (2004).

Juvenile court properly granted permanent custody to a mother's three children to the county department of job and family services, where sufficient evidence was presented demonstrating that the mother failed to comply with the case plan and showed no prospect of ever doing so, the alleged father or fathers had no contact with the department while the children were in the department's custody, and the foster care family expressed an interest in adopting all the children, and could provide them with both the medical and mental health care they needed and provide them with a stable living environment. In re Ragland Children, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1640, 2004 Ohio 1872, (2004).

Clear and convincing evidence supported a trial court's grant of permanent custody to a county children service agency and the termination of the mother's parental rights, where under RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(a), the mother was deemed an unsuitable parent for failing to take medication and for failing to attend anger management classes, the child met the requirements of § 2151.414(B)(1)(d), and it was found to be in the child's best interest to have his parents' rights terminated under § 2151.414(D); the child had bonded with his foster parents and they attended to his physical disabilities, they provided him with a stable living situation. In re M.L.J., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 3953, 2004 Ohio 4358, (2004).

Juvenile court did not err in entering a judgment that terminated the mother's parental rights in her minor son, as the trial court followed the proper procedure in doing so by scheduling a hearing and providing notice to interested parties, and since the evidence produced at that hearing showed that the termination was in the best interests of the child and that the minor son had been in the temporary custody of the county family welfare agency for more than 12 months of a consecutive 22-month period, the termination of the mother's parental rights on the minor son was proper. In re Krems, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2584, 2004 Ohio 2449, (2004).

There was sufficient evidence to find clearly and convincingly that the father demonstrated a lack of commitment toward the child by failing to regularly visit and communicate with her, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(E)(4), and that termination of his parental rights was appropriate; during the more than one year the child was in the children's services bureau's custody, the father did not once visit her. In re Tashayla S., — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 817, 2004 Ohio 896, (Feb. 27, 2004).

Evidence that appellant mother failed to visit with her children, failed to protect them from physical abuse at the hands of her husband, and lacked commitment to them, supported the trial court's finding under RC § 2151.414(E) that the children could not or should not be returned to their parents within a reasonable time. In re K.P., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1494, 2004 Ohio 1674, (2004), appeal denied by 102 Ohio St. 3d 1473, 2004 Ohio 2830, 809 N.E.2d 1159, 2004 Ohio LEXIS 1419 (2004).

Evidence and testimony elicited amply supported, clearly and with credibility, the finding of the trial court that it was in the children's best interest to grant permanent custody of the children to the agency. The parents were unable to demonstrate parenting skills and did not complete their case plans in that they were not able to provide a safe and habitable living environment for their children, who were subjected to sexual and physical abuse and threats relating to the abuse. In re Foucht, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 415, 2004 Ohio 456, (2004).

Trial court properly terminated a father's parental rights where the trial court found, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(B)(1) and (B)(2), that the father did not complete his case plan for reunification, had an ongoing substance abuse problem and tested positive for cocaine while child was in his care, and was convicted of unlawful sexual conduct with a minor; therefore, the termination of the father's parental rights was in the best interests of the minor child. In re R.K., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 395, 2004 Ohio 439, (2004).

Termination of parental rights was proper where the parent did not comply with the case plan and was in denial as to the child's serious mental health issues. In re J.S., 157 Ohio App. 3d 127, 809 N.E.2d 684, 2004 Ohio 2328, (2004).

Trial court's finding that a mother's minor child should not be placed with the mother was not against the manifest weight of the evidence, where it found that the minor child had been in the temporary custody of the county department of job and family services for 12 of the past consecutive 22 months and that the minor child could not be placed with the mother in a reasonable time, as either of these findings, if supported by the evidence, were sufficient to base a grant of permanent custody pursuant to RC § 2151.414(B)(1). In re Adams, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1570, 2004 Ohio 1770, (2004).

Trial court properly terminated a mother's parental rights over her three minor children, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(B)(2), where it was in the children's best interest, and where there was sufficient evidence to support the determination that the mother was unable to consistently provide a stable environment for her children, and that she was unable to remedy the conditions that caused the removal of her children. In re V.F., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 4083, 2004 Ohio 4494, (2004).

Competent, credible evidence existed to support the finding that the child's best interest was served by awarding permanent custody to the agency and that a legally secure permanent placement could not be achieved without a permanent grant of custody to the agency. The child had a poor relationship with her mother, she did not wish to return to her mother, she had bonded with her foster mother, she had been in and out of the agency's custody, she needed long-term special care as she had significant psychological problems, and the mother wanted to return the child to an abusive household. In re Nibert, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 379, 2004 Ohio 429, (2004).

Evidence that the mother only paid child support sporadically, and failed to complete any intensive outpatient and alcohol program, her individual counseling, or obtain stable housing and employment supported termination of her parental rights. In re Antonio C., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 67, 2004 Ohio 82, (2004).

There was clear, convincing evidence supporting termination of parental rights based on the parents' inability to provide an adequate living environment; while the agency was not required to reunite the child and her parents, efforts to reunite were made. In re Jackson, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 497, 2004 Ohio 542, (2004).

Trial court did not err in concluding that permanent custody of a minor child was in the child's best interests and that there were statutory factors pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D)(1)-(5) that supported that determination, as many conditions of each parent's case plan were not met, nor were conditions in the amended plans, from which there was no objection pursuant to RC § 2151.412(E)(2)(b), complied with. There was evidence that neither parent had established regular employment or adequate housing, they had not complied with requirements of anger management classes, individual counseling, mental health concerns, or psychological evaluations, the father had an extensive criminal record, the child was in custody most of her life, and she was happy in her foster care family, who had indicated that they might wish to pursue adoption. In re P. C., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1058, 2004 Ohio 1230, (2004).

Finding that the child could not and should not be placed with either parent within a reasonable time was supported by the evidence and was not against the manifest weight of the evidence because the father failed to complete most of his case plan services and he admitted that his living situation was not appropriate for his daughter, and, while the mother had substantially completed her case plan services, she had failed to alleviate the conditions which led to the placement of the child with the agency, that being her continued relationship with a man, an alleged sex offender, with whom the agency had instructed her to have no contact. In re Deserio, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 698, 2004 Ohio 751, (2004).

Trial court properly terminated a mother's parental rights where the evidence showed, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(B)(1), that it was in the child's best interests because after the mother initially showed progress in completing the court ordered program for reunification with her child, the mother relapsed into drug abuse, and, upon visiting the mother's home, a caseworker found all the new furniture the county had purchased for the mother was gone, the apartment was full of roaches, there was a big hole in the wall, there were maggots in the food in the refrigerator, and the child was only in a diaper even though there were new clothes in her closet. In re Reese, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 779, 2004 Ohio 854, (2004).

Termination of a mother's parental rights in her minor child was supported by clear and convincing evidence pursuant to RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d), where the child was in the custody of the children services agency for at least 12 months of a 22-month consecutive period, the mother had not successfully completed any significant components of her case plan and had failed to comply with the drug and alcohol components of her plan, the child had bonded well and found stability with the foster mother, and termination was found to be in the child's best interests; although the mother sought another opportunity to show reunification with the child was appropriate due to her attempts to progress through her case plan, the court noted that she had two years, based on continuances, to address the elements of her case plan and had not succeeded during that time. In re E.S., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2257, 2004 Ohio 2572, (2004).

Trial court did not err in terminating the parental rights of the mother in her minor son, as clear and convincing evidence existed that one or more of the conditions enumerated in RC § 2151.414(E)(1)-(16) existed with respect to the mother; accordingly, the evidence showed that the minor son could not be placed with her within a reasonable period of time or that the minor son should not be placed with her. In re Krems, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2250, 2004 Ohio 2446, (2004).

Evidence of the parents' incarceration, criminal past, and drug abuse, as well as evidence of the child's having lived with the maternal aunt's family, clearly and convincingly supported a trial court's finding that a grant of permanent custody to the county children's services to facilitate the child's adoption by the aunt was in the child's best interest. In re Samuel M., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1465, 2004 Ohio 1637, (2004).

Juvenile court did not err in entering a judgment that terminated the mother's parental rights in her minor son, as the trial court followed the proper procedure in doing so by scheduling a hearing and providing notice to interested parties, and since the evidence produced at that hearing showed that the termination was in the best interests of the child and that the minor son had been in the temporary custody of the county family welfare agency for more than 12 months of a consecutive 22-month period, the termination of the mother's parental rights on the minor son was proper. In re Krems, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2584, 2004 Ohio 2449, (2004).

Trial court's order awarding permanent custody of a father's three children to the county department of children and family services was upheld where: (1) the familial bond between him and his children was questionable; (2) he was unable to provide a secure and stable home for them; (3) he failed to remedy the problems that initially caused the children to be removed; (4) he abandoned the children; (5) he was unwilling to provide the basic necessities or prevent the abuse; and (6) he instilled a likelihood that a recurrence of abuse would threaten the children's safety. In re D.B., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 893, 2004 Ohio 996, (2004).

Trial court properly terminated the parental rights of the mother and the father in the two daughters, as clear and convincing evidence showed that the decision to grant permanent custody to the county family welfare agency was not in error, that the two daughters could not be placed with the mother or father within a reasonable time, and that permanent commitment to the county family welfare agency was in the best interest of the two daughters. In re Gomer, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1536, 2004 Ohio 1723, (2004), appeal denied by 102 Ohio St. 3d 1473, 2004 Ohio 2830, 809 N.E.2d 1159, 2004 Ohio LEXIS 1418 (2004).

Trial court did not err in terminating the parental rights of the mother in her minor son, as clear and convincing evidence existed that one or more of the conditions enumerated in RC § 2151.414(E)(1)-(16) existed with respect to the mother; accordingly, the evidence showed that the minor son could not be placed with her within a reasonable time period of time or that the minor son should not be placed with her. In re Krems, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2584, 2004 Ohio 2449, (2004).

Where a magistrate considered the RC § 2151.414(D) factors and discussed the mother's inability to provide her children with a stable environment due to her failure to complete any aspect of case plans, drug use, inability to secure a residence and employment, and refusal to remedy the situation that led to the children's removal, the record supported the trial court's judgment that the termination of parental rights and granting of permanent custody to a children services agency was in the best interests of the children. In re Joiner, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1017, 2004 Ohio 1158, (2004), appeal denied by 102 Ohio St. 3d 1425, 2004 Ohio 2003, 807 N.E.2d 368, 2004 Ohio LEXIS 998 (2004).

Decision to terminate parental rights was supported by the manifest weight of the evidence because the record lacked any indication that the mother had sufficiently complied with her case plan, or that she had taken steps to learn how to care for her son's medical needs, up to and including the possibility of a liver transplant. In re L.F., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 4076, 2004 Ohio 4484, (2004).

In the termination of parental rights case, the evidence established that the children could not be placed with either parent pursuant to RC § 2151.414(E), as the father voluntarily surrendered the father's parental rights, the mother had made no progress toward treatment of the mother's drug abuse and mental health issues, and the older child had been in the custody of the Summit County Children Services Board for 12 of the previous 22 months. In re J.G., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2237, 2004 Ohio 2513, (2004).

Where the Department of Job and Family Services took custody of the child after he was born, and retained the same throughout the proceedings, the biological father abandoned the child, and the mother failed in her efforts to maintain stability, stay off of drugs, stay out of jail, exercise visitation, work towards reunification, and maintain employment, the trial court properly granted permanent custody to the Department; further, said order was in the child's best interest, as he, despite his age, had a strong bond with his foster family and his sister who was also in the same foster home. In re King, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 341, 2004 Ohio 386, (2004), appeal denied by 101 Ohio St. 3d 1491, 2004 Ohio 1293, 805 N.E.2d 541, 2004 Ohio LEXIS 638 (2004).

Mother failed continuously and repeatedly to substantially remedy the conditions causing her children to be placed outside of their home, thus, supporting the trial court's grant of permanent custody to children services by clear and convincing evidence. The mother, among other things, failed to visit the children on occasions, expressed hostility towards and was uncooperative with children services and others providing assistance to her children, overdosed on illegal drugs while the children were at home, and failed to provide food or other basic necessities. In re Archer, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2551, 2004 Ohio 2916, (2004).

Trial court did not err in determining that permanent custody of the mother's minor child should be granted to the county child welfare agency, as clear and convincing evidence showed that the mother had demonstrated a lack of commitment toward the minor child by failing to regularly support, visit, or communicate with the minor child, especially she had not had physical custody of the minor child for a decade while he lived with a succession of relatives. In re Leitwein, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1131, 2004 Ohio 1296, (2004).

Evidence which showed that three children who were adopted by a husband and wife suffered from emotional and behavioral problems due to the environment they experienced while in their adoptive parents' home and that the children's adoptive father participated in family counseling and anger management classes but failed to benefit from those services, was sufficient to sustain the trial court's judgment awarding permanent custody of the children to the Cuyahoga County Department Children and Family Services. In re D.B., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 618, 2004 Ohio 625, (2004).

Trial court did not err when it found by clear and convincing evidence that the factors listed RC § 2151.414(E)(1) and (4) existed to support a finding that the child could not be placed with either parent within a reasonable time or should not be placed with either parent. The mother missed one third of her visits with the child, was cohabiting with a registered sex offender, and, although the agency provided the mother with substantial help and guidance to complete the requirements of the case plan, she was unable to maintain a stable, healthy home environment for the child. In re Malone, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 494, 2004 Ohio 533, (2004).

Appeals court affirmed grant of permanent custody to children services as not against the manifest weight of the evidence; the father did not take advantage of low-cost reunification and parenting counseling sessions after he was released from jail. In re Crager, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4968, 2003 Ohio 5548, (2003).

Where a mother had already failed her case plan before her incarceration on drug charges, failed to address her addiction and behavioral problems in a timely manner, and placed her desire for drugs ahead of the well-being of her child, the termination of her parental rights to her child was supported by clear and convincing evidence. In re Hatfield, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 6668, 2003 Ohio 7339, (2003).

Although the two termination of parental rights proceedings against the mother and the related best interest of the children determination did not involve factors such as her being convicted of certain offenses, her withholding medical treatment from a child, her placing a child at a substantial risk of harm, her abandoning a child, or the involuntary termination of her parental rights, there was evidence to support other factors that showed termination of her parental rights was in the best interest of her children, and since only one factor had to be shown, the trial court did not err in concluding that termination of her parental rights was in the best interest of her children. In re C.H., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 6190, 2003 Ohio 6854, (2003).

Combination of a mother's chronic mental illness, which left her unable to provide an adequate, permanent home for her child, and the child's special needs supported a trial court's decision to grant permanent custody of the child to an agency; notwithstanding diligent efforts by the agency and the mother to remedy the problems of mental illness and alcohol abuse, the problems remained insurmountable, and it was in the child's best interest not to return to her mother in light of the child's posttraumatic stress disorder and anxiety disorder. Campbell v. Richland County Children Servs. Bd., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4040, 2003 Ohio 4535, (2003).

Termination of a mother's parental rights and award of custody to appellee department of job and family services was affirmed where, inter alia, the child was placed after not being picked up at day care, where a psychologist expressed significant concerns about the mother's ability to provide a safe and nurturing environment for the child, and cited the mother's multiple health problems, low level of intelligence, and potential for personality disturbance as factors which prevented her from providing adequate parental care, where the mother had lost two prior children in permanent custody cases in another county, where the mother had a history of interacting with men who had lost their own children to permanent custody, and/or had criminal histories, and where the mother had moved four times within the last year and one-half, and relied on family members for transportation. In re Huston, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 6569, 2003 Ohio 7280, (2003).

Termination of the mother's parental rights was supported by the evidence as the mother continually chose to engage in relationships that exposed her children to violence and risk for abuse and the children, including allowing a convicted child molester to live with her children, the children did not wish to be reunited with their mother, and the children needed a legally secure placement due to their special needs. In re West, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5650, 2003 Ohio 6299, (2003).

Finding that the children could not be placed with the mother within a reasonable time was not against the manifest weight of the evidence as the mother was unable to remedy the conditions that caused the children to be removed from the home in the first place; although the mother received a substantial amount of intervention, she had difficulty with supervision of the children, budgeting, maintaining housing, depression, and addressing medical issues with the children. In re Swisher, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3366, 2003 Ohio 3747, (2003).

Where the trial court found that the children had been in the temporary custody of the children services board for more than 12 of the past 22 months, and where the evidence showed, inter alia, that the mother had been inconsistent in visiting the children and in complying with requirements of drug screening and counseling, both prongs of the permanent custody test were satisfied and the trial court did not err in placing the children in the permanent custody of the children services board. In re B. B., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 2971, 2003 Ohio 3314, (2003).

Under RC § 2151.414(B)(1), a parent's rights may not be terminated without evidence of one of the listed predicate findings in RC § 2151.414(E); evidence supported the determination that the parents of dependent children failed to remedy a climate of violence, justifying the termination of parental rights. In re Isaac M., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5569, 2003 Ohio 6197, (2003).

Where a trial court's orders to attend a minor child's therapy sessions on a monthly basis were reasonable and the mother had no valid excuse for ignoring the orders, the trial court properly terminated the mother's parental rights for failing to comply with a case plan. In re Hawkins Children, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4419, 2003 Ohio 4899, (2003).

Termination of the mother's parental rights pursuant to RC § 2151.414(B) was supported by the manifest weight of the evidence that she failed to comply with the case plan requirements that she obtain suitable housing and permanent employment, attend counseling, and provide for the daughters' basic needs. In re A.F., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4501, 2003 Ohio 4981, (2003).

Parent's parental rights were properly terminated after she used her three children to steal shoes and then abandoned them when police arrived because she failed to comply with her substance abuse plan, her visits were sporadic and disruptive, none of the children's relatives were suitable to care for them, and the children had flourished in foster care. In re Sarah S., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4267, 2003 Ohio 4730, (2003).

Order terminating parental rights was not against the manifest weight of the evidence that the mother failed to rectify problems that caused the removal of her two other children, including mental health and anger management issues, domestic violence, and her lack of parenting skills, and that she refused to accept a case plan from a caseworker for her third child. In re Foster, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4561, 2003 Ohio 5053, (2003).

Evidence that the mother failed to obtain sufficient housing or mitigate her substance abuse problem and that she lacked parenting skills or an identifiable source of income supported a finding that the children could not be placed with the mother. In re Lowry/Owens Children, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 2821, 2003 Ohio 3166, (2003).

Termination of the parental rights of the parents pursuant to RC § 2151.414 was proper, as the parents did not remedy the conditions that caused the child's removal as was required under RC § 2151.414(E)(1), namely unsanitary conditions in the home and lack of parenting skills; the parents had poor attendance at the parenting skills class, their visits with the child did not improve, and they failed to provide a safe living environment, as a sexual predator lived in their home. In re Thomas, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5230, 2003 Ohio 5885, (2003).

In determining at a hearing held pursuant to RC § 2151.414(A) or § 2151.353(A)(4) whether a child cannot be placed with either parent within a reasonable period of time or should not be placed with the parents, the court shall consider all relevant evidence; in an action for the termination of parental custody, because a mother failed to successfully complete a reunification program, primarily because she continued to use drugs and failed to regularly visit her children, the termination was affirmed. In re L.A., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4312, 2003 Ohio 4790, (2003).

Termination of a mother's parental right was proper where the child was with child services for 12 or more months; the record showed the mother had abandoned the child and the mother's parental rights to a son been previously been terminated. In re Cornell, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4504, 2003 Ohio 5007, (2003).

The mother's homelessness and unstable relationships showed that awarding permanent custody to the agency was in the best interest of the children. In re Joshua B., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 2797, 2003 Ohio 3096, (2003).

Evidence that, inter alia, the children were removed from the mother's custody after both drug-addicted parents were arrested for domestic violence, the children were doing well with a foster family, the father was incarcerated for three years and did not see the children for four years after, the mother also was in jail and failed to abide by a case plan or attend all scheduled visits with the children, and the mother missed court hearings and owed fines, supported a grant of permanent custody to a children services board. In re Hibbard, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 6110, 2003 Ohio 6784, (2003).

Permanent custody to a social service agency and a termination of parental rights was proper where the trial court found, as required by RC § 2151.414(D), that such placement was in the children's interests; they had been adjudicated as dependent, the home was filthy, they were happy in foster care, and their parents did not follow through on parenting plans. In re Julia G., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5570, 2003 Ohio 6196, (2003).

Finding that it was in the child's best interest to be permanently placed in the custody of child services was proper where the mother was not emotionally or financially able to care for the child. In re Cornett, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4397, 2003 Ohio 4871, (2003).

Trial court did not err in granting permanent custody of the parents' two youngest children to the county department of children and job services, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(B)(1), (D), where two psychologists testified that both children resided in horrific and unsanitary living conditions, had been sexually victimized by their older siblings, were subject to abuse and neglect from their father, had each developed adjustment and post-traumatic stress disorders, and experienced impaired emotional, social, and academic functioning after visits with their parents; thus, a lack of an in camera interview of the two children did not amount to a reversible due process error. In re Beresh Children, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4420, 2003 Ohio 4898, (2003).

Award of permanent custody of a mother's two boys to the county was proper, as they had bonded with their foster family and wanted to remain there, and were afraid of their mother, who neglected them and failed to recognize their special needs, and of their older brother, who they alleged sexually abused them. In re M.H., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 6445, 2003 Ohio 7053, (2003).

Evidence supported the termination of the mother's parental rights since: (1) she only sporadically visited with her child and failed to visit her at all for four months; (2) she refused to complete court-ordered services; (3) the child was "somewhat" bonded to the mother, but "very bonded" to her foster family; (4) the mother was incapable of meeting her own needs, lacked stable housing and lacked stable employment; (5) the child had spent more than 12 of a consecutive 22-month period in a children's services board's custody and could not be placed with her parent within a reasonable time. In re Ebenschweiger, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5325, 2003 Ohio 5990, (2003).

Juvenile court did not fail to consider every factor under RC § 2151.414(D) because, not only did the court find the child was unable to state her own preference on the question of permanent custody, but it also found that the guardian ad litem had given his opinion that permanent custody was in the child's best interest. In re Salsgiver, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5708, 2003 Ohio 6420, (2003).

Trial court's determination, based upon the recommendations of a magistrate, to grant permanent custody to a social services agency was supported by sufficient findings of fact and conclusions of law pursuant to RC § 2151.414(B)(1), where it was found that the father had not remedied the conditions that led to his minor children's removal, his housing was inadequate and unsafe for the children, he struggled with drugs, and he failed to attend many of the agency's scheduled meetings; the court also assessed the factors of RC § 2151.414(D) and found that it was in the children's best interests to terminate the father's parental rights. In re Kincer, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5689, 2003 Ohio 6356, (2003).

Trial court did not err in awarding permanent custody to Department of Children and Family Services where the child was in the Department's temporary custody for 12 of the past consecutive 22 months, the Department could not place the child with either parent due to neglect and abuse, the guardian ad litem recommended permanent custody of the Department, and the child bonded with the foster mother more than the mother. In re Wilcoxon, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5368, 2003 Ohio 6046, (2003).

Permanent custody with the agency was in the best interest of the children because the mother remained unable to protect either child from abuse where she continued to live with the stepfather who had committed the abuse and refused to believe that the daughter had been abused. In re Zorns, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5020, 2003 Ohio 5664, (2003), appeal denied by 100 Ohio St. 3d 1547, 2003 Ohio 6879, 800 N.E.2d 752, 2003 Ohio LEXIS 3528 (2003).

Placing children in the permanent custody of a children services agency was proper where (1) the children had little or no bond with their father and their interactions with him were permeated with threatened or actual physical violence, anger, negativity, and resentment; (2) the guardian ad litem recommended that the agency be given permanent custody; (3) they had been in the agency's custody over 12 months of a consecutive 22-month period; (4) adoptive placements with the children's relatives would greatly benefit them. In re Damron, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5171, 2003 Ohio 5810, (2003).

Trial court properly granted a children's services motion for permanent custody where the mother's parental rights to five other children had been terminated and the father's parental rights to two other children had been terminated. In re Kristiana B., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4768, 2003 Ohio 5268, (2003).

Termination of parental rights was appropriate where the parent failed to complete her case plan and had not particularly bonded with the child. In re Campbell, 138 Ohio App. 3d 786, 742 N.E.2d 663 (2000).

Termination of parental rights was appropriate where the father had continually abused the mother and there was no credible evidence that she would discontinue the relationship. In re Glenn, 139 Ohio App. 3d 105, 742 N.E.2d 1210 (2000).

Repeated evictions, subsisting in a two-bedroom apartment without gas or appliances, the inability to meet a $250 rent payment on a $1600 monthly income, rejection of budget counseling, and total lack of cooperation with caseworkers and service providers supported a finding under RC 2151.41.4(E) that parents were unwilling to provide necessities for their children or prevent them from suffering neglect. In re Scott O., 1999 Ohio App. LEXIS 4301 (6th Dist. 1999).

Clear and convincing evidence supported the decision of the trial court to permanently terminate a mother's parental rights over her son and grant permanent custody to DHS where almost six years had passed since the original dependency complaint was filed and the child had been in foster care for three years, especially where the mother had a history of mental illness with an uncertain prognosis. In re Brock, 1998 Ohio App. LEXIS 3965 (1998).

The court's determination that the children could not be returned to their mother's custody as required by RC § 2151.41.4(E) was amply supported by clear and convincing evidence where the record showed that the mother had not contacted her children for at least five months and that for a period of approximately six months, she had failed to visit her children and had not been actively working toward reunification with them. Prater v. Prater (In re Ross), 1998 Ohio App. LEXIS 4496 (1998).

Termination of parents' rights was clearly proper where the children and their home were continually maintained in a filthy condition for a long period of time and the children lacked suitable supervision. In re Meyer, 98 Ohio App. 3d 189, 648 N.E.2d 52 (1994).

It was not error for the court to terminate the parents' rights considering their continuing problems with drug addiction, periodic incarceration and sporadic attempts to cooperate in the reunification plan. In re Weaver, 79 Ohio App. 3d 59, 606 N.E.2d 1011 (1992).

The court did not err by terminating the mother's parental rights where, after the children's father was convicted of sexually molesting them and imprisoned, she took up residence with another convicted child molester. In re Kutzli, 71 Ohio App. 3d 843, 595 N.E.2d 1026 (1991).

Failure to remedy conditions

Father's assertion that the trial court was required to find that the parents failed to remedy the conditions causing the daughter's removal for a period of six months or more was meritless. RC § 2151.414(E)(1) does not require the trial court to expressly find that the parents have failed to remedy the conditions for a period of six months or more. In re Gallion, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3095, 2006 Ohio 3204, (2006).

Family counseling

Child services agency diligently assisted a mother for purposes of RC § 2151.414(E)(1) where: (1) the agency did not hinder family counseling, but family counseling was not begun because the children were not ready for family counseling, (2) family counseling might have been inappropriate because of the mother's slow progress as she failed to show an appropriate affect and emotional response to the children's abuse, (3) the mother failed to take down a picture of her boyfriend, who sexually abused the children, until after he was convicted, and (4) the mother continued to live with the boyfriend until he was convicted. In re Nelson, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 5926, 2005 Ohio 6600, (2005).

Foster care

Trial court properly considered the child's relationship with her foster parents prior to granting permanent custody of the child to the agency. Although neither foster parent testified at the dispositional hearing, the trial court noted that the guardian ad litem reported that the child was healthy and happy and had been safe and well cared for in foster care. In re H.M., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 726, 2006 Ohio 819, (2006).

In a case where a child suffered from several mental disorders and was placed in foster care, the trial court considered the statutory factors in RC § 2151.414(D)(1) and (2), and that those factors favor keeping the child in a planned permanent living arrangement pursuant to RC § 2151.353(A)(5)(a) in his current foster home rather than awarding permanent custody to the county child services agency because the child's counselor testified about the disadvantages associated with removing the child from his current foster home, including a loss of security, stability, and trust. In re Priser, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1160, 2004 Ohio 1315, (2004).

Testimony provided competent, credible evidence to support the trial court's conclusion that granting permanent custody to the agency was in the child's best interest. Although the foster mother expressed concerns about adopting the child due to her age, she informed the agency that she wanted the child to remain in her care until an adoptive home could be found for him, she was willing to assist in the transition of the child from her home into a new home, and she testified that he was adoptable as he was a very open and friendly child in spite of his health problems. In re Robinson, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1583, 2004 Ohio 1776, (2004).

Trial court's finding that the best interests of the minor child would be served by granting permanent custody to the county department of job and family services was not against the manifest weight of the evidence where the child: (1) had no current developmental, behavioral or medical problems; (2) resided in the same foster home with a sibling, and her foster family was willing to adopt her; and (3) was more bonded with her foster mother than with her biological mother. In re Adams, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1570, 2004 Ohio 1770, (2004).

The court did not abuse its discretion by continuing long-term foster care, rather than grant the agency's motion for permanent custody: In re Tanker, 142 Ohio App. 3d 159, 754 N.E.2d 813 (2001).

Where, upon hearing a motion requesting permanent custody of a child, a court decides to deny the motion, the court may proceed in accordance with RC § 2151.41.5 and make any disposition listed in that statute, including placement of a child in long-term foster care: In re McDaniel, 1993 Ohio App. LEXIS 806 (4th Dist. 1993).

The foster parents were not entitled to be made parties to the proceedings to accept the mother's permanent voluntary surrender of rights: In re Franklin, 88 Ohio App. 3d 277, 623 N.E.2d 720 (1993).

Guardian ad litem

In a parental rights termination proceeding pursuant to RC § 2151.414, there was no error in the trial court's appointment of an agency volunteer as the children's guardian ad litem, as there was no statutory requirement that a guardian also be a licensed attorney pursuant to Ohio R. Juv. P. 32. In re D.R., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3471, 2006 Ohio 3513, (2006).

Mother failed to demonstrate that the trial court erred for failing to sua sponte appoint a guardian ad litem, under RC § 2151.281(C) and Ohio R. Juv. P. 4 (B)(3), or that her trial counsel was ineffective for failing to request such an appointment because there was nothing in the record to suggest that the mother appeared incompetent at the time she voluntarily relinquished her parental rights. There was nothing in the record to indicate the extent to which, if at all, the mother's mental health issues impeded her ability to understand and participate in the proceedings and the record actually demonstrated that she took affirmative steps to attempt to assist in her case. In re D.C.H., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3873, 2005 Ohio 4257, (2005).

Any error associated with the guardian ad litem's questioning was not plain as the mother did not establish that the guardian ad litem's questioning of witnesses seriously affected the basic fairness, integrity, or public reputation of the judicial process. In re Curry, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 691, 2004 Ohio 750, (2004).

No conflict of interest existed for the guardian ad litem in the permanent custody hearing because, while his prior representation of the mother's husband's ex-wife did deal with a domestic violence incident involving the husband, the facts of that incident were before the court, and the position taken in his prior representation of the ex-wife was not inconsistent with his current position regarding the husband. Additionally, any confidential information gained through the guardian ad litem's representation of the ex-wife was covered under the attorney/client privilege. In re Morgan, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 3653, 2004 Ohio 4018, (2004).

Juvenile court was not required to determine whether the recommendation of the guardian ad litem, that the county family welfare agency be granted permanent custody of the minor son, had changed after evidence was presented at the hearing on the county family welfare agency's motion for permanent custody, as RC § 2151.414(C) only required that the guardian ad litem submit a written report to the juvenile court prior to or at the time of the permanent custody hearing, and the guardian ad litem did so. In re Krems, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2584, 2004 Ohio 2449, (2004).

In considering permanent custody of a county child services board (CSB) was in a child's best interest, the trial court did not have the authority to give less weight to the testimony of the child's guardian ad litem than that of the CSB caseworker; RC § 2151.414(D)(2) explicitly requires a trial court to consider a guardian ad litem's report. In re C. M., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4553, 2003 Ohio 5040, (2003).

Guardian ad litem's report

While the weight to be given to a guardian ad litem report is always within the prerogative of the trial court, when the trial court renders a decision which goes against the specific recommendation of the guardian ad litem, the trial court must at least address the reasons for doing so. In re D.H., — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1605, 2007 Ohio 1762, (Apr. 16, 2007).

There was no error in the permanent custody proceeding because the mother invited any error regarding admission of the guardian ad litem's report. The mother chose not to call the guardian ad litem to the stand or otherwise make inquiry on the record, even though the guardian ad litem was present at the trial. In re Morales/Mendez Children, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6349, 2006 Ohio 6403, (2006).

Trial court's consideration of hearsay evidence contained in a guardian's report for purposes of making a permanent custody determination in a parental rights termination proceeding was error pursuant to Ohio R. Juv. P. 34 and RC § 2151.414(C); however, such error was deemed harmless where the consideration given to that evidence was minimal and there was an abundance of admissible evidence that supported the trial court's determination that permanent custody should be granted to a county social service agency. In re Hilyard, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1808, 2006 Ohio 1977, (2006).

Where a father failed to argue in the trial court that a guardian ad litem for his child did not file a written report in compliance with RC § 2151.414(C), that error was waived for purposes of review on appeal. In re M.W., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 1273, 2005 Ohio 1302, (2005), criticized by In re A.S., 163 Ohio App. 3d 647, 2005 Ohio 5309, 839 N.E.2d 972, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 4830 (Ohio Ct. App., Summit County 2005), criticized by In re A.B., 2005 Ohio 4936, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 4466 (Ohio Ct. App., Summit County Sept. 21, 2005).

Father's claim that he was prejudiced because the guardian ad litem filed his report on the day of the permanent custody hearing instead of five days prior to the hearing was without merit because, under RC § 2151.414(C), the guardian ad litem may file a report on the day of the hearing. Moreover, the guardian ad litem took the stand and was available for cross-examination. In re Woods, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3284, 2005 Ohio 3561, (2005).

Although a report of a guardian ad litem in a children's services agency's permanent custody proceeding should have been filed either before or at the time of the hearing, and not afterward, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(C), the mother waived any objection to the later submission of the report by stipulating to the late filing at the hearing. Such assignment of error as to the late filing was therefore waived because no error was asserted in the trial court. In re Lane, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2486, 2004 Ohio 2798, (2004).

Pursuant to RC § 2151.414(C), a guardian ad litem may submit a written report prior to a hearing held by the trial court, but it shall not be submitted under oath. In re Johns, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3278, 2003 Ohio 3621, (2003).

RC § 2151.414(C) only requires that a guardian ad litem's report be submitted to the trial court, not that it be filed with the court clerk; thus, where such a report was made a part of the trial exhibits in a proceeding to terminate the parental rights of a mother over her minor child, RC § 2151.414(C) was satisfied. In re R.K., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5675, 2003 Ohio 6333, (2003).

In a permanent custody hearing seeking termination of a mother's parental rights, there was no showing of prejudice where the guardian ad litem's report was submitted and "passed around" at the hearing, but it was not filed until immediately following the hearing, as it did not violate the purpose of RC § 2151.414(C), since the mother was given a full opportunity to submit evidence or arguments regarding the guardian ad litem's recommendation that permanent custody be awarded to the department of children services; in addition, the failure to meet the time periods set forth in RC § 2151.414(A)(2) did not violate the statute or provide a basis for attacking the validity of the judgment awarding permanent custody to the department, where there was no demonstration of affirmative prejudice resulting from the delay. In re James, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4657, 2003 Ohio 5208, (2003).

In a permanent custody proceeding in which the guardian ad litem's report will be a factor in the trial court's decision, parties to the proceeding have the right to cross-examine the guardian ad litem concerning the contents of the report and the basis for a custody recommendation: In re Hoffman, 97 Ohio St. 3d 92, 776 N.E.2d 485, 2002 Ohio 5368, (2002).

Parent's assertion of having been prejudiced as a result of guardian ad litem's failure to submit her report in a timely manner had no merit where such error was not brought to the court's attention at a time when it could have been avoided or corrected by the court: In re Piatt, 1999 Ohio App. LEXIS 3085 (3rd Dist. 1999).

The specific provisions of RC § 2151.41.4 permitting the guardian ad litem's report to be submitted on the day of the permanent custody hearing prevail over RC § 2317.39. The report of the guardian ad litem may be submitted to the court at the time of the hearing regardless of the notice provided the parties: In re Watts, 1995 Ohio App. LEXIS 4438 (9th Dist. 1995).

Habeas corpus

Habeas corpus relief was not available to overturn an award of permanent custody to the agency where a parent had notice of the hearing and was provided with counsel, but failed to appear. Further, an award of custody to the parent would have been contrary to the child's best interest: Ross v. Saros, 99 Ohio St. 3d 412, 792 N.E.2d 1126, 2003 Ohio 4128, (2003).

A parent was not entitled to habeas corpus in a child custody case where it was contrary to the best interests of the children and she had the adequate remedy of contesting the award of permanent custody to the state: Holloway v. Clermont County Dep't of Human Servs., 80 Ohio St. 3d 128, 684 N.E.2d 1217, 1997 Ohio 131, (1997).

Hearings

Trial court did not abuse its discretion by attempting to protect the 17-year-old child from what it believed would cause her to suffer additional trauma. The trial court stated that it was not allowing the child to be present because the testimony in the first hearing was traumatic for her and the trial court did not wish for her to witness additional testimony and suffer additional trauma. Also, the agency's motion for permanent custody of that child was denied. Since she did not appeal and the mother showed no personal prejudice, the mother had no standing to raise the issue on the child's behalf. In re Sherman, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6436, 2006 Ohio 6485, (2006).

Trial court erred when it failed to afford the mother the opportunity to cross-examine the guardian ad litem on her report, which was untimely pursuant to RC § 2151.414(C). A complete reversal was not required however because the due process violation was singular and could be cured by remanding the matter for an evidentiary hearing on the guardian ad litem's report. In re Kangas, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3380, 2006 Ohio 3433, (2006).

There was no error in failing to commence the permanent custody hearing (RC § 2151.414) anew after counsel was appointed for the children, pursuant to Ohio R. Juv. P. 4 and RC § 2151.352, because the conflict between the guardian ad litem's recommendation and the children's wishes only became apparent after the hearing had commenced. The error was waived since the mother failed to object, pursuant to Ohio R. Juv. P. 40(3)(a)(i); the attorney declined the opportunity to call other witnesses who had testified at the earlier hearing, with full knowledge of what those witnesses had said, because the attorney was provided a transcript of that earlier hearing; and after the attorney was appointed to represent the children, the mother could no longer claim standing to object that the children's rights in the subsequent proceedings were violated. In re R.E., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1145, 2006 Ohio 1256, (2006).

Trial court did not commit plain error in permitting the children's services agency to pose the questions to the father on cross-examination in the permanent custody proceeding, regarding the inadequacy of the child's crib, his lack of baby supplies, and his ability to keep the child safe, because the father never questioned if the agency had a good faith basis for the questions. Since the father was present at the adjudicatory hearing, was represented by counsel, and did not contest the allegations or appeal the judgment, the allegations in the complaint were deemed true. In re H.M.S., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 614, 2006 Ohio 701, (2006).

Trial court erred in terminating a mother's parental rights to her children, because the trial court improperly failed to hold a best interests hearing prior to the termination as required by RC § 2151.414(D). In re Robinson/Brooks, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 333, 2004 Ohio 376, (2004).

Where a mother's counsel might have known of local custom concerning the designation of courtroom 60 in a notice of hearing, there was no evidence to support an inference that he informed her of this custom; therefore, when the court notice directed the mother to a non-existent courtroom the notice of a permanent custody hearing was inadequate and the order divesting the mother of custody was therefore reversed. In re Babbs, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 542, 2004 Ohio 583, (2004).

In considering a motion filed by a public children services agency requesting permanent custody of a child, the trial court is required to hold a hearing regarding the motion, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(A)(1), to determine whether the child's best interests would be served by permanently terminating the parental relationship and by awarding permanent custody to the agency; the order to grant permanent custody of a minor child to the child services department was affirmed because the evidence supported the finding that a legally secure permanent placement could not be achieved without terminating the parents' custody. In re Riley, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3657, 2003 Ohio 4108, (2003).

The requirement of separate adjudicatory and dispositional hearings is not met where an adjudication order is filed prior to the dispositional hearing: In re Knotts, 109 Ohio App. 3d 267, 671 N.E.2d 1357 (1996).

Under the circumstances, the inmate-parent's rights were not violated by denial of her motion to attend the custody termination hearing: In re Sprague, 113 Ohio App. 3d 274, 680 N.E.2d 1041 (1996).

Where the hearsay evidence concerned only the issue of abuse and the court found in the parents' favor on that issue, its admission into evidence was not prejudicial. The prohibition concerning the introduction of "dispositional" evidence into adjudicatory proceedings is not so much the nature of the evidence as for what purpose it is admitted: In re S., 102 Ohio App. 3d 338, 657 N.E.2d 307 (1995).

Pursuant to OConst art IV, § 5(B), JuvR 2(1) prevails over RC § 2151.35, making a hearing under RC § 2151.41.4 an adjudicatory hearing. A bifurcated hearing is not required under RC § 2151.41.4. Hearsay is ordinarily inadmissible in an adjudicatory proceeding, but the exception provided in RC § 2151.35(F) is applicable to RC § 2151.41.4: In re Brofford, 83 Ohio App. 3d 869, 615 N.E.2d 1120 (1992).

Upon a motion under RC § 2151.41.3 to convert temporary custody to permanent custody, the court need hold only one hearing, which will be adjudicatory in its procedural nature to determine if it is in the child's best interest to do so: In re Hopkins, 78 Ohio App. 3d 92, 603 N.E.2d 1138 (1992).

At a hearing held pursuant to RC § 2151.41.4 to determine whether a children services agency should be granted permanent custody of a child, the trial court commits reversible error where it limits the evidence to factual matters occurring before the filing of the motion for permanent custody and refuses to consider evidence, proffered by a parent, relating to adequacy of parental care and based on facts occurring after the filing of the motion: In re Foust, 57 Ohio App. 3d 149, 567 N.E.2d 1042 (1989).

A hearing under RC § 2151.41.4 procedurally is determined to be an adjudicatory hearing at least up to the point where the best interests of the child are to be considered. Traditionally, the best interests of the child have been deemed an inappropriate subject for the adjudicatory hearing and appropriate for the dispositional phase. Thus, in the main, a bifurcated hearing is required: In re Lucas, 29 Ohio App. 3d 165, 29 Ohio B. 194, 504 N.E.2d 472 (1985).

A juvenile court does not err in failing to bifurcate a hearing on a motion for permanent custody into adjudicatory and dispositional stages where no dispositional option is available, i.e., either the motion is granted, in which case the mother's parental rights are terminated, or else the motion is denied: In re Jones, 29 Ohio App. 3d 176, 29 Ohio B. 206, 504 N.E.2d 719 (1985).

In conducting the adjudicatory phase of the hearing under RC § 2151.41.4, the best interests of the child should not enter into the determination of whether the child is receiving adequate parental care. The focus, at this stage, is on the parents and on what they are providing in terms of food, shelter and care, as well as what they are capable of providing in the future: In re Vickers Children, 14 Ohio App. 3d 201, 14 Ohio B. 228, 470 N.E.2d 438 (1983).

Hearings for permanent custody under RC § 2151.41.4 must conform to the Rules of Juvenile Procedure. Hence, pursuant to JuvR 29 and 34, the proceedings should be bifurcated into separate adjudicatory and dispositional stages: In re Vickers Children, 14 Ohio App. 3d 201, 14 Ohio B. 228, 470 N.E.2d 438 (1983).

Incarcerated parent

There was sufficient evidence that granting permanent custody to the children's services agency, under RC § 2151.414(D), was in the children's best interest because the father was serving 15 years to life in prison for murder and his first parole date would not occur until his daughter was 19 years old and his son was 17 years old. Additionally, the children were two and five years of age at the time that their father was sentenced to prison; the father had been incarcerated for the past 11 years of the lives of his children; and his sole means of contact had been through the telephone and letters. In re Lenix, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1189, 2006 Ohio 1294, (2006).

Evidence showed that it was in the best interest of a father's children, under RC § 2151.414(D), to terminate the father's parental rights. The father, the children's primary caregiver, had been in a community-based correctional facility for domestic violence and had been later placed in a state institution because of his convictions for drug use, he had declined treatment, and he had failed to maintain housing for himself and his two children. In re Douglas, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4348, 2006 Ohio 4431, (2006).

Evidence showed that a grant of permanent custody to a children services agency was in the child's best interest. The mother's visits with the child failed to progress beyond weekly monitored visits, the child had developed a loving relationship with the foster family, the foster parents expressed an interest in adopting the child, the child had spent almost her entire life outside of the mother's custody, and the child was in need of a legally secure placement, which neither the mother nor the father could offer. In re A. K., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4245, 2006 Ohio 4307, (2006).

Trial court's finding that the children could not or should not be placed with the father within a reasonable time for the grant of permanent custody to the children's services agency, pursuant to RC § 2151.414, was supported by sufficient evidence because the father was serving 15 years to life in prison for murder. His parole date, May of 2007, was more than 18 months after the filing of the motion for permanent custody, and more than 18 months after the hearing, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(E)(12), and that finding was sufficient to meet the first prong of a permanent custody

Fact that the juvenile court erred in finding that a father would be incarcerated for four more years and would not be available to care for his sons for at least 18 months after the filing of a motion for permanent custody or the dispositional hearing was harmless error as the juvenile court's finding that the sons could not be placed with their father within a reasonable time or should not be placed with their father was supported by clear and convincing evidence. In re Jason S., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 643, 2006 Ohio 726, (2006).

Trial court's finding, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(a), that a mother could not be prepared to parent her son in a reasonable period of time was proper since the mother was incarcerated at the time of the hearing, and it was unknown when she would be released from jail. Moreover, since the son's maternal grandmother had mostly raised the mother's older children, the trial court reasonably could have had doubts about the mother's preparedness to parent a small child who had special needs or whether the mother could be prepared to parent a small child with special needs within a reasonable period of time. In re V.H., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 488, 2006 Ohio 532, (2006).

In a termination of parental rights proceeding under RC § 2151.414, the finding that the child could not be placed with mother within a reasonable period of time was supported by evidence that the mother was in a federal prison due to drug related charges, that she had a long history of substance abuse, that other children had been taken from her before, that she failed to complete her case plan, and that she had not visited the child for almost two years. In re Wilks, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5396, 2006 Ohio 5404, (2006).

Clear and convincing evidence supported a trial court's termination of a father's parental rights over his minor children pursuant to RC § 2151.414(B)(1), (D), and (E) where his repeated incarcerations prevented him from providing care for his children, he failed to complete court-ordered services, had no contact with them for nine months prior to the termination proceeding, and he had abused or neglected the children. He clearly did not demonstrate a "clear commitment" to his children, as his whereabouts after his most recent release from incarceration were unknown and he failed to attend classes after he was accused of molesting his daughter in order to attempt to lessen the likelihood of any potential reoccurrences of that behavior, such that his actions constituted abandonment pursuant to RC § 2151.01(C). In re Kuashean P., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3553, 2006 Ohio 3606, (2006).

Evidence that a child's father had been incarcerated since three months after the child was born, that the father had completed only one objective of the case plan, that he had gone more than ninety days without providing for the support of the child, that the father had an extensive criminal history, that the father had three other children in whose lives he had not participated because of prior incarcerations, and that the child's foster parents had expressed an interest in adopting the child supported the trial court's finding that the child could not be placed with a biological parent within a reasonable time and that awarding permanent custody to a family services agency was in the child's best interests. In re Weatherspoon, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6348, 2006 Ohio 6402, (2006).

Trial court's grant of permanent custody of a father's minor daughter to a county family service agency, with an adoptive placement, was supported by clear and convincing evidence, as the trial court found two of the four criteria set forth in RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(a) through (d) to be applicable, and found that such custody was in the child's best interest, based on the fact that her parents were both incarcerated, she was almost 10 years old and indicated that she did not wish to live with her parents, she had bonded with the foster family, and there was a finding that the child could not be placed with either parent within a reasonable time. In re Noda, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2093, 2005 Ohio 2213, (2005).

Trial court did not err in granting permanent custody to a county children services board on the ground that the father was not afforded enough time to comply with a case plan because the father's own actions, including his frequent incarcerations, caused specifically structured case plan services to be unavailable to him.

Guardian ad litem's report, filed as part of the record, was sufficient to establish that the father would still be incarcerated 18 months from the filing of the agency's motion for permanent custody of his children as it established the mandatory sentence under Ohio's truth-in-sentencing law; thus, the termination of the father's parental rights was supported by sufficient evidence. In re Tate, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 6803, 2004 Ohio 7316, (2004).

There was no abuse of discretion in determining that the child could not be reunited with the father within a reasonable period of time, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(E), because the father had been incarcerated since before the child was born and the child would be two and one-half years old before the father was released. In re Burton, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 3652, 2004 Ohio 4021, (2004), appeal denied by 103 Ohio St. 3d 1495, 2004 Ohio 5605, 816 N.E.2d 1081, 2004 Ohio LEXIS 2584 (2004).

Trial court's termination of the father's parental rights was supported by clear and convincing evidence; the Clinton County Children Services Board, who had custody of the child for more than 12 of 22 consecutive months, was not required to implement a case plan with the father, because the father intentionally avoided contact with the Board and the child during the proceeding, the Board made reasonable efforts to locate the father, the father had not seen or supported the child in five years, and the father was to be incarcerated for more than a year. In re K.S., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1960, 2004 Ohio 2208, (2004).

Trial court properly used the length of the father's incarceration as a relevant factor in the determination of the best interests of the children in terminating a father's parental rights; also, the trial court could have terminated the father's parental rights because of the length of time the children were in the temporary custody of the agency but the court was required to terminate the father's parental rights for failure to follow the case plan and for showing a lack of commitment to the children. In re Myers, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 493, 2004 Ohio 539, (2004).

Trial court properly found that the child services board was not required to attempt to reunite a minor child with her mother and father because of the court's finding, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(E)(11), that parental rights for a sibling had previously been terminated due to the inability of the parents to have a stable home for the child; specifically, the mother, who was incarcerated, had parental rights terminated for five different children on two prior occasions and the father for two children on one occasion. In re Richardson, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1876, 2004 Ohio 2170, (2004).

Where a magistrate considered a father's incarceration and the child's allegation of sexual abuse, the magistrate clearly set out the "other factors" under RC § 2151.414(E)(16) that could substitute for one of the § 2151.414(E)(1)-(15) findings; as a result, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in terminating the father's parental rights. In re Kaylee T., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1978, 2004 Ohio 2227, (2004).

Trial court was within its discretion in finding under RC §§ 2151.011(C) and 2151.414(B)(1)(b) that the child was abandoned due to the lack of visitation during the father's period of incarceration; the father conceded in his brief that he did not have contact with the child for more than 90 days. In re Wright, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 960, 2004 Ohio 1094, (2004).

Trial court properly granted permanent custody of two children to children's services agency as the mother was serving almost 15 years in prison with little chance for clemency, the father was deceased, and none of the mother's relatives was willing to assume permanent custody. In re McDonald, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4325, 2003 Ohio 4808, (2003).

When a trial court found that a mother whose parental rights it terminated was habitually incarcerated, it was authorized, under RC § 2151.414(E)(13), to find that the mother's children could not be returned to her. In re Vance, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 6328, 2003 Ohio 6991, (2003).

RC § 2151.414(E)(12) provides two alternative dates from which the 18-month period of incarceration can run: the date of the filing of the motion for permanent custody "or" the date of the dispositional hearing. In re V.S., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5002, 2003 Ohio 5612, (2003).

Evidence that a parent is repeatedly incarcerated may be used to establish that a child cannot or should not be placed with a parent within a reasonable time. Because RC § 2151.41.4 places no time limit on evidence of past convictions, it was not error for the court to admit it: In re Woodall, 2001 Ohio App. LEXIS 2600 (9th Dist. 2001).

Incarcerated parent's due process rights were not violated when parent was represented by counsel at the permanent custody hearing, a full record of the proceedings was made, and parent could present any testimony by means of deposition: In re Frasher, 1997 Ohio App. LEXIS 3746 (9th Dist. 1997).

The right of an incarcerated parent to attend a permanent custody hearing is within the sound discretion of the court: State ex rel. Vanderlaan v. Pollex, 96 Ohio App. 3d 235, 644 N.E.2d 1073 (1994).

The court did not err by terminating the mother's parental rights where she was repeatedly incarcerated and repeatedly violated the reunification plan: In re Grant, 81 Ohio App. 3d 59, 610 N.E.2d 460 (1991).

Where the sole parent's term of imprisonment is a lengthy one, such imprisonment may be a significant factor in determining whether the parent has acted so as to leave the child without adequate parental care. Should such imprisonment satisfy the standard of clear and convincing evidence that the child is without adequate parental care, the continuing imprisonment of the parent may likewise be considered in determining whether such deprivation will continue. Under such circumstances, the imprisoned parent's rights may be properly terminated: In re Hederson, 30 Ohio App. 3d 187, 30 Ohio B. 329, 507 N.E.2d 418 (1986).

Ineffective assistance of counsel

In a permanent custody proceeding, under RC § 2151.414(E), a mother did not show she received ineffective assistance of counsel when her counsel did not object to the denial of a motion for a continuance made at trial on behalf of the father of one of her children because the motion was properly denied, as the father did not tell his counsel he was incarcerated, so his counsel could not give the court or the parties earlier notice of the continuance motion or seek to have him brought to court, and his counsel protected his rights. In re E.S.B., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4950, 2006 Ohio 5002, (2006).

In a permanent custody proceeding, under RC § 2151.414(E), a mother did not show she received ineffective assistance of counsel when her counsel did not raise a failure to serve notice of the proceeding on the father of one of her children at his last known address because he previously appeared and received actual notice of the permanent custody trial date, as well as of the permanent custody motion, and said he agreed with granting the motion, so the mother could not raise any alleged service errors which did not prejudice him, and no such errors prejudiced her. In re E.S.B., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4950, 2006 Ohio 5002, (2006).

Mother failed to demonstrate that she received ineffective assistance of counsel in her permanent custody hearing because, rather than prejudice her interest, the failure to appoint independent counsel for the child was favorable to the mother's interests in as much as the child's counsel would have had to advocate strongly for the termination of the mother's parental rights. In re Kangas, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3380, 2006 Ohio 3433, (2006).

Mother did not receive ineffective assistance of counsel in a permanent custody proceeding due to her counsel failing to seek the appointment of independent counsel for her children because the magistrate hearing the matter adequately considered the issue, and, given the children's conflicting statements about whether or not they wanted to live with their mother, the appointment of such counsel was unnecessary. In re Graham, 167 Ohio App. 3d 284, 854 N.E.2d 1126, 2006 Ohio 3170, (2006).

Mother failed to establish that her counsel's performance during the permanent custody proceedings was deficient in any form and she failed to show prejudice resulting from any alleged deficiency. The fact that her counsel sought to have a different attorney appointed did not demonstrate deficient performance, and the mother failed to demonstrate that she was prejudiced in any manner by having a second counsel appointed. In re Shrider, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2641, 2006 Ohio 2792, (2006).

Father did not receive ineffective assistance of counsel during the permanent custody proceedings because the father waived his right to counsel since he did not apply for counsel prior to the hearing and he failed to assert any prejudice deriving from his lack of counsel at the shelter care hearing. Also, counsel's withdrawal of the motion seeking payment for anger management counseling appeared to be a tactical decision within the realm of reasonable professional judgment and fails to establish ineffective assistance of counsel. In re E. T., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2308, 2006 Ohio 2413, (2006).

Mother failed to demonstrate that she received ineffective assistance of counsel because constitutional challenges to RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d) had been consistently rejected, counsel's decision not to cross-examine the guardian ad litem was within the realm of reasonable trial strategy, and the mother was not prejudiced by the presence of the caseworker throughout the trial court proceedings. In re E.W., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2431, 2006 Ohio 2609, (2006).

In proceedings on an agency's motion seeking permanent custody of a mother's child, the mother did not show her counsel provided ineffective assistance by stipulating to the admission of records, as this was an acceptable strategic choice, and the mother was not prejudiced because she testified and could have rebutted any inaccuracies in the records, but, instead, her testimony confirmed damaging material in the records. In re M.C., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 944, 2006 Ohio 1041, (2006).

While it was arguable that the parents' trial counsel erred in failing to object to the agency caseworker's testimony regarding the parents' drug use during the permanent custody hearing, such alleged error was harmless because both parents admitted, under oath, that they abused illegal drugs and were convicted for such drug use. Further, certified copies of the judgment entries of the parents' convictions were admitted into evidence. In re H.M., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 726, 2006 Ohio 819, (2006).

Trial counsel did not provide deficient representation at the mother's permanent custody hearing because the choices were strategic. Trial counsel was faced with difficult choices because the evidence against the mother, even from members of her own family, was very negative. Also, by stipulating to the guardian abuse its discretion litem's report, trial counsel was able to get the positive findings into record, without eliciting details about the negative findings. In re E.H., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 348, 2006 Ohio 416, (2006).

Child failed to establish that he was provided ineffective assistance of counsel in the permanent custody proceeding because he failed to show that, but for the lack of objection by his counsel to the alleged hearsay statements, the outcome of the trial would have been different. Given the presumption that a decision not to request an in camera interview was tactical and that the trial court's finding that the child wanted to live with the mother notwithstanding the lack of an in camera interview, the failure of trial counsel to request such an interview did not constitute ineffective assistance of counsel. In re D.M., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 6067, 2005 Ohio 6740, (2005).

In a termination of parental rights proceeding, when a mother's counsel did not comply with a local rule requiring the giving of advance written notice of all potential witnesses, this was not ineffective assistance of counsel because it did not affect the trial, as opposing counsel merely asked that counsel's oral list of witnesses be placed on the record, which it was. In re Walker, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 5893, 2005 Ohio 6563, (2005).

In a termination of parental rights proceeding, it was not shown that a mother's counsel provided ineffective assistance by not calling all possible witnesses because this could have been sound trial strategy. In re Walker, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 5893, 2005 Ohio 6563, (2005).

Mother was not denied the effective assistance of counsel in a termination of parental rights proceeding as to her three children where: (1) the fact that the mother completed most of the services outlined in her case plan was admitted at trial, (2) a witness was presented who testified to the mother's "normal" visitations with the children, (3) the mother's caseworker and the children's counselor testified as to the type of commitment required to complete the case plan, (4) the mother's caseworker's testimony as to the rationale for the mother's absence was an admission of a party-opponent, and (5) there was no evidence that the trial judge considered the mother's closing argument as evidence. In re Donell F., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3806, 2005 Ohio 4175, (2005).

Father was not deprived of his right to the effective assistance of counsel in a permanent custody hearing because, even if his counsel was deficient in failing to seek an opportunity for the father, who was incarcerated, to participate in the hearing, the father did not make an effort to visit with his son during the periods of non-incarceration, failed to make attempts at reunification, and failed to cooperate in the required counseling programs, and thus, he failed to show that the outcome of the proceedings would have been different but for his counsel's deficient performance. In re Roberts, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2655, 2005 Ohio 2842, (2005).

Because the trial court made a finding pursuant to RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d) (that the children had been in the temporary custody of the agency for 12 of the previous consecutive 22 months), the agency was not required to present evidence regarding whether the children could have been returned within a reasonable amount of time. Thus, the mother was not prejudiced by counsel's failure to present evidence of her compliance with the case plan objectives in the permanent custody proceeding. In re Langford, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2196, 2005 Ohio 2304, (2005).

Where a mother clearly waived her presence at an RC § 2151.414(D)(2) in camera hearing to determine her children's wishes and did not explain her failure to appear at a parental rights termination hearing, the mother failed to show how her trial counsel was ineffective or how her due process rights under the United States and Ohio Constitutions were violated. In re Ridenour, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 321, 2005 Ohio 349, (2005).

Trial counsel did not render ineffective assistance of counsel by failing to object to the guardian ad litem's questioning of witnesses. The mother failed to overcome the strong presumption that trial counsel acted within the realm of reasonable trial strategy and that counsel was competent, and failed to show how counsel's failure to object to the guardian ad litem's questioning of witnesses prejudiced her or affected the outcome of the trial court's decision to award the agency permanent custody. The court did not commit prejudicial error by failing to appoint separate counsel where there was not evidence of a conflict of interest. The parents' counsel did not provide ineffective assistance. Infants, newborn children

Trial court's decision to award a newborn child's permanent custody to a county social service agency was supported by the evidence, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(E), where the child was initially adjudicated as dependent, pursuant to RC

§ 2151.353(A)(4), and it was determined that the child could not be placed with either of the child's parents within a reasonable time and that permanent custody in the agency was in the child's best interest, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D), (E). The mother was a heavy smoker, she had no job and no independent living arrangement, she lived with several adults, including the father of the child, who was the subject of sexual child abuse charges, she did not have custody of her other children, and she used drugs and alcohol. In re West, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2780, 2005 Ohio 2977, (2005).

Interference with marriage

Public policy against interference with a marriage was violated where the children services agency told a parent that her children would not be returned if she had any contact with her spouse and strongly encouraged her to divorce him. However, the interference did not automatically require reversal of the termination of parental rights: In re Spangler, 162 Ohio App. 3d 83, 832 N.E.2d 805, 2005 Ohio 3441, (2005).

Jurisdiction

Trial court had jurisdiction, pursuant to RC § 2151.353(E)(1) and RC § 2151.417(A), to modify or amend its prior disposition, including terminating the mother's parental rights, because, when the trial court returned the children to the mother, it specifically ordered that the agency maintain protective supervision. As such, the trial court had jurisdiction to proceed in the same case, under the same case number, when the agency asserted that the children needed to be removed from the mother's home based upon matters observed while the children remained under the agency's protective supervision. In re Peterson, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1367, 2006 Ohio 1499, (2006).

Lack of a RC § 3109.27 affidavit or pleading did not deprive the juvenile court of jurisdiction to grant permanent custody to the welfare department: In re Palmer, 12 Ohio St. 3d 194, 12 Ohio B. 259, 465 N.E.2d 1312 (1984).

Magistrate's decision

Father's due process rights were not violated by a magistrate's refusal to take additional testimony at an annual review before terminating the father's parental rights as the father's counsel acquiesced in the magistrate's proposal to hear summaries from those involved in the case, additional testimony could not erase the father's failure to complete a case plan for reunification with his child, and the father declined the magistrate's invitation to make a statement. In re M.B., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 987, 2005 Ohio 986, (2005).

Motion for permanent custody

Children services board did not have to wait 22 months before filing a motion for permanent custody of a minor child pursuant to RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d). Where the father was on notice of the termination proceeding and the fact that he was named as an alleged father for over a year before the motion for permanent custody was filed, his claim that the motion was filed less than one year after his paternity was established lacked merit, as he had sufficient time to reasonably prepare for the custody matter. In re P. C., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1088, 2004 Ohio 1230, (2004).

Motion to intervene

The order divesting the parents of rights was supported by clear and convincing evidence. Further, the grandparents did not have a right to intervene: In re Schmidt, 25 Ohio St. 3d 331, 25 Ohio B. 386, 496 N.E.2d 952 (1986).

Notice

Father was provided with appropriate notice of the permanent custody hearing, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(A)(1) and Ohio R. Juv. P. 20, because the record showed, and the father conceded, that he was personally served at the initial shelter care hearing with a summons and a copy of the permanent custody complaint. The complaint set forth the dates of the pretrial, trial, and subsequent review dates, the father was present at the pretrial hearing, and the trial court's entry noted the father's presence and reiterated the date of the permanent custody hearing on the entry. In re Zurfley/Chatman/Black Children, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 602, 2006 Ohio 683, (2006).

Father's assertion that he never received notice of a children's services agency's motion for alternate disposition and that, as a result, he was unable to inform his family members who had expressed interest in taking custody of his child so that they could appear and express their intentions, was rejected. Given the lack of interest by the father and his family members, who had not filed a motion for custody during the five-month interval between receiving notice of the judgment and the agency's filing of its motion for permanent custody, even if the father had received notice of the hearing on the motion, it was likely that the outcome would have been the same. In re Alexander, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 7005, 2006 Ohio 7083, (2006).

Where the mother asserted on appeal in the permanent custody case that she received insufficient notice, the claim failed; notice of the permanent custody hearing was given in compliance with RC § 2151.414(A)(1), as the mother received personal service of the motion for permanent custody and notice of the initial permanent custody hearing in accordance with RC § 2151.29, Ohio R. Juv. P. 16(A), and Ohio R. Juv. P. 12(A), (B), and the mother's counsel gave the mother notice of the final permanent custody hearing. In re Keith Lee P., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1719, 2004 Ohio 1976, (2004).

RC § 2151.414(A)(1) provides that a court shall schedule a hearing and give notice of the filing of the motion and RC § 2151.353(B) contains a similar notice requirement; a father, whose child was adjudicated as neglected and abused, was provided proper notice of the proceeding by which the father's parental rights were terminated. In re I.M., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 6437, 2003 Ohio 7069, (2003).

Where the trial court record indicated that a mother was personally served approximately six months after the filing of a motion by a social services agency to modify its temporary custody to permanent custody, which was seven months prior to the hearing thereon, the mandates of RC §§ 2151.414(A)(1) and 2151.29 were met; in a motion seeking permanent custody of a minor, RC § 2151.414(A)(1) requires that a parent receive notice of a hearing thereon, and pursuant to RC § 2151.29, service of the necessary papers shall be made by leaving a copy at the parent's usual place of residence. In re R.K., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5675, 2003 Ohio 6333, (2003).

Where a lack of notice denied the mother her right to defend her parental rights in a full adjudication and deprived her of due process, a permanent custody award of her child to family services was vacated and temporary custody to the agency was reinstated. In re D.H., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5784, 2003 Ohio 6478, (2003).

The social services agency used reasonable diligence in trying to identify the natural father of the child before resorting to service by publication on anyone who might claim that status: In re Mullenax, 108 Ohio App. 3d 271, 670 N.E.2d 551 (1996).

Service by publication was sufficient where mother had a history of sporadic conduct and was unable to obtain stable housing or provide the county children services board with an address to send notices: In re Cowling, 72 Ohio App. 3d 499, 595 N.E.2d 470 (1991).

Parent's drug or alcohol abuse

Finding that the termination of a mother's parental rights, pursuant to RC § 2151.414, was in the best interests of her two children was supported by the evidence in the record. Since the children services agency could not return the children to their mother due to her failure to address her drug problem, the agency had custody of the children for a substantial period of their lives, making the children's need to procure a secure placement a priority. In re OJ, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 225, 2006 Ohio 286, (2006).

Trial court did not lose its way in concluding that permanent custody was in the children's best interest because the mother was alcohol and drug dependent, she continued to be involved in violent relationships, and she was unable to adequately parent the children; the older child had taken on the parental role since the mother acted more like a child. In re T. E., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 204, 2006 Ohio 254, (2006).

Although the parents' relationship with their daughter may have been loving and appropriate, it was in the child's best interest that the agency be granted permanent custody. While the parents completed portions of their case plan for reunification with the child, neither had demonstrated an ability to refrain from illegal drug use throughout the time the child had been in the temporary custody of the agency. In re H.M., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 726, 2006 Ohio 819, (2006).

Since a mother's children had been in the custody of a children services agency for 12 or more months of a consecutive 22-month period, RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d) was met as to both children. Further, the record supported a finding that the conditions of § 2151.414(B)(1)(a) were met, in that the children could not be returned to the mother in a reasonable period of time as evidenced by the fact that she failed to complete many of the drug screens that were required under her case plan. In re OJ, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 225, 2006 Ohio 286, (2006).

Common pleas court's decision finding that a magistrate's award of permanent custody of a mother's three children to the children services board was supported by clear and convincing evidence under RC § 2151.414 because the evidence showed that the mother's drug abuse had endangered lives of her children and that the mother had failed to respond to services provided due to the drug abuse. Further, the issue of whether the children should be placed with the maternal grandfather was rendered moot by the grandfather's communication to the common pleas court that it was inappropriate for him to take custody in light of his wife's health condition. In re Harris, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3398, 2005 Ohio 3700, (2005).

Termination of a mother's parental rights was justified, under RC § 2151.414(E)(2), because she had a severe drug and alcohol abuse problem, which caused her to be incarcerated on numerous occasions and adversely affected her children, as one of them cut himself to keep her from going to bars, and she did not complete any of the treatment programs that were offered to her. In re Walker, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 5893, 2005 Ohio 6563, (2005).

Where a child could not be placed with either parent within a reasonable time as the mother was struggling with a drug addiction, the father had a drug problem that was not being treated, and the mother failed to complete her case plan, the court properly placed the child into the planned permanent living arrangement pursuant to RC §§ 2151.353 and 2151.414(D). In re Wheeler, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3330, 2005 Ohio 3613, (2005).

Because, in the permanent custody hearing, the caseworker testified as to the mother's positive drug tests, but did so without the lab reports of the drug screens being admitted into evidence, the caseworker's testimony in that respect was inadmissible hearsay. However, there was no plain error in admitting the evidence because the caseworker's testimony about the positive drug screens was not a significant factor in the trial court's decision to grant permanent custody of the mother's children to the children's services agency and the outcome would not have been different if the court had excluded the testimony. In re T.V., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3884, 2005 Ohio 4280, (2005).

Where a father had not visited regularly, had not completed his case plan, and had not established a stable lifestyle free from substance abuse that would be a suitable environment to place the child, his parental rights were properly terminated. In re Flemings, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 6781, 2004 Ohio 7256, (2004).

Ample evidence existed for a trial court to conclude that permanent custody of a child with a county child services board was in the best interests of the child where there was ample evidence that both parents had substance abuse problems that prevented them from caring for the child without supervision and, despite having nearly two years to work on their case plans, neither parent had adequately addressed their substance abuse problems. The mother seemed to try to achieve sobriety but had been unable to do so even after losing three other children and having almost two years to correct her problem; the father had not taken even the first step toward achieving sobriety because he refused to admit that he even used drugs despite three urine samples that tested positive for cocaine. In re T.O., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1423, 2004 Ohio 1605, (2004).

In light of evidence that a father had a problem with cocaine, gave implausible reasons for his positive drug tests, did not complete any of the three main case plan goals, and attended only 19 of 30 visitation sessions for the whole time allotted, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in finding that child's best interests would be served by granting permanent custody to appellee In re Strychalski, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1364, 2004 Ohio 1542, (2004).

Trial court did not violate RC § 2151.3514(B) by ordering a mother to submit to one to two drug tests per week, as it was imperative to determine that she was no longer using crack cocaine in order to determine her child's best interest. Appeals court affirmed a termination of parental rights to one child adjudicated as abused under RC § 2151.031 and one adjudicated as dependent under RC § 2151.04 where substantial evidence, including the mother's abuse, alcohol use, and encouragement of theft, supported the trial court's best interest findings under RC § 2151.414(D). In re Large, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4772, 2003 Ohio 5275, (2003).

Where a mother repeatedly chose drugs and alcohol over a child and a maternal aunt did not ask for custody and could not provide permanence and stability, the mother's parental rights were properly terminated under RC § 2151.414(D)(4). In re Bigham, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3466, 2003 Ohio 3859, (2003).

Where children services department sought permanent custody of a child, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d), permanent custody was found to be in the best interest of the child, after considering the factors set forth in RC § 2151.414(D), where the mother satisfied that portion of her case plan that required her to complete a psychological evaluation, parenting classes, and a drug and alcohol assessment, but failed to comply with provisions requiring her to (1) obtain and maintain full-time employment and provide documentation of same, (2) provide documentation she had permanent, stable housing in a secure environment for the child, (3) complete drug/urine screens provided by the department, and (4) attend scheduled visitations; the juvenile court, as the trier of fact, weighed the testimony and credibility of witnesses, and the findings of the trial court were presumed correct since, as the trier of fact, the trial court, was in the best position to weigh the evidence and evaluate the testimony. In re James, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4657, 2003 Ohio 5208, (2003).

There was no error in the juvenile court's decision granting permanent custody of the mother's children to the state; evidence in the record raised serious doubts about her ability to remain sober and her commitment to such a goal, and there was ample evidence supporting the juvenile court's best interest finding. In re Woods, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4617, 2003 Ohio 5108, (2003).

A court may grant a motion for permanent custody pursuant to RC § 2151.414(B) if the court determines from clear and convincing evidence that permanent custody is in the best interest of the child pursuant to the factors set forth in RC § 2151.414(D) and whether one of the factors in RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(a) through (d) applies; in an action for the termination of parental custody, because a mother failed to successfully complete a reunification program primarily because she continued to use drugs and failed to regularly visit her children, the termination was affirmed. Evidence that the mother failed to remain drug-free or provide a stable home, depended so severely on drugs as to prevent her from providing an adequate permanent home within a year of the hearing, lacked commitment to the children, and wanted to continue her relationship with her abusive husband supported the trial court's determination that children could not be placed with their mother within a reasonable time. In re Anderson, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5478, 2003 Ohio 6154, (2003).

The parent's neglect of her children and numerous failures to end a crack addiction supported termination of parental rights: In re Shanequa H., 109 Ohio App. 3d 142, 671 N.E.2d 1113 (1996).

Parent's mental illness, disability etc.

When determining the best interest of a child under RC § 2151.414 at a permanent custody hearing, a trial court may not base its decision solely on the limited cognitive abilities of the parents: In re D.A., 113 Ohio St. 3d 88, 862 N.E.2d 829, 2007 Ohio 1105, (2007).

Appellate court's review of a decision by a juvenile court to grant a county agency permanent custody of two of a mother's children was supported by clear and convincing evidence that due to her mental retardation, she was unable to properly care for them, especially the younger one who had multiple medical problems. The permanent custody award was in the children's best interests under RC § 2151.414(D) because their needs for a legally secure placement were high, and they could not or should not be returned to the mother within a reasonable time. In re N.C., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3858, 2006 Ohio 3900, (2006).

Permanent custody with the agency was in the best interests of the children, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D), because the mother suffered from a chronic mental illness that prevented her from exercising appropriate judgments about the welfare of her children. She had a pattern of unstable living situations, and had lived in seven different places, including a homeless shelter; her employment was not that secure; and she was not capable of providing the emotional and physical stability and consistency the children needed. In re E.H., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 348, 2006 Ohio 416, (2006).

Trial court did not err in terminating the mother's parental rights and placing the child in the permanent custody of agency, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(E)(2). Given the severity of the mother's mental illness, her long history of failing to comply with the prescribed plan of treatment necessary to manage her illness, and the concern of her psychiatrist and others that she could again stop taking her medication, there was ample evidence before the trial court from which it could have concluded that the mother suffered from a mental illness that was so severe that it made her unable to care for the child at the current time or any time in the near future. In re E. H., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4648, 2006 Ohio 4724, (2006).

Record clearly supported the trial court's determination that the best interests of the child and the inability of the mother to cope with his needs, and that of her own, warranted the grant of permanent custody to the agency, under RC § 2151.414. The mother had serious mental health problems, was unstable, and remained unstable in spite of medication and counseling services. In re Dulaney, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 507, 2006 Ohio 555, (2006).

Common pleas court properly determined that a mother's sons could not be placed with her within a reasonable amount of time in light of the mother's eight-year history and repeating cycle of problems; her lack of commitment to the sons through her choice of abusive violent relationships and her unwillingness to attend to her own mental health issues; and her noncompliance with medications, resulting in frequent hospitalizations. While the mother had shown recent improvement, the record showed a documented and lengthy history of cycles in which short-term progress was followed by a downward spiral of chaos, poor parenting judgments, mental health hospitalizations, and an inability to adequately care for the sons. In re D.B., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 410, 2006 Ohio 479, (2006).

Trial court did not err by terminating the father's parental rights because it considered the best interest of the children and its decision was supported by clear and convincing evidence. Specifically, it found, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(E)(1), (2) and (4), that the father had failed continuously and repeatedly to substantially remedy the conditions causing the children to be placed outside the home, that he suffered from chronic mental illness, and that he demonstrated a lack of commitment toward the children by failing to regularly support, visit or communicate with them when able to do so. In re Whitney W., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1114, 2006 Ohio 1236, (2006).

Grant of permanent custody of a mother's children to a family services agency under RC § 2151.414 was in the children's best interests. The agency made a good faith effort to reunite the children with their mother, but the mother had considerable difficulty complying with the case plan, in that the evidence showed that the mother was unable to parent her young children without close supervision, the mother was mentally disabled, and she suffered from poor judgment. In re K.R., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5751, 2006 Ohio 5801, (2006).

Permanent custody of a mother's children was properly granted to a children services agency under RC § 2151.414 because the evidence showed that the mother, while using a multitude of social services for many years, continued to be unable to handle the stresses of parenthood because of her deficient intellectual functioning and her inability to control her temper, making her unpredictable and unstable. Moreover, the guardian ad litem testified that permanently terminating the mother's parental rights and granting permanent custody to the agency was in the children's best interests. In re Rushing, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5521, 2006 Ohio 5541, (2006).

Trial court's grant of permanent custody of a father's minor daughter to a county social service agency was proper pursuant to RC § 2151.414(B)(1) and (E), as the daughter had been removed from the mother's custody due to the mother's erratic mental health issues, the mother had not remedied her health issues, and the father enabled her and did not understand the danger to the daughter. The parents did not remedy the conditions that had caused the child's removal and the custody award was in the child's best interest. In re Kyler-Lowther, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4740, 2006 Ohio 4835, (2006).

Psychologist's report was inadmissible in a proceeding to terminate parental rights where it did not comply with EvidR 703. Where a parent's mental health is made an issue, the parent is entitled to expert assistance upon request: In re Sherman, 162 Ohio App. 3d 73, 832 N.E.2d 797, 2005 Ohio 3444, (2005), vacated by, substituted opinion at 2005 Ohio 5888, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 5312 (Ohio Ct. App., Hancock County Nov. 7, 2005).

Termination of the mother's parental rights was not against the manifest weight of the evidence as the trial court found RC § 2151.414(E)(2) and (11) were proven and therefore, the child could not and should not be returned to the mother's care and it was in the child's best interest to grant the motion for permanent custody; no one disputed that the mother, due to her physical and mental condition (mild retardation, depression, and anxiety), would most likely be unable to gain necessary parenting skills within a reasonable amount time, or that the mother had already had her parental rights terminated as to the child's sibling. In re Sadie R., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 292, 2005 Ohio 325, (2005).

Finding that the permanent custody of a child in a child services agency was in the best interest of the child was supported by clear and convincing evidence where some factors were inconsistent with the finding, but the following relevant factors were consistent with the finding: (1) the child's relationship with his mother and his foster parents, (2) the custodial history of the child's half-siblings, (3) the children's need for permanent placement, and (4) the mother's history of noncompliance with her medications, her hospitalizations, and the likelihood that she would not remain compliant with her medications. In re Smith, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 145, 2005 Ohio 149, (2005).

Where the father suffered from chronic emotional illness and mental retardation so severe that it made him unable to provide an adequate permanent home for the child at the present time or within one year and there was clear and convincing evidence that he had been convicted of numerous crimes, the trial court was required to enter a finding that the child could not be placed with the father. In re Spangler, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3210, 2005 Ohio 3450, (2005).

Trial court properly found that a mother had failed to substantially comply with her case plan where: (1) the voluntariness of the mother's enrollment in the residential program was questionable as her enrollment was due to a court order, (2) the mother failed to address her various mental health issues via psychological counseling, to obtain housing, or to obtain stable employment, (3) her failure to contact or communicate with a child services board hindered an evaluation of her progress, and (4) the mother had a history of relapse once the children were placed in her custody. In re Phillips, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3453, 2005 Ohio 3774, (2005).

Permanent custody with the agency was proper because the trial court did not err when it found under RC § 2151.414(D)(1) that the mother suffered from a schizotypal personality disorder marked by paranoia and psychosis. In re Boring-Myers, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 951, 2004 Ohio 1065, (2004).

Evidence supported the finding that it was in the children's best interest to award permanent custody to the agency because the mother, who was mentally retarded, could not provide the special care and attention that her children deserved. The evidence showed that the foster mother was able to appropriately address the children's developmental delays and to provide the children with the special care and attention that they deserved, the guardian ad litem recommended that the trial court award the agency permanent custody, and the mother failed to demonstrate that she was capable of or willing to provide the children with a stable and nurturing home where they could flourish. In re Curry, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 691, 2004 Ohio 750, (2004).

Due process did not require the trial court to appoint a psychiatric expert to assist in the mother's defense because, although mental health was an issue, it was not a predominant issue nor the determinative issue, in the permanent custody case. The trial court awarded permanent custody to the agency based upon the mother's failure to remedy the conditions causing the children's removal and the termination of her parental rights; it did not explicitly nor solely base its decision to terminate the parental rights of the mother upon RC § 2151.414(E)(2), which referred to chronic mental illness or chronic emotional illness of the parent. In re J.D., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 323, 2004 Ohio 358, (2004).

There was competent, credible evidence supporting the finding that permanent custody was in the children's best interest as the father had dependent personality disorder and, at times, allowed his relationship with the mother to take priority over the children, he had cognitive difficulties, drug and alcohol issues, and he had little or no bond with the two children; and the mother displayed emotional problems as well. In re Yeager, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1393, 2004 Ohio 1560, (2004).

Trial court's judgment granting permanent custody of the child was supported by the evidence where the child could not be placed with the mother within a reasonable amount of time and the mother suffered from major psychological disorders for which the mother failed to seek treatment, and the mother failed to protect the child from sexual abuse: In re Definbaugh, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 3022, 2004 Ohio 3367, (2004).

Trial court correctly found that a child could not and should not be returned to the custody of her parents after the parents severely physically abused the child's sibling and, due to severe and chronic mental illness, would be unable to provide the child with an adequate, permanent, home within one year, and, when given the opportunity, did not support, visit, or communicate with the child. In re Lauren P., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1458, 2004 Ohio 1656, (2004).

Trial court's placement of mother's daughter in a permanent planned living arrangement and her son with his father was supported by clear and convincing evidence concerning the mother's mental health problems — including her overreacting to stimulation, emotional instability, difficulty in maintaining stress, drinking issues, and a suicide attempt — and the children's desires not to live with her. In re M. B., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2373, 2004 Ohio 2666, (2004).

Court did not err in granting permanent custody of a mother's 13-year-old son to a family services agency, as clear and convincing evidence established that (1) the mother had been evicted from her apartment for allowing "crackheads" and prostitutes to use it; (2) her only income was from public assistance, and the gas in her home was turned off; (3) she was a paranoid schizophrenic who heard voices but did not take her medication or schedule follow-up appointments with her doctor in a timely manner; (4) she failed to comply with the treatment plan; (5) the son stated he did not want to live with his mother; and (6) the son had a positive, secure relationship with his foster parents and had made a positive adjustment. In re R.N., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2275, 2004 Ohio 2560, (2004).

Juvenile court's findings that a mother failed to remedy conditions causing the children to be placed outside their home and suffered from chronic mental illness so severe as to make her unable to provide an adequate home were not supported by clear and convincing evidence. In re Williams, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3246, 2003 Ohio 3550, (2003), affirmed by 101 Ohio St. 3d 398, 2004 Ohio 1500, 805 N.E.2d 1110, 2004 Ohio LEXIS 705 (2004).

Agency and associated workers provided more than ample services to the parents that were designed to be understood by the parents but, despite the agency's efforts, the parents' mental disabilities and lack of initiative rendered them unable or unwilling to provide the special attention that the children needed. In re Curry, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 691, 2004 Ohio 750, (2004).

Where a mother's parental rights to two of her minor children were terminated, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(B)(1), due to the trial court's finding that she had failed to remedy the conditions that had resulted in the children's removal and that her parental rights to a sibling of the children had previously been terminated pursuant to RC § 2151.414(E)(1), the fact that she had a mental illness did not require that the trial court appoint a psychiatric expert to assist in her defense; there was no due process violation of her rights under U.S. Const. amend. XIV and Ohio Const. art. I, § 16 where her mental illness was not the predominant issue in the termination decision. In re B. G., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 2923, 2003 Ohio 3256, (2003).

Termination of parental rights pursuant to RC § 2151.353(A)(3) based on the factors of RC § 2151.414(E)(2) was an abuse of discretion where the evidence did not support the finding that the mother suffered from a chronic mental illness or retardation so severe that she could not provide an adequate home; she had been capable of caring for herself previously, the examining psychologist recommended custody, and there was no evidence of abuse or neglect. In re Jordan, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5424, 2003 Ohio 6071, (2003).

There was no error in granting permanent custody to the agency because the father was not in a position to meet the child's needs; the father had a mental capacity of an 11 or 12-year-old and had shown poor judgment regarding the child, and the child had profound emotional and behavioral problems. In re McKinley, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 2534, 2003 Ohio 2828, (May 30, 2003).

Placing the child in the permanent custody of children's services was in the child's best interest where the mother's chronic mental illness and chemical dependency made her unable to provide an adequate permanent home. In re C. P., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3899, 2003 Ohio 4387, (2003).

A parent's Munchausen syndrome by proxy and other dangerous interactions with the child supported termination of parental rights: In re Dylan C., 121 Ohio App. 3d 115, 699 N.E.2d 107 (1997).

The mother's parental rights were properly terminated where her severe and chronic mental illness prevented substantial progress toward reunification: In re Makuch, 101 Ohio App. 3d 45, 654 N.E.2d 1331 (1995).

The due process clause of the United States Constitution and the due course of law provision under the Ohio Constitution requires the appointment of a psychiatrist to assist an indigent parent in permanent custody proceedings in which the parent's mental condition is at issue. A $300 fee limitation does not necessarily violate such right: In re Egbert Children, 99 Ohio App. 3d 492, 651 N.E.2d 38 (1994).

Where the mental health of a parent is the principal issue as to whether parental rights should be terminated, due process requires that the parent's request for a court-appointed psychiatric expert to assist her be granted. Participation with counsel at a hearing waives any deficiency as to the notice provided under RC § 2151.41.4. In re Shaeffer Children, 85 Ohio App. 3d 683, 621 N.E.2d 426 (1993).

Although the child was not abandoned or orphaned, due to the nature of his mother's chronic, physical illness, the best interests of the child required granting permanent custody to Defiance County Children's Services. The court was not permitted to consider the effect of granting permanent custody upon the parent: In re Bauer, 1991 Ohio App. LEXIS 2280 (3rd Dist. 1991).

A juvenile court does not err in awarding permanent custody of two children to a children's services board where the children's mother has a personality disorder that would take years of intense psychotherapy to overcome, she has not shown substantial improvement in her tests over a two-year period, and she is not motivated to and does not establish any goals for treatment while the children are in the children's services board's temporary custody: In re Ison, 47 Ohio App. 3d 103, 547 N.E.2d 420 (1989).

Parent's murder of other parent

A court is justified in terminating the parental rights of a parent who was convicted of the aggravated murder of the child's other parent where there are suitable relatives who wish to adopt the child and the adoption is in the child's best interests: In re Awkal, 95 Ohio App. 3d 309, 642 N.E.2d 424 (1994).

Parent's subsequent petition for custody

Parent who has lost permanent custody of a child to the state may, as a legal stranger to the child, petition for custody: In re McBride, 158 Ohio App. 3d 572, 817 N.E.2d 459, 2004 Ohio 5269, (2004).

Parents ceasing to be parties

RC § 2151.414(F) can only be meant to operate prospectively, excluding the parents from future proceedings relating to the child, such as review hearings; as the provision specifically states, it does not operate to divest the parent of his right to appeal the permanent custody decision, nor does it operate to prevent the parent from challenging the validity of the judgment rendered in the proceeding to which he was a party. In re Phillips, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4618, 2003 Ohio 5107, (2003).

Parental unfitness

Because RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d) applied, in that the child had been in the agency's custody for 12 of the proceeding 22 months, the trial court was not required to find parental unfitness before it terminated her parental rights. The evidence supported the trial court's holding under RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d) and it did not violate the mother's equal protection and due process rights through any incidental reference to whether the child could be placed with the mother. In re SW, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2829, 2006 Ohio 2958, (2006), writ of certiorari denied by 127 S. Ct. 1152, 166 L. Ed. 2d 999, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 1222, 75 U.S.L.W. 3384 (U.S. 2007).

Trial court did not err in terminating the mother's parental rights without making an express finding of her parental unfitness because RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d) necessarily implied some level of parental unfitness and was inherent in the trial court's finding compliance with the "12 out of 22" rule. In re S.R., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4921, 2006 Ohio 4983, (2006), writ of certiorari denied by 127 S. Ct. 2882, 167 L. Ed. 2d 1158, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 6154, 75 U.S.L.W. 3636 (U.S. 2007).

Where a trial court terminated a father's parental rights in his minor son under RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(a), it was not required to find that the father was an unfit parent; however, such a finding was inherent in the trial court's determination that the child could not be placed with either of his parents within a reasonable time, or should not be placed with them, as all of the circumstances set forth in RC § 2151.414(E) to justify such a determination necessarily implied some level of parental unfitness. In re B.L., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 1136, 2005 Ohio 1151, (2005), writ of certiorari denied by 546 U.S. 945, 126 S. Ct. 443, 163 L. Ed. 2d 337, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 7453, 74 U.S.L.W. 3229 (2005).

Where the court proceeded under RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d), it was not required to make an express finding of parental unfitness or to find that the agency made reasonable reunification efforts: In re Stillman, 155 Ohio App. 3d 333, 801 N.E.2d 475, 2003 Ohio 6228, (2003).

Parent under age 18

Evidence supported the finding that the child could not be placed with the mother within a reasonable time, under RC § 2151.414(E), because the 16-year-old mother failed to complete counseling and failed to attend anger management classes. The mother continuously failed to take advantage of the opportunity to forge a bond with the child that was offered to her through scheduled weekly visitation in that she has failed to attend many visits and, when she did attend, she consistently neglected to take the initiative to interact with the child in any way approximating the interaction required between an infant and its mother; therefore, a bond could not be established within a reasonable time. In re Baby C, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1915, 2006 Ohio 2067, (2006).

Trial court properly found that it was in the infant child's best interest to grant permanent custody to the agency, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D), because the 16-year-old mother's intentions regarding housing, schooling, employment, day care, and pursuit of counseling were vacillating and unstable at best, and, at worst, nonexistent. All those who testified, including the mother, told the trial court that the child was bonded to the foster parent and was not attached to the mother and all parties agreed that the mother was not ready to be a parent to the child at that time, and there was no evidence sufficient to support a firm belief that the child could be securely placed with the mother. In re Baby C, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1915, 2006 Ohio 2067, (2006).

Clear and convincing evidence showed a child's need for a permanent, legally secure, placement could not be achieved without granting her custody to an agency because, under RC § 2151.414(E)(16), her minor mother could not provide for the child's special medical needs. In re Barnes, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 6190, 2005 Ohio 6862, (2005).

There was clear and convincing evidence that an award of permanent custody to the agency was in the best interest of the child. The 14-year-old mother showed a lack of initiative and motivation in learning parenting skills and in actively caring for her child during visitation, she did not appear to understand the gravity of the situation, she failed to follow through with suggestions as to parenting, housekeeping, and looking for part-time employment, she required assistance from adults in caring for her daughter and was not capable of parenting on her own, and caseworkers had worked at length with the mother and her mother to obtain suitable housing, but to no avail. In re Crystal S., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 182, 2004 Ohio 219, (2004).

Fourteen-year old mother's failure to satisfactorily comply with an agency's reunification plan was not mitigated by the fact that she was 14, or that the termination of parental rights proceeding (TPR) was commenced within four months after the plan was adopted by the trial court (however, it was developed about one year before TPR was commenced), or that her visitation was of limited duration, in order for her to have more time to be able to bond with her child. In re Nelson, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 242, 2004 Ohio 268, (2004).

Weight of the evidence failed to clearly and convincingly support a finding that the child could not be placed with the mother within a reasonable time because the 17-year-old mother demonstrated appropriate care and affection toward the child and the case plan was unreasonable as the agency demanded that the mother save half of her earnings while completing high school, attending programs with three service providers, and have full responsibility for the care of her infant. In re M.W., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 396, 2004 Ohio 438, (2004).

Fourteen-year old mother failed to satisfactorily comply with that part of an agency's reunification plan that required her to regularly attend school, take necessary parenting and counseling classes, and show reunification initiatives; the trial court's termination of her parental rights was affirmed. In re Nelson, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 242, 2004 Ohio 268, (2004).

There was sufficient, competent, and credible evidence presented to support the trial court's findings for termination of the 16-year-old mother's parental rights as she had not been able to sustain compliance with the case plan; the mother's age, immaturity, emotional constitution, unruly behavior, and dependent status prevented her from being able to provide the secure and permanent placement the child needed either presently or at any time in the foreseeable future. McFarland v. Richland County Children Servs. Bd., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3365, 2003 Ohio 3746, (2003).

A parent's demonstration of lack of commitment toward her child is sufficient to support a finding that the child cannot be placed with the parent within a reasonable time. Testimony that the foster mother would adopt the child satisfies RC § 2151.414(D)(1). The time limits specified in RC §§ 2151.35.3 and 2151.41.5 are not unconstitutional as applied to a minor parent: In re McCrary, 75 Ohio App. 3d 601, 600 N.E.2d 347 (1991).

Parent whose rights have been terminated

Parent who has lost permanent custody of a child does not have standing as a nonparent to file a petition for custody of that child: In re McBride, 110 Ohio St. 3d 19 (2006).

Parties

The court did not have a duty to sua sponte join the paternal grandparents: In re Massengill, 76 Ohio App. 3d 220, 601 N.E.2d 206 (1991).

The emphasis placed on family unity by RC Chapter 2151. is limited almost exclusively to the nuclear family; and, unless a child is orphaned or abandoned, or an adult from the child's extended family in some manner has filled the role of parent, this chapter does not require that extended family members be made parties to custody proceedings: In re Schmidt, 25 Ohio St. 3d 331, 25 Ohio B. 386, 496 N.E.2d 952 (1986).

Placement with relative, generally

Trial court did not err in determining that experimenting with a child's welfare by placing her in her grandmother's custody was not in her best interests as the grandmother helped the mother evade the agency so that the agency would not seek custody of her newborn, there was concern that the grandmother would allow the mother to have contact with the child, and the grandmother failed to recognize that her husband sexually abused the mother. In re McCain, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1297, 2007 Ohio 1429, (Mar. 23, 2007).

Since a trial court concluded that a mother's child had been abandoned, it was not required to determine whether the child could be placed with the mother within a reasonable period of time. In re Stafford, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 826, 2007 Ohio 923, (Mar. 5, 2007).

In a permanent custody proceeding, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in not considering relative placement, especially since no relative even provided the trial court with that option. In re B.K., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4359, 2006 Ohio 4424, (2006).

Trial court's grant of legal custody of a father's child to the child's maternal aunt was proper because the evidence showed that the child could not be placed with her father within a reasonable period of time under RC § 2151.414(E), in that the father failed to comply with the recommendations of a psychological evaluation, including attending parenting instruction and individual counseling. Further, the grant of custody to the aunt was in the child's best interests. In re Downing, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5544, 2006 Ohio 5555, (2006).

In the termination of parental rights case, competent and credible evidence supported the finding that the grandmother was not a suitable relative to assume custody of the children under RC § 2151.414(B)(2); the grandmother continuously entered questionable relationships with men, and the grandmother was mildly retarded and had substantial memory loss, thereby limiting the grandmother's ability to use good judgment in providing care for the children. In re Brewer, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2159, 2004 Ohio 2417, (2004).

Under RC § 2151.41.4, the court is not required to consider placement with a relative before granting permanent custody to the state where the child is not orphaned: In re Leonard, 1997 Ohio App. LEXIS 1698 (12th Dist. 1997).

Planned permanent living arrangement

Because the agency was awarded temporary custody of all three children and filed its permanent custody motion in December 2003, it did not request a planned permanent living arrangement (PPLA); therefore, the trial court did not have the authority to place the children in a PPLA. In re S.R., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4921, 2006 Ohio 4983, (2006), writ of certiorari denied by 127 S. Ct. 2882, 167 L. Ed. 2d 1158, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 6154, 75 U.S.L.W. 3636 (U.S. 2007).

Magistrate's determination, which was adopted by the juvenile court, that a child should be placed in a planned permanent living arrangement was not against the manifest weight of the evidence pursuant to findings made under RC §§ 2151.353(A)(5)(b) and 2151.414, as the mother had limitations in her ability to understand due to permanent brain damage, the child had used drugs in the past, had behavioral problems, had excessive absenteeism from school, and had run away, and the mother had engaged in physical abuse on multiple occasions. In re K.B., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4810 (2006).

Trial court did not err in terminating a mother's parental rights rather than placing her children in a planned permanent living arrangement pursuant to RC § 2151.353 because the mother suffered from a significant mental problem which interfered with her ability to parent the children, and while the children had a significant bond with the mother, the testimony of the children's case worker and the guardian ad litem established that the children's need for stability was critical. In re Laigle Children, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 756, 2006 Ohio 829, (2006).

In a permanent custody proceeding, the failure of the trial court to mention the alternative disposition of a planned permanent living arrangement did not mean that it did not consider that as an option, nor did it constitute error. In re A. T., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3883, 2006 Ohio 3919, (2006).

Because the agency filed a permanent custody motion pursuant to RC § 2151.413(D)(1) before the mother filed her planned permanent living arrangement (PPLA) motion, there the trial court did not err in denying her motion. Pursuant to RC § 2151.415(A), a party cannot file a PPLA motion when the court is required to make a permanent custody determination under RC § 2151.413(D)(1). In re SW, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2829, 2006 Ohio 2958, (2006), writ of certiorari denied by 127 S. Ct. 1152, 166 L. Ed. 2d 999, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 1222, 75 U.S.L.W. 3384 (U.S. 2007).

Trial court did not err in finding that it was in the best interest of the children to be placed in permanent custody of the agency, pursuant to RC § 2151.414, rather than to be placed in a planned permanent living arrangement, pursuant to RC § 2151.353(A)(J), and did not err in terminating the father's parental rights. Although the trial court noted that the evidence showed that the son could not be successful in a less restrictive environment and that at the present time there was no adoptive placement for him, the caseworker, guardian ad litem, and the trial court each found that permanent custody was in the best interest of both children. In re Lenix, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1189, 2006 Ohio 1294, (2006).

Pursuant to RC § 2151.011(B)(36), in a planned permanent living arrangement, the juvenile court grants a children services agency legal custody of a child without terminating the parent's parental rights; the decision to remove a child from the home was proper because the evidence demonstrated that the father had failed to comply with the court's order and plan for reunification. In re I.M., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 6437, 2003 Ohio 7069, (2003).

Poverty of parent

There was no substantive due process or equal protection violation under Ohio Const. art. I, § 2 in a trial court's termination of a father's parental rights over his minor son pursuant to RC § 2151.414, as the decision was not based solely on the father's poverty, but instead, was based on a host of findings, including the father's lack of commitment to the child, the inability to have provided a stable living situation, his history of domestic violence and non-support for which there were outstanding warrants against him, and the determination that the child's best interests warranted the permanent custody award to the agency. In re Shifflet, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3521, 2006 Ohio 3576, (2006).

Privilege against self-incrimination

Father failed to establish that he was compelled to testify in the permanent custody hearing and he failed to show any prejudice resulting from his testimony because there was no compulsion and, had there been compulsion with regard to his testimony, it would not have affected the use of his testimony in the proceedings below. The father never asserted his Fifth Amendment rights, he subjected himself to cross-examination when he voluntarily testified under direct examination, and the testimony that he objected to contained no incriminating statements, as he was answering questions regarding previous criminal conduct for which he had already been prosecuted. In re Shrider, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2641, 2006 Ohio 2792, (2006).

The privilege against compulsory self-incrimination is self-executing and applied in a proceeding for termination of parental rights. Where the parents were given a choice of admitting the father's abuse of the child or of permanently losing custody, they had to be afforded protection against use of the admission in a subsequent prosecution: In re Amanda W., 124 Ohio App. 3d 136, 705 N.E.2d 724 (1997).

Privileged communications

Because the agency referred the mother to counseling and the referral was journalized in the case plan, her statements regarding cocaine use and other communications between herself and her counselor were not privileged, pursuant to RC § 2317.02(G)(1)(g), in the permanent custody hearing. In re Brown, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2719, 2006 Ohio 2863, (2006).

In the absence of a specific statutory waiver or exception, the testimonial privileges established under RC § 2317.02(B)(1) (concerning communications between a physician and patient), RC § 4732.19 (concerning communications between a licensed psychologist and client), and RC § 2317.02(G) (concerning communications between a licensed counselor or licensed social worker and client) are applicable to communications made by a parent in the course of treatment ordered as part of a reunification plan in an action for dependency and neglect: In re Wieland, 89 Ohio St. 3d 535, 733 N.E.2d 1127, 2000 Ohio 233, (2000).

Putative father search

Record did not support the mother's argument that she was prejudiced by the agency's alleged failure to check the putative father registry prior to her parental rights being terminated. The record contained affidavits indicating that diligent searches were made to locate known and unknown putative fathers of the children, and the caseworker's testimony at the hearing supported that assertion. In re E.W., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2431, 2006 Ohio 2609, (2006).

Race

In a proceeding to terminate parental rights, the trial court was not obliged to consider the race of the child or her foster parents, and the black child's parents failed to show that his Caucasian foster family was not equipped to teach the child about racism and discrimination or to foster his ethnic identity. In re Davis, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 3670 (2004), appeal denied by 103 Ohio St. 3d 1496, 2004 Ohio 5605, 816 N.E.2d 1081, 2004 Ohio LEXIS 2586 (2004).

The evidence clearly showed that termination of parental rights was justified. There was no plausible evidence that the father's race or the baby's light complexion were improperly considered: In re Wingo, 143 Ohio App. 3d 652, 758 N.E.2d 780, 2001 Ohio 2477, (2001).

Relief from judgment

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying a mother's motion for relief from judgment, pursuant to Ohio R. Civ. P. 60(B), after her parental rights were terminated under RC § 2151.414, as none of the three allegations asserted by her, even if true, would have provided a basis for a meritorious defense or claim, such that an evidentiary hearing was warranted; contentions regarding a forged signature in her case plan and an incident where she allegedly ripped stitches out of her minor child's mouth were not referenced in the trial court's parental rights determination, and allegations relating to the testimony of her conservator could have been raised in her direct appeal and were thus barred by res judicata. In re J.J., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 3701, 2004 Ohio 4059, (2004), appeal denied by 103 Ohio St. 3d 1496, 2004 Ohio 5605, 816 N.E.2d 1081, 2004 Ohio LEXIS 2587 (2004).

Removal from home, prevention

Trial court did not err in finding that the agency was not required to make reasonable efforts to prevent removal of the child from the home, pursuant to RC § 2151.419(A)(2)(e), because the mother's parental rights to two other children had previously been terminated. The mother was given three opportunities to complete parenting classes, but never showed up or canceled them, she did not complete the previous case plan; and there remained an on-going mental health concern and except for some household improvements, there were continued concerns over the mother's parenting skills. In re Craig, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2908, 2006 Ohio 3026, (2006), writ of certiorari denied by 127 S. Ct. 1816, 167 L. Ed. 2d 327, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 3103, 75 U.S.L.W. 3497 (U.S. 2007).

Res judicata

Res judicata did not apply to the permanent custody determination because the trial court not only retained continuing jurisdiction over the agency's motion for permanent custody, it recognized that fact at the conclusion of the first dispositional hearing. The mother's failure to comply with the case plan constituted a change in circumstances which warranted the agency's new motion for permanent custody. In re Z.T., 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 759, 2007 Ohio 827, (2007).

Res judicata does not prohibit the litigation of issues relevant to a motion for permanent custody even though the same or similar issues may have been considered in a prior action within the purview of RC Chapter 2151.: In re Ament, 142 Ohio App. 3d 302, 755 N.E.2d 448 (2001).

Retroactivity

Retroactive application of the version of RC § 2151.41.4 which went into effect in March, 1999 did not violate prohibitions against retroactive laws: In re Rodgers, 138 Ohio App. 3d 510, 741 N.E.2d 901 (2000).

Reunification provisions

Court rejected a mother's contention that a children services agency failed to make reasonable efforts to implement the assigned case plan. The "reasonable efforts" requirement in RC § 2151.419 is not applicable to permanent custody cases involving RC §§ 2151.413 and 2151.414. In re V.M., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4370, 2006 Ohio 4461, (2006), affirmed by 113 Ohio St. 3d 161, 2007 Ohio 1254, 863 N.E.2d 167, 2007 Ohio LEXIS 788 (2007).

In a parental rights termination proceeding pursuant to RC § 2151.414, the trial court was not required to make a finding that the county social service agency made reasonable efforts to reunite the child with the mother pursuant to RC § 2151.419(A)(2), as two of her other minor children had been involuntarily removed from her care previously. The trial court made the requisite findings regarding both parents' lack of success in completing their case plans and the reasonable efforts made by the agency pursuant to RC § 2151.412, which was based on the parents' inability or unwillingness to provide an adequate permanent home and stable living conditions to raise the child, and the fact that they were dependents of society due to their situations, including the mother's mental illnesses and her refusal to take her medication. In re Shifflet, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3521, 2006 Ohio 3576, (2006).

As a mother failed to disclose the identity of her minor child's father, and she had her parental rights to four other children involuntarily terminated, her three other children did not live with her, she was homeless, unemployed, had a severe drug abuse problem which she refused to seek treatment for, and she had a criminal history, the trial court's finding that the child could not be placed with his parents within a reasonable period of time and should not be placed with either parent, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(E)(1) and (4), was supported by the evidence. In re I. J., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6257, 2006 Ohio 6263, (2006).

It was reasonable for the trial court to conclude from the evidence that the agency did make reasonable efforts to reunify the child with his father because the father never requested that he be permitted to visit with his son prior to the time that visitation was allowed and, at a certain point, the father quit going to visitations with his son, thus demonstrating his lack of desire to visit with his son. The father also failed to start, let alone complete, any of the case plan requirements. In re Oaks, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4787, 2006 Ohio 4857, (2006).

Requirement in RC § 2151.419(A)(1) that a children's services agency make "reasonable efforts" to reunify children removed from their home with their families applied to hearings held pursuant to RC §§ 2151.28, 2151.31(E), 2151.314, 2151.33, and 2151.353, but it did not apply when permanent custody was sought pursuant to RC § 2151.413 or when such a motion was heard pursuant to RC § 2151.414, so it did not apply to an agency's motion for permanent custody of a father's children. In re R.A.M., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3149, 2006 Ohio 3242, (2006).

Weight of the evidence supported the termination of the father's parental rights, pursuant to RC § 2151.414, because the father failed to demonstrate that the agency did not make reasonable efforts in case planning and diligent efforts toward reunification, or that the trial court erred in denying his motion to vacate the finding of reasonable efforts. The children could not be placed with the father, who admitted causing the incident which resulted in the removal of the children, in a reasonable time because he had convictions for child endangering and domestic violence, did not benefit from his parenting class, demonstrated inappropriate behavior when he was interacting with the children, and made insufficient progress in anger management. In re E. T., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2308, 2006 Ohio 2413, (2006).

Trial court could have rationally concluded, based on the evidence presented, that a family services agency made reasonable and diligent efforts to assist the mother in completing her case plan, in that the evidence showed that the mother failed to enroll in a sleep apnea class, which was a required condition before visitation with the child would be allowed; that she did not contact the agency to set up a time for visitation; that, while the agency agreed to pay for the mother's enrollment in a chemical dependency program, the mother never attended the program; and that, while the social worker had offered transportation to treatment locations, had offered to pay for the drug screens, had paid for the mother's psychological evaluation, and had referred her to several different treatment centers, the mother did not take advantage of any of these offers. In re Distafano, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4347, 2006 Ohio 4430, (2006).

Mother's allegation that the children services agency failed to use reasonable case planning efforts to reunify her with her daughter did not need to be considered on appeal because, while the trial court based its permanent custody order, in part, on a finding that the mother had failed to substantially remedy the conditions that led to her daughter's removal, it also found that the mother had abandoned the daughter. Since the finding of abandonment was supported by the evidence, the mother could not establish reversible error based on a lack of reasonable case planning efforts. In re M. R., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2406, 2006 Ohio 2558, (2006).

Trial court's finding that a family services agency put forth a good-faith and diligent effort to rehabilitate the family situation was proper. The evidence showed that the agency had provided supportive services for each element of the case plan to assist the mother in completing the case plan, and the guardian ad litem's report discussed the agency's efforts to provide the mother an opportunity for improvement of parenting skills on an individualized basis. In re Thornton Children, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2400, 2006 Ohio 2519, (2006).

Trial court did not err in finding that the agency put forth a good faith effort to rehabilitate the family, as required by RC § 2151.419(A)(1) and RC § 2151.414(E)(1), because trial testimony illustrated the efforts and services provided by the agency in an attempt to reunify the family. The father showed a lack of effort and commitment to the reunification process; due to his incarcerations, his failure to attend court hearings, and failure to correspond in any manner with the social worker, services were not successfully completed. In re Peterson, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1370, 2006 Ohio 1500, (2006).

RC § 2151.419(A)'s requirement of reasonable efforts to reunify is not applicable to orders granting permanent custody upon motions filed under RC § 2151.413 because the reasonable efforts statute, RC § 2151.419(A), only applies to hearings held under certain listed statutes. For instance, hearings held under RC § 2151.353 are subject to the reasonable efforts requirement of RC § 2151.419(A), however, those hearings deal with the disposition of temporary custody or permanent custody (initially sought in the abuse, neglect, or dependency complaint) entered immediately after the adjudication of a child as abused, neglected or dependent, pursuant to RC § 2151.353. In re Samples, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 963, 2006 Ohio 1056, (2006).

Reasonable efforts requirement in RC § 2151.419, regarding reunification, was not applicable because the agency requested an award of permanent custody of the children under RC § 2151.413 and the trial court held a hearing under RC § 2151.414 to address the motions. Therefore, the trial court could award permanent custody without a finding that the agency made reasonable efforts to reunify the children with their mother. In re J.S., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 615, 2006 Ohio 702, (2006).

While a trial court erroneously relied on a mother's failure to successfully complete a previous case plan to support its finding that, pursuant to RC § 2151.419(A)(1), the agency had made reasonable efforts toward reunification of the mother with her children since prior actions involving prior case plans are not admissible under Ohio R. Evid. 608(B), this error was harmless because the record supported the conclusion that reasonable case planning efforts would have been futile, in that the children had been out of the custody of their parents for four years, the mother suffered from chronic substance abuse and mental illness, and at the time of the hearing, the mother was incarcerated for failing to appear at a criminal trial. In re Chestnut, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 611, 2006 Ohio 684, (2006).

Agency demonstrated a good-faith effort to reunify the children as it had expended diligent and reasonable evidence in case planning, had developed a case plan which addressed the concerns which had caused the removal of the children, and had provided supportive services to facilitate the completion of the case plan. Although the mother complied with each of the requirements in the case plan, her efforts were not sufficient to convince the trial court that she had learned enough to be able to cope with the children's needs and make good decisions about their care. In re Reardon Children, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 567, 2006 Ohio 629, (2006).

Termination of the mother's parental rights based on neglect and dependency was error because there was no dispute that the children's services agency did not attempt to reunify the child with the mother and there was no prior finding regarding the mother's unsuitability as a parent for the child prior to the filing for permanent custody. Although the mother's parental rights had been terminated with respect to three other children, that did not result in a de facto termination of her parental rights with respect to the child that was the subject of the instant proceedings. In re Sheffey, 167 Ohio App. 3d 141, 854 N.E.2d 508, 2006 Ohio 619, (2006).

County job and family service agency did not fail to make a good faith effort to reunify a father with his two children before a trial court placed the children in the agency's permanent custody under RC § 2151.414(D), (E)(4), (10), (16). The agency developed a case plan for the father when the children were placed in its temporary custody, but he told the agency that he did not wish to visit the children, had no contact with them or the agency for most of the next year, left town when the children's mother was given visitation placement, and failed to keep in contact with the agency after initially trying to re-engage himself with the children when he returned. In re Francisco, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5839, 2006 Ohio 5888, (2006).

In a permanent custody hearing, if a trial court found the parents of the subject children had worked on their case plan, designed to reunify them with the children, this did not bar the trial court from granting permanent custody of the children to an agency because it could still determine that the parents had failed to remedy the conditions which caused the children to be removed from the home initially. In re Bentley, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2991, 2006 Ohio 3133, (2006).

Even if a children services agency failed to schedule a mother for a psychiatric examination, as required by her case plan, this failure alone did not preclude the trial court from awarding the agency permanent custody of the mother's child. Moreover, the mother's compliance with her case plan was not relevant to a determination under RC § 2151.414(B)(1) since the trial court found that the child had been in the temporary custody of the agency for more than 12 months of a consecutive 22-month period. In re S.M., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2386, 2006 Ohio 2529, (2006).

Termination of a father's parental rights was proper as, although the case plans for a father and a mother were encompassed in a single document, the objectives, concerns, and services involving each parent were set forth separately and a child services agency clearly considered reunification with the father, as well as with the mother. In re Jason S., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 643, 2006 Ohio 726, (2006).

Prior to terminating the father's parental rights, under RC § 2151.414, the trial court explicitly determined that the agency used reasonable efforts to reunify the family and the record supported that finding. The agency provided the parents with case planning, referrals, and transportation and, although the agency did not specifically direct the father to find a job, the father was already under a domestic relations court order to join a seek work program, which he chose not to join until faced with permanently losing his children. In re Link, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 476, 2006 Ohio 529, (2006).

Mother's contention that a county children services agency did not attempt to assist her in remedying her problems was without merit. The mother had an obligation to make an effort to attend and participate in programs recommended by the agency, and she did not fulfill this obligation, in that she refused to participate in any drug and alcohol treatment for the first five months of the case plan. In re D.B., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 483, 2006 Ohio 522, (2006).

Trial court abused its discretion in finding that the agency had used reasonable efforts to reunify the father with his children prior to terminating his parental rights, under RC § 2151.414. Reasonable case planning and diligent efforts by the agency would have necessitated a case plan for the father during the time he was in the process of reunifying with the children. In re C.F., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 68, 2006 Ohio 88, (2006), reversed by 113 Ohio St. 3d 73, 2007 Ohio 1104, 862 N.E.2d 816, 2007 Ohio LEXIS 673 (2007).

Trial court's finding, by clear and convincing evidence, under RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(a), that children could not, within a reasonable time, or should not, be placed with their parents was not against the manifest weight of the evidence, despite the parents' initial compliance with their case plan, because (1) the parents moved out of state and adopted a transient lifestyle, (2) they had no communication, after moving, with the children, and (3) their sporadic contact, after moving, with the agency which had custody of their children did not show that they made strides in understanding their children's medical problems or their special needs. In re Bentley, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2991, 2006 Ohio 3133, (2006).

Agency made reasonable efforts to reunify the mother with her children because the record contained many examples of the agency's efforts directed toward reunification including a case plan as to each child designed to help mother and father deal with the issues of domestic violence, substance abuse, anger management and a lack of parenting skills. The caseworkers and parenting educator had regular contact with the family and visitations were arranged with the children and the mother never asked for help with reading or completing written work in the educating classes. In re Malaya H., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 6309, 2005 Ohio 7010, (2005).

Clear and convincing evidence showed an agency made reasonable efforts to reunite a child with special medical needs with her minor mother by devising case plans addressing the needs of both the mother and the child, but that, when the minor mother was convicted of attempted gross sexual imposition, due to her own conduct, and not that of the agency, the mother was unable to complete her case plan. In re Barnes, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 6190, 2005 Ohio 6862, (2005).

Mother's claim on appeal that a trial court erred in terminating her parental rights over her minor child without first making a finding that the agency had used reasonable and diligent efforts to reunify the mother with her child lacked merit, as there was no such finding required under RC § 2151.419, as such did not apply to permanent custody hearings under RC § 2151.414. The trial court followed the statutory requirements of RC § 2151.414 prior to granting the permanent custody motion under RC § 2151.413, and there was no duty on the agency to prove that it exerted reasonable and diligent efforts towards reunification under RC § 2151.414. In re C.W., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 6093, 2005 Ohio 6739, (2005).

Trial court did not err in finding that the agency made reasonable efforts to reunite the mother and her children, pursuant to RC § 2151.419 prior to the permanent custody determination, wherein the mother's parental rights were terminated pursuant to RC § 2151.414. It was the agency that reunited the mother with her children after she had abandoned them for six years and it would have been difficult to assist the mother in finding housing because, during the last year, she had lived in four different places in different counties. In re Jesus, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2152, 2005 Ohio 2266, (2005).

Trial court did not have to engage in an explicit finding of unfitness pursuant to RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(a) because its finding under § 2151.414(B)(1)(d) was supported by clear and convincing evidence, and thus, the trial court was not required to consider the § 2151.414(E) factors. As a result, the court did not need to address the mother's argument that the trial court erred in finding that the agency used reasonable efforts to return the children to the mother pursuant to § 2151.414(E)(1). In re Janson, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 6027, 2005 Ohio 6712, (2005).

Termination of a mother's parental rights was justified, under RC § 2151.414(E)(1), because she did not comply with her case plan as she did not (1) get psychological and substance abuse evaluations or follow the recommendations of treating professionals, (2) provide a safe and stable home for her children, (3) allow a social worker to enter her home, (4) notify the child protection agency of her numerous address changes, or (5) regularly attend visitation with her children, either at the agency or at her home. In re Walker, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 5893, 2005 Ohio 6563, (2005).

Because the children's services agency sought an award of permanent custody as the initial disposition, it was not required to file a case plan aimed at reunification (under RC § 2151.412(C)), unless the basis for the award was predicated upon RC § 2151.414(E)(1), which could not be determined since the trial court did not even identify the factors prescribed in RC § 2151.414(E) as the basis for its final order. In re Allberry, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 5866, 2005 Ohio 6529, (2005).

Clear and convincing evidence supported the finding that it was in the child's best interest to permanently commit him to the custody of the agency. Because the child had been in the temporary custody of the agency for at least 12 months of a consecutive 22-month period prior to the agency's permanent custody motion, RC § 2151.414(E)(1) did not serve as a basis for the agency's effort to seek permanent custody as the initial disposition and thus, the agency was not under a duty to pursue the mother's reunification with her son after it filed its motion for permanent custody as RC § 2151.419(A)(1) did not apply. In re S.S., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3887, 2005 Ohio 4282, (2005).

Trial court did not err in finding that a children services board had made a reasonable effort to reunify parents' children with the parents because the record reflected reasonable case planning and diligent efforts on the part of the board to reunify the parents and their children, in that the caseworker assigned to the family attempted regular contact with both parents but was hampered by the mother's frequent changes of residence and the father's failure to visit the children regularly and remain in contact with the board. In re Rhyann B., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3555, 2005 Ohio 3867, (2005).

Trial court's finding that the child was in the temporary custody of the agency for 12 of the past 22 months, was enough to satisfy the requirements of RC § 2151.414(B)(1), with respect to reunification with the mother. In re Unger Children, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2291, 2005 Ohio 2414, (2005).

Trial court did not err in concluding that the child could not or should not be placed with the mother within a reasonable time, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(E), because the mother wanted to return the child to an abusive and dangerous household. The child's older brother was violent towards the child and possibly sexually abusive. In re Nibert, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 379, 2004 Ohio 429, (2004).

Permanent custody was properly granted because the trial court's finding that the department made reasonable case plans and diligent efforts to reunify the mother with her child was supported by clear and convincing evidence. The mother never completed the goals of the case plan, she failed to avail herself of the services provided or failed to complete the programs, and there was little chance that the mother would make the significant progress necessary as to her drug addiction before she was ready to parent her child. In re King, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2554, 2004 Ohio 2919, (2004).

In determining whether an agency has made reasonable efforts to reunify a child with her parents, the issue is not whether the agency could have done more, but whether it has done enough to satisfy the reasonableness standard under the statute. The 1989 amendment to RC § 2151.41.4(A) reflects a legislative intent to eliminate the requirement of a good faith effort toward reunification prior to a grant of permanent custody: Anderson v. Slone, 1994 Ohio App. LEXIS 2416 (1994).

Section 3 of Am. Sub. H.B. No.695, concerning the phase-in of RC § 2151.41.2, 2151.41.3 and 2151.41.4, requires that a written comprehensive reunification plan be included in the second annual review made after the effective date of the Act (October 24, 1980), of any child who is in temporary custody upon such effective date pursuant to court order under RC Chapter 2151, or pursuant to RC § 5103.15: In re Smith, 7 Ohio App. 3d 75, 7 Ohio B. 88, 454 N.E.2d 171 (1982).

Right to counsel

There was no plain error in failing to appoint separate counsel for the parents because neither parent sought appointment of individual counsel during the course of the proceedings before the trial court, and neither parent asserted interests separate from the other. Also, at the time, they were still married and living together; there was never any suggestion by either parent that reunification with the children was possible with one parent and not the other; and in no way had there been a demonstration that the parent's interests were in conflict. In re Shrider, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2641, 2006 Ohio 2792, (2006).

Parent's right to appointed counsel was not violated by her attorney's withdrawal in a proceeding to terminate parental rights where the parent's uncooperativeness and lack of interest in the proceedings were demonstrated by her failure to appear at scheduled hearings and by her attorney's unsuccessful attempts to contact her. Father was denied his right to representation at the dispositional hearing, the equivalent to a denial of counsel in violation of Ohio R. Juv. In re Sadie R., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 292, 2005 Ohio 325, (2005).

Although neither the court nor the guardian ad litem ever had any direct interaction with the two children in a proceeding by a children's services agency seeking permanent custody, the court properly considered their wishes pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D) by being made aware of the older child's desire to be placed with his mother, through testimony of the mother and a caseworker, and accordingly, any error on that issue was deemed harmless. The Ohio Supreme Court had previously relied on its prior decisions, RC § 2151.352, and Ohio R. Juv. P. 4(A) and 2(Y) in determining that a child who is the subject of a juvenile court proceeding to terminate parental rights is a party to that proceeding and is entitled to independent counsel in certain circumstances. Trial court did not abuse its discretion in granting an order allowing a mother's counsel leave to withdraw on the date of the final dispositional hearing, without prior notification to the mother, where: (1) the mother made no attempt to communicate with her counsel regarding her inability to appear; (2) failed to provide her counsel with medical documentation as to why her pregnancy might have prevented her from attending; and (3) the mother had previously been granted three prior continuances, and the trial court concluded that it did not wish to delay the proceedings any further. The case did not present complex facts, and, given the history of the case regarding the children at issue, it was not clear what counsel could have done that would have changed the outcome. The permanent custody hearing was procedurally deficient where the children's right to counsel was violated. In re Clark, 141 Ohio App. 3d 55, 749 N.E.2d 833, 2001 Ohio 4126, (2001).

The alleged father was properly served with notice of the proceedings. The court did not err by refusing to grant a further continuance to the father and did not violate his right to counsel. In re Whitson, 140 Ohio App. 3d 409, 747 N.E.2d 881, 2000 Ohio 1769, (2000).

Children who were the subject of a proceeding for termination of parental rights were entitled to appointed counsel, especially where there were indications that they wanted to remain with the parents. The appointment of an attorney as the substitute guardian was not sufficient. In re Stacey S., 136 Ohio App. 3d 503, 737 N.E.2d 92, 1999 Ohio 989, (1999).

Standing

Maternal grandmother of three minor children lacked standing to challenge a trial court's grant of permanent custody to a county agency under RC § 2151.414, as she had failed to appropriately seek legal custody of the children under RC § 2151.353(A)(3). In re Th.W., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2681, 2005 Ohio 2852, (2005).

Father lacked standing to challenge the termination of his parental rights to a child as he was not the child's biological father, he did not have any legal relationship to the child, and he never moved for legal custody of the child. In re J. O., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2298, 2005 Ohio 2399, (2005).

Stipulation

Mother's parental rights were properly terminated over her eight minor children, based on facts that she consented to in a stipulation that was presented on behalf of herself and the county social services agency to the trial court, as the record indicated that the trial court clearly explained the stipulation and the import thereof to the mother, and she knowingly and voluntarily indicated her understanding and agreement with the facts, the findings, and the conclusions stated therein, including the termination of her parental rights. In re Kuashean P., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3553, 2006 Ohio 3606, (2006).

Trial court properly terminated parental rights where the parents stipulated to an award of permanent custody to an agency on the basis of the parents' disabilities under RC § 2151.414(E)(2) after extensive consultation with counsel and thorough questioning by the trial court. In re Diane M., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3134, 2003 Ohio 3450, (2003).

Temporary custody, extension

When a trial court considered, in a permanent custody proceeding, a mother's motion, under RC § 2151.415(D)(1), to extend an agency's temporary custody of her child, it was not an abuse of discretion for the trial court to deny the motion because, under RC § 2151.414(D)(4), it was not simply charged with finding a "stable, suitable, and loving" placement for the child but was obligated to consider the child's need for a legally secure permanent placement and whether that type of placement could be achieved without a grant of the child's permanent custody to an agency, and extending temporary custody would not achieve this goal as neither parent was capable of parenting the child, and no relatives came forward to develop a relationship with the child or to request consideration for custody. In re P. B., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5420, 2006 Ohio 5419, (2006).

Time limitations

Trial court's failure to ensure that the permanent custody hearing occurred within the time period prescribed by RC § 2151.414(A)(2) was not reversible error because RC § 2151.414(A)(2) expressly states that failure to meet the 120-day deadline for a permanent custody hearing does not provide a basis for attacking the jurisdiction of the court or the validity of any order of the court. In re Allberry, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 5866, 2005 Ohio 6529, (2005).

Although a trial court failed to dispose of and journalize its decision on a social service agency's motion for permanent custody of a minor child within 200 days, as required by RC § 2151.414(A)(2), such failure to comply with the time limitations did not alter the trial court's authority or invalidate the order that was ultimately entered thereon. In re B.L., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 1136, 2005 Ohio 1151, (2005), writ of certiorari denied by 546 U.S. 945, 126 S. Ct. 443, 163 L. Ed. 2d 337, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 7453, 74 U.S.L.W. 3229 (2005).

Trial court need not find that a child cannot or should not be placed with either parent within a reasonable time since such a finding is implicit in the time frame established by RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d). In re Large, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4772, 2003 Ohio 5275, (2003).

The judgment must be reversed where, due to the inordinate delay between the filing of the motion for permanent custody and the issuance of the judgment, the court lost its authority to issue an order terminating parental rights: In re Omosun Children, 106 Ohio App. 3d 813, 667 N.E.2d 431 (1995).

The seven-day period for entry of judgment set forth in RC § 2151.35(B)(3) and JuvR 34(C) is mandatory. The proper remedy for the court's failure to comply is to file a writ of procedendo in the court of appeals: In re Fleming, 76 Ohio App. 3d 30, 600 N.E.2d 1112 (1991).

The seven day period under RC § 2151.35(B)(3) and JuvR 34(C) for entry of judgment is mandatory. However, noncompliance does not deprive the court of jurisdiction: In re Galloway, 77 Ohio App. 3d 61, 601 N.E.2d 83 (1991).

Transfer from another court

A certification does not constitute a complaint in the juvenile court that such child is neglected, dependent or abused and those dispositions provided for under RC § 2151.35.3 pertaining to neglected, dependent or abused children, including an award of permanent custody to a county welfare department which has assumed the administration of child welfare, are not applicable to such a child, disposition thereof being subject to and controlled by RC § 3109.04: In re Snider, 14 Ohio App. 3d 353, 14 Ohio B. 420, 471 N.E.2d 516 (1984).

When a case concerning a child is transferred or certified from another court, the certification from the transferring court is deemed to be the complaint: In re Snider, 14 Ohio App. 3d 353, 14 Ohio B. 420, 471 N.E.2d 516 (1984).

Venue

When an agency moved for permanent custody of a child, no authority required the agency to prove venue at the permanent custody hearing by showing the child was removed from a home in the county where the trial court sat. In re M.C., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 944, 2006 Ohio 1041, (2006).

Visitation

There was no failure by the agency to diligently provide services by denying visitation because visitation was by court order and the trial court's judgment, granting visitation with the oldest child and denying it with the three younger children, was supported by sufficient evidence. At the time the judgment was entered, the agency had already filed for permanent custody, it had diligently provided visitation opportunities prior to the original filing for permanent custody, and the trial court received the report of the guardian ad litem reporting the wishes of the children regarding visitation prior to entering its judgment. In re Sherman, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6436, 2006 Ohio 6485, (2006).

Waiver of parental rights

Father's consent to a county agency's permanent custody of his two minor sons was not deemed to have been given with a clear understanding that his consent was to termination of all parental rights, including the right to continued communication with the children. The short trial court record did not contain any indication that the trial court had specifically informed the father that he would be waiving all parental rights including communication and conversely, there were references in the record to the father's request to continue communication, which created an implication that such contact would automatically be permitted. In re D.R., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3471, 2006 Ohio 3513, (2006).

Considering the parent's reluctance to surrender permanent custody, the court should not have accepted the waiver of parental rights: In re Terrence-Jamieson S., 162 Ohio App. 3d 229, 833 N.E.2d 306, 2005 Ohio 3600, (2005).

Wishes of child

Since there was no evidence suggesting that a mother's son, who was only two and one-half years old at the time of the permanent custody hearing, was capable of expressing or verbalizing his wishes under RC § 2151.414(D)(2), the trial court did not err in not considering the son's wishes in ascertaining the best interest of the child. In re Parks, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5835, 2006 Ohio 5890, (2006).

Since there was no evidence suggesting that a mother's son, who was only four years old at the time of the permanent custody hearing, was capable of expressing or verbalizing his wishes under RC § 2151.414(D)(2), the trial court did not err in not considering the son's wishes in ascertaining the best interest of the child. In re Elder, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5834, 2006 Ohio 5889, (2006).

Because the children's wishes were inconsistent with those of the mother, who sought reunification, she lacked standing to assert as error the trial court's failure to appoint counsel for her children in the permanent custody proceeding. In re J.S., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 615, 2006 Ohio 702, (2006).

In a permanent custody proceeding under RC § 2151.414, the trial court did not err in not considering the wishes of the mother's three children as to their custody placement. Evidence that the seven-year-old child and the four-year-old twins were developmentally delayed constituted competent, credible evidence for the trial court to find that the children were not mature enough to understand the proceedings and to express their wishes in a meaningful manner. In re B.K., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4359, 2006 Ohio 4424, (2006).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in not conducting an in camera interview of a father's five-year-old child to ascertain her wishes with respect to the permanent custody proceeding. A guardian ad litem represented the child's wishes at the permanent custody hearing and concluded that permanent custody was in the child's best interests. In re Z. D., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2858, 2006 Ohio 2978, (2006).

Trial court's finding that the grant of permanent custody, under RC § 2151.414, of a mother's children to a family services agency was in the children's best interests was proper. The evidence showed that, while the children had indicated that they wished to be reunited with their mother, the children demonstrated behavioral issues, including inappropriate sexual behavior; one of them had been exposed to sexual acts; and they seemed to be unaffected by discipline. In re Thornton Children, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2400, 2006 Ohio 2519, (2006).

Trial court abused its discretion in finding that granting the agency permanent custody was in the best interest of the children, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D), because the trial court did not allow the children the opportunity to express their desires as to whether they wanted to live with their father, it did not observe their demeanor, assess their maturity, or weigh the credibility of their testimony. In re C.F., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 68, 2006 Ohio 88, (2006), reversed by 113 Ohio St. 3d 73, 2007 Ohio 1104, 862 N.E.2d 816, 2007 Ohio LEXIS 673 (2007).

Mother failed to demonstrate any prejudicial error because the children's wishes as expressed were that they were happy where they were and did not want to live with their mother. Other factors cited by the trial court supported its finding that permanent custody was in the children's best interest, including their custodial history, their interaction and interpersonal relationships, and their need for a legally secure placement. In re E.W., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2431, 2006 Ohio 2609, (2006).

Magistrate erred in awarding permanent custody of a child to a child services agency as testimony by the mother that the child was too young to be able to express his wishes did not fulfill the requirement of RC § 2151.414(D)(2) that the child's wishes be expressed directly by the child or the child's guardian ad litem (GAL) and the GAL's report did not state the child's wishes. It was error to fail to conduct a hearing to determine whether the child was entitled to independent counsel. In re Walling, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 729, 2006 Ohio 810, (2006).

Although a mother's son expressed a desire to live with her, the trial court did not err in finding that an award of permanent custody of the son to the county children services agency was in the son's best interest since the child's preference is one of many factors under RC § 2151.414(D) and was not controlling. Further, the son had taken on a parental role in the home, attempting to do what the mother could not, and the evidence indicated that this role of being a "parentified child" was harmful and was very stressful for the son. In re D.B., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 410, 2006 Ohio 479, (2006).

Trial court's finding that it was in the best interest of a mother's four children to award permanent custody to a children services agency was not against the manifest weight of the evidence. While the children expressed a wish to live with their mother, the children had been in the agency's custody for more than 12 months of a consecutive 22-month period, they had significant psychological conditions that required a legally secure placement, and they were doing well with their foster families. In re Devon J., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4050, 2006 Ohio 4130, (2006).

In granting a motion filed by a county children's services agency for permanent custody of a mother's three children, the trial court properly considered the children's wishes pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D)(2). By stating that it had considered all of the requisite factors, the trial court stated implicitly that it had considered the children's wishes, and since the youngest child was an infant who could not express or verbalize his wishes, there was no prejudicial error. In re Parks, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5836, 2006 Ohio 5891, (2006).

Clear and convincing evidence did not support a finding that permanent custody was in the children's best interest, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D), because the trial court failed to discern whether the children were capable of expressing their views and, if so, what those views were. There was nothing in the record suggesting that anyone asked the older child his wishes, and no one testified as to what those wishes were, nor was there evidence that the guardian ad litem interviewed either child, or even observed either child personally. In re T.V., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3884, 2005 Ohio 4280, (2005).

Trial court failed to consider the wishes of the younger child, as required by RC § 2151.414(D)(2), because the child did not testify, nor was she interviewed in camera, and the guardian ad litem's report failed to express her wishes and it did not indicate that she was unable to express her own wishes. In re Miller, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 875, 2005 Ohio 856, (2005).

Trial court properly determined that termination of a mother's parental rights was in the child's best interests pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D), after finding that the child could not be placed with either of his parents within a reasonable time and that he should not be placed with his parents in the foreseeable future, under RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(a); as the child was only four years old at the time of the hearing, he called his foster mother "mom" and his real mother by her first name, and the child's guardian ad litem testified that the child was too immature and too young to express his wishes regarding the outcome of the proceeding, it was not an abuse of discretion for the trial court not to consider his wishes and not to interview him in camera. In re Wright, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 3668, 2004 Ohio 4045, (2004).

Pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D), termination of a father's parental rights was in the best interest of the children because during an in camera interview, neither child expressed an interest in residing with the father; one child specifically expressed an interest in being adopted by foster parents. In re Bradley John B., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1175, 2004 Ohio 1328, (2004).

Juvenile court did not and could not have adequately discussed the factor of the children's wishes because, although the wishes were expressed as to the daughter, the middle child was eight years old at the time of the hearing and clearly of an age when he might have possessed the maturity to express a meaningful opinion regarding custody; moreover, a community support provider testified as to the child's desire to be with his mother, which, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(D), the juvenile court had to consider as a factor affecting the child's best interests with due regard for his maturity. In re Ridenour, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1703, 2004 Ohio 1958, (2004).

Juvenile court adequately considered the wishes of the eight-year-old minor son in determining whether the parental rights of his mother in the minor son should be terminated, and even though the son expressed a preference for living with the mother, the trial court's finding that the mother's inability to provide the minor son with a stable and structured home environment outweighed his preference was not error under the circumstances of the case. In re Krems, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2584, 2004 Ohio 2449, (2004).

A guardian ad litem's report was defective for not containing a statement of the children's wishes as to custody in a termination of parental rights case because the children did not testify at the permanent custody hearing and the elder child consistently expressed a desire to remain with his mother. In re Williams, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3246, 2003 Ohio 3550, (2003), affirmed by 101 Ohio St. 3d 398, 2004 Ohio 1500, 805 N.E.2d 1110, 2004 Ohio LEXIS 705 (2004).

Trial court erred in terminating a mother's parental rights because it failed to comply with RC § 2151.414(D); the children (about 7, 6, and 4 years old) did not testify and were not interviewed in chambers, and their guardian ad litem did not specifically address their wishes as to their placement. In re Swisher, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4901, 2003 Ohio 5446, (Oct. 14, 2003).

Appeals court affirmed termination of parental rights (TPR) and transfer of permanent custody to a children's services board (CSB) under RC § 2151.414(B); the evidence indicated that all three children wished to be placed in the permanent custody of the CSB. In re McCulloch, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5115, 2003 Ohio 5739, (2003).

Withdrawal of life-sustaining treatment

RC § 2133.08 does not permit the withdrawal of life-sustaining treatment for a minor. The probate court exceeded its statutory authority in granting the guardian the power to withdraw life-supporting treatments before the parents' rights were permanently terminated. In re Guardianship of Stein, 105 Ohio St. 3d 30, 821 N.E.2d 1008, 2004 Ohio 7114, (2004).

[§ 2151.41.5] § 2151.415 Motion requesting disposition order upon expiration of temporary custody order; extension.

(A) Except for cases in which a motion for permanent custody described in division (D)(1) of section 2151.413 [2151.41.3] of the Revised Code is required to be made, a public children services agency or private child placing agency that has been given temporary custody of a child pursuant to section 2151.353 [2151.35.3] of the Revised Code, not later than thirty days prior to the earlier of the date for the termination of the custody order pursuant to division (F) of section 2151.353 [2151.35.3] of the Revised Code or the date set at the dispositional hearing for the hearing to be held pursuant to this section, shall file a motion with the court that issued the order of disposition requesting that any of the following orders of disposition of the child be issued by the court:

(1) An order that the child be returned home and the custody of the child's parents, guardian, or custodian without any restrictions;

(2) An order for protective supervision;

(3) An order that the child be placed in the legal custody of a relative or other interested individual;

(4) An order permanently terminating the parental rights of the child's parents;

(5) An order that the child be placed in a planned permanent living arrangement;

(6) In accordance with division (D) of this section, an order for the extension of temporary custody.

(B) Upon the filing of a motion pursuant to division (A) of this section, the court shall hold a dispositional hearing on the date set at the dispositional hearing held pursuant to section 2151.35 of the Revised Code, with notice to all parties to the action in accordance with the Juvenile Rules. After the dispositional hearing or at a date after the dispositional hearing that is not later than one year after the earlier of the date on which the complaint in the case was filed or the child was first placed into shelter care, the court, in accordance with the best interest of the child as supported by the evidence presented at the dispositional hearing, shall issue an order of disposition as set forth in division (A) of this section, except that all orders for permanent custody shall be made in accordance with sections 2151.413 [2151.41.3] and 2151.414 [2151.41.4] of the Revised Code. In issuing an order of disposition under this section, the court shall comply with section 2151.42 of the Revised Code.

(C)(1) If an agency pursuant to division (A) of this section requests the court to place a child into a planned permanent living arrangement, the agency shall present evidence to indicate why a planned permanent living arrangement is appropriate for the child, including, but not limited to, evidence that the agency has tried or considered all other possible dispositions for the child. A court shall not place a child in a planned permanent living arrangement, unless it finds, by clear and convincing evidence, that a planned permanent living arrangement is in the best interest of the child and that one of the following exists:

(a) The child, because of physical, mental, or psychological problems or needs, is unable to function in a family-like setting and must remain in residential or institutional care.

(b) The parents of the child have significant physical, mental, or psychological problems and are unable to care for the child because of those problems, adoption is not in the best interest of the child, as determined in accordance with division (D) of section 2151.414 [2151.41.4] of the Revised Code, and the child retains a significant and positive relationship with a parent or relative;

(c) The child is sixteen years of age or older, has been counseled on the permanent placement options available, is unwilling to accept or unable to adapt to a permanent placement, and is in an agency program preparing for independent living.

(2) If the court issues an order placing a child in a planned permanent living arrangement, both of the following apply:

(a) The court shall issue a finding of fact setting forth the reasons for its finding;

(b) The agency may make any appropriate placement for the child and shall develop a case plan for the child that is designed to assist the child in finding a permanent home outside of the home of the parents.

(D)(1) If an agency pursuant to division (A) of this section requests the court to grant an extension of temporary custody for a period of up to six months, the agency shall include in the motion an explanation of the progress on the case plan of the child and of its expectations of reunifying the child with the child's family, or placing the child in a permanent placement, within the extension period. The court shall schedule a hearing on the motion, give notice of its date, time, and location to all parties and the guardian ad litem of the child, and at the hearing consider the evidence presented by the parties and the guardian ad litem. The court may extend the temporary custody order of the child for a period of up to six months, if it determines at the hearing, by clear and convincing evidence, that the extension is in the best interest of the child, there has been significant progress on the case plan of the child, and there is reasonable cause to believe that the child will be reunified with one of the parents or otherwise permanently placed within the period of extension. In determining whether to extend the temporary custody of the child pursuant to this division, the court shall comply with section 2151.42 of the Revised Code. If the court extends the temporary custody of the child pursuant to this division, upon request it shall issue findings of fact.

(2) Prior to the end of the extension granted pursuant to division (D)(1) of this section, the agency that received the extension shall file a motion with the court requesting the issuance of one of the orders of disposition set forth in divisions (A)(1) to (5) of this section or requesting the court to extend the temporary custody order of the child for an additional period of up to six months. If the agency requests the issuance of an order of disposition under divisions (A)(1) to (5) of this section or does not file any motion prior to the expiration of the extension period, the court shall conduct a hearing in accordance with division (B) of this section and issue an appropriate order of disposition. In issuing an order of disposition, the court shall comply with section 2151.42 of the Revised Code.

If the agency requests an additional extension of up to six months of the temporary custody order of the child, the court shall schedule and conduct a hearing in the manner set forth in division (D)(1) of this section. The court may extend the temporary custody order of the child for an additional period of up to six months if it determines at the hearing, by clear and convincing evidence, that the additional extension is in the best interest of the child, there has been substantial additional progress since the original extension of temporary custody in the case plan of the child, there has been substantial additional progress since the original extension of temporary custody toward reunifying the child with one of the parents or otherwise permanently placing the child, and there is reasonable cause to believe that the child will be reunified with one of the parents or otherwise placed in a permanent setting before the expiration of the additional extension period. In determining whether to grant an additional extension, the court shall comply with section 2151.42 of the Revised Code. If the court extends the temporary custody of the child for an additional period pursuant to this division, upon request it shall issue findings of fact.

(3) Prior to the end of the extension of a temporary custody order granted pursuant to division (D)(2) of this section, the agency that received the extension shall file a motion with the court requesting the issuance of one of the orders of disposition set forth in divisions (A)(1) to (5) of this section. Upon the filing of the motion by the agency or, if the agency does not file the motion prior to the expiration of the extension period, upon its own motion, the court, prior to the expiration of the extension period, shall conduct a hearing in accordance with division (B) of this section and issue an appropriate order of disposition. In issuing an order of disposition, the court shall comply with section 2151.42 of the Revised Code.

(4) No court shall grant an agency more than two extensions of temporary custody pursuant to division (D) of this section.

(E) After the issuance of an order pursuant to division (B) of this section, the court shall retain jurisdiction over the child until the child attains the age of eighteen if the child is not mentally retarded, developmentally disabled, or physically impaired, the child attains the age of twenty-one if the child is mentally retarded, developmentally disabled, or physically impaired, or the child is adopted and a final decree of adoption is issued, unless the court's jurisdiction over the child is extended pursuant to division (E) of section 2151.353[†] [2151.35.3] of the Revised Code.

(F) The court, on its own motion or the motion of the agency or person with legal custody of the child, the child's guardian ad litem, or any other party to the action, may conduct a hearing with notice to all parties to determine whether any order issued pursuant to this section should be modified or terminated or whether any other dispositional order set forth in divisions (A)(1) to (5) of this section should be issued. After the hearing and consideration of all the evidence presented, the court, in accordance with the best interest of the child, may modify or terminate any order issued pursuant to this section or issue any dispositional order set forth in divisions (A)(1) to (5) of this section. In rendering a decision under this division, the court shall comply with section 2151.42 of the Revised Code.

(G) If the court places a child in a planned permanent living arrangement with a public children services agency or a private child placing agency pursuant to this section, the agency with which the child is placed in a planned permanent living arrangement shall not remove the child from the residential placement in which the child is originally placed pursuant to the case plan for the child or in which the child is placed with court approval pursuant to this division, unless the court and the guardian ad litem are given notice of the intended removal and the court issues an order approving the removal or unless the removal is necessary to protect the child from physical or emotional harm and the agency gives the court notice of the removal and of the reasons why the removal is necessary to protect the child from physical or emotional harm immediately after the removal of the child from the prior setting.

(H) If the hearing held under this section takes the place of an administrative review that otherwise would have been held under section 2151.416 [2151.41.6] of the Revised Code, the court at the hearing held under this section shall do all of the following in addition to any other requirements of this section:

(1) Determine the continued necessity for and the appropriateness of the child's placement;

(2) Determine the extent of compliance with the child's case plan;

(3) Determine the extent of progress that has been made toward alleviating or mitigating the causes necessitating the child's placement in foster care;

(4) Project a likely date by which the child may be returned to the child's home or placed for adoption or legal guardianship;

(5) Approve the permanency plan for the child consistent with section 2151.417 [2151.41.7] of the Revised Code.

Generally

The thirty-day provision in RC § 2151.41.5 is merely directory. Omission of RC § 2151.41.5(D)(1) information in an order is not prejudicial where the parents were given notice of the hearing and an opportunity to appear: Endsley v. Endsley, 89 Ohio App. 3d 306, 624 N.E.2d 270 (1993).

A parent's demonstration of lack of commitment toward her child is sufficient to support a finding that the child cannot be placed with the parent within a reasonable time. Testimony that the foster mother would adopt the child satisfies RC § 2151.41.4(D)(1). The time limits specified in RC §§ 2151.35.3 and 2151.41.5 are not unconstitutional as applied to a minor parent: In re McCrary, 75 Ohio App. 3d 601, 600 N.E.2d 347 (1991).

Appeal

While a proceeding for custody is a special proceeding, court's order denying appellant's motion for permanent custody of a minor child and continuing its orders for the child's temporary custody with appellant-agency is not a final appealable order within the meaning of RC § 2505.02 as such order does not affect a substantial right: In re Wilkinson, 1996 Ohio App. LEXIS 1091 (2nd Dist. 1996).

Custody grant to relative

Because the motion to grant legal custody to the uncle and his wife was filed after the dispositional hearing, it was a motion to modify the prior dispositional order and RC § 2151.415(A)(3) applied. The father participated in the hearing and was aware that his brother and his wife were potential custodians because the father had acquiesced to the temporary custody arrangement and thus, the trial court's reference to RC § 2151.353(A)(3) constituted harmless error. In re McCallum, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 905, 2007 Ohio 995, (Mar. 1, 2007).

Trial court did not err in declining to grant change of legal custody to children's aunt and maternal grandparents pursuant to RC § 2151.415(A)(3) as the aunt had not had any contact with the children for two or three years and had no independent housing or employment, and their grandparents, who lived in New York, had also had limited contact with the children and had limited bedroom space in their residence. Moreover, the trial court expressed particular concern that these relatives expressed belief that the children should be with their mother, and pursuant to Ohio R. Juv. P. 2(Z), a trial court may properly recognize that legal custody to third parties will not provide a legal barrier to a parent's future attempted assertion of his or her residual rights concerning the child. In re Morales, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6356, 2006 Ohio 6384, (2006).

Trial court clearly had an adequate basis to find that it was in the child's best interests, under RC § 2151.414(D), to be placed in the legal custody of her aunt and uncle, pursuant to RC § 2151.415(A)(3). The child was removed when she was five months old upon discovery of physical injuries, she had lived outside her mother's home for 18 months, the guardian ad litem strongly recommended legal custody be granted to the relatives, the father was incarcerated and the mother failed to remedy the conditions that resulted in the child being removed from the home, the mother had unresolved issues concerning her impulse control and self-esteem, and the mother had not ended her relationship with the boyfriend who was suspected of physically abusing the child, despite a court order. In re Starks, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 1824, 2005 Ohio 1912, (2005).

Trial court used a higher burden of proof than was necessary, when it found by clear and convincing evidence that legal custody of the child was to be awarded to the relatives, given the fact neither parents' residual parental rights were being terminated. Despite that fact, the use of the incorrect standard was clearly harmless error on the part of the trial court. In re Starks, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 1824, 2005 Ohio 1912, (2005).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion when it determined by clear and convincing evidence that legal custody of the child be granted to the relatives, under RC § 2151.415(A)(3). In light of the results of the mother's psychological evaluation, as well as her alleged refusal to sever contact with the individual suspected of abusing her child, the trial court's decision to deny custody to the mother was not against the manifest weight of the evidence. In re Starks, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 1824, 2005 Ohio 1912, (2005).

Due process

Under the circumstances, the trial court violated the mother's due process rights where it refused to allow witnesses proffered by the mother to testify at the permanent custody hearing on the basis that they had not filed a motion for custody. In re Beatty, 167 Ohio App. 3d 730, 856 N.E.2d 1042, 2006 Ohio 3698, (2006), appeal dismissed for want of debatable question by 113 Ohio St. 3d 1207, 2007 Ohio 860, 862 N.E.2d 839, 2007 Ohio LEXIS 507 (2007).

The total time an agency can be granted custody of an abused or dependent child is two years. The court's failure to render a decision within the time limit may violate parental due process rights: In re Omosun Children, 106 Ohio App. 3d 813, 667 N.E.2d 431 (1995).

Duration of temporary custody order

If a juvenile court commits to the temporary custody of a public children services agency a child who has been adjudicated to be unruly or delinquent pursuant to RC § 2151.35.4(A)(1) or RC § 2152.19(A)(1), respectively, the duration of the temporary custody order is subject to the time limitations set forth in RC § 2151.35.3(F) and RC § 2151.41.5: OAG No. 2003-004 (2003).

Extension

Trial court did not have the authority to grant a third extension of temporary custody because temporary custody of children in the care of a children's services agency was limited to a period of two years—an initial period of one year, followed by up to two extensions of six months each. In re D.J., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6276, 2006 Ohio 6304, (2006).

When a trial court considered, in a permanent custody proceeding, a mother's motion, under RC § 2151.415(D)(1), to extend an agency's temporary custody of her child, it was not an abuse of discretion for the trial court to deny the motion because, under RC § 2151.414(D)(4), it was not simply charged with finding a "stable, suitable, and loving" placement for the child but was obligated to consider the child's need for a legally secure permanent placement and whether that type of placement could be achieved without a grant of the child's permanent custody to an agency, and extending temporary custody would not achieve this goal as neither parent was capable of parenting the child, and no relatives came forward to develop a relationship with the child or to request consideration for custody. In re P.B., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5420, 2006 Ohio 5419, (2006).

In a permanent custody proceeding, a mother did not show it was in a child's best interest to extend the child's temporary custody with an agency for six months, under RC § 2151.415(D)(1), because clear and convincing evidence did not show an extension of temporary custody was in the child's best interest, as the mother had made only minimal progress on her case plan and there was no reason to believe that reunification of the child with the mother would occur within six months. In re P.B., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5420, 2006 Ohio 5419, (2006).

Trial court abused its discretion when it failed to grant the mother's six-month extension of temporary custody, under RC § 2151.415(D)(1), to address her case plan and reunify with her children because the mother did not exhibit any parenting problems related to the reason for the removal of the child, she had made significant progress on her case plan, and there was reasonable cause to believe that the children could be reunified with her within the period of extension. In re E.T., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2308, 2006 Ohio 2413, (2006).

When a mother sought, under RC § 2151.415(D)(1), to extend an agency's temporary custody of her child, when the agency had filed a motion for permanent custody of the child, to give her additional time to work on her case plan, the trial court did not abuse its discretion by denying the motion because the mother had made no significant progress on her case plan and there was no reason to believe that she would remedy her parenting problems within the next six months, as, while she had completed parenting classes, she had not complied with any other requirement of her case plan. In re M.C., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 944, 2006 Ohio 1041, (2006).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying the mother's request for an extension of time to attempt to regain custody of her child because sufficient time had already been provided to allow her to remedy any and all problems causing the child to be removed from her care. The trial court found that the chemical dependency of the mother was so severe that it made the mother unable to provide an adequate, permanent home for the child, within one year after the date of this hearing. In re English, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2952, 2006 Ohio 3067, (2006).

Trial court did not err in extending an original order of temporary custody for six months, so that a mother could secure appropriate housing and maintain sobriety, as temporary custody could be properly extended so as to exceed a total of two years, as the jurisdictional grant of RC § 2151.353(E)(1) was not limited; hence, a judge could enter an order of disposition pursuant to RC § 2151.415(A) after the sunset date when the problems that led to the original temporary custody order remained unresolved. In re N.B., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3295, 2003 Ohio 3656, (2003), criticized by In re D.J., 2006 Ohio 6304, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6276 (Ohio Ct. App., Montgomery County Dec. 1, 2006).

Issues concerning extension of temporary custody essentially become moot after a court grants an agency's motion for permanent or legal custody. The mother's compliance with the case plan was immaterial where returning the children to her would subject them to violence by her husband: In re Nice, 141 Ohio App. 3d 445, 751 N.E.2d 552, 2001 Ohio 3214, (2001).

Absent a showing of prejudice, the failure to file a motion for extension of custody within the time constraints of RC § 2151.41.5(A) is harmless error. The time limitation is directory, not mandatory: In re Amy W., 1995 Ohio App. LEXIS 277 (4th Dist. 1995).

Extension of temporary custody reversed where no evidentiary hearing was held: In re Kleich Children, 1994 Ohio App. LEXIS 3835 (5th Dist. 1994).

Foster care

The evidence supported the long-term foster care placement, but not the court's specific findings of fact. RC § 2151.41.5(C)(1)(c) applies only to children who are sixteen or over at all relevant times: In re Bacorn, 116 Ohio App. 3d 489, 658 N.E.2d 575 (1996).

Where, upon hearing a motion requesting permanent custody of a child, a court decides to deny the motion, the court may proceed in accordance with RC § 2151.41.5 and make any disposition listed in that statute, including placement of a child in long-term foster care: In re McDaniel, 1993 Ohio App. LEXIS 806 (4th Dist. 1993).

Jurisdiction

The passing of the statutory time period ("sunset date") pursuant to RC § 2151.35.3(F) does not divest juvenile courts of jurisdiction to enter dispositional orders: In re Young Children, 76 Ohio St. 3d 632, 669 N.E.2d 1140 (1996).

A court loses jurisdiction to determine the custody of children after the "sunset" date provided by RC § 2151.35.3. RC § 2151.41.5 authorizes no more than two six month extensions: In re Travis Children, 80 Ohio App. 3d 620, 609 N.E.2d 1356 (1992).

A juvenile court retains jurisdiction over a child who has been adjudicated to be unruly or delinquent until the child attains twenty-one years of age, and may continue to make dispositional orders with respect to the child until that time, regardless of whether the court's order of temporary custody has expired under the time limitations set forth in RC § 2151.35.3(F) and RC § 2151.41.5. OAG No. 2003-004 (2003).

Planned permanent living arrangement

Children's services agency did not request the trial court to consider the alternative of placing the child in the planned permanent living arrangement, which was one of the first prerequisites of RC § 2151.415(C)(1). Also, since the child was only two and a half years old, it was unlikely that he needed to be learning the necessary skills for independent living when it was anticipated that he may be adopted or live in a foster home. In re English, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2952, 2006 Ohio 3067, (2006).

Because the agency filed a permanent custody motion pursuant to RC § 2151.413(D)(1) before the mother filed her planned permanent living arrangement (PPLA) motion, there the trial court did not err in denying her motion. Pursuant to RC § 2151.415(A), a party cannot file a PPLA motion when the court is required to make a permanent custody determination under RC § 2151.413(D)(1). In re SW, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2829, 2006 Ohio 2958, (2006), writ of certiorari denied by 127 S. Ct. 1152, 166 L. Ed. 2d 999, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 1222, 75 U.S.L.W. 3384 (U.S. 2007).

After a public children services agency or private child placing agency is granted temporary custody of a child and files a motion for permanent custody, a juvenile court does not have the authority to place the child in a planned permanent living arrangement when the agency does not request this disposition: In re A.B., 110 Ohio St. 3d 230, 852 N.E.2d 1187, 2006 Ohio 4359, (2006).

Trial court did not err by determining that a planned permanent living arrangement would fail to serve the child's best interests where there was evidence the child was unable to function in a family-like setting due to his apparent history of sexually offenses. In re Beasley, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3207, 2003 Ohio 3462, (2003).

Right to counsel

Where the guardian ad litem appointed for a parent who fled to China with a child was also an attorney, the court did not err by terminating parental rights without granting a continuance so that new counsel could be appointed for the parent to replace counsel who withdrew due to lack of communication with the parent: In re Zhang, 135 Ohio App. 3d 350, 734 N.E.2d 379 (1999).

Termination of parental rights

Trial court was without jurisdiction to grant the aunt's motion for an order terminating the mother's parental rights, pursuant to RC § 2151.415(F), because a request made for permanent termination of parental rights, whether made through RC § 2151.415(A) or RC § 2151.415(F), had to be accompanied by a motion for permanent custody and had to be filed by a children's services agency. Under RC ch. 2151, permanent termination of parental rights and permanent custody must go together, the terms are used interchangeably, and the terms must be construed with reference to each other. In re Webster, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1852, 2006 Ohio 2029, (2006).

Grant of permanent custody to a Children Services Board was in the best interest of the children, as the mother's parental rights to her two other children previously had been terminated under RC §§ 2151.353, 2151.414, or 2151.415, and evidence supported the trial court's findings under the RC § 2151.414(D)(1)-(5) factors, as the mother's interactions with her children were poor and had not progressed, she resisted treatment of her borderline personality disorder and continued to abuse crack cocaine, the older child had bonded with the foster family, the children had been in the Board's custody significant portions of their lives and needed a secure placement. In re J.G., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2237, 2004 Ohio 2513, (2004).

Time limits

Because the mother was given notice and an opportunity to be heard, any failure of the agency to comply with time limit set forth in RC § 2151.415 was harmless. The agency filed its motion for legal custody 24 days before the dispositional hearing, the mother fully participated in the hearing, her counsel cross-examined each of the agency's witnesses, and she testified on her own behalf. In re T.A., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4397, 2006 Ohio 4468, (2006).

Trial court was not required to dismiss a family services agency's motion for permanent custody on the ground that it was not filed within 30 days prior to the annual review, as required by RC § 2151.415, because the trial court had discretion to make dispositional orders for the children, in that the problems that led to the original grant of temporary custody had not been resolved or sufficiently mitigated. In re Thornton Children, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2400, 2006 Ohio 2519, (2006).

[§ 2151.41.6] § 2151.416 Administrative reviews of case plan; annual report.

(A) Each agency that is required by section 2151.412 [2151.41.2] of the Revised Code to prepare a case plan for a child shall complete a semiannual administrative review of the case plan no later than six months after the earlier of the date on which the complaint in the case was filed or the child was first placed in shelter care. After the first administrative review, the agency shall complete semiannual administrative reviews no later than every six months. If the court issues an order pursuant to section 2151.414 [2151.41.4] or 2151.415 [2151.41.5] of the Revised Code, the agency shall complete an administrative review no later than six months after the court's order and continue to complete administrative reviews no later than every six months after the first review, except that the court hearing held pursuant to section 2151.417 [2151.41.7] of the Revised Code may take the place of any administrative review that would otherwise be held at the time of the court hearing. When conducting a review, the child's health and safety shall be the paramount concern.

(B) Each administrative review required by division (A) of this section shall be conducted by a review panel of at least three persons, including, but not limited to, both of the following:

(1) A caseworker with day-to-day responsibility for, or familiarity with, the management of the child's case plan;

(2) A person who is not responsible for the management of the child's case plan or for the delivery of services to the child or the parents, guardian, or custodian of the child.

(C) Each semiannual administrative review shall include, but not be limited to, a joint meeting by the review panel with the parents, guardian, or custodian of the child, the guardian ad litem of the child, and the child's foster care provider and shall include an opportunity for those persons to submit any written materials to be included in the case record of the child. If a parent, guardian, custodian, guardian ad litem, or foster care provider of the child cannot be located after reasonable efforts to do so or declines to participate in the administrative review after being contacted, the agency does not have to include them in the joint meeting.

(D) The agency shall prepare a written summary of the semiannual administrative review that shall include, but not be limited to, all of the following:

(1) A conclusion regarding the safety and appropriateness of the child's foster care placement;

(2) The extent of the compliance with the case plan of all parties;

(3) The extent of progress that has been made toward alleviating the circumstances that required the agency to assume temporary custody of the child;

(4) An estimated date by which the child may be returned to and safely maintained in the child's home or placed for adoption or legal custody;

(5) An updated case plan that includes any changes that the agency is proposing in the case plan;

(6) The recommendation of the agency as to which agency or person should be given custodial rights over the child for the six-month period after the administrative review;

(7) The names of all persons who participated in the administrative review.

(E) The agency shall file the summary with the court no later than seven days after the completion of the administrative review. If the agency proposes a change to the case plan as a result of the administrative review, the agency shall file the proposed change with the court at the time it files the summary. The agency shall give notice of the summary and proposed change in writing before the end of the next day after filing them to all parties and the child's guardian ad litem. All parties and the guardian ad litem shall have seven days after the date the notice is sent to object to and request a hearing on the proposed change.

(1) If the court receives a timely request for a hearing, the court shall schedule a hearing pursuant to section 2151.417 [2151.41.7] of the Revised Code to be held not later than thirty days after the court receives the request. The court shall give notice of the date, time, and location of the hearing to all parties and the guardian ad litem. The agency may implement the proposed change after the hearing, if the court approves it. The agency shall not implement the proposed change unless it is approved by the court.

(2) If the court does not receive a timely request for a hearing, the court may approve the proposed change without a hearing. If the court approves the proposed change without a hearing, it shall journalize the case plan with the change not later than fourteen days after the change is filed with the court. If the court does not approve the proposed change to the case plan, it shall schedule a review hearing to be held pursuant to section 2151.417 [2151.41.7] of the Revised Code no later than thirty days after the expiration of the fourteen-day time period and give notice of the date, time, and location of the hearing to all parties and the guardian ad litem of the child. If, despite the requirements of this division and division (D) of section 2151.417 [2151.41.7] of the Revised Code, the court neither approves and journalizes the proposed change nor conducts a hearing, the agency may implement the proposed change not earlier than fifteen days after it is submitted to the court.

(F) The director of job and family services may adopt rules pursuant to Chapter 119. of the Revised Code for procedures and standard forms for conducting administrative reviews pursuant to this section.

(G) The juvenile court that receives the written summary of the administrative review, upon determining, either from the written summary, case plan, or otherwise, that the custody or care arrangement is not in the best interest of the child, may terminate the custody of an agency and place the child in the custody of another institution or association certified by the department of job and family services under section 5103.03 of the Revised Code.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

Generally

If a juvenile court, in making disposition of an unruly or delinquent child pursuant to RC §§ 2151.35.4 or 2151.35.5, places the child into the temporary custody of the county department of human services in accordance with RC § 2151.35.3 and the department provides services to that child, the county department of human services is required to develop and file with the court a case plan pursuant to RC § 2151.41.2 and to hold semiannual reviews of the case plan pursuant to RC § 2151.41.6: OAG No. 99-041 (1999).

[§ 2151.41.7] § 2151.417 Court review of child's placement or custody arrangement; continuing jurisdiction; citizen's review board.

(A) Any court that issues a dispositional order pursuant to section 2151.353 [2151.35.3], 2151.414 [2151.41.4], or 2151.415 [2151.41.5] of the Revised Code may review at any time the child's placement or custody arrangement, the case plan prepared for the child pursuant to section 2151.412 [2151.41.2] of the Revised Code, the actions of the public children services agency or private child placing agency in implementing that case plan, the child's permanency plan, if the child's permanency plan has been approved and any other aspects of the child's placement or custody arrangement. In conducting the review, the court shall determine the appropriateness of any agency actions, the safety and appropriateness of continuing the child's placement or custody arrangement, and whether any changes should be made with respect to the child's permanency plan or placement or custody arrangement or with respect to the actions of the agency under the child's placement or custody arrangement. Based upon the evidence presented at a hearing held after notice to all parties and the guardian ad litem of the child, the court may require the agency, the parents, guardian, or custodian of the child, and the physical custodians of the child to take any reasonable action that the court determines is necessary and in the best interest of the child or to discontinue any action that it determines is not in the best interest of the child.

(B) If a court issues a dispositional order pursuant to section 2151.353 [2151.35.3], 2151.414 [2151.41.4], or 2151.415 [2151.41.5] of the Revised Code, the court has continuing jurisdiction over the child as set forth in division (E)(1) of section 2151.353 [2151.35.3] of the Revised Code. The court may amend a dispositional order in accordance with division (E)(2) of section 2151.353 [2151.35.3] of the Revised Code at any time upon its own motion or upon the motion of any interested party. The court shall comply with section 2151.42 of the Revised Code in amending any dispositional order pursuant to this division.

(C) Any court that issues a dispositional order pursuant to section 2151.353 [2151.35.3], 2151.414 [2151.41.4], or 2151.415 [2151.41.5] of the Revised Code shall hold a review hearing one year after the earlier of the date on which the complaint in the case was filed or the child was first placed into shelter care to review the case plan prepared pursuant to section 2151.412 [2151.41.2] of the Revised Code and the child's placement or custody arrangement, to approve or review the permanency plan for the child, and to make changes to the case plan and placement or custody arrangement consistent with the permanency plan. The court shall schedule the review hearing at the time that it holds the dispositional hearing pursuant to section 2151.35 of the Revised Code.

The court shall hold a similar review hearing no later than every twelve months after the initial review hearing until the child is adopted, returned to the parents, or the court otherwise terminates the child's placement or custody arrangement, except that the dispositional hearing held pursuant to section 2151.415 [2151.41.5] of the Revised Code shall take the place of the first review hearing to be held under this section. The court shall schedule each subsequent review hearing at the conclusion of the review hearing immediately preceding the review hearing to be scheduled.

(D) If, within fourteen days after a written summary of an administrative review is filed with the court pursuant to section 2151.416 [2151.41.6] of the Revised Code, the court does not approve the proposed change to the case plan filed pursuant to division (E) of section 2151.416 [2151.41.6] of the Revised Code or a party or the guardian ad litem requests a review hearing pursuant to division (E) of that section, the court shall hold a review hearing in the same manner that it holds review hearings pursuant to division (C) of this section, except that if a review hearing is required by this division and if a hearing is to be held pursuant to division (C) of this section or section 2151.415 [2151.41.5] of the Revised Code, the hearing held pursuant to division (C) of this section or section 2151.415 [2151.41.5] of the Revised Code shall take the place of the review hearing required by this division.

(E) If a court determines pursuant to section 2151.419 [2151.41.9] of the Revised Code that a public children services agency or private child placing agency is not required to make reasonable efforts to prevent the removal of a child from the child's home, eliminate the continued removal of a child from the child's home, and return the child to the child's home, and the court does not return the child to the child's home pursuant to division (A)(3) of section 2151.419 [2151.41.9] of the revised code, the court shall hold a review hearing to approve the permanency plan for the child and, if appropriate, to make changes to the child's case plan and the child's placement or custody arrangement consistent with the permanency plan. The court may hold the hearing immediately following the determination under section 2151.419 [2151.41.9] of the Revised Code and shall hold it no later than thirty days after making that determination.

(F) The court shall give notice of the review hearings held pursuant to this section to every interested party, including, but not limited to, the appropriate agency employees who are responsible for the child's care and planning, the child's parents, any person who had guardianship or legal custody of the child prior to the custody order, the child's guardian ad litem, and the child. The court shall summon every interested party to appear at the review hearing and give them an opportunity to testify and to present other evidence with respect to the child's custody arrangement, including, but not limited to, the following: the case plan for the child; the permanency plan, if one exists; the actions taken by the child's custodian; the need for a change in the child's custodian or caseworker; and the need for any specific action to be taken with respect to the child. The court shall require any interested party to testify or present other evidence when necessary to a proper determination of the issues presented at the review hearing.

(G) After the review hearing, the court shall take the following actions based upon the evidence presented:

(1) If an administrative review has been conducted, determine whether the conclusions of the review are supported by a preponderance of the evidence and approve or modify the case plan based upon that evidence;

(2) If the hearing was held under division (C) or (E) of this section, approve a permanency plan for the child that specifies whether and, if applicable, when the child will be safely returned home or placed for adoption, for legal custody, or in a planned permanent living arrangement. A permanency plan approved after a hearing under division (E) of this section shall not include any provision requiring the child to be returned to the child's home.

(3) If the child is in temporary custody, do all of the following:

(a) Determine whether the child can and should be returned home with or without an order for protective supervision;

(b) If the child can and should be returned home with or without an order for protective supervision, terminate the order for temporary custody;

(c) If the child cannot or should not be returned home with an order for protective supervision, determine whether the agency currently with custody of the child should retain custody or whether another public children services agency, private child placing agency, or an individual should be given custody of the child.

The court shall comply with section 2151.42 of the Revised Code in taking any action under this division.

(4) If the child is in permanent custody, determine what actions are required by the custodial agency and of any other organizations or persons in order to facilitate an adoption of the child and make any appropriate orders with respect to the custody arrangement or conditions of the child, including, but not limited to, a transfer of permanent custody to another public children services agency or private child placing agency;

(5) Journalize the terms of the updated case plan for the child.

(H) The court may appoint a referee or a citizens review board to conduct the review hearings that the court is required by this section to conduct, subject to the review and approval by the court of any determinations made by the referee or citizens review board. If the court appoints a citizens review board to conduct the review hearings, the board shall consist of one member representing the general public and four members who are trained or experienced in the care or placement of children and have training or experience in the fields of medicine, psychology, social work, education, or any related field. Of the initial appointments to the board, two shall be for a term of one year, two shall be for a term of two years, and one shall be for a term of three years, with all the terms ending one year after the date on which the appointment was made. Thereafter, all terms of the board members shall be for three years and shall end on the same day of the same month of the year as did the term that they succeed. Any member appointed to fill a vacancy occurring prior to the expiration of the term for which the member's predecessor was appointed shall hold office for the remainder of the term.

(I) A copy of the court's determination following any review hearing held pursuant to this section shall be sent to the custodial agency, the guardian ad litem of the child who is the subject of the review hearing, and, if that child is not the subject of a permanent commitment hearing, the parents of the child.

(J) If the hearing held under this section takes the place of an administrative review that otherwise would have been held under section 2151.416 [2151.41.6] of the Revised Code, the court at the hearing held under this section shall do all of the following in addition to any other requirements of this section:

(1) Determine the continued necessity for and the safety and appropriateness of the child's placement;

(2) Determine the extent of compliance with the child's case plan;

(3) Determine the extent of progress that has been made toward alleviating or mitigating the causes necessitating the child's placement in foster care;

(4) Project a likely date by which the child may be safely returned home or placed for adoption or legal custody.

(K)(1) Whenever the court is required to approve a permanency plan under this section or section 2151.415 [2151.41.5] of the Revised Code, the public children services agency or private child placing agency that filed the complaint in the case, has custody of the child, or will be given custody of the child shall develop a permanency plan for the child. The agency must file the plan with the court prior to the hearing under this section or section 2151.415 [2151.41.5] of the Revised Code.

(2) The permanency plan developed by the agency must specify whether and, if applicable, when the child will be safely returned home or placed for adoption or legal custody. If the agency determines that there is a compelling reason why returning the child home or placing the child for adoption or legal custody is not in the best interest of the child, the plan shall provide that the child will be placed in a planned permanent living arrangement. A permanency plan developed as a result of a determination made under division (A)(2) of section 2151.419 [2151.41.9] of the Revised Code may not include any provision requiring the child to be returned home.

Generally

Revised Code § 2151.41.7 is permissive, and it is discretionary with the court as to whether to review an order: In re Franklin, 88 Ohio App. 3d 277, 623 N.E.2d 720 (1993).

Revised Code § 2151.41.7 contemplates that one not a party to the original action may subsequently seek a review of an agency's plan. It provides a trial court with the broad authority and discretion necessary to reconsider and to modify a child's custodial arrangement when reviewing the appropriateness of any agency action if to do so would be in the best interest of the child: In re Moorehead, 75 Ohio App. 3d 711, 600 N.E.2d 778 (1991).

Adoption

Where permanent custody had already been granted to an agency, the juvenile court's grant of legal custody to parties who were ineligible to adopt thwarted the children's right to an expeditious adoption: In re Hitchcock, 120 Ohio App. 3d 88, 696 N.E.2d 1090 (1996).

Applicability

Where a mother sought to vacate a prior court order that had awarded legal custody of her child to custodians, Ohio R. Juv. P. 36 and RC § 2151.417 were deemed inapplicable to the proceeding, as those dealt with modification or termination of a child custody arrangement upon a showing of a change in circumstances and a finding that such change was in the child's best interest. As no modification or termination was contemplated by the mother's motion, but rather, an examination of the circumstances at the time of the original custody award was mandated, there could have been no changed circumstances. In re H.B., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1969, 2006 Ohio 2124, (2006).

Children out of wedlock

Award of legal custody of a mother's son to his purported father was in the best interest of the son. While the father had a prior assault conviction and while his legal status as father was uncertain, the trial court considered these concerns but was also provided with evidence that the father lived with the son after he was born, that the father was listed as the father of the son in a California record, and that the father was undergoing counseling sessions with the son. In re Callier, 2002 Ohio App. LEXIS 7304, 2002 Ohio 2406, (2002), criticized by In re L.R.T., 165 Ohio App. 3d 77, 2006 Ohio 207, 844 N.E.2d 914, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 173 (Ohio Ct. App., Butler County 2006).

Custody grant to relative

Award of legal custody of a mother's daughter to the daughter's maternal grandmother and of the mother's son to his father under RC § 2151.417 was not error even though neither custodian filed motions for legal custody because the mother was provided with adequate notice of the possibility of legal custody, was afforded with opportunities to be heard, and actively participated in the proceedings. In re Callier, 2002 Ohio App. LEXIS 7304, 2002 Ohio 2406, (2002), criticized by In re L.R.T., 165 Ohio App. 3d 77, 2006 Ohio 207, 844 N.E.2d 914, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 173 (Ohio Ct. App., Butler County 2006).

While a trial court did not err in granting legal custody of her children under RC § 2151.417 to relatives without a motion for legal custody first being filed, in that the mother received adequate notice of the intention to award legal custody and participated in the proceedings, the trial court erred in failing to make findings that granting legal custody to the relatives was in the children's best interests. In re C.M., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 5918, 2005 Ohio 6548, (2005).

Evidence supported the trial court's refusal to modify, pursuant to RC § 2151.417(B), an award of custody to the mother's sister pursuant to RC § 2151.353; granting custody to the father was not in the best interest of the child pursuant to RC § 2151.42(A), as the father was barely known by the child, had had two children taken from him, and could not show that the test establishing his paternity was a change in circumstances under RC § 2151.42(B). In re Osberry, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4922, 2003 Ohio 5462, (2003).

Trial court did not err by not giving the father a parental unsuitability determination before awarding custody of the child to the maternal grandmother because the child was adjudicated neglected and it was in the child's best interest to be with the grandmother. In re C.F., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 2920, 2003 Ohio 3260, (2003), criticized by In re C.R., 2004 Ohio 4465, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 4053 (Ohio Ct. App., Cuyahoga County Aug. 26, 2004).

Delinquent or unruly child

Upon a determination during reviewing hearings held pursuant to RC § 2151.417 and Ohio R. Juv. P. 36(A) that a juvenile was not benefiting from a residential treatment program that he was originally committed to upon being declared a delinquent pursuant to RC § 2151.35(A)(1) and that he was acting out, a juvenile court's placement of the juvenile with the Department of Youth Services was not error pursuant to RC § 2151.354(5) and (6); the juvenile was not amenable to treatment or rehabilitation due to his conduct at the residential treatment facility. In re D.B., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2738, 2006 Ohio 2891, (2006).

If a juvenile court, in making disposition of an unruly or delinquent child pursuant to RC §§ 2151.35.4 or 2151.35.5, places the child into the temporary custody of the county department of human services in accordance with RC § 2151.35.3, the juvenile court is required to hold periodic reviews pursuant to RC § 2151.41.7 and JuvR 36(A): OAG No. 99-041 (1999).

Hearing

In the absence of a showing of prejudice, absence of the minor from a hearing under RC § 2151.41.7 is not cause for reversal: Lovejoy v. Cuyahoga County Dep't of Human Services, 76 Ohio App. 3d 514, 602 N.E.2d 405 (1991).

Jurisdiction

Trial court had jurisdiction, pursuant to RC § 2151.353(E)(1) and RC § 2151.417(A), to modify or amend its prior disposition, including terminating the mother's parental rights, because, when the trial court returned the children to the mother, it specifically ordered that the agency maintain protective supervision. As such, the trial court had jurisdiction to proceed in the same case, under the same case number, when the agency asserted that the children needed to be removed from the mother's home based upon matters observed while the children remained under the agency's protective supervision. In re Peterson, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1367, 2006 Ohio 1499, (2006).

Juvenile court magistrate exceeded his authority and lacked jurisdiction to order a county social services agency to commence adoption proceedings that were to culminate in the adoption of a child by designated individuals, as the probate court had exclusive jurisdiction to grant or deny an adoption, pursuant to RC §§ 2151.417(G)(4) and 3107.01(C). However, the magistrate's determination, which was adopted by the juvenile court, that the child's placement should be with the particular individuals during the permanent custody, was based on sufficient evidence and was proper. In re A.W., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3758, 2005 Ohio 4127, (2005).

Child's ongoing dependency action provided the trial court with subject matter jurisdiction as well as the authority to make ongoing decisions regarding his care, pursuant to RC § 2151.417(A) and (B) and RC § 2151.353(E)(1). In re Unger Children, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2291, 2005 Ohio 2414, (2005).

Where a juvenile court grants temporary custody to a children services agency under RC § 2151.35.3, it has continuing jurisdiction until the child reaches eighteen: In re Doe Children, 93 Ohio App. 3d 134, 637 N.E.2d 977 (1994).

Revised Code § 2151.35.3 authorizes a juvenile court to retain jurisdiction over a neglected child. Thus prohibition will not issue to prevent a juvenile court from ordering, under the threat of a contempt finding, that any adoption proceedings be stayed until the court has relinquished jurisdiction: State ex rel. Cuyahoga County Dep't of Children & Family Servs. v. Ferreri, 96 Ohio App. 3d 660, 645 N.E.2d 837 (1994).

Notice

Revised Code § 2151.41.7 and JuvR 36(A) allow a court to review a child's placement or custody arrangement at any time. However, a party with current custody of the child is entitled to prior notice that a change of custody will be considered at a hearing ostensibly concerning visitation rights: In re Bowman, 101 Ohio App. 3d 599, 656 N.E.2d 355 (1995).

Protective supervision

Trial court did not err in failing to make a finding that a mother's children could not or should not be returned to her, under the protective supervision from the county children's services board, where the "review hearing" prerequisite under RC § 2151.417(G) referred to the standard post-dispositional review processes, and RC § 2151.417(G)(3)(c) clearly envisioned cases where the agency was still involved in the case; where the county board was no longer a participant in the case at the time of the custody hearing at issue, rendering the "can and should be returned home" finding was unnecessary. In re Mahley, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1571, 2004 Ohio 1772, (2004).

Visitation

Where a wife was granted legal custody of her niece's child due to the niece's incarceration and the wife and her husband had a parental relationship with the child, upon the parties' divorce, there was sufficient evidence to support the juvenile court's determination that the husband should have visitation with the child, as it was within her best interests due to the paternal and loving relationship she had with him pursuant to RC § 2151.417(A); RC § 3109.051 was not applicable to the determination of visitation, as the issue did not arise out of a divorce or other applicable type of proceeding, but rather, out of a juvenile court action. In re Haywood, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 523, 2006 Ohio 576, (2006).

[§ 2151.41.8] § 2151.418 Amended and renumbered RC § 5103.03.18 in HB 332 (148 v.—), eff 1-1-2001.

(A)(1) Except as provided in division (A)(2) of this section, at any hearing held pursuant to section 2151.28, division (E) of section 2151.31, or section 2151.314 [2151.31.4], 2151.33, or 2151.353 [2151.35.3] of the Revised Code at which the court removes a child from the child's home or continues the removal of a child from the child's home, the court shall determine whether the public children services agency or private child placing agency that filed the complaint in the case, removed the child from home, has custody of the child, or will be given custody of the child has made reasonable efforts to prevent the removal of the child from the child's home, to eliminate the continued removal of the child from the child's home, or to make it possible for the child to return safely home. The agency shall have the burden of proving that it has made those reasonable efforts. If the agency removed the child from home during an emergency in which the child could not safely remain at home and the agency did not have prior contact with the child, the court is not prohibited, solely because the agency did not make reasonable efforts during the emergency to prevent the removal of the child, from determining that the agency made those reasonable efforts. In determining whether reasonable efforts were made, the child's health and safety shall be paramount.

(2) If any of the following apply, the court shall make a determination that the agency is not required to make reasonable efforts to prevent the removal of the child from the child's home, eliminate the continued removal of the child from the child's home, and return the child to the child's home:

(a) The parent from whom the child was removed has been convicted of or pleaded guilty to one of the following:

(i) An offense under section 2903.01, 2903.02, or 2903.03 of the Revised Code or under an existing or former law of this state, any other state, or the United States that is substantially equivalent to an offense described in those sections and the victim of the offense was a sibling of the child or the victim was another child who lived in the parent's household at the time of the offense;

(ii) An offense under section 2903.11, 2903.12, or 2903.13 of the Revised Code or under an existing or former law of this state, any other state, or the United States that is substantially equivalent to an offense described in those sections and the victim of the offense is the child, a sibling of the child, or another child who lived in the parent's household at the time of the offense;

(iii) An offense under division (B)(2) of section 2919.22 of the Revised Code or under an existing or former law of this state, any other state, or the United States that is substantially equivalent to the offense described in that section and the child, a sibling of the child, or another child who lived in the parent's household at the time of the offense is the victim of the offense;

(iv) An offense under section 2907.02, 2907.03, 2907.04, 2907.05, or 2907.06 of the Revised Code or under an existing or former law of this state, any other state, or the United States that is substantially equivalent to an offense described in those sections and the victim of the offense is the child, a sibling of the child, or another child who lived in the parent's household at the time of the offense;

(v) A conspiracy or attempt to commit, or complicity in committing, an offense described in division (A)(2)(a)(i) or (iv) of this section.

(b) The parent from whom the child was removed has repeatedly withheld medical treatment or food from the child when the parent has the means to provide the treatment or food. If the parent has withheld medical treatment in order to treat the physical or mental illness or defect of the child by spiritual means through prayer alone, in accordance with the tenets of a recognized religious body, the court or agency shall comply with the requirements of division (A)(1) of this section.

(c) The parent from whom the child was removed has placed the child at substantial risk of harm two or more times due to alcohol or drug abuse and has rejected treatment two or more times or refused to participate in further treatment two or more times after a case plan issued pursuant to section 2151.412 [2151.41.2] of the Revised Code requiring treatment of the parent was journalized as part of a dispositional order issued with respect to the child or an order was issued by any other court requiring such treatment of the parent.

(d) The parent from whom the child was removed has abandoned the child.

(e) The parent from whom the child was removed has had parental rights involuntarily terminated pursuant to section 2151.353 [2151.35.3], 2151.414 [2151.41.4], or 2151.415 [2151.41.5] of the Revised Code with respect to a sibling of the child.

(3) At any hearing in which the court determines whether to return a child to the child's home, the court may issue an order that returns the child in situations in which the conditions described in divisions (A)(2)(a) to (e) of this section are present.

(B)(1) A court that is required to make a determination as described in division (A)(1) or (2) of this section shall issue written findings of fact setting forth the reasons supporting its determination. If the court makes a written determination under division (A)(1) of this section, it shall briefly describe in the findings of fact the relevant services provided by the agency to the family of the child and why those services did not prevent the removal of the child from the child's home or enable the child to return safely home.

(2) If a court issues an order that returns the child to the child's home in situations in which division (A)(2)(a), (b), (c), (d), or (e) of this section applies, the court shall issue written findings of fact setting forth the reasons supporting its determination.

(C) If the court makes a determination pursuant to division (A)(2) of this section, the court shall conduct a review hearing pursuant to section 2151.417 [2151.41.7] of the Revised Code to approve a permanency plan with respect to the child, unless the court issues an order returning the child home pursuant to division (A)(3) of this section. The hearing to approve the permanency plan may be held immediately following the court's determination pursuant to division (A)(2) of this section and shall be held no later than thirty days following that determination.

Termination of parental rights

Generally

RC § 2151.419(A)(1) does not apply in a hearing on a motion for permanent custody filed pursuant to RC § 2151.413. However, except for some narrowly defined statutory exceptions, the state must still make reasonable efforts to reunify the family during the child custody proceedings prior to the termination of parental rights. If the agency has not established that reasonable efforts have been made prior to the hearing on a motion for permanent custody, then it must demonstrate such efforts at that time. The trial court satisfied its duty under RC § 2151.414(D) and properly exercised its discretion to consider the wishes of the children as expressed through their guardian ad litem. The statute does not impose the additional requirement that the trial court also consider whether the children want to testify or whether testifying would be detrimental to them: In re C.F., 113 Ohio St. 3d 73, 862 N.E.2d 816, 2007 Ohio 1104, (2007).

Prior adjudication of permanent custody does not constitute a de facto termination of parental rights as to children born later. The trial court erred in finding the child to be dependent where the agency failed to provide current, affirmative evidence of the parents' unfitness and inability to care for the child: In re Nicholas P., 169 Ohio App. 3d 570, 863 N.E.2d 1102, 2006 Ohio 6213, (2006).

Since the children were in the temporary custody of the agency for more than 12 months out of a consecutive 22-month period under RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(d), the trial court was required only to determine the best interests of the children by clear and convincing evidence. Trial court's finding that a five-year-old was too young to express her wishes was not supported by clear and convincing evidence. The agency made sufficient efforts to accommodate a parent's inability to speak English by providing him with an interpreter and a Spanish-speaking attorney: In re Lopez, 166 Ohio App. 3d 688, 852 N.E.2d 1266, 2006 Ohio 2251, (2006).

Trial court erred in finding that a family services agency was not required to provide services or make reasonable efforts to prevent the continued removal of appellant's son from his home because there was evidence that appellants had continued in and arguably benefited from case plan services after their two daughters were removed from their custody. The record revealed that, since the caseworkers knew that appellants had lost custody of two other children in the past, it presumed that the parents were unfit, took custody of the child, never considered reunification as a possible goal, and did not pursue discovery of information regarding the completion of services or whether the parents were now capable of taking care of the son. The caseworkers relied solely on the fact that appellants had lost custody of two other children. In re Nicholas P., 169 Ohio App. 3d 570, 863 N.E.2d 1102, 2006 Ohio 6213, (2006).

Because the agency sought permanent custody of one of the children under RC § 2151.413, the trial court was not required to comply with RC § 2151.419(B)(1) by entering a specific listing of the facts leading to its decision. In re Miller, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 875, 2005 Ohio 856, (2005).

Where a mother contracted a contagious disease, a county agency properly temporarily terminated her visitation with the children, pending an indication that she had taken the necessary medication in order to not expose the children to the disease. Although the agency erred in terminating phone contact between the mother and her children pending her submission to a drug screening, as that was a substantive change that required modification of the case plan, pursuant to RC § 2151.412(E)(2), such did not require reversal of the trial court's grant of permanent custody to the agency pursuant to RC § 2151.414(C), as reasonable efforts at reunification had been made under RC § 2151.419(A)(1) and evidence supported the trial court's decision. In re Townsend, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2355, 2005 Ohio 2473, (2005).

Trial court properly found that the child services board was not required to attempt to reunite a minor child with her mother and father because of the court's finding, pursuant to RC § 2151.414(E)(11), that parental rights for a sibling had previously been terminated due to the inability of the parents to have a stable home for the child; specifically, the mother, who was incarcerated, had parental rights terminated for five different children on two prior occasions and the father for two children on one occasion. In re Richardson, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1876, 2004 Ohio 2170, (2004).

Because the materials before the trial court, when it ruled on the mother's objections to the magistrate's decision finding that the Children Services Board was not required to make reasonable efforts to eliminate the continued removal of the four children from the mother's home, did not specify the law under which the mother lost her parental rights with respect to the children's siblings, the validity of the trial court's proceedings was presumed. In re T. W., — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 3928, 2004 Ohio 4332, (Aug. 18, 2004).

Ordinarily, at the time of a RC § 2151.413 filing, a child services agency will either have already complied with the requirement that it make a reasonable effort to return the child to its natural parent or parents, or the agency will have properly determined that any such effort would be futile, and the trial court will have made its findings accordingly; thus, a child services agency is not required to prove compliance with RC § 2151.419(A) when proceeding with a motion for permanent custody pursuant to RC § 2151.413. In re Christian, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 6662, 2003 Ohio 7333, (2003).

Revised Code § 2151.41.9 requires a determination of whether the agency made reasonable efforts to prevent removal or to make it possible for the child to return home: In re Brown, 98 Ohio App. 3d 337, 648 N.E.2d 576 (1994).

A court is justified in awarding temporary custody to the children services board where the father has already been found to have abused the children and the mother, who is contesting the award, is planning a sham separation in order to gain custody and flee the jurisdiction: In re Pieper, 85 Ohio App. 3d 318, 619 N.E.2d 1059 (1993).

A children services board seeking permanent custody under RC § 2151.41.3 must satisfy the reasonable efforts requirement of RC § 2151.41.9 with respect to a natural parent whenever: (1) the board has not previously satisfied the reasonable efforts requirement with respect to that parent; and (2) the parent has not waived or abandoned his rights as a natural parent: In re Stevens, 1993 Ohio App. LEXIS 3526 (2nd Dist. 1993).

Abandonment of child

Since a trial court made a finding that a mother's child had been abandoned under RC § 2151.414(B)(1)(b), which the mother did not dispute, the trial court was not required to make a finding that the agency made reasonable case planning efforts under RC § 2151.419(A)(1). In re Stafford, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 826, 2007 Ohio 928, (Mar. 5, 2007).

The children were presumptively abandoned where the mother did not visit them for more than ninety days while they were in foster care. Thus the agency was not required to prove that it made sufficient reunification efforts: In re Starkey, 150 Ohio App. 3d 612, 782 N.E.2d 665, 2002 Ohio 6892, (2002).

Applicability

Court rejected a mother's contention that a children services agency failed to make reasonable efforts to implement the assigned case plan. The "reasonable efforts" requirement in RC § 2151.419 is not applicable to permanent custody cases involving RC §§ 2151.413 and 2151.414. In re V.M., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4370, 2006 Ohio 4461, (2006), affirmed by 113 Ohio St. 3d 161, 2007 Ohio 1254, 863 N.E.2d 167, 2007 Ohio LEXIS 788 (2007).

Trial court did not err in finding that the agency was not required to make reasonable efforts to prevent removal of the child from the home, pursuant to RC § 2151.419(A)(2)(e), because the mother's parental rights to two other children had previously been terminated. The mother was given three opportunities to complete parenting classes, but never showed up or canceled them, she did not complete the previous case plan; and there remained an on-going mental health concern and except for some household improvements, there were continued concerns over the mother's parenting skills. In re Craig, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2908, 2006 Ohio 3026, (2006), writ of certiorari denied by 127 S. Ct. 1816, 167 L. Ed. 2d 327, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 3103, 75 U.S.L.W. 3497 (U.S. 2007).

Reasonable efforts requirement in RC § 2151.419, regarding reunification, was not applicable because the agency requested an award of permanent custody of the children under RC § 2151.413 and the trial court held a hearing under RC § 2151.414 to address the motions. Therefore, the trial court could award permanent custody without a finding that the agency made reasonable efforts to reunify the children with their mother. In re J.S., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 615, 2006 Ohio 702, (2006).

Where a mother and father were convicted of sexual battery of two of their children, in violation of RC § 2907.03(A)(5), a trial court was mandated to make a determination that a social service agency was not required to make reasonable efforts to reunite the children with their parents, pursuant to RC § 2151.419(A)(2)(a)(iv); accordingly, there was no error in the trial court's decision to grant legal custody to the agency rather than to reunite the children with their parents. In re Hilyard, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1809, 2006 Ohio 1976, (2006).

Requirement in RC § 2151.419(A)(1) that a children's services agency make "reasonable efforts" to reunify children removed from their home with their families applied to hearings held pursuant to RC §§ 2151.28, 2151.31(E), 2151.314, 2151.33, and 2151.353, but it did not apply when permanent custody was sought pursuant to RC § 2151.413 or when such a motion was heard pursuant to RC § 2151.414, so it did not apply to an agency's motion for permanent custody of a father's children. In re R.A.M., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3149, 2006 Ohio 3242, (2006).

Since a permanent custody hearing was held pursuant to a motion filed under RC § 2151.413, the statute requiring that a children services agency make reasonable efforts at reunification, RC § 2151.419(A), did not apply, and thus, the trial court was not required to find that the agency made reasonable efforts at reunification before awarding the agency permanent custody of the father's children. In re Bradley, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2276, 2006 Ohio 2367, (2006).

Permanent custody sought subsequent to adjudication in a separate motion made under RC § 2151.413 is not subject to a hearing held under any of the statutes referred to in RC § 2151.419(A). Thus, RC § 2151.419(A) does not apply to permanent custody sought under RC § 2151.413 after adjudication and initial disposition. In re Samples, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 963, 2006 Ohio 1056, (2006).

Father's reliance on RC § 2151.419(A)(1) in a parental rights termination proceeding involving his two children was misplaced, as it did not apply to the father's situation where the motion for permanent custody of his children was filed by an agency under RC § 2151.413. Accordingly, a reasonable efforts determination was not required and further, as the father was incarcerated, any such efforts would have been futile for purposes of reunification. In re Z.Y., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 260, 2006 Ohio 300, (2006).

Mother's claim on appeal that a trial court erred in terminating her parental rights over her minor child without first making a finding that the agency had used reasonable and diligent efforts to reunify the mother with her child lacked merit, as there was no such finding required under RC § 2151.419, as such did not apply to permanent custody hearings under RC § 2151.414. The trial court followed the statutory requirements of RC § 2151.414 prior to granting the permanent custody motion under RC § 2151.413, and there was no duty on the agency to prove that it exerted reasonable and diligent efforts towards reunification under RC § 2151.414. In re C.W., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 6093, 2005 Ohio 6739, (2005).

Clear and convincing evidence supported the finding that it was in the child's best interest to permanently commit him to the custody of the agency. Because the child had been in the temporary custody of the agency for at least 12 months of a consecutive 22-month period prior to the agency's permanent custody motion, RC § 2151.414(E)(1) did not serve as a basis for the agency's effort to seek permanent custody as the initial disposition and thus, the agency was not under a duty to pursue the mother's reunification with her son after it filed its motion for permanent custody as RC § 2151.419(A)(1) did not apply. In re S.S., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3887, 2005 Ohio 4282, (2005).

Because a children services' board filed its motion for permanent custody under RC § 2151.413, the "reasonable efforts" requirement of RC § 2151.419(A) was not applicable; therefore, the trial court had authority to grant permanent custody to the board under RC § 2151.414(B)(1) when it found, inter alia, that the mother had abandoned the child during the mother's incarceration and that she had failed to secure permanent housing. In re S.P., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 1104, 2005 Ohio 1079, (2005).

While the agency was not required to reunite the child and her parents, such efforts were made prior to an agency seeking permanent custody of the child and the termination to the parent's rights; a prior termination of the parents' parental rights exempted the agency from the reasonable effort requirement of RC § 2151.419. In re Jackson, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 497, 2004 Ohio 542, (2004).

On its face, RC § 2151.419(A) is not applicable to motions to modify a disposition to permanent custody pursuant to RC § 2151.413. In re Christian, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 6662, 2003 Ohio 7333, (2003).

Bypass order

Children's services agency was granted a "by-pass" order, pursuant to RC § 2151.419(A)(2)(e), due to the fact that the parents had their parental rights involuntarily terminated with respect to the six siblings of the child, which excused the agency from its duty to make "reasonable efforts" to reunite the child with the parents and allowed the agency to immediately proceed with a goal of termination of parental rights and permanent adoption without providing services to the parents. In re Melchizedek M., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2961, 2006 Ohio 3062, (2006).

Dependency finding

There was no error in finding that the mother's children were dependent, pursuant to RC § 2151.04(C), because, although the children were in the care of their father's girlfriend, (the father had to leave the state to face criminal charges) the condition of the children required removal from the home. The agency did exactly what RC § 2151.419 demanded: once matters stabilized, it returned the boys to their home as soon as possible and that home was with the girlfriend since the father as the legal custodian had initiated the arrangement with her. In re Elliott, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 669, 2006 Ohio 738, (2006).

Where the parental rights of the mother and the father had been terminated as to two older siblings of the infant child at issue, and the evidence showed that the problems leading to that termination still existed, there was sufficient evidence to support a dependency finding as to the infant. In re D.B., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4028, 2003 Ohio 4526, (2003).

Efforts found reasonable

Juvenile court properly found that a child services agency put forth good faith and diligent efforts to reunify a family where the child was removed from the home at the mother's request because she feared that the child might hurt himself or someone else, but the agency did not provide the child with anger management classes and did not address his behavior. The reunification plan required the parents to complete a psychological evaluation and to follow any recommendations for therapy, to attend parenting education classes, and to be assessed for case management services and the record supported a finding that notwithstanding the agency's diligent efforts, the parents were unable to resolve the issues and to provide an adequate home for the child. In re Adkins, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 381, 2006 Ohio 431, (2006), reversed by 113 Ohio St. 3d 88, 2007 Ohio 1105, 862 N.E.2d 829, 2007 Ohio LEXIS 674 (2007).

Trial court properly determined that a family services department used reasonable efforts to assist a mother in completing her case plan and used reasonable efforts to prevent the removal of the mother's child. The record was replete with evidence to establish that, although the mother worked on her case plan, she made no progress toward alleviating the core concerns despite the department's reasonable efforts to reunify the family. In re Mastache, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6853, 2006 Ohio 6937, (2006).

Trial court did not err in finding that the agency put forth a good faith effort to rehabilitate the family, as required by RC § 2151.419(A)(1) and RC § 2151.414(E)(1), because trial testimony illustrated the efforts and services provided by the agency in an attempt to reunify the family. The father showed a lack of effort and commitment to the reunification process; due to his incarcerations, his failure to attend court hearings, and failure to correspond in any manner with the social worker, services were not successfully completed. In re Peterson, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1370, 2006 Ohio 1500, (2006).

There was no error in the dependency finding, pursuant to RC § 2151.04(C), because the record was replete with attempts by the agency to find the mother for the purpose of eventually reuniting her with her sons, pursuant to RC § 2151.419(A)(1). The agency tried to contact the mother and tried to obtain interstate compact home studies of the various purported residences the mother had, but was unsuccessful. In re Elliott, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 669, 2006 Ohio 738, (2006).

While a trial court erroneously relied on a mother's failure to successfully complete a previous case plan to support its finding that, pursuant to RC § 2151.419(A)(1), the agency had made reasonable efforts toward reunification of the mother with her children since prior actions involving prior case plans are not admissible under Ohio R. Evid. 608(B), this error was harmless because the record supported the conclusion that reasonable case planning efforts would have been futile, in that the children had been out of the custody of their parents for four years, the mother suffered from chronic substance abuse and mental illness, and at the time of the hearing, the mother was incarcerated for failing to appear at a criminal trial. In re Chestnut, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 611, 2006 Ohio 684, (2006).

Although a county children service agency was not obligated to make reasonable efforts pursuant to RC § 2151.419(A)(2)(e) with respect to a mother whose child was the subject of a permanent custody proceeding, as four of the mother's other children had been removed from her custody and her parental rights had been involuntarily terminated, there was evidence that such efforts were made to assist the mother in dealing with her substance abuse and related issues. In re I. J., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6257, 2006 Ohio 6263, (2006).

Family services agency made reasonable efforts to reunify a mother and her two children by devising a comprehensive reunification plan designed to assist the mother in remedying the problems which caused the children's removal from the home, including housing, counseling, and assistance with parenting and life skills. The agency worked with the family for an extensive period of time with no significant improvements. In re Daulton, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5324, 2006 Ohio 5352, (2006).

Court rejected a father's contention that a family services agency did not use reasonable efforts to assist him in completing his case plan because the evidence showed that the father was provided with a case plan that required him to enroll in a long term batterer's treatment program, to undergo extensive outpatient treatment for substance abuse problems, to submit to weekly urine screens, to complete parenting classes, and to obtain employment. The father, however, failed to do comply with the case plan. In re Davidson-Rush, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4781, 2006 Ohio 4873, (2006).

Placing the children's health and safety as its paramount concern, the trial court had before it ample evidence that the agency made reasonable efforts to prevent the continued removal of the children from the mother, pursuant to RC § 2151.419(A). The mother had a history with the agency, she completely failed to comply with her new case plan, and the children had already been under protective supervision due to a recent, prior complaint filed by the agency. In re T. A., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4397, 2006 Ohio 4468, (2006).

Prior to terminating the father's parental rights, under RC § 2151.414, the trial court explicitly determined that the agency used reasonable efforts to reunify the family and the record supported that finding. The agency provided the parents with case planning, referrals, and transportation and, although the agency did not specifically direct the father to find a job, the father was already under a domestic relations court order to join a seek work program, which he chose not to join until faced with permanently losing his children. In re Link, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 476, 2006 Ohio 529, (2006).

County social service agency made reasonable efforts to reunify parents with their child for purposes of a permanent custody determination, pursuant to RC § 2151.419(A)(1), where it provided the father with visitation, parenting instruction, financial assistance, and case management; accordingly, the court complied with RC § 2151.353(H) and removal of the child from the parents' home was proper. In re West, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2779, 2005 Ohio 2978, (2005).

When a father's three children had severe behavioral and emotional problems, with one child requiring long term therapeutic care and the father's interaction with the other two being insufficient to deal with their problems, yet the father denied that the children had any problems, there was competent, credible evidence showing the agency awarded permanent custody of the children met its burden to make reasonable efforts to reunify the children and the father, under RC § 2151.419(A)(1). In re Jesus, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2153, 2005 Ohio 2267, (2005).

Trial court did not err in finding that the agency made reasonable efforts to reunite the mother and her children, pursuant to RC § 2151.419 prior to the permanent custody determination, wherein the mother's parental rights were terminated pursuant to RC § 2151.414. It was the agency that reunited the mother with her children after she had abandoned them for six years and it would have been difficult to assist the mother in finding housing because, during the last year, she had lived in four different places in different counties. In re Jesus, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2152, 2005 Ohio 2266, (2005).

In the permanent custody case, the Licking County Department of Job and Family Services established that it made reasonable efforts to reunify the children with the stepfather as required under RC § 2151.419. The Department devised a case plan that addressed sex offender counseling, budgeting, parenting and life skills, and assistance to meet the special needs of the children, and the Department had worked with the family for an extensive period of time with no significant improvement. In re Caine, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2035, 2004 Ohio 2270, (2004).

Trial court did not err when it made a factual finding in support of its "reasonable efforts" finding under RC § 2151.419(A)(1) that the mother had not cleaned her home to a degree required for in-home visits by the child; caseworker could not see the floor and the mother barred further inspections by the agency. In re Boring-Myers, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 951, 2004 Ohio 1065, (2004).

Where the child had been removed from the parents' home, the agency made reasonable and diligent efforts to reunify the parents and child as required under RC § 2151.419(A)(1); the plan was specifically adjusted to help the mother with the mother's cognitive disabilities, and given that the child was removed in part because of the unsanitary conditions in the home, it was not unreasonable to require the parents to maintain a safe and stable living environment. In re Thomas, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5230, 2003 Ohio 5885, (2003).

Trial court reasonably could have concluded that the agency made sufficient reasonable efforts to prevent the child's removal pursuant to RC § 2151.419 where evidence demonstrated that the agency provided substantial services to the mother, worked with her for more than two years, and actually reunited her with her daughter. In re Lewis, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4763, 2003 Ohio 5262, (2003).

County agency made reasonable efforts to prevent a minor child's removal from an unstable and abusive home where the evidence showed that temporary intervention was required before counseling would have been effective. In re Day, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3253, 2003 Ohio 3544, (2003).

Trial court did not err in finding that the county welfare agency made reasonable efforts to prevent the continued removal of the children from the home of the parents, especially since the parents did not advance any error in that regard. In re Myers, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 2492, 2003 Ohio 2776, (2003).

Where a children's services board had been granted permanent custody of a child's half sibling and the child's mother had no contact with her for more than 90 days, the trial court properly found that the board made more than reasonable efforts to prevent the need for the ongoing removal of the child from her parent's care and was not required to make reasonable efforts to prevent the removal of the child from the child's home, eliminate the continued removal of the child from the child's home, and return the child to the child's home. In re Ebenschweiger, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5325, 2003 Ohio 5990, (2003).

Expert assistance

Where a county children services board requested that a mother be evaluated by a forensic psychologist to determine whether she was a suitable parent and that psychologist's testimony was a critical part of the trial court's ultimate conclusion, the trial court abused its discretion when it denied the mother's motion to be evaluated by an independent expert at the state's expense. In re Elliott, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 344, 2004 Ohio 388, (2004).

Findings required

In a parental rights termination proceeding pursuant to RC § 2151.414, the trial court was not required to make a finding that the county social service agency made reasonable efforts to reunite the child with the mother pursuant to RC § 2151.419(A)(2), as two of her other minor children had been involuntarily removed from her care previously. The trial court made the requisite findings regarding both parents' lack of success in completing their case plans and the reasonable efforts made by the agency pursuant to RC § 2151.412, which was based on the parents' inability or unwillingness to provide an adequate permanent home and stable living conditions to raise the child, and the fact that they were dependents of society due to their situations, including the mother's mental illnesses and her refusal to take her medication. In re Shifflet, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3521, 2006 Ohio 3576, (2006).

Granting an agency's motion for permanent custody is error absent a further finding in full conformity with RC § 2151.419(B) that reasonable efforts at reunification were made or would have been futile. In re Elliott, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 344, 2004 Ohio 388, (2004).

Ineffective assistance of counsel

Trial court's findings regarding termination of parental rights and custody order at least minimally complied with RC § 2151.419, and where the record contained the transcript of the dependency hearing before the magistrate, the mother suffered no prejudice from her counsel's failure to procure a transcript of the proceeding. In re Teasley, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4580, 2003 Ohio 5079, (2003).

Stipulation to disposition

Trial court's failure to include a reasonable efforts finding in its decision as to a mother's daughters' disposition in a dependency proceeding was harmless error, as she stipulated to the girls' disposition, which was an implicit agreement by her to all aspects of that disposition; however, it was not harmless error to fail to make a reasonable efforts finding with respect to the mother's son, pursuant to RC §§ 2151.419(A)(1), (B)(1), and 2151.353(H), as no such stipulation was made and while she did not object to the recommended disposition, she never expressly agreed to it. In re Ohm, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3245, 2005 Ohio 3500, (2005).

Termination of parental rights

Because the mother's parental rights were involuntarily terminated with respect to two other children and because of the father's complete lack of involvement in the child's life, RC § 2151.419(A)(2)(d) and (e) relieved the agency of a duty to use reasonable efforts. In re Harness, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6311, 2006 Ohio 6359, (2006).

Although the county child welfare agency was statutorily required to develop case plans for children in their custody and the case plans should have included objectives for each of the parents, the trial court did not err in awarding permanent custody to the county child welfare agency without attempting to reunify the child with the mother, as its attempt to reunify the minor child with the mother would have been futile given the mother's little or no contact with the child for more than eight years, especially since testimony indicated the attempted reunification would have been traumatic for the minor child. In re Leitwein, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1131, 2004 Ohio 1296, (2004).

Trial court properly granted permanent custody of two children to children's services agency as the mother was serving almost 15 years in prison with little chance for clemency, the father was deceased, and none of the mother's relatives was willing to assume permanent custody. In re McDonald, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4325, 2003 Ohio 4808, (2003).

(A) At any hearing in which a court is asked to modify or terminate an order of disposition issued under section 2151.353 [2151.35.3], 2151.415 [2151.41.5], or 2151.417 [2151.41.7] of the Revised Code, the court, in determining whether to return the child to the child's parents, shall consider whether it is in the best interest of the child.

(B) An order of disposition issued under division (A)(3) of section 2151.353 [2151.35.3], division (A)(3) of section 2151.415 [2151.41.5], or section 2151.417 [2151.41.7] of the Revised Code granting legal custody of a child to a person is intended to be permanent in nature. A court shall not modify or terminate an order granting legal custody of a child unless it finds, based on facts that have arisen since the order was issued or that were unknown to the court at that time, that a change has occurred in the circumstances of the child or the person who was granted legal custody, and that modification or termination of the order is necessary to serve the best interest of the child.

Generally

RC § 3109.04(E)(1)(a) precludes a trial court from modifying a prior decree allocating parental rights and responsibilities unless it finds, based on facts that have arisen since the time of the decree or were unknown to it at that time, not only that a change has occurred in circumstances of the child, the child's residential parent, or either parent subject to a shared-parenting decree, but also that the modification of the prior custody decree is necessary to serve the best interest of the child. The provisions of RC § 3109.04(E)(1)(a) promote stability in the development of children and are not unconstitutional as applied where a noncustodial parent has not evidenced that a change has occurred in the circumstances of the child. In re James, 113 Ohio St. 3d 420, 866 N.E.2d 467, 2007 Ohio 2335, (2007).

Award of legal custody of a child does not divest parents of their residual parental rights, privileges, and responsibilities. Juvenile court adjudication of abuse, neglect, or dependency is a determination about the care and condition of a child and implicitly involves a determination of the unsuitability of the child's custodial and/or noncustodial parents. When a juvenile court adjudicates a child to be abused, neglected, or dependent, it has no duty to make a separate finding at the dispositional hearing that a noncustodial parent is unsuitable before awarding legal custody to a nonparent. In re C.R., 108 Ohio St. 3d 369, 843 N.E.2d 1188, 2006 Ohio 1191, (2006).

Best interest of child

Juvenile court, in ruling on whether the father or the uncle should get legal custody of the minor children, erred in finding that a parental unsuitability standard should be used to make that decision; since the underlying dependency proceeding was initiated by the county children's services agency, statutory law dictated that a "best interest of the child" standard be used. In re Trowbridge, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2335, 2004 Ohio 2645, (2004).

Modification of order

Evidence supported the trial court's refusal to modify, pursuant to RC § 2151.417(B), an award of custody to the mother's sister pursuant to RC § 2151.353; granting custody to the father was not in the best interest of the child pursuant to RC § 2151.42(A), as the father was barely known by the child, had had two children taken from him, and could not show that the test establishing his paternity was a change in circumstances under RC § 2151.42(B). In re Osberry, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4922, 2003 Ohio 5462, (2003).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in reaching its decision to modify custody as the evidence supported the finding that the mother overmedicated the son, to reduce bad behavior, and did not follow through with visitation as ordered during the summer and during one holiday; the trial court was justified in finding that the mother made it difficult for the children by her negative attitude toward the father and the paternal grandmother, resulting in harm to the children. In re Dawkins, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3991, 2003 Ohio 4503, (Aug. 26, 2003).

Parental unsuitability

When, after children were removed from the custody of their mother, who had been their residential parent, and placed with their fathers, an agency retained temporary legal custody of the children, a trial court was not required to find that the fathers were unfit to reach this result because a determination of unfitness applied in a permanent custody proceeding, under RC § 2151.414, and, in the proceedings in the trial court, the fathers retained their residual parental rights, including the right to seek full custody of the children, under RC § 2151.42, so the trial court's judgment was properly based on the best interests of the children. In re B. C., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3197, 2006 Ohio 3286, (2006).

Trial court did not err by not giving the father a parental unsuitability determination before awarding custody of the child to the maternal grandmother because the child was adjudicated neglected and it was in the child's best interest to be with the grandmother. In re C.F., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 2920, 2003 Ohio 3260, (2003), criticized by In re C.R., 2004 Ohio 4465, 2004 Ohio

App. LEXIS 4053 (Ohio Ct. App., Cuyahoga County Aug. 26, 2004).

Where a child's best interests under R.C. § 2151.42 were served by granting legal custody under R.C. § 2151.011(B)(19) to the child's relatives due to the mother's mental and/or physical condition pursuant to R.C. § 2151.04(B), the mother's unsuitability was implicit and a separate finding was not required; reasonable efforts to promote a reunification plan were made. In re Reeher, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3152, 2003 Ohio 3470, (2003).

Protective supervision

Where the parties stipulated the children were dependent and awarded the department of children and families protective supervision prior to the father's motion for custody of the minor child, the trial court applied the proper legal standard under RC § 3109.04 when it granted the father's motion. In re Rosier-Lemmon/Rosier Children, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1149, 2004 Ohio 1290, (2004).

[§ 2151.42.1] § 2151.421 Duty to report child abuse or neglect; investigation and followup procedures.

(A)(1)(a) No person described in division (A)(1)(b) of this section who is acting in an official or professional capacity and knows, or has reasonable cause to suspect based on facts that would cause a reasonable person in a similar position to suspect, that a child under eighteen years of age or a mentally retarded, developmentally disabled, or physically impaired child under twenty-one years of age has suffered or faces a threat of suffering any physical or mental wound, injury, disability, or condition of a nature that reasonably indicates abuse or neglect of the child shall fail to immediately report that knowledge or reasonable cause to suspect to the entity or persons specified in this division. Except as provided in section 5120.173 [5120.17.3] of the Revised Code, the person making the report shall make it to the public children services agency or a municipal or county peace officer in the county in which the child resides or in which the abuse or neglect is occurring or has occurred. In the circumstances described in section 5120.173 [5120.17.3] of the Revised Code, the person making the report shall make it to the entity specified in that section.

(b) Division (A)(1)(a) of this section applies to any person who is an attorney; physician, including a hospital intern or resident; dentist; podiatrist; practitioner of a limited branch of medicine as specified in section 4731.15 of the Revised Code; registered nurse; licensed practical nurse; visiting nurse; other health care professional; licensed psychologist; licensed school psychologist; independent marriage and family therapist or marriage and family therapist; speech pathologist or audiologist; corner; administrator or employee of a child day-care center; administrator or employee of a residential camp or child day camp; administrator or employee of a certified child care agency or other public or private children services agency; school teacher; school employee; school authority; person engaged in social work or the practice of professional counseling; agent of a county humane society; person, other than a cleric, rendering spiritual treatment through prayer in accordance with the tenets of a well-recognized religion; superintendent, board member, or employee of a county board of mental retardation; investigative agent contracted with by a county board of mental retardation; employee of the department of mental retardation and developmental disabilities; employee of a facility or home that provides respite care in accordance with section 5123.171 [5123.17.1] of the Revised Code; employee of a home health agency; employee of an entity that provides homemaker services; a person performing the duties of an assessor pursuant to Chapter 3107. or 5103. of the Revised Code; or third party employed by a public children services agency to assist in providing child or family related services.

(2) Except as provided in division (A)(3) of this section, an attorney or a physician is not required to make a report pursuant to division (A)(1) of this section concerning any communication the attorney or physician receives from a client or patient in an attorney-client or physician-patient relationship, if, in accordance with division (A) or (B) of section 2317.02 of the Revised Code, the attorney or physician could not testify with respect to that communication in a civil or criminal proceeding.

(3) The client or patient in an attorney-client or physician-patient relationship described in division (A)(2) of this section is deemed to have waived any testimonial privilege under division (A) or (B) of section 2317.02 of the Revised Code with respect to any communication the attorney or physician receives from the client or patient in that attorney-client or physician-patient relationship, and the attorney or physician shall make a report pursuant to division (A)(1) of this section with respect to that communication, if all of the following apply:

(a) The client or patient, at the time of the communication, is either a child under eighteen years of age or a mentally retarded, developmentally disabled, or physically impaired person under twenty-one years of age.

(b) The attorney or physician knows, or has reasonable cause to suspect based on facts that would cause a reasonable person in similar position to suspect, as a result of the communication or any observations made during that communication, that the client or patient has suffered or faces a threat of suffering any physical or mental wound, injury, disability, or condition of a nature that reasonably indicates abuse or neglect of the client or patient.

(c) The abuse or neglect does not arise out of the client's or patient's attempt to have an abortion without the notification of her parents, guardian, or custodian in accordance with section 2151.85 of the Revised Code.

(4)(a) No cleric and no person, other than a volunteer, designated by any church, religious society, or faith acting as a leader, official, or delegate on behalf of the church, religious society, or faith who is acting in an official or professional capacity, who knows, or has reasonable cause to believe based on facts that would cause a reasonable person in a similar position to believe, that a child under eighteen years of age or a mentally retarded, developmentally disabled, or physically impaired child under twenty-one years of age has suffered or faces a threat of suffering any physical or mental wound, injury, disability, or condition of a nature that reasonably indicates abuse or neglect of the child, and who knows, or has reasonable cause to believe based on facts that would cause a reasonable person in a similar position to believe, that another cleric or another person, other than a volunteer, designated by a church, religious society, or faith acting as a leader, official, or delegate on behalf of the church, religious society, or faith caused, or poses the threat of causing, the wound, injury, disability, or condition that reasonably indicates abuse or neglect shall fail to immediately report that knowledge or reasonable cause to believe to the entity or persons specified in this division. Except as provided in section 5120.173 [5120.17.3] of the Revised Code, the person making the report shall make it to the public children services agency or a municipal or county peace officer in the county in which the child resides or in which the abuse or neglect is occurring or has occurred. In the circumstances described in section 5120.173 [5120.17.3] of the Revised Code, the person making the report shall make it to the entity specified in that section.

(b) Except as provided in division (A)(4)(c) of this section, a cleric is not required to make a report pursuant to division (A)(4)(a) of this section concerning any communication the cleric receives from a penitent in a cleric-penitent relationship, if, in accordance with division (C) of section 2317.02 of the Revised Code, the cleric could not testify with respect to that communication in a civil or criminal proceeding.

(c) The penitent in a cleric-penitent relationship described in division (A)(4)(b) of this section is deemed to have waived any testimonial privilege under division (C) of section 2317.02 of the Revised Code with respect to any communication the cleric receives from the penitent in that cleric-penitent relationship, and the cleric shall make a report pursuant to division (A)(4)(a) of this section with respect to that communication, if all of the following apply:

(i) The penitent, at the time of the communication, is either a child under eighteen years of age or a mentally retarded, developmentally disabled, or physically impaired person under twenty-one years of age.

(ii) The cleric knows, or has reasonable cause to believe based on facts that would cause a reasonable person in a similar position to believe, as a result of the communication or any observations made during that communication, the penitent has suffered or faces a threat of suffering any physical or mental wound, injury, disability, or condition of a nature that reasonably indicates abuse or neglect of the penitent.

(iii) The abuse or neglect does not arise out of the penitent's attempt to have an abortion performed upon a child under eighteen years of age or upon a mentally retarded, developmentally disabled, or physically impaired person under twenty-one years of age without the notification of her parents, guardian, or custodian in accordance with section 2151.85 of the Revised Code.

(d) Divisions (A)(4)(a) and (c) of this section do not apply in a cleric-penitent relationship when the disclosure of any communication the cleric receives from the penitent is in violation of the sacred trust.

(e) As used in divisions (A)(1) and (4) of this section, "cleric" and "sacred trust" have the same meanings as in section 2317.02 of the Revised Code.

(B) Anyone who knows, or has reasonable cause to suspect based on facts that would cause a reasonable person in similar circumstances to suspect, that a child under eighteen years of age or a mentally retarded, developmentally disabled, or physically impaired person under twenty-one years of age has suffered or faces a threat of suffering any physical or mental wound, injury, disability, or other condition of a nature that reasonably indicates abuse or neglect of the child may report or cause reports to be made of that knowledge or reasonable cause to suspect to the entity or persons specified in this division. Except as provided in section 5120.173 [5120.17.3] of the Revised Code, a person making a report or causing a report to be made under this division shall make it or cause it to be made to the public children services agency or to a municipal or county peace officer. In the circumstances described in section 5120.173

[5120.17.3] of the Revised Code, a person making a report or causing a report to be made under this division shall make it or cause it to be made to the entity specified in that section.

(C) Any report made pursuant to division (A) or (B) of this section shall be made forthwith either by telephone or in person and shall be followed by a written report, if requested by the receiving agency or officer. The written report shall contain:

(1) The names and addresses of the child and the child's parents or the person or persons having custody of the child, if known;

(2) The child's age and the nature and extent of the child's injuries, abuse, or neglect that is known or reasonably suspected or believed, as applicable, to have occurred or of the threat of injury, abuse, or neglect that is known or reasonably suspected or believed, as applicable, to exist, including any evidence of previous injuries, abuse, or neglect;

(3) Any other information that might be helpful in establishing the cause of the injury, abuse, or neglect that is known or reasonably suspected or believed, as applicable, to have occurred or of the threat of injury, abuse, or neglect that is known or reasonably suspected or believed, as applicable, to exist.

Any person, who is required by division (A) of this section to report child abuse or child neglect that is known or reasonably suspected or believed to have occurred, may take or cause to be taken color photographs of areas of trauma visible on a child and, if medically indicated, cause to be performed radiological examinations of the child.

(D) As used in this division, "children's advocacy center" and "sexual abuse of a child" have the same meanings as in section 2151.425 [2151.42.5] of the Revised Code.

(1) When a municipal or county peace officer receives a report concerning the possible abuse or neglect of a child or the possible threat of abuse or neglect of a child, upon receipt of the report, the municipal or county peace officer who receives the report shall refer the report to the appropriate public children services agency.

(2) When a public children services agency receives a report pursuant to this division or division (A) or (B) of this section, upon receipt of the report, the public children services agency shall do both of the following:

(a) Comply with section 2151.422 [2151.42.2] of the Revised Code;

(b) If the county served by the agency is also served by a children's advocacy center and the report alleges sexual abuse of a child or another type of abuse of a child that is specified in the memorandum of understanding that creates the center as being within the center's jurisdiction, comply regarding the report with the protocol and procedures for referrals and investigations, with the coordinating activities, and with the authority or responsibility for performing or providing functions, activities, and services stipulated in the interagency agreement entered into under section 2151.428 [2151.42.8] of the Revised Code relative to that center.

(E) No township, municipal, or county peace officer shall remove a child about whom a report is made pursuant to this section from the child's parents, stepparents, or guardian or any other persons having custody of the child without consultation with the public children services agency, unless, in the judgment of the officer, and, if the report was made by physician, the physician, immediate removal is considered essential to protect the child from further abuse or neglect. The agency that must be consulted shall be the agency conducting the investigation of the report as determined pursuant to section 2151.422 [2151.42.2] of the Revised Code.

(F)(1) Except as provided in section 2151.422 [2151.42.2] of the Revised Code or in an interagency agreement entered into under section 2151.428 [2151.42.8] of the Revised Code that applies to the particular report, the public children services agency shall investigate, within twenty-four hours, each report of child abuse or child neglect that is known or reasonably suspected to have occurred and of a threat of child abuse or child neglect that is known or reasonably suspected or believed to exist that is referred to it under this section to determine the circumstances surrounding the injuries, abuse, or neglect or the threat of injury, abuse, or neglect, the cause of the injuries, abuse, neglect, or threat, and the person or persons responsible. The investigation shall be made in cooperation with the law enforcement agency and in accordance with the memorandum of understanding prepared under division (J) of this section. A representative of the public children services agency shall, at the time of initial contact with the person subject to the investigation, inform the person of the specific complaints or allegations made against the person. The information shall be given in a manner that is consistent with division (H)(1) of this section and protects the rights of the person making the report under this section.

A failure to make the investigation in accordance with the memorandum is not grounds for, and shall not result in, the dismissal of any charges or complaint arising from the report or the suppression of any evidence obtained as a result of the report and does not give, and shall not be construed as giving, any rights or any grounds for appeal or post-conviction relief to any person. The public children services agency shall report each case† the uniform statewide automated child welfare information system that the department of job and family services shall maintain in accordance with section 5101.13 of the Revised Code. The public children services agency shall submit a report of its investigation, in writing, to the law enforcement agency.

(2) The public children services agency shall make any recommendations to the county prosecuting attorney or city director of law that it considers necessary to protect any children that are brought to its attention.

(G)(1)(a) Except as provided in division (H)(3) of this section, anyone or any hospital, institution, school, health department, or agency participating in the making of reports under division (A) of this section, anyone or any hospital, institution, school, health department, or agency participating in good faith in the making of reports under division (B) of this section, and anyone participating in good faith in a judicial proceeding resulting from the reports, shall be immune from any civil or criminal liability for injury, death, or loss to person or property that otherwise might be incurred or imposed as a result of the making of the reports or the participation in the judicial proceeding.

(b) Notwithstanding section 4731.22 of the Revised Code, the physician-patient privilege shall not be a ground for excluding evidence regarding a child's injuries, abuse, or neglect, or the cause of the injuries, abuse, or neglect in any judicial proceeding resulting from a report submitted pursuant to this section.

(2) In any civil or criminal action or proceeding in which it is alleged and proved that participation in the making of a report under this section was not in good faith or participation in a judicial proceeding resulting from a report made under this section was not in good faith, the court shall award the prevailing party reasonable attorney's fees and costs and, if a civil action or proceeding is voluntarily dismissed, may award reasonable attorney's fees and costs to the party against whom the civil action or proceeding is brought.

(H)(1) Except as provided in divisions (H)(4) and (M) of this section, a report made under this section is confidential. The information provided in a report made pursuant to this section and the name of the person who made the report shall not be released for use, and shall not be used, as evidence in any civil action or proceeding brought against the person who made the report. In a criminal proceeding, the report is admissible in evidence in accordance with the Rules of Evidence and is subject to discovery in accordance with the Rules of Criminal Procedure.

(2) No person shall permit or encourage the unauthorized dissemination of the contents of any report made under this section.

(3) A person who knowingly makes or causes another person to make a false report under division (B) of this section that alleges that any person has committed an act or omission that resulted in a child being an abused child or a neglected child is guilty of a violation of section 2921.14 of the Revised Code.

(4) If a report is made pursuant to division (A) or (B) of this section and the child who is the subject of the report dies for any reason at any time after the report is made, but before the child attains eighteen years of age, the public children services agency or municipal or county peace officer to which the report was made or referred, on the request of the child fatality review board, shall submit a summary sheet of information providing a summary of the report to the review board of the county in which the deceased child resided at the time of death. On the request of the review board, the agency or peace officer may, at its discretion, make the report available to the review board. If the county served by the public children services agency is also served by a children's advocacy center and the report of alleged sexual abuse of a child or another type of abuse of a child is specified in the memorandum of understanding that creates the center as being within the center's jurisdiction, the agency or center shall perform the duties and functions specified in this division in accordance with the interagency agreement entered into under section 2151.428 [2151.42.8] of the Revised Code relative to that advocacy center.

(5) A public children services agency shall advise a person alleged to have inflicted abuse or neglect on a child who is the subject of a report made pursuant to this section, including a report alleging sexual abuse of a child or another type of abuse of a child referred to a children's advocacy center pursuant to an interagency agreement entered into under section 2151.428 [2151.42.8] of the Revised Code, in writing of the disposition of the investigation. The agency shall not provide to the person any information that identifies the person who made the report, statements of witnesses, or police or other investigative reports.

(I) Any report that is required by this section, other than a report that is made to the state highway patrol as described in section 5120.173 [5120.17.3] of the Revised

Code, shall result in protective services and emergency supportive services being made available by the public children services agency on behalf of the children about whom the report is made, in an effort to prevent further neglect or abuse, to enhance their welfare, and, whenever possible, to preserve the family unit intact. The agency required to provide the services shall be the agency conducting the investigation of the report pursuant to section 2151.422 [2151.42.2] of the Revised Code.

(J)(1) Each public children services agency shall prepare a memorandum of understanding that is signed by all of the following:

(a) If there is only one juvenile judge in the county, the juvenile judge of the county or the juvenile judge's representative;

(b) If there is more than one juvenile judge in the county, a juvenile judge or the juvenile judges' representative selected by the juvenile judges or, if they are unable to do so for any reason, the juvenile judge who is senior in point of service or the senior juvenile judge's representative;

(c) The county peace officer;

(d) All chief municipal peace officers within the county;

(e) Other law enforcement officers handling child abuse and neglect cases in the county;

(f) The prosecuting attorney of the county;

(g) If the public children services agency is not the county department of job and family services, the county department of job and family services;

(h) The county humane society;

(i) If the public children services agency participated in the execution of a memorandum of understanding under section 2151.426 [2151.42.6] of the Revised Code establishing a children's advocacy center, each participating member of the children's advocacy center established by the memorandum.

(2) A memorandum of understanding shall set forth the normal operating procedure to be employed by all concerned officials in the execution of their respective responsibilities under this section and division (C) of section 2919.21, division (B)(1) of section 2919.22, division (B) of section 2919.23, and section 2919.24 of the Revised Code and shall have as two of its primary goals the elimination of all unnecessary interviews of children who are the subject of reports made pursuant to division (A) or (B) of this section and, when feasible, providing for only one interview of a child who is the subject of any report made pursuant to division (A) or (B) of this section. A failure to follow the procedure set forth in the memorandum by the concerned officials is not grounds for, and shall not result in, the dismissal of any charges or complaint arising from any reported case of abuse or neglect or the suppression of any evidence obtained as a result of any reported child abuse or child neglect and does not give, and shall not be construed as giving, any rights or any grounds for appeal or post-conviction relief to any person.

(3) A memorandum of understanding shall include all of the following:

(a) The roles and responsibilities for handling emergency and nonemergency cases of abuse and neglect;

(b) Standards and procedures to be used in handling and coordinating investigations of reported cases of child abuse and reported cases of child neglect, methods to be used in interviewing the child who is the subject of the report and who allegedly was abused or neglected, and standards and procedures addressing the categories of persons who may interview the child who is the subject of the report and who allegedly was abused or neglected.

(4) If a public children services agency participated in the execution of a memorandum of understanding under section 2151.426 [2151.42.6] of the Revised Code establishing a children's advocacy center, the agency shall incorporate the contents of that memorandum in the memorandum prepared pursuant to this section.

(K)(1) Except as provided in division (K)(4) of this section, a person who is required to make a report pursuant to division (A) of this section may make a reasonable number of requests of the public children services agency that receives or is referred the report, or of the children's advocacy center that is referred the report if the report is referred to a children's advocacy center pursuant to an interagency agreement entered into under section 2151.428 [2151.42.8] of the Revised Code, to be provided with the following information:

(a) Whether the agency or center has initiated an investigation of the report;

(b) Whether the agency or center is continuing to investigate the report;

(c) Whether the agency or center is otherwise involved with the child who is the subject of the report;

(d) The general status of the health and safety of the child who is the subject of the report;

(e) Whether the report has resulted in the filing of a complaint in juvenile court or of criminal charges in another court.

(2) A person may request the information specified in division (K)(1) of this section only if, at the time the report is made, the person's name, address, and telephone number are provided to the person who receives the report.

When a municipal or county peace officer or employee of a public children services agency receives a report pursuant to division (A) or (B) of this section the recipient of the report shall inform the person of the right to request the information described in division (K)(1) of this section. The recipient of the report shall include in the initial child abuse or child neglect report that the person making the report was so informed and, if provided at the time of the making of the report, shall include the person's name, address, and telephone number in the report.

Each request is subject to verification of the identity of the person making the report. If that person's identity is verified, the agency shall provide the person with the information described in division (K)(1) of this section a reasonable number of times, except that the agency shall not disclose any confidential information regarding the child who is the subject of the report other than the information described in those divisions.

(3) A request made pursuant to division (K)(1) of this section is not a substitute for any report required to be made pursuant to division (A) of this section.

(4) If an agency other than the agency that received or was referred the report is conducting the investigation of the report pursuant to section 2151.422 [2151.42.2] of the Revised Code, the agency conducting the investigation shall comply with the requirements of division (K) of this section.

(L) The director of job and family services shall adopt rules in accordance with Chapter 119. of the Revised Code to implement this section. The department of job and family services may enter into a plan of cooperation with any other governmental entity to aid in ensuring that children are protected from abuse and neglect. The department shall make recommendations to the attorney general that the department determines are necessary to protect children from child abuse and child neglect.

(M)(1) As used in this division:

(a) "Out-of-home care" includes a nonchartered non-public school if the alleged child abuse or child neglect, or alleged threat of child abuse or child neglect, described in a report received by a public children services agency allegedly occurred in or involved the nonchartered nonpublic school and the alleged perpetrator named in the report holds a certificate, permit, or license issued by the state board of education under section 3301.071 [3301.07.1] or Chapter 3319. of the Revised Code.

(b) "Administrator, director, or other chief administrative officer" means the superintendent of the school district if the out-of-home care entity subject to a report made pursuant to this section is a school operated by the district.

(2) No later than the end of the day following the day on which a public children services agency receives a report of alleged child abuse or child neglect, or a report of an alleged threat of child abuse or child neglect, that allegedly occurred in or involved an out-of-home care entity, the agency shall provide written notice of the allegations contained in and the person named as the alleged perpetrator in the report to the administrator, director, or other chief administrative officer of the out-of-home care entity that is the subject of the report unless the administrator, director, or other chief administrative officer is named as an alleged perpetrator in the report. If the administrator, director, or other chief administrative officer of an out-of-home care entity is named as an alleged perpetrator in a report of alleged child abuse or child neglect, or a report of an alleged threat of child abuse or child neglect, that allegedly occurred in or involved the out-of-home care entity, the agency shall provide the written notice to the owner or governing board of the out-of-home care entity that is the subject of the report. The agency shall not provide witness statements or police or other investigative reports.

(3) No later than three days after the day on which a public children services agency that conducted the investigation as determined pursuant to section 2151.422 [2151.42.2] of the Revised Code makes a disposition of an investigation involving a report of alleged child abuse or child neglect, or a report of an alleged threat of child abuse or child neglect, that allegedly occurred in or involved an out-of-home care entity, the agency shall send written notice of the disposition of the investigation to the administrator, director, or other chief administrative officer and the owner or governing board of the out-of-home care entity. The agency shall not provide witness statements or police or other investigative reports.

The provisions of § 3 of 151 v S 238 read as follows:

SECTION 3. The Department of Job and Family Services shall develop, implement, oversee, and evaluate, on a pilot basis, an "Alternative Response" approach to reports of child abuse, neglect, and dependency. The pilot program shall be implemented in not more than ten counties that are selected by the Department and that agree to participate in the pilot program.

The pilot program shall last eighteen months, not including time expended in preparation for the implementation of the pilot program and any post-pilot program evaluation activity.

The Department shall assure that the Alternative Response pilot is independently evaluated with respect to outcomes for children and families, costs, worker satisfaction, and any other criteria the Department determines will be useful in the consideration of statewide implementation of an Alternative Response approach to child protection. The measure associated with the eighteen-month pilot program shall, for the purposes of the evaluation, be compared with those same measures in the pilot counties during the eighteen-month period immediately preceding the beginning of the pilot-program period.

The Department may adopt rules in accordance with section 111.15 of the Revised Code, as if they were internal management rules, as necessary to carry out the purposes of this section.

The provisions of § 6 of 151 v S 17 read as follows:

SECTION 6. Section 2151.421 of the Revised Code is presented in this act as a composite of the section as amended by both Sub. S.B. 66 and Sub. S.B. 185 of the 125th General Assembly. The General Assembly, applying the principle stated in division (B) of section 1.52 of the Revised Code that amendments are to be harmonized if reasonably capable of simultaneous operation, finds that the composites are the resulting versions of the sections in effect prior to the effective date of the sections as presented in this act.

The provisions of § 4 of S.B. 178 (150 v —) read as follows:

Section 4. Section 2151.421 of the Revised Code is presented in this act as a composite of the section as amended by Am. Sub. H.B. 374, Sub. H.B. 510, and Am. Sub. S.B. 221 all of the 124th General Assembly. Section 5126.28 of the Revised Code is presented in this act as a composite of the section as amended by both Sub. H.B. 538 and Sub. S.B. 171 of the 123rd General Assembly. The General Assembly, applying the principle stated in division (B) of section 1.52 of the Revised Code that amendments are to be harmonized if reasonably capable of simultaneous operation, finds that the composites are the resulting versions of the sections in effect prior to the effective date of the sections as presented in this act.

Effect of Amendments

151 v S 238, effective September 21, 2006, added the language beginning "employee of a facility" to the end of (A)(1)(b) and made related changes; and rewrote the second paragraph of (F)(1).

151 v S 17, effective August 3, 2006, rewrote the section.

150 v S 66, effective May 6, 2005, rewrote (D); in (F)(1), inserted "or in an interagency . . . the particular report"; added the last sentence to (H)(4); in (H)(5), inserted "including a report . . . of the Revised Code"; in (J), added (1)(i) and (4); and, in (K), inserted "or of the children's advocacy center . . . of the Revised Code" in the introductory language of (1), and "or center" in (1)(a) through (c).

150 v S 185, effective April 11, 2005, in (F)(1), redesignated the former final three sentences as the second paragraph, and added the last two sentences to the end of the first paragraph.

150 v H 106, effective September 16, 2004, added (M)(1) and redesignated former (M) and (N) as (M)(2) and (3), and corrected internal references.

S.B. 178, Acts 2004, effective January 30, 2004, added "superintendent, board member . . . developmental disabilities" to the end of (A)(1)(b), and made related changes.

Constitutionality

Revised Code § 2151.42.1(G) does not violate the equal protection or due process rights of persons accused of child abuse: Cudlin v. Cudlin, 64 Ohio App. 3d 249, 580 N.E.2d 1170 (1990).

Procedural due process does not require a county agency to provide a family reunification plan after a child has been removed from the family but before a final adjudication of abuse or dependency has been made; thus, RC § 2151.42.1 is not unconstitutional on its face: Lesher v. Lavrich, 632 F. Supp. 77 (N.D. Ohio 1984).

Generally

RC § 2151.421, requiring certain individuals to report child abuse, does not once make mention of child endangering and certainly does not require the presence of serious disfigurement, as the statute simply requires reporting of any known or suspected, actual or threatened, physical or mental wound, injury, disability, or condition of a nature that reasonably indicates abuse or neglect of the child. Kraynak v. Youngstown City Sch. Dist. Bd. of Educ., — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1165, 2007 Ohio 1236, (Mar. 12, 2007).

RC § 2151.421, requiring certain individuals to report child abuse, does not state that a person must review the totality of the circumstances. Kraynak v. Youngstown City Sch. Dist. Bd. of Educ., — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1165, 2007 Ohio 1236, (Mar. 12, 2007).

While courts generally should not look to future versions of a statute in determining legislative intent, the fact that language was added to RC § 2151.421 making it apparent that the duty to report child abuse is based on an objectively reasonable person standard only bolsters the argument that the standard was always intended to be objective. Kraynak v. Youngstown City Sch. Dist. Bd. of Educ., — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1165, 2007 Ohio 1236, (Mar. 12, 2007).

RC § 2151.421(A)(1)(a), regarding the duty to report child abuse, describes the kinds of indicators on which the reporter may rely, and the qualifying language clarifies that the duty to report does not require absolute proof but rather is triggered when the condition reasonably indicates abuse or neglect, so the statute's focus is on the condition, not the reporter. Kraynak v. Youngstown City Sch. Dist. Bd. of Educ., — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1165, 2007 Ohio 1236, (Mar. 12, 2007).

When a father sued a school board regarding a teacher's failure to report his child's abuse, it was error for the trial court to allow an expert to testify to the jury about what the reporting statute, RC § 2151.412(A)(1)(a), "said," because the testimony erroneously editorialized on the statute, including elements not contained in its language. Kraynak v. Youngstown City Sch. Dist. Bd. of Educ., — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1165, 2007 Ohio 1236, (Mar. 12, 2007).

When a father sued a school board regarding a teacher's failure to report his child's abuse, and the father asked the trial court to instruct the jury on the teacher's duty to report abuse by using the text of the reporting statute, RC § 2151.412(A)(1)(a), the trial court should have given the text of the statute to the jury without elaborating because the statute spoke for itself. Kraynak v. Youngstown City Sch. Dist. Bd. of Educ., — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1165, 2007 Ohio 1236, (Mar. 12, 2007).

RC § 2151.421 places a duty on a school teacher, school employee, and school authority to report known or suspected child abuse, and a teacher's failure to report known or suspected abuse is imputed to the teacher's employer pursuant to the doctrine of respondeat superior. Kraynak v. Youngstown City Sch. Dist. Bd. of Educ., — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1165, 2007 Ohio 1236, (Mar. 12, 2007).

When a father sued a school board regarding a teacher's failure to report his child's abuse, it was error for the trial court to instruct the jury that the duty imposed on teachers by RC § 2151.421 to report abuse was subjective, rather than objective, because neither the statute nor caselaw authorized such an interpretation. Kraynak v. Youngstown City Sch. Dist. Bd. of Educ., — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1165, 2007 Ohio 1236, (Mar. 12, 2007).

Parents' reliance on RC § 2151.421 for the creation of a duty to investigate a claim of child abuse leveled by a family against a child care provider was misplaced. The only duty imposed upon a child care referral service by § 2151.421 is the duty to report suspicion or knowledge of child abuse or neglect; the duty to investigate is allotted to public and human services agencies and law enforcement. Fishpaw v. Francisco, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3402, 2006 Ohio 3450, (2006).

In a prosecution for gross sexual imposition, when the parents of one victim had made allegations to a resident of their neighborhood who was a police officer, and whose child was subsequently victimized, defendant's counsel did not provide ineffective assistance by not cross-examining this officer about his failure to report these allegations, pursuant to the duty to report in RC § 2151.421, because, when the officer received the allegations, he was not acting in his official capacity as a police officer, but was a private citizen, and defendant did not show the result of the trial would have been different had counsel conducted such a cross-examination. State v. Walker, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4561, 2006 Ohio 4637, (2006).

Parents' suit against referral service to recover for injuries their daughter sustained from criminal act of day care provider referred by service was properly dismissed. Any duty under RC § 2151.421 to report a prior abuse incident involving another child was owed to the other child, not to the parents or their daughter. Fishpaw v. Francisco, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3402, 2006 Ohio 3450, (2006).

When a child sued a hospital for failing to promptly report suspicions that she had been sexually abused, under RC § 2151.421, the child was not required to introduce expert testimony in support of her claim, as to proximate cause and damages, because a violation of the statute was negligence per se, and a lay juror could determine the effect of the abuse on the child, so the hospital was not entitled to a directed verdict, on this ground, under Ohio R. Civ. P. 50(A)(4). Grimm v. Summit County Children Servs. Bd., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2304, 2006 Ohio 2411, (2006).

Generally, in order to maintain a claim of negligence per se based on violation of a statute, the plaintiff must show that he is among the class of individuals that the statute is designed to protect. RC § 2151.42.1 imposes a duty which is owed solely to the minor child of whom reports have been received concerning abuse or neglect: Curran v. Walsh Jesuit High Sch., 99 Ohio App. 3d 696, 651 N.E.2d 1028 (1995).

Revised Code § 2151.42.1 is not an exclusive listing of those persons who must report knowledge or suspicion of child abuse. A duty to report abuse can arise from a special relationship at law, irrespective of a statutory duty. Since a parent has a special relationship to the child, the duty of care, protection and support under RC § 2921.22(A) would create a duty to stop the alleged acts of abuse: Hite v. Brown, 100 Ohio App. 3d 606, 654 N.E.2d 452 (1995).

Revised Code § 2151.42.1 imposes a duty to investigate owed to a minor child who has allegedly been abused or neglected. It does not impose a duty to that child's grandparents or to any other member of the public who files a charge with a children services board: Neuenschwander v. Wayne County Children Servs. Bd., 92 Ohio App. 3d 767, 637 N.E.2d 102 (1994).

In investigating a report of child abuse pursuant to RC § 2151.42.1, a public children services agency is required to consider the circumstances surrounding the injuries, abuse, or neglect or the threat of injury, abuse, or neglect; the cause of the injuries, abuse, neglect, or threat; and the person or persons responsible for the injuries, abuse, neglect, or threat. Thus, a public children services agency must consider whether, in accordance with RC § 3319.41(G), a school teacher, principal, administrator, nonlicensed employee, or bus driver has used reasonable and necessary force and restraint to quell a disturbance threatening physical injury to others, to obtain possession of weapons or other dangerous objects upon the person or within the control of the pupil, for the purpose of self-defense, or for the protection of persons or property: OAG No. 2002-019 (2002).

Revised Code § 2151.42.1(A) does not impose upon a professional counselor or social worker licensed under RC Chapter 4757, the duty to report knowledge or suspicion of child abuse of an individual if, when the professional counselor or social worker learns of the child abuse, the individual no longer is a child under eighteen years of age or a mentally retarded, developmentally disabled, or physically impaired child under twenty-one years of age. However, if information provided to a professional counselor or social worker who is acting in an official or professional capacity gives that person reason to know or suspect that an individual who currently is a child is at risk of child abuse, RC § 2151.42.1(A) requires that such knowledge or suspicion be reported: OAG No. 2001-035 (2001).

A public children services agency is required, pursuant to RC § 2151.42.1(F)(1), to investigate as alleged child abuse a report received by it of an incident in which a sixteen year old female has been assaulted by her husband: OAG No. 92-073 (1992).

Revised Code § 2151.42.1 does not require that a public children services agency routinely share child abuse and neglect investigation materials with the Air Force Office of Special Investigations, an agency of the federal government: OAG No. 92-046 (1992).

Revised Code § 2151.42.1 sets forth a comprehensive scheme for the reporting of allegations of child abuse and neglect and threats of child abuse and neglect and for the investigation of such reports by public children services agencies: OAG No. 89-108 (1989).

The provisions of RC § 2151.42.1 impose the duties of investigation and disposition of reported cases of child abuse and neglect solely on children services boards and county welfare departments which have assumed the functions of a children services board, and, therefore, prohibit delegation of these duties to private entities: OAG No. 79-067 (1979).

The phrase "having reason to believe," as used in RC § 2151.42.1, is equivalent to "known or suspected" as used in 45 CFR 1340.3-3(d). The term "child neglect," as used in RC § 2151.42.1, applies to children without proper parental care or guardianship as defined by RC § 2151.05: OAG No. 78-038 (1978).

Adopted children

Records concerning whether an adopted child was sexually abused prior to the adoption were not discoverable: Swartzentruber v. Orrville Grace Brethren Church, 163 Ohio App. 3d 96, 836 N.E.2d 619, 2005 Ohio 4264, (2005).

Authority to investigate

A children services board and its agents have a duty to investigate and report their findings as required by RC § 2151.42.1 when a specific child is identified as abused or neglected, and the public duty doctrine may not be raised as a defense for agency failure to comply with such statutory requirements: Brodie v. Summit County Children Services Bd., 51 Ohio St. 3d 112, 554 N.E.2d 1301 (1990).

The powers of the State Highway Patrol or special police officers designated by the Superintendent of the State Highway Patrol to investigate and to enforce laws on state properties and in state institutions do not restrict the authority of public children services agencies to investigate reports of alleged child abuse or neglect or threats of child abuse or neglect pertaining to such locations: OAG No. 89-108 (1989).

Public children services agencies are authorized to investigate reports of alleged child abuse or neglect or threats of child abuse or neglect at detention homes established pursuant to RC § 2151.34, at the Ohio Veterans' Children's Home operated pursuant to RC Chapter 5909., and at public schools operating under standards set by the State Board of Education pursuant to RC Chapter 3301.: OAG No. 89-108 (1989).

Public children services agencies are authorized to investigate reports of alleged child abuse or neglect or threats of child abuse or neglect at facilities operated by the Department of Mental Health pursuant to RC Chapter 5122., at facilities operated by the Department of Mental Retardation and Developmental Disabilities pursuant to RC Chapter 5123., and at facilities operated by the Department of Youth Services pursuant to RC Chapter 5139.: OAG No. 89-108 (1989).

Public children services agencies have authority to investigate all reports of known or suspected child abuse or neglect or threats of child abuse or neglect within their respective counties of jurisdiction unless there is some provision of law restricting that authority with respect to particular persons or locations: OAG No. 89-108 (1989).

Big Brother or Big Sister

A Big Brother or Big Sister is not subject to the child abuse or neglect reporting requirements of RC § 2151.42.1(A)(1), but a Big Brother or Big Sister who, during the course of his or her activities as a Big Brother or Big Sister, learns of or suspects child abuse or neglect, may, in accordance with RC § 2151.42.1(B), report such knowledge or suspicion to one of the agencies or authorities described therein: OAG No. 97-031 (1997).

Child victim detective

Revenue from a levy under RC § 5705.24 may be used to fund a "Child Victim" Detective's position within the office of the county sheriff if it is reasonably determined that funding for that position is necessary for the support of children services and the care and placement of children and comes within the purposes set forth in the resolution and ballot language by which the levy was adopted. Opinion No. 2005-043 (2005).

Compatibility of positions

A person may not serve simultaneously as a township police chief and member of the board of education of a local school district that has territory in the township. Opinion No. 2006-023 (2006).

Concealing child from parent

Revised Code § 2919.24(A) is a strict liability offense. Concealing the child from a parent to prevent alleged abuse does not constitute an affirmative defense: State v. Thompson, 97 Ohio App. 3d 629, 647 N.E.2d 226 (1994).

Construction with other laws

Viability of the public duty rule/special relationship exception as it applies to political subdivisions, at least in regards to RC § 2151.421, requiring certain individuals to report child abuse, has been confirmed. Kraynak v. Youngstown City Sch. Dist. Bd. of Educ., — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1165, 2007 Ohio 1236, (Mar. 12, 2007).

Revised Code § 2151.42(H)(1) references only the "reports" which are required to be made by certain categories of persons designated in subsections (A) and (B) of that section. Thus, "reports" as used there is very limited in its scope and is not so inclusive as to encompass any report made by anyone regarding the subject child. On the other hand, RC § 5153.17 is very broad: Sharpe v. Sharpe, 85 Ohio App. 3d 638, 620 N.E.2d 916 (1993).

Disclosure of records, generally

Requestor was not entitled to a writ of mandamus compelling a children services board to disclose, pursuant to RC § 149.43, records the requestor sought because (1) to the extent she sought reports of child abuse or neglect or information derived from such reports, that information was confidential, under RC § 2151.421(H)(1), and (2) to the extent she sought other records of the board, those records, with exceptions not applicable here, were confidential under RC § 5153.17 unless the agency's executive director gave written consent to release them, which could only be obtained on a showing of good cause to do so, and the requestor specifically averred that her reason for wanting the records was none of the director's concern. Wiley v. Summit County Children Servs., — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1389, 2007 Ohio 1476, (Mar. 30, 2007).

When defendant was prosecuted for rape and unlawful sexual conduct with a minor, and he asserted that he was entitled to discover various records about his victim pursuant to RC § 2151.421(H)(1), those records also had to be discoverable under Ohio R. Crim. P. 16 before he could have access to them. State v. Donnal, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1488, 2007 Ohio 1632, (Apr. 9, 2007).

In a case seeking disclosure of records relating to child molestation incidents, most of the redactions made were identifying information of the molested children, addresses of incidents, and information as to their relatives, which redactions were within the exception of identifying information concerning abused children and their parents; other information, such as Social Security numbers, and Department of Children and Family Service reports of child abuse and neglect, were also exempt from disclosure and were properly redacted. State ex rel. White v. Watson, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5231, 2006 Ohio 5234, (Sept. 29, 2006).

While the mother's parenting ability was certainly relevant to the custody question, the father gave the court no reason to believe that exigent circumstances existed which justified forcing the court to examine the agency records, required to be kept by RC § 2151.421(H)(1), alleging abuse in camera. The father's request for the confidential records therefore looked like a fishing expedition for evidence that was wholly unrelated to the imminent health and welfare of the children, and, under the circumstances, the trial court did not have an obligation to conduct an in camera inspection of the agency's records. In re J.C., — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2787, 2006 Ohio 2893, (June 8, 2006).

CCDCFS records are not absolutely privileged. Where records are necessary and relevant to a proceeding and good cause for disclosure has been shown, access to those records may be warranted: State v. Sahady, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 3120, 2004 Ohio 3481, (2004).

Confidential information drawn from reports made to children services agencies pursuant to RC § 2151.421 is exempt from disclosure by police under RC § 149.43: State ex rel. Beacon Journal Publ'g Co. v. City of Akron, 104 Ohio St. 3d 399, 819 N.E.2d 1087, 2004 Ohio 6557, (2004).

Trial court erred in refusing to allow a child care provider's counsel access to the records of the department of children and family services which the trial court reviewed in camera and which the trial court relied on in upholding the revocation of the child care provider's home care certification. Child Care Provider Certification Dep't v. Harris, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5789, 2003 Ohio 6500, (Dec. 4, 2003).

A court may conduct an in camera inspection of child abuse records and has inherent power to order disclosure in appropriate circumstances: Johnson v. Johnson, 134 Ohio App. 3d 579, 731 N.E.2d 1144 (1999).

The Cuyahoga county ombudsman office is a "public office" whose records are subject to disclosure. RC § 2151.42.1 does not exempt its child abuse and neglect reports: State ex rel. Strothers v. Wertheim, 80 Ohio St. 3d 155, 684 N.E.2d 1239, 1997 Ohio 349, (1997).

Records of a county children services board investigation made pursuant to RC §§ 5153.17 and 2151.42.1 are "official records" within the ambit of the sealing provisions of RC § 2953.52. The trial court should weigh the privacy interests of the person seeking to seal the official records against the legitimate needs of the agency in maintaining those records: State v. S.R., 63 Ohio St. 3d 590, 589 N.E.2d 1319 (1992).

Child abuse investigation reports are confidential and not subject to inspection: State ex rel. Renfro v. Cuyahoga County Dep't of Human Services, 54 Ohio St. 3d 25, 560 N.E.2d 230 (1990).

Each report and investigation of alleged child abuse or neglect made under RC § 2151.42.1 is confidential and, pursuant to OAC 5101:2-34-38, the dissemination of such confidential information to an agency or organization is permitted only if the agency or organization has rules or policies governing the dissemination of confidential information that are consistent with those of rule 5101:2-34-38: OAG No. 92-046 (1992).

A public children services agency may, pursuant to [1991-1992 Monthly Record, vol. 1] OAC 5101:2-34-71, at 280, include the Air Force Office of Special Investigations as a voluntary subscriber to a county plan of cooperation prepared pursuant to RC § 2151.42.1(j), if the Office wishes to be a voluntary subscriber and if the agency determines that the participation of the Office would be appropriate. If the Office has suitable rules or policies governing the use and dissemination of confidential information, the Office may receive investigatory materials as provided in the county plan of cooperation and in OAC 5101:2-34-38(D)(4): OAG No. 92-046 (1992).

A public children services agency may disclose child abuse and neglect investigation materials to the Air Force Office of Special Investigations when such disclosure is in compliance with RC §§ 2151.42.1, 5153.17, and OAC 5101:2-34-38 and is for purposes authorized by those provisions; the agency is not required to obtain assurance that the Office will not use the materials for purposes other than criminal prosecution: OAG No. 92-046 (1992).

Child abuse and neglect investigation records maintained by public children services agencies do not constitute "public records" within the meaning of RC § 149.43 to which the right of public access attaches. Records of child abuse or neglect investigations under RC §§ 2151.42.1(H)(1) and 5153.17 are "records the release of which is prohibited by state law" under RC § 149.43(A)(1): OAG No. 91-003 (1991).

Public children services agencies are local agencies for purposes of RC Chapter 1347., which governs the maintenance of personal information systems: OAG No. 89-084 (1989).

Child abuse and neglect investigatory records maintained by public children services agencies constitute "investigatory material compiled for law enforcement purposes" within the meaning of RC § 1347.04(A)(1)(e). Personal information systems that are comprised of such records are, pursuant to RC § 1347.04(A)(1)(e), exempt from the provisions of RC Chapter 1347.: OAG No. 89-084 (1989).

Discovery

When the mother of a child in the custody of a department of children and family services sued it, its director, and its employee because the child's father sexually assaulted her during a visitation supervised by the department, RC §§ 5153.17 and 2151.421(H)(1) did not bar the mother's discovery of documents from the department specifically related to the father's assault of the child and generally related to the department's supervised visitation practices, nor did they bar the mother from deposing the director and employee, because (1) the documents were relevant and necessary to the mother's claim, (2) the mother showed good cause to discover them, because the child's best interests would be served by imposing liability on the parties responsible for any deficiencies in her supervision, and (3) statutory confidentiality considerations did not destroy the discoverability of the information sought as discovery in the father's resulting criminal case lessened pertinent due process rights protections, and any further protections of other employees who might be implicated by the discovery would not be affected by general disclosures of supervised visitation practices. Rankin v. C.C.D.C.F.S., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6674, 2006 Ohio 6759, (2006).

There was no abuse of discretion by the trial court in denying, following its in-camera review, the subpoena of the children's services board's records concerning the sexual victim because the disclosure of the records would not have outweighed the confidentiality considerations of RC § 5153.17. Defendant incorrectly attempted to expand the limited confidentiality exception concerning RC § 2151.421 "reports" into an unfettered right to the discovery of all of the files connected with the victim, past and present. State v. Dixon, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 3584, 2004 Ohio 3940, (July 26, 2004).

Evidence

Reports of suspected child abuse otherwise admissible under RC § 2151.42.1 may be excluded if they are not adequately authenticated and contain hearsay. State v. Humphries, 79 Ohio App. 3d 589, 607 N.E.2d 921 (1992).

Federal civil rights law

A father who alleges that he has been denied reasonable visitation rights with his children due to the county welfare department's failure to complete within 30 days an investigation of a report of child abuse by the father cannot maintain a § 1983 action, since his complaint alleges, at the most, a procedural due process violation, and, for that, there is an adequate state remedy available to the plaintiff: Haag v. Cuyahoga County, 619 F. Supp. 262 (N.D. Ohio 1985).

Hospitals

The hospital did not have a statutory duty to report an employee when he quit his employment. At that time the hospital had no reason to know or suspect that any particular child was being abused or in danger of being abused by the employee: Douglass v. Salem Cmty. Hosp., 153 Ohio App. 3d 350, 794 N.E.2d 107, 2003 Ohio 4006, (2003), appeal denied by 100 Ohio St. 3d 1530, 2003 Ohio 6458, 800 N.E.2d 47, 2003 Ohio LEXIS 3349 (2003).

Immunity, liability

When a child sued the employees of a children's services board for allegedly failing to investigate, under RC § 2151.421(F)(1), the child's complaint of sexual abuse, the employees were immune from liability because RC § 2744.03(A)(5) did not impose liability on them, as it was not shown they acted with malice, recklessness, wantonness, or bad faith, so the employees were entitled to a directed verdict. Grimm v. Summit County Children Servs. Bd., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2304, 2006 Ohio 2411, (2006).

When a department of children and family services was sued for wrongful death after an abused child it returned to her mother was killed, there were genuine issues of material fact regarding the immunity of the department and its employees because, inter alia, there were genuine fact issues about whether the department had reported the child's initial abuse to the police, as required by RC § 2151.421(C). O'Toole v. Denihan, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5960, 2006 Ohio 6022, (2006).

Pursuant to RC § 2151.421(A)(1), a public employee was required to report any reasonable suspicion of child abuse; but where reports of the father's sexual abuse of his son were potentially reckless, and outside the scope of immunity, dismissal was error. Tracy v. Tinnerman, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5967, 2003 Ohio 6675, (2003).

Revised Code § 2151.42.1 creates a duty only to a specific child. Where a school employee sexually assaulted a student, the school's failure to report a prior alleged incident between the employee and a different student did not qualify as an exception to immunity under RC § 2744.02(B)(5): Yates v. Mansfield Bd. of Educ., 150 Ohio App. 3d 241, 780 N.E.2d 608, 2002 Ohio 6311, (2002), reversed by 99 Ohio St. 3d 48, 2003 Ohio 2461, 788 N.E.2d 1062, 2003 Ohio LEXIS 1365 (2003), reversed by 102 Ohio St. 3d 205, 2004 Ohio 2491, 808 N.E.2d 861, 2004 Ohio LEXIS 1303 (2004).

Where RC § 2151.42.1 provides immunity, summary judgment may be granted as a matter of law: Liedtke v. Carrington, 145 Ohio App. 3d 396, 763 N.E.2d 213 (2001).

Within the meaning of RC §§ 2744.02(B)(5) and 2744.03(A)(6)(c), RC § 2151.42.1 expressly imposes liability for failure to perform the duty to report known or suspected child abuse. Pursuant to RC § 2744.02(B)(5), a political subdivision may be held liable for failure to perform a duty expressly imposed by RC § 2151.42.1. Pursuant to RC § 2744.03(A)(6)(c), an employee of a political subdivision may be held liable for failure to perform a duty expressly imposed by RC § 2151.42.1: Campbell v. Burton, 92 Ohio St. 3d 336, 750 N.E.2d 539, 2001 Ohio 206, (2001).

Within the meaning of RC §§ 2744.02(B)(5) and 2744.03(A)(6)(c), RC § 2151.42.1 does not expressly impose liability for failure to investigate reports of child abuse: Marshall v. Montgomery County Children Servs. Bd., 92 Ohio St. 3d 348, 750 N.E.2d 549, 2001 Ohio 209, (2001).

Entries denying a subdivision's motion for judgment on the pleadings based on immunity were not final appealable orders. Orders regarding protective orders were not appealable absent compliance with CivR 54(B): Chambers v. Chambers, 137 Ohio App. 3d 355, 738 N.E.2d 834 (2000).

Revised Code § 2151.42.1 provides absolute immunity to medical professionals who are asked to provide assistance to law enforcement agencies and social services providers: Casbohm v. Metrohealth Med. Ctr., 140 Ohio App. 3d 58, 746 N.E.2d 661 (2000).

A report of suspected child abuse by a day-care center administrator or employee is entitled to immunity and is exempt from discovery, regardless of whether it was filed in good faith: Walters v. Enrichment Ctr., 133 Ohio App. 3d 66, 726 N.E.2d 1058 (1999).

Anyone who participates in a mandatory report under RC § 2151.42.1(A) or who participates in good faith in a permissive report under RC § 2151.42.1(B) is entitled to immunity. Immunity is not limited to the initial reporter: Surdell v. Metrohealth Med. Ctr., 135 Ohio App. 3d 141, 733 N.E.2d 281 (1999).

When a state voluntarily undertakes to protect neglected children from harm, it may also acquire a duty under state tort law to provide the child with adequate protection and may be liable for doing so in a negligent fashion: Rich v. Erie County Dept of Human Resources, 106 Ohio App. 3d 88, 665 N.E.2d 278 (1995).

Former RC § 2151.42.1(G) confers immunity upon those who, as a result of a report of a known or suspected incident of child abuse and/or neglect, participate in a judicial proceeding: Gersper

v. Ashtabula County Children Services Bd., 59 Ohio St. 3d 127, 570 N.E.2d 1120 (1991).

Division (G) of RC § 2151.42.1 does not confer immunity upon those who fail to carry out the mandate of the statute: Brodie v. Summit County Children Services Bd., 51 Ohio St. 3d 112, 554 N.E.2d 1301 (1990).

A claim that a children services board and its employees failed to properly investigate an instance of alleged child abuse pursuant to duties imposed by RC § 2151.42.1 is not subject to the general immunity granted to political subdivisions by RC § 2744.02(A), or to the immunity granted to employees by RC § 2744.03(A)(6): Crago v. Lorain County Comm'rs, 69 Ohio App. 3d 24, 590 N.E.2d 15 (1990).

Anyone participating in a judicial proceeding involving a child abuse complaint is absolutely immune from civil liability. This immunity protects the judge, the juvenile court employees, the county department of human services and its employees, and the attorneys representing the person accused of abuse: Scarso v. Cuyahoga County Dept. of Human Services, 747 F. Supp. 381 (N.D. Ohio 1989).

Because an administrator of a child day-care center has a duty under RC § 2151.42.1(A)(1) to report suspected child abuse and immunity under RC § 2151.42.1(G) for doing so, the administrator cannot be liable for defamation in making such a report: Lail v. Madisonville Child Care Project, Inc., 55 Ohio App. 3d 37, 561 N.E.2d 1063 (1989).

A former wife who files a false report that her former husband has sexually abused the parties' child is absolutely immune from liability in a civil action filed against her. The grant of immunity pursuant to RC § 2151.42.1(G) extends to anyone making reports of child abuse whether in good faith or not: Hartley v. Hartley, 42 Ohio App. 3d 160, 537 N.E.2d 706 (1988).

A hospital and medical center's report to child welfare authorities that a minor child has a sexually transmitted disease is immune from liability under RC § 2151.42.1 even though (1) the diagnosis is mistaken, and (2) the child presents no evidence of a wound, injury, trauma, disability, or condition of a nature that reasonably indicates child abuse: Criswell v. Brentwood Hosp., 49 Ohio App. 3d 163, 551 N.E.2d 1315 (1988).

A licensed psychologist who met with a child and her mother and subsequently made a report to the county welfare department about possible child abuse by the child's father is immune from any civil or criminal liability that might otherwise be incurred or imposed as a result of such report: Haag v. Cuyahoga County, 619 F. Supp. 262 (N.D. Ohio 1985).

Malicious prosecution

The father's claim that county employees maliciously pursued a false allegation of child abuse against him was not subject to dismissal under CivR 12(B)(6): Roe v. Franklin County, 109 Ohio App. 3d 772, 673 N.E.2d 172 (1996).

Priority of investigation

When a public children services agency receives a report of the spanking of a student by a school administrator, the agency must assign the report a priority rating in accordance with OAC 5101:2-34-08. A report that is rated Priority I, II, or III must be investigated as required by RC § 2151.42.1, in accordance with the procedures prescribed in OAC 5101:2-34-32, 5101:2-34-33, and 5101:2-34-34. A report that is rated Priority IV may be resolved by termination pursuant to OAC 5101:2-34-08 if it is determined that the report alleges only action that is permitted under RC §§ 3319.31 and 2919.22, for then the report does not constitute an allegation of abuse or neglect: OAG No. 92-082 (1992).

Privileged communications

Juvenile court did not err in disclosing and admitting the statements made by the mother to her mental health counselors, to the effect that she had hurt her daughter in the past and had thoughts of continuing to do so, as the mental health counselors were required by statutory law to report the statements to the proper authorities, and, thus, the normal client-counselor privilege did not apply to such communications. In re Hauenstein, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2550, 2004 Ohio 2915, (2004).

Court admitted testimony from the nurse of appellant's physician in child neglect action. The exception of RC § 2151.42.1 does not apply to the challenged testimony because the nurse's statements went beyond whether appellant kept her appointments to appellant's diagnosis, treatment and medication: In re Riddle, 1996 Ohio App. LEXIS 2054 (5th Dist. 1996).

Any privilege under RC § 2317.02 or RC § 4732.19 is automatically waived under RC § 2151.42.1(A)(3) in certain child abuse cases: State v. Stewart, 111 Ohio App. 3d 525, 676 N.E.2d 912 (1996).

Under RC § 2151.42.1, there is no exception for communications by a penitent to a clergy member as there is for communications from patient to physician or client to attorney: Niemann v. Cooley, 93 Ohio App. 3d 81, 637 N.E.2d 943 (1994).

Schools

Pursuant to former RC § 2744.02(B)(5), a board of education may be held liable when its failure to report the sexual abuse of a minor student by a teacher in violation of RC § 2151.421 proximately results in the sexual abuse of another minor by the same teacher: Yates v. Mansfield Bd. of Educ., 102 Ohio St. 3d 205, 808 N.E.2d 861, 2004 Ohio 2491, (2004).

If, in investigating a report of child abuse pursuant to RC § 2151.42.1, a public children services agency finds that action consisting of reasonable and necessary force and restraint was used by a school teacher, principal, administrator, nonlicensed employee, or bus driver in accordance with RC § 3319.41(G) to quell a disturbance threatening physical injury to others, to obtain possession of weapons or other dangerous objects upon the person or within the control of the pupil, for the purpose of self-defense, or for the protection of persons or property, the public children services agency is precluded from finding that such action constituted child abuse for purposes of RC § 2151.42.1: OAG No. 2002-019 (2002).

"School employee" and "school authority" were included in occupations listed in RC § 2151.42.1(A)(1) and a referral made to a "county department of human services exercising the children services function" described by RC § 2151.42.1(A)(1) provided absolute immunity pursuant to RC § 2151.42.1(G)(1): Merk v. Watts, 1994 Ohio App. LEXIS 3999 (9th Dist. 1994).

A board of education may require by rule, adopted pursuant to RC § 3313.20, that an investigator from a county children services board obtain parental consent or permit a school official to be present before allowing such investigator to interview a child on school property in the course of an investigation required to be conducted under RC § 2151.42.1. The reasonableness of any such rule is, however, subject to judicial review: OAG No. 82-029 (1982).

Self incrimination

The privilege against compulsory self-incrimination is self-executing and applied in a proceeding for termination of parental rights. Where the parents were given a choice of admitting the father's abuse of the child or of permanently losing custody, they had to be afforded protection against use of the admission in a subsequent prosecution: In re Amanda W., 124 Ohio App. 3d 136, 705 N.E.2d 724 (1997).

Statute of limitations

Amendment of RC § 2901.13 from a six-year limitations period to a 20-year limitations period with respect to various sexual offenses charged against defendant was not a violation of his due process rights under Ohio Const. art. I, § 10, as defendant's prosecution for the 1988 offenses was not barred before the effective date of the amendment because the statute of limitations was tolled pursuant to § 2901.13(F) due to the victim's age. There was no indication that a "responsible person" under RC § 2151.421(A)(1) had been informed of the conduct in order to commence the running of the limitations period prior to the time the minor victim reached the age of majority. State v. Warren, 168 Ohio App. 3d 268, 859 N.E.2d 998, 2006 Ohio 4104, (2006).

When the child victim of defendant's gross sexual imposition told her mother, who was a registered nurse, of defendant's acts, this did not cause the statute of limitations in RC § 2901.13(A)(1) to begin running, even though the mother was generally required, under RC § 2151.421, to report allegations of sexual abuse to authorities. The mother did not receive the information from her daughter in her professional capacity, so she was not required to report it, nor, when the mother consulted with close friends and family who were "responsible adults," under § 2151.421, did that cause the statute of limitations to begin to run because they, as well, were not required to report the allegations, as they were not acting in their professional capacities when they received the information. State v. Simms, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 6248, 2005 Ohio 6934, (2005).

Because the corpus delicti of the crime was discovered in January of 1993, and the tolling provisions to RC § 2901.13(F) and (G) did not apply, the trial court erred in refusing to dismiss the gross sexual imposition charge against defendant as being barred by the statute of limitations. It was clear that the social worker, a "responsible adult," as listed in RC § 2151.421, was aware of the crime as of the first counseling session, although he failed to report it, defendant's request that the social worker not report him did not specifically waive the statute of limitations for the crime, and the statute was not tolled because defendant did not purposely avoid prosecution. State v. Koerner, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 417, 2004 Ohio 457, (2004).

The corpus delicti of a crime involving sexual abuse of children is discovered when an employee of a children services agency or other "responsible adult" as that term is defined in RC § 2151.42.1 had knowledge of both the act itself and the criminal nature of the act: State v. Ritchie, 95 Ohio App. 3d 569, 642 N.E.2d 1168 (1994).

A parent's knowledge of child sexual abuse does not trigger the running of the statute of limitations. The limitation period begins to run when a responsible adult, as defined in RC § 2151.42.1, acquires the requisite knowledge while acting in his or her official or professional capacity: State v. Rosenberger, 90 Ohio App. 3d 735, 630 N.E.2d 435 (1993).

For purposes of RC § 2901.13(F), the corpus delicti of crimes involving child abuse or neglect is discovered when a responsible adult, as listed in RC § 2151.42.1, has knowledge of both the act and the criminal nature of the act: State v. Hensley, 59 Ohio St. 3d 136, 571 N.E.2d 711 (1991).

[§ 2151.42.2] § 2151.422 Procedure where child is living in domestic violence or homeless shelter; homeless shelter to obtain last known residence information.

(A) As used in this section, "homeless shelter" means a facility that provides accommodations to homeless individuals.

(B) On receipt of a notice pursuant to division (A), (B), or (D) of section 2151.421 [2151.42.1] of the Revised Code, the public children services agency shall determine whether the child subject to the report is living in a shelter for victims of domestic violence or a homeless shelter and whether the child was brought to that shelter pursuant to an agreement with a shelter in another county. If the child is living in a shelter and was brought there from another county, the agency shall immediately notify the public children services agency of the county from which the child was brought of the report and all the information contained in the report. On receipt of the notice pursuant to this division, the agency of the county from which the child was brought shall conduct the investigation of the report required pursuant to section 2151.421 [2151.42.1] of the Revised Code and shall perform all duties required of the agency under this chapter with respect to the child who is the subject of the report. If the child is not living in a shelter or the child was not brought to the shelter from another county, the agency that received the report pursuant to division (A), (B), or (D) of section 2151.421 [2151.42.1] of the Revised Code shall conduct the investigation required pursuant to section 2151.421 [2151.42.1] of the Revised Code and shall perform all duties required of the agency under this chapter with respect to the child who is the subject of the report. The agency of the county in which the shelter is located in which the child is living and the agency of the county from which the child was brought may ask the shelter to provide information concerning the child's residence address and county of residence to the agency.

(C) If a child is living in a shelter for victims of domestic violence or a homeless shelter and the child was brought to that shelter pursuant to an agreement with a shelter in another county, the public children services agency of the county from which the child was brought shall provide services to or take custody of the child if services or custody are needed or required under this chapter or section 5153.16 of the Revised Code.

(D) When a homeless shelter provides accommodations to a person, the shelter, on admitting the person to the shelter, shall determine, if possible, the person's last known residential address and county of residence. The information concerning the address and county of residence is confidential and may only be released to a public children services agency pursuant to this section.

[CHILDREN'S ADVOCACY CENTERS]

[§ 2151.42.5] § 2151.425 Definitions.

As used in sections 2151.426 [2151.42.6] to 2151.428 [2151.42.8] of the Revised Code:

(A) "Children's advocacy center" means a center operated by participating entities within a county or two or more contiguous counties to perform functions and activities and provide services, in accordance with the interagency agreement entered into under section 2151.428 [2151.42.8] of the Revised Code, regarding reports received under section 2151.421 [2151.42.1] of the Revised Code of alleged sexual abuse of a child or another type of abuse of a child that is specified in the memorandum of understanding that creates the center as being within the center's jurisdiction and regarding the children who are the subjects of the report.

(B) "Sexual abuse of a child" means unlawful sexual conduct or sexual contact, as those terms are defined in section 2907.01 of the Revised Code, with a person under eighteen years of age or a mentally retarded, developmentally disabled, or physically impaired person under twenty-one years of age.

HISTORY: 150 v S 66, § 1, eff. 5-6-05.

[§ 2151.42.6] § 2151.426 Establishment of children's advocacy center.

(A)(1) A children's advocacy center may be established to serve a single county by execution of a memorandum of understanding regarding the participation in the operation of the center by any of the following entities in the county to be served by the center:

(a) The public children services agency;

(b) Representatives of any county or municipal law enforcement agencies serving the county that investigate any of the types of abuse specified in the memorandum of understanding creating the center as being within the center's jurisdiction;

(c) The prosecuting attorney of the county or a village solicitor, city director of law, or similar chief legal officer of a municipal corporation in the county who prosecutes any of the types of abuse specified in the memorandum of understanding creating the center as being within the center's jurisdiction in the area to be served by the center;

(d) Any other entity considered appropriate by all of the other entities executing the memorandum.

(2) A children's advocacy center may be established to serve two or more contiguous counties if a memorandum of understanding regarding the participation in the operation of the center is executed by any of the entities described in division (A)(1) of this section in each county to be served by the center.

(3) Any memorandum of understanding executed under this section may include a provision that specifies types of abuse of a child, in addition to sexual abuse of a child, that are to be within the jurisdiction of the children's advocacy center created as a result of the execution of the memorandum. If a memorandum of understanding executed under this section does not include any provision of that nature, the children's advocacy center created as a result of the execution of the memorandum has jurisdiction only in relation to reports of alleged sexual abuse of a child.

(B) Each entity that participates in the execution of a memorandum of understanding under this section shall cooperate in all of the following:

(1) Developing a multidisciplinary team pursuant to section 2151.427 [2151.42.7] of the Revised Code to perform the functions and activities and provide the services specified in the interagency agreement entered into under section 2151.428 [2151.42.8] of the Revised Code, regarding reports received under section 2151.421 [2151.42.1] of the Revised Code of alleged sexual abuse of a child and reports of allegations of another type of abuse of a child that is specified in the memorandum of understanding that creates the center as being within the center's jurisdiction, and regarding the children who are the subjects of the reports;

(2) Participating in the operation of the center in compliance with standards for full membership established by the national children's alliance;

(3) Employing the center's staff.

(C) A center shall do both of the following:

(1) Operate in accordance with sections 2151.427 [2151.42.7] and 2151.428 [2151.42.8] of the Revised Code, the interagency agreement entered into under section 2151.428 [2151.42.8] of the Revised Code relative to the center, and the standards for full membership established by the national children's alliance;

(2) Register annually with the attorney general.

HISTORY: 150 v S 66, § 1, eff. 5-6-05.

[§ 2151.42.7] § 2151.427 Assembling of multidisciplinary team.

(A) The entities that participate in a memorandum of understanding executed under section 2151.426 [2151.42.6] of the Revised Code establishing a children's advocacy center shall assemble the center's multidisciplinary team.

(B)(1) The multidisciplinary team for a single county center shall consist of the following members who serve the county:

(a) Any county or municipal law enforcement officer;

(b) The executive director of the public children services agency or a designee of the executive director;

(c) The prosecuting attorney of the county or the prosecuting attorney's designee;

(d) A mental health professional;

(e) A medical health professional;

(f) A victim advocate;

(g) A center staff member;

(h) Any other person considered appropriate by all of the entities that executed the memorandum.

(2) If the center serves two or more contiguous counties, the multidisciplinary team shall consist of the members described in division (B)(1) of this section from the counties to be served by the center, with each county to be served by the center being represented on the multidisciplinary team by at least one member described in that division.

(C) The multidisciplinary team shall perform the functions and activities and provide the services specified in the interagency agreement entered into under section 2151.428 [2151.42.8] of the Revised Code, regarding reports received under section 2151.421 [2151.42.1] of the Revised Code of alleged sexual abuse of a child and reports of allegations of another type of abuse of a child that is specified in the memorandum of understanding that creates the center as being within the center's jurisdiction and regarding the children who are the subjects of the reports.

HISTORY: 150 v S 66, § 1, eff. 5-6-05.

[§ 2151.42.8] § 2151.428 Interagency agreement regarding reports of alleged child abuse; obligations of public official or agency unaffected.

(A) If a children's advocacy center is established under section 2151.426 [2151.42.6] of the Revised Code, in addition to the memorandum of understanding executed under that section, each public children services agency that participates in the execution of the memorandum of understanding, the children's advocacy center, and the children's advocacy center's multidisciplinary team assembled under section 2151.427 [2151.42.7] of the Revised Code shall enter into an interagency agreement that stipulates all of the following regarding reports received under section 2151.421 [2151.42.1] of the Revised Code of alleged sexual abuse of a child and reports of allegations of another type of abuse of a child that is specified in the memorandum of understanding that creates the center as being within the center's jurisdiction:

(1) The protocol and procedures for any and all referrals and investigations of the reports;

(2) Any and all coordinating activities between the parties that enter into the agreement;

(3) The authority or responsibility for performing any and all functions and activities, and providing any and all services, regarding the reports and the children who are the subjects of the reports.

(B) The parties that enter into an interagency agreement under division (A) of this section shall comply with the agreement in referring the reports, investigating the reports, coordinating the activities between the parties, and performing and providing the functions, activities, and services relative to the reports and the children who are the subjects of the reports.

(C) Nothing in this section, section 2151.421 [2151.42.1], or sections 2151.425 [2151.42.5] to 2151.427 [2151.42.7] of the Revised Code pertaining to the operation of a children's advocacy center shall relieve any public official or agency from any legal obligation or responsibility.

[PROCEDURE IN ADULT CASES]

§ 2151.43 Charges against adults; defendant bound over to grand jury.

In cases against an adult under sections 2151.01 to 2151.54 of the Revised Code, any person may file an affidavit with the clerk of the juvenile court setting forth briefly, in plain and ordinary language, the charges against the accused who shall be tried thereon. When the child is a recipient of aid pursuant to Chapter 5107, or 5115, of the Revised Code, the county department of job and family services shall file charges against any person who fails to provide support to a child in violation of section 2919.21 of the Revised Code, unless the department files charges under section 3113.06 of the Revised Code, or unless charges of nonsupport are filed by a relative or guardian of the child, or unless action to enforce support is brought under Chapter 3115, of the Revised Code.

In such prosecution an indictment by the grand jury or information by the prosecuting attorney shall not be required. The clerk shall issue a warrant for the arrest of the accused, who, when arrested, shall be taken before the juvenile judge and tried according to such sections.

The affidavit may be amended at any time before or during the trial.

The judge may bind such adult over to the grand jury, where the act complained of constitutes a felony.

Double jeopardy
Jurisdiction

Double jeopardy

The procedure of filing a complaint in the juvenile court on a charge of contributing to the delinquency of a minor and then binding the prisoner over to the grand jury upon concluding that a felony over which the juvenile court lacked jurisdiction had been committed did not violate the federal right to be free from double jeopardy: Grear v. Maxwell, 35 Ohio Op. 2d 333, 355 F.2d 991 (6th Cir. 1966).

Jurisdiction

The court of common pleas and municipal courts have jurisdiction in offenses involving adults, concurrent with that of the juvenile court, arising under RC § 2151.41 or RC § 2151.42; 1950 OAG No. 1901 overruled: 1958 OAG No. 2016 (1958).

§ 2151.44 Complaint after hearing.

If it appears at the hearing of a child that any person has abused or has aided, induced, caused, encouraged, or contributed to the dependency, neglect, or delinquency of a child or acted in a way tending to cause delinquency in such child, or that a person charged with the care, support, education, or maintenance of any child has failed to support or sufficiently contribute toward the support, education, and maintenance of such child, the juvenile judge may order a complaint filed against such person and proceed to hear and dispose of the case as provided in sections 2151.01 to 2151.54, inclusive, of the Revised Code.

On the request of the judge, the prosecuting attorney shall prosecute all adults charged with violating such sections.

§ 2151.49 Suspension of sentence.

In every case of conviction under sections 2151.01 to 2151.54 of the Revised Code, where imprisonment is imposed as part of the punishment, the juvenile judge may suspend sentence, before or during commitment, upon such condition as the juvenile judge imposes. In the case of conviction for nonsupport of a child who is receiving aid under Chapter 5107, or 5115, of the Revised Code, if the juvenile judge suspends sentence on condition that the person make payments for support, the payment shall be made to the county department of job and family services rather than to the child or custodian of the child.

The court, in accordance with sections 3119.29 to 3119.56 of the Revised Code, shall include in each support order made under this section the requirement that one or both of the parents provide for the health care needs of the child to the satisfaction of the court.

Generally
Applicability
Jurisdiction
Probation

Generally

By the express terms of this section the juvenile court is authorized to "suspend sentence" either before or after commitment, which is construed to mean suspension of the execution of the sentence rather than postponement of imposition of sentence: In re Keagy, 76 Ohio App. 95, 31 Ohio Op. 405, 63 N.E.2d 216 (1945).

Under the provisions of GC § 1639-49 (RC § 2151.49), read in the light of GC § 1639-50 (RC § 2151.50), a juvenile court is authorized and empowered to suspend the execution of sentences, imposed for violation of this section or GC § 1639-46 (RC § 2151.42), where imprisonment is imposed as part of the punishment, "before or during commitment, upon such condition as he imposes," at least for such period as the juvenile court does not, by reason of age or otherwise, lose jurisdiction over the dependent, neglected, or delinquent child involved: 1942 OAG No. 4922 (1942).

Applicability

General Code §§ 13452-1 to 13452-11, 13451-8a, and 13451-8b (RC §§ 2951.02 to 2951.12, 2947.12 and 2947.13) have no application to persons convicted of violation of this section or GC § 1639-46 (RC § 2151.42), such suspensions of the execution of sentences being governed by GC §§ 1639-49 and 1639-50 (RC §§ 2151.49, 2151.50): 1942 OAG No. 4922 (1942).

Jurisdiction

Where the jurisdiction of the juvenile court has been invoked by the arrest of a father of minor children on a charge of nonsupport filed by the mother, and upon trial the father pleads guilty and is sentenced, which sentence is suspended and the defendant put on probation, the condition of the probation being that the defendant will pay a specified sum weekly for support, the minor children thereby become wards of the juvenile court and the subject of their support and the power to enforce the condition of probation is exclusively in that court until each child has reached the age of eighteen years: Anderson v. Anderson, 4 Ohio App. 2d 90, 33 Ohio Op. 2d 145, 212 N.E.2d 643 (1965).

Probation

The juvenile court may order reinstatement of a suspended commitment for lack of good behavior even though the juvenile's probationary period had expired before the juvenile engaged in such conduct if the court's order requiring good behavior had not yet expired at the time of the conduct: In re Proctor, 1997 Ohio App. LEXIS 5761 (9th Dist. 1997).

§ 2151.50 Forfeiture of bond.

When, as a condition of suspension of sentence under section 2151.49 of the Revised Code, bond is required and given, upon the failure of a person giving such bond to comply with the conditions thereof, such bond may be forfeited, the suspension terminated by the juvenile judge, the original sentence executed as though it had not been suspended, and the term of any sentence imposed in such case shall commence from the date of imprisonment of such person after such forfeiture and termination of suspension. Any part of such sentence which may have been served shall be deducted from any such period of imprisonment. When such bond is forfeited the judge may issue execution thereon without further proceedings.

Termination of parental rights

Generally

Under the juvenile court act (RC § 2151.01 et seq) no appeal shall be taken to the court of appeals except for good cause shown, "upon motion and notice to the prosecuting attorney... or unless such motion is allowed by such court"; and where an appellant fails to make a showing of "good cause" preliminary to appealing, the appeal will be denied and the judgment of the lower court affirmed: State v. Parks, 105 Ohio App. 208, 6 Ohio Op. 2d 40, 152 N.E.2d 154 (1957).

Upon a motion for leave to appeal from a sentence imposed by the juvenile court, good cause is shown as that term is employed in GC § 1639-51 (RC § 2151.52), when a substantial question relating to the trial, conviction and sentence of the defendant is raised incident to the appeal: State ex rel. Meng v. Todaro, 92 Ohio App. 247, 49 Ohio Op. 342, 109 N.E.2d 669 (1954).

Where an adult father filed a motion to vacate the previous orders and to dismiss proceedings of a juvenile court, the one order, in part, adjudicating that his child is a dependent child and the other awarding its exclusive custody to the mother, and at the hearing on such motion it was stipulated that the sole issue was the court's jurisdiction to hear, decide and make the order delivered therein on a stated date, there is no right of appeal to the court of appeals on questions of law from the court's order overruling such motion, such proceedings not being classified as a prosecution of an adult within the meaning of the juvenile court code: In re Griffin, 73 Ohio App. 110, 28 Ohio Op. 177, 55 N.E.2d 133 (1943).

An alleged father who appears in juvenile court voluntarily at the hearing of an affidavit claiming his alleged daughter to be a neglected child, has no right to prosecute an appeal from the finding, where he is not being prosecuted, and under this section appeals on questions of law apply to the prosecution of adults: In re Hayes, 62 Ohio App. 289, 16 Ohio Op. 10, 28 Ohio L. Ab. 154, 23 N.E.2d 956 (1939).

General Code § 1668 (see now RC § 2151.52) does not confer jurisdiction upon the court of appeals to review a judgment of the juvenile court adjudging defendants, minors, to be dependents and committing them to an institution: Baker v. State, 17 Ohio L. Ab. 384 (App 1934).

Termination of parental rights

An order of the juvenile Court made pursuant to a finding that the children are "neglected children," and committing said children to the permanent custody of the child welfare board for the purpose of placing them for adoption, is a final appealable order under OConst art IV, § 6: In re Masters, 165 Ohio St. 503, 60 Ohio Op. 474, 137 N.E.2d 752 (1965).

[GENERAL PROVISIONS]

§ 2151.53 Physical and mental examinations; records of examination; expenses.

Any person coming within sections 2151.01 to 2151.54 of the Revised Code may be subjected to a physical examination by competent physicians, physician assistants, clinical nurse specialists, and certified nurse practitioners, and a mental examination by competent psychologists, psychiatrists, and clinical nurse specialists that practice the specialty of mental health or psychiatric mental health to be appointed by the juvenile court. Whenever any child is committed to any institution by virtue of such sections, a record of such examinations shall be sent with the commitment to such institution. The compensation of such physicians, physician assistants, clinical nurse specialists, certified nurse practitioners, psychologists, and psychiatrists and the expenses of such examinations shall be paid by the county treasurer upon specifically itemized vouchers, certified by the juvenile judge.

§ 2151.54 Fees and costs.

The juvenile court shall tax and collect the same fees and costs as are allowed the clerk of the court of common pleas for similar services. No fees or costs shall be taxed in cases of delinquent, unruly, dependent, abused, or neglected children except as required by section 2743.70 or 2949.091 [2949.09.1] of the Revised Code or when specifically ordered by the court. The expense of transportation of children to places to which they have been committed, and the transportation of children to and from another state by police or other officers, acting upon order of the court, shall be paid from the county treasury upon specifically itemized vouchers certified to by the judge.

If a child is adjudicated to be a delinquent child or a juvenile traffic offender and the juvenile court specifically is required, by section 2743.70 or 2949.091 [2949.09.1] of the Revised Code or any other section of the Revised Code, to impose a specified sum of money as court costs in addition to any other court costs that the court is required or permitted by law to impose, the court shall not waive the payment of the specified additional court costs that the section of the Revised Code specifically requires the court to impose unless the court determines that the child is indigent and the court either waives the payment of all court costs or enters an order in its journal stating that no court costs are to be taxed in the case.

Children services board

Constitutionality

The placing of a delinquent child, who is indigent and whose family is totally dependent upon welfare payments for income, in a detention center until court costs are paid violates OConst art I, § 15 (no person shall be imprisoned for debt): In re Rinehart, 10 Ohio App. 3d 318, 10 Ohio B. 523, 462 N.E.2d 448 (1983).

Generally

In juvenile court cases in which the Ohio Rules of Juvenile Procedure apply, JuvR 17(B) grants a juvenile court the authority to tax as costs and collect from a party the fees of the county sheriff in serving subpoenas issued by the court and the fees of witnesses subpoenaed by the court. However, pursuant to RC § 2151.54, such fees may not be taxed as costs and collected by a juvenile court in cases of delinquent, unruly, dependent, abused, or neglected children except when specifically ordered by the court. (1997 OAG No. 97-024, approved and followed; 1989 OAG No. 89-086, clarified); OAG No. 98-021 (1998).

Pursuant to RC § 2151.54, no fees or costs shall be taxed by the Trumbull County Court of Common Pleas, Domestic Relations/Juvenile Division in cases filed by the Trumbull County Children Services Board in which a particular child is alleged to be delinquent, unruly, abused, neglected, or dependent, or in which the board seeks to obtain custody of such a child, except as required by RC § 2743.70 or RC § 2949.09.1 or when specifically ordered by the court: OAG No. 97-024 (1997).

Except in cases of delinquent, unruly, dependent, abused, or neglected children, RC § 2151.54 grants a juvenile court the authority to tax and collect the same fees and costs as are allowed the clerk of the court of common pleas for similar services. No fees or costs shall be taxed by the juvenile court in cases of delinquent, unruly, dependent, abused, or neglected children except as required by RC § 2743.70 or RC § 2949.09.1 or when specifically ordered by the court: OAG No. 97-024 (1997).

When the Trumbull County Children Services Board is a party to an action filed in the Trumbull County Court of Common Pleas, Domestic Relations/Juvenile Division, the board is subject to the provisions of RC § 2151.54 governing the taxation and collection of court costs. The Trumbull County Children Services Board may be required to pay court costs that are taxed by the Trumbull County Court of Common Pleas, Domestic Relations/Juvenile Division in accordance with the provisions of that section: OAG No. 97-024 (1997).

Expenses incurred by the county sheriff in serving summonses, warrants, citations, subpoenas, writs, and other papers issued by the juvenile court in connection with cases that are filed in the juvenile court shall, pursuant to RC § 2151.19, be paid out of the monthly allowance that is made available therefor by the board of county commissioners under RC § 325.07. Such expenses shall not be taxed and collected by the juvenile court as fees or costs under RC § 2151.54: OAG No. 89-086 (1989).

The judge of a juvenile court has the power to place a child, under its jurisdiction, in the custody of a relative or other fit person in a home outside the state. Payment for transportation of a child placed in a home outside the state may be made from the county treasury upon specifically itemized vouchers certified to by the judge of juvenile court: 1938 OAG No. 1918 (1938).

The expense of gasoline and oil, and the necessary tires and repairs to an automobile owned by a probation officer, and used exclusively in carrying out the work of the juvenile court, may legally be paid from the county treasury under the provisions of this section: 1921 OAG vol. 2, p. 1014 (1921).

Where delinquent juveniles are sentenced to the boys' industrial school or girls' industrial home, the cost of the case and the expense of transporting said juveniles to the place to which they have been committed, are, pursuant to GC § 1682 (see now RC § 2151.54), payable by the county and not the state: 1921 OAG vol. 1, p. 114 (1921).

There is no authority for the purchase, with county funds, of an automobile for a probation officer of the juvenile court. He may use his own car in the performance of his duties, and be reimbursed, in the manner provided in GC § 1682 (see now RC § 2151.54): 1919 OAG vol. 2, p. 1433 (1919).

The sheriff is not entitled to fees for conveying girls to industrial school. The probation officer is the proper official to render this service, the cost to be payable from the county treasury upon the certificate of the juvenile judge: 1918 OAG vol. 1, p. 341 (1918).

Children services board

A county children services board is subject to the provisions of RC § 2151.54 governing the taxation and collection of court costs by the juvenile court, and may be required to pay court costs that are taxed by the juvenile court in accordance with the provisions of that section: OAG No. 97-024 (1997).

[§ 2151.54.1] § 2151.541 Additional fees to pay for computerizing court or office of clerk or for computerized legal research services.

(A)(1) The juvenile judge may determine that, for the efficient operation of the juvenile court, additional funds are required to computerize the court, to make available computerized legal research services, or both. Upon making a determination that additional funds are required for either or both of those purposes, the judge shall do one of the following:

(a) If he is clerk of the court, charge one additional fee not to exceed three dollars on the filing of each cause of action or appeal under division (A), (Q), or (U) of section 2303.20 of the Revised Code;

(b) If the clerk of the court of common pleas serves as the clerk of the juvenile court pursuant to section 2151.12 of the Revised Code, authorize and direct the clerk to charge one additional fee not to exceed three dollars on the filing of each cause of action or appeal under division (A), (Q), or (U) of section 2303.20 of the Revised Code.

(2) All moneys collected under division (A)(1) of this section shall be paid to the county treasurer. The treasurer shall place the moneys from the fees in a separate fund to be disbursed, upon an order of the juvenile judge, in an amount no greater than the actual cost to the court of procuring and maintaining computerization of the court, computerized legal research services, or both.

(3) If the court determines that the funds in the fund described in division (A)(2) of this section are more than sufficient to satisfy the purpose for which the additional fee described in division (A)(1) of this section was imposed, the court may declare a surplus in the fund and expend those surplus funds for other appropriate technological expenses of the court.

(B)(1) If the juvenile judge is the clerk of the juvenile court, he may determine that, for the efficient operation of his court, additional funds are required to computerize the clerk's office and, upon that determination, may charge an additional fee, not to exceed ten dollars, on the filing of each cause of action or appeal, on the filing, docketing, and endorsing of each certificate of judgment, or on the docketing and indexing of each aid in execution or petition to vacate, revive, or modify a judgment under divisions (A), (P), (Q), (T), and (U) of section 2303.20 of the Revised Code. Subject to division (B)(2) of this section, all moneys collected under this division shall be paid to the county treasurer to be disbursed, upon an order of the juvenile judge and subject to appropriation by the board of county commissioners, in an amount no greater than the actual cost to the juvenile court of procuring and maintaining computer systems for the clerk's office.

(2) If the juvenile judge makes the determination described in division (B)(1) of this section, the board of county commissioners may issue one or more general obligation bonds for the purpose of procuring and maintaining the computer systems for the office of the clerk of the juvenile court. In addition to the purposes stated in division (B)(1) of this section for which the moneys collected under that division may be expended, the moneys additionally may be expended to pay debt charges on and financing costs related to any general obligation bonds issued pursuant to this division as they become due. General obligation bonds issued pursuant to this division are Chapter 133. securities.

[INTERSTATE COMPACT ON JUVENILES]

§ 2151.56 Interstate compact on juveniles.

The governor is hereby authorized to execute a compact on behalf of this state with any other state or states legally joining therein in the form substantially as follows:

THE INTERSTATE COMPACT ON JUVENILES

The contracting states solemnly agree:

Article I—Findings and Purposes

That juveniles who are not under proper supervision and control, or who have absconded, escaped or run away, are likely to endanger their own health, morals and welfare, and the health, morals and welfare of others. The cooperation of the states party to this compact is therefore necessary to provide for the welfare and protection of juveniles and of the public with respect to (1) cooperative supervision of delinquent juveniles on probation or parole; (2) the return, from one state to another, of delinquent juveniles who have escaped or absconded; (3) the return, from one state to another, of nondelinquent juveniles who have run away from home; and (4) additional measures for the protection of juveniles and of the public, which any two or more of the party states may find desirable to undertake cooperatively. In carrying out the provisions of this compact the party states shall be guided by the noncriminal, reformatory and protective policies which guide their laws concerning delinquent, neglected or dependent juveniles generally. It shall be the policy of the states party to this compact to cooperate and observe their respective responsibilities for the prompt return and acceptance of juveniles and delinquent juveniles who become subject to the provisions of this compact. The provisions of this compact shall be reasonably and liberally construed to accomplish the foregoing purposes.

Article II—Existing Rights and Remedies

That all remedies and procedures provided by this compact shall be in addition to and not in substitution for other rights, remedies and procedures, and shall not be in derogation of parental rights and responsibilities.

Article III—Definitions

That, for the purposes of this compact, “delinquent juvenile” means any juvenile who has been adjudged delinquent and who, at the time the provisions of this compact are invoked, is still subject to the jurisdiction of the court that has made such adjudication or to the jurisdiction or supervision of an agency or institution pursuant to an order of such court; “probation or parole” means any kind of conditional release of juveniles authorized under the laws of the states party hereto; “court” means any court having jurisdiction over delinquent, neglected or dependent children; “state” means any state, territory or possessions of the United States, the District of Columbia, and the commonwealth of Puerto Rico; and “residence” or any variant thereof means a place at which a home or regular place of abode is maintained.

Article IV—Return of Runaways

(a) That the parent, guardian, person or agency entitled to legal custody of a juvenile who has not been adjudged delinquent but who has run away without the consent of such parent, guardian, person or agency may petition the appropriate court in the demanding state for the issuance of a requisition for his return. The petition shall state the name and age of the juvenile, the name of the petitioner and the basis of entitlement to the juvenile’s custody, the circumstances of his running away, his location if known at the time application is made, and such other facts as may tend to show that the juvenile who has run away is endangering his own welfare or the welfare of others and is not an emancipated minor. The petition shall be verified by affidavit, shall be executed in duplicate, and shall be accompanied by two certified copies of the document or documents on which the petitioner's entitlement to the juvenile's custody is based, such as birth records, letters of guardianship, or custody decrees. Such further affidavits and other documents as may be deemed proper may be submitted with such petition. The judge of the court to which this application is made may hold a hearing thereon to determine whether for the purposes of this compact the petitioner is entitled to the legal custody of the juvenile, whether or not it appears that the juvenile has in fact run away without consent, whether or not he is an emancipated minor, and whether or not it is in the best interest of the juvenile to compel his return to the state. If the judge determines, either with or without a hearing, that the juvenile should be returned, he shall present to the appropriate court or to the executive authority of the state where the juvenile is alleged to be located a written requisition for the return of such juvenile. Such requisition shall set forth the name and age of the juvenile, the determination of the court that the juvenile has run away without the consent of a parent, guardian, person or agency entitled to his legal custody, and that it is in the best interest and for the protection of such juvenile that he be returned. In the event that a proceeding for the adjudication of the juvenile as a delinquent, neglected or dependent juvenile is pending in the court at the time when such juvenile runs away, the court may issue a requisition for the return of such juvenile upon its own motion, regardless of the consent of the parent, guardian, person or agency entitled to legal custody, reciting therein the nature and circumstances of the pending proceeding. The requisition shall in every case be executed in duplicate and shall be signed by the judge. One copy of the requisition shall be filed with the compact administrator of the demanding state, there to remain on file subject to the provisions of law governing records of such court. Upon the receipt of a requisition demanding the return of a juvenile who has run away, the court or the executive authority to whom the requisition is addressed shall issue an order to any peace officer or other appropriate person directing him to take into custody and detain such juvenile. Such detention order must substantially recite the facts necessary to the validity of its issuance hereunder. No juvenile detained upon such order shall be delivered over to the officer whom the court demanding him shall have appointed to receive him, unless he shall first be taken forthwith before a judge of a court in the state, who shall inform him of the demand made for his return, and who may appoint counsel or guardian ad litem for him. If the judge of such court shall find that the requisition is in order, he shall deliver such juvenile over to the officer whom the court demanding him shall have appointed to receive him. The judge, however, may fix a reasonable time to be allowed for the purpose of testing the legality of the proceeding.

Upon reasonable information that a person is a juvenile who has run away from another state party to this compact without the consent of a parent, guardian, person or agency entitled to his legal custody, such juvenile may be taken into custody without a requisition and brought forthwith before a judge of the appropriate court who may appoint counsel or guardian ad litem for such juvenile and who shall determine after a hearing whether sufficient cause exists to hold the person, subject to the order of the court, for his own protection and welfare, for such a time not exceeding ninety days as will enable his return to another state party to this compact pursuant to a requisition for his return from a court of that state. If, at the time when a state seeks the return of a juvenile who has run away, there is pending in the state wherein he is found any criminal charge, or any proceeding to have him adjudicated a delinquent juvenile for an act committed in such state, or if he is suspected of having committed within such state a criminal offense or an act of juvenile delinquency, he shall not be returned without the consent of such state until discharged from prosecution or other form of proceeding, imprisonment, detention or supervision for such offense or juvenile delinquency. The duly accredited officers of any state party to this compact, upon the establishment of their authority and the identity of the juvenile being returned, shall be permitted to transport such juvenile through any and all states party to this compact, without interference. Upon his return to the state from which he ran away, the juvenile shall be subject to such further proceedings as may be appropriate under the laws of that state.

(b) That the state to which a juvenile is returned under this Article shall be responsible for payment of the transportation costs of such return.

(c) That "juvenile" as used in this Article means any person who is a minor under the law of the state of residence of the parent, guardian, person or agency entitled to the legal custody of such minor.

Article V—Return of Escapees and Absconders

(a) That the appropriate person or authority from whose probation or parole supervision a delinquent juvenile has absconded or from whose institutional custody he has escaped shall present to the appropriate court or to the executive authority of the state where the delinquent juvenile is alleged to be located a written requisition for the return of such delinquent juvenile. Such requisition shall state the name and age of the delinquent juvenile, the particulars of his adjudication as a delinquent juvenile, the circumstances of the breach of the terms of his probation or parole or of his escape from an institution or agency vested with his legal custody or supervision, and the location of such delinquent juvenile, if known, at the time the requisition is made. The requisition shall be verified by affidavit, shall be executed in duplicate, and shall be accompanied by two certified copies of the judgment, formal adjudication, or order of commitment which subjects such delinquent juvenile to probation or parole or to the legal custody of the institution or agency concerned. Such further affidavits and other documents as may be deemed proper may be submitted with such requisition. One copy of the requisition shall be filed with the compact administrator of the demanding state, there to remain on file subject to the provisions of law governing records of the appropriate court. Upon the receipt of a requisition demanding the return of a delinquent juvenile who has absconded or escaped, the court or the executive authority to whom the requisition is addressed shall issue an order to any peace officer or other appropriate person directing him to take into custody and detain such delinquent juvenile. Such detention order must substantially recite the facts necessary to the validity of its issuance hereunder. No delinquent juvenile detained upon such order shall be delivered over to the officer whom the appropriate person or authority demanding him shall have appointed to receive him, unless he shall first be taken forthwith before a judge of an appropriate court in the state, who shall inform him of the demand made for his return and who may appoint counsel or guardian ad litem for him. If the judge of such court shall find that the requisition is in order, he shall deliver such delinquent juvenile over to the officer whom the appropriate person or authority demanding him shall have appointed to receive him. The judge, however, may fix a reasonable time to be allowed for the purpose of testing the legality of the proceeding.

Upon reasonable information that a person is a delinquent juvenile who has absconded while on probation or parole, or escaped from an institution or agency vested with his legal custody or supervision in any state party to this compact, such person may be taken into custody in any other state party to this compact without a requisition. But in such event, he must be taken forthwith before a judge of the appropriate court, who may appoint counsel or guardian ad litem for such person and who shall determine, after a hearing, whether sufficient cause exists to hold the person subject to the order of the court for such a time, not exceeding ninety days, as will enable his detention under a detention order issued on a requisition pursuant to this Article. If, at the time when a state seeks the return of a delinquent juvenile who has either absconded while on probation or parole or escaped from an institution or agency vested with his legal custody or supervision, there is pending in the state wherein he is detained any criminal charge or any proceeding to have him adjudicated a delinquent juvenile for an act committed in such state, or if he is suspected of having committed within such state a criminal offense or an act of juvenile delinquency, he shall not be returned without the consent of such state until discharged from prosecution or other form of proceeding, imprisonment, detention or supervision for such offense or juvenile delinquency. The duly accredited officers of any state party to this compact, upon the establishment of their authority and the identity of the delinquent juvenile being returned, shall be permitted to transport such delinquent juvenile through any and all states party to this compact, without interference. Upon his return to the state from which he escaped or absconded, the delinquent juvenile shall be subject to such further proceedings as may be appropriate under the laws of that state.

(b) That the state to which a delinquent juvenile is returned under this Article shall be responsible for the payment of the transportation costs of such return.

Article VI—Voluntary Return Procedure

That any delinquent juvenile who has absconded while on probation or parole, or escaped from an institution or agency vested with his legal custody or supervision in any state party to this compact, and any juvenile who has run away from any state party to this compact, who is taken into custody without a requisition in another state party to this compact under the provisions of Article IV (a) or of Article V (a), may consent to his immediate return to the state from which he absconded, escaped or ran away. Such consent shall be given by the juvenile or delinquent juvenile and his counsel or guardian ad litem if any, by executing or subscribing a writing, in the presence of a judge of the appropriate court, which states that the juvenile or delinquent juvenile and his counsel or guardian ad litem, if any, consent to his return to the demanding state. Before such consent shall be executed or subscribed, however, the judge, in the presence of counsel or guardian ad litem, if any, shall inform the juvenile or delinquent juvenile of his rights under this compact. When the consent has been duly executed, it shall be forwarded to and filed with the compact administrator of the state in which the court is located and the judge shall direct the officer having the juvenile or delinquent juvenile in custody to deliver him to the duly accredited officer or officers of the state demanding his return, and shall cause to be delivered to such officer or officers a copy of the consent. The court may, however, upon the request of the state to which the juvenile or delinquent juvenile is being returned, order him to return unaccompanied to such state and shall provide him with a copy of such court order; in such event a copy of the consent shall be forwarded to the compact administrator of the state to which said juvenile or delinquent juvenile is ordered to return.

Article VII—Cooperative Supervision of Probationers and Parolees

(a) That the duly constituted judicial and administrative authorities of a state party to this compact (herein called "sending state") may permit any delinquent juvenile within such state, placed on probation or parole, to reside in any other state party to this compact (herein called "receiving state") while on probation or parole, and the receiving state shall accept such delinquent juvenile, if the parent, guardian or person entitled to the legal custody of such delinquent juvenile is residing or undertakes to reside within the receiving state. Before granting such permission, opportunity shall be given to the receiving state to make such investigations as it deems necessary. The authorities of the sending state shall send to the authorities of the receiving state copies of pertinent court orders, social case studies and all other available information which may be of value to and assist the receiving state in supervising a probationer or parolee under this compact. A receiving state, in its discretion, may agree to accept supervision of a probationer or parolee in cases where the parent, guardian or person entitled to the legal custody of the delinquent juvenile is not a resident of the receiving state, and if so accepted the sending state may transfer supervision accordingly.

(b) That each receiving state will assume the duties of visitation and of supervision over any such delinquent juvenile and in the exercise of those duties will be governed by the same standards of visitation and supervision that prevail for its own delinquent juveniles released on probation or parole.

(c) That, after consultation between the appropriate authorities of the sending state and of the receiving state as to the desirability and necessity of returning such a delinquent juvenile, the duly accredited officers of a sending state may enter a receiving state and there apprehend and retake any such delinquent juvenile on probation or parole. For that purpose, no formalities will be required, other than establishing the authority of the officer and the identity of the delinquent juvenile to be retaken and returned. The decision of the sending state to retake a delinquent juvenile on probation or parole shall be conclusive upon and not reviewable within the receiving state, but if, at the time the sending state seeks to retake a delinquent juvenile on probation or parole, there is pending against him within the receiving state any criminal charge or any proceeding to have him adjudicated a delinquent juvenile for any act committed in such state, or if he is suspected of having committed within such state a criminal offense or an act of juvenile delinquency, he shall not be returned without the consent of the receiving state until discharged from prosecution or other form of proceeding, imprisonment, detention or supervision for such offense or juvenile delinquency. The duly accredited officers of the sending state shall be permitted to transport delinquent juveniles being so returned through any and all states party to this compact, without interference.

(d) That the sending state shall be responsible under this Article for paying the costs of transporting any delinquent juvenile to the receiving state or of returning any delinquent juvenile to the sending state.

Article VIII—Responsibility for Costs

(a) That the provisions of Articles IV(b), V(b) and VII(d) of this compact shall not be construed to alter or affect any internal relationship among the departments, agencies and officers of and in the government of a party state, or between a party state and its subdivisions, as to the payment of costs, or responsibilities therefor.

(b) That nothing in this compact shall be construed to prevent any party state or subdivision thereof from asserting any right against any person, agency or other entity in regard to costs for which such party state or subdivision thereof may be responsible pursuant to Articles IV(b), V(b) or VII(d) of this compact.

Article IX—Detention Practices

That, to every extent possible, it shall be the policy of states party to this compact that no juvenile or delinquent juvenile shall be placed or detained in any prison, jail or lockup nor be detained or transported in association with criminal, vicious or dissolute persons.

Article X—Supplementary Agreements

That the duly constituted administrative authorities of a state party to this compact may enter into supplementary agreements with any other state or states party hereto for the cooperative care, treatment and rehabilitation of delinquent juveniles whenever they shall find that such agreements will improve the facilities or programs available for such care, treatment and rehabilitation. Such care, treatment and rehabilitation may be provided in an institution located within any state entering into such supplementary agreement. Such supplementary agreements shall (1) provide the rates to be paid for the care, treatment and custody of such delinquent juveniles, taking into consideration the character of facilities, services and subsistence furnished; (2) provide that the delinquent juvenile shall be given a court hearing prior to his being sent to another state for care, treatment and custody; (3) provide that the state receiving such a delinquent juvenile in one of its institutions shall act solely as agent for the state sending such delinquent juvenile; (4) provide that the sending state shall at all times retain jurisdiction over delinquent juveniles sent to an institution in another state; (5) provide for reasonable inspection of such institutions by the sending state; (6) provide that the consent of the parent, guardian, person or agency entitled to the legal custody of said delinquent juvenile shall be secured prior to his being sent to another state; and (7) make provision for such other matters and details as shall be necessary to protect the rights and equities of such delinquent juveniles and of the cooperating states.

Article XI—Acceptance of Federal and Other Aid

That any state party to this compact may accept any and all donations, gifts and grants of money, equipment and services from the federal or any local government, or any agency thereof and from any person, firm or corporation, for any of the purposes and functions of this compact, and may receive and utilize the same subject to the terms, conditions and regulations governing such donations, gifts and grants.

Article XII—Compact Administrators

That the governor of each state party to this compact shall designate an officer who, acting jointly with like officers of other party states, shall promulgate rules and regulations to carry out more effectively the terms and provisions of this compact.

Article XIII—Execution of Compact

That this compact shall become operative immediately upon its execution by any state as between it and any other state or states so executing. When executed it shall have the full force and effect of law within such state, the form of execution to be in accordance with the laws of the executing state.

Article XIV—Renunciation

That this compact shall continue in force and remain binding upon each executing state until renounced by it. Renunciation of this compact shall be by the same authority which executed it, by sending six months' notice in writing of its intention to withdraw from the compact to the other states party hereto. The duties and obligations of a renouncing state under Article VII hereof shall continue as to parolees and probationers residing therein at the time of withdrawal until retaken or finally discharged. Supplementary agreements entered into under Article X hereof shall be subject to renunciation as provided by such supplementary agreements, and shall not be subject to the six months' renunciation notice of the present Article.

Article XV—Severability

That the provisions of this compact shall be severable and if any phrase, clause, sentence or provision of this compact is declared to be contrary to the constitution of any participating state or of the United States or the applicability thereof to any government, agency, person or circumstance is held invalid, the validity of the remainder of this compact and the applicability thereof to any government, agency, person or circumstance shall not be affected thereby. If this compact shall be held contrary to the constitution of any state participating therein, the compact shall remain in full force and effect as to the remaining states and in full force and effect as to the state affected as to all severable matters.

 Jurisdiction

Construction with other laws

The provisions of RC § 2151.39, are not applicable to the acceptance of a juvenile delinquent by the Ohio compact administrator pursuant to the provisions of RC §§ 2151.56 to 2151.61, inclusive: 1959 OAG No. 1041 (1959).

Fees and costs

Where the State of Ohio is responsible for the payment of transportation costs under RC § 2151.56, art. IV(b) or RC § 2151.56, art. V(b), the person or entity with legal custody of such juvenile is the party within the state which is responsible for the transportation costs of the juvenile's return, unless the juvenile court, in its disposition of a delinquent juvenile under RC § 2151.35.5(A), transferred the responsibility for the physical care and custody to another person or entity, which is then responsible for the payment of such costs: OAG No. 89-107 (1989).

Where a runaway juvenile or a delinquent juvenile is returned to this state from another state which is a party to the Interstate Compact on Juveniles, under RC § 2151.56, art. IV(b) or RC § 2151.56, art. V(b), respectively, the State of Ohio is responsible for payment of such return transportation costs: OAG No. 89-107 (1989).

Jurisdiction

For purposes of RC § 2151.56, a person over the age of twenty-one may qualify as a "delinquent juvenile," provided that the person has been adjudged delinquent by the sending state and, at the time the provisions of RC § 2151.56 are invoked, is subject to the jurisdiction of the court in the sending state that made the adjudication or subject to the jurisdiction or supervision of an agency or institution pursuant to an order of such court: OAG No. 88-050 (1988).

§ 2151.57 Compact administrator; powers and duties.

Pursuant to section 2151.56 of the Revised Code, the governor is hereby authorized and empowered, with the advice and consent of the senate, to designate an officer who shall be the compact administrator and who, acting jointly with like officers of other party states, shall promulgate rules and regulations to carry out more effectively the terms of the compact. Such compact administrator shall serve subject to the pleasure of the governor. The compact administrator is hereby authorized, empowered and directed to cooperate with all departments, agencies and officers of and in the government of this state and its subdivisions in facilitating the proper administration of the compact or of any supplementary agreement or agreements entered into by this state thereunder.

[TRAINING AND REHABILITATION]§ 2151.61 Additional article.

In addition to any procedure provided in Articles IV and VI of the compact for the return of any runaway juvenile, the particular states, the juvenile or his parents, the courts, or other legal custodian involved may agree upon and adopt any other plan or procedure legally authorized under the laws of this state and the other respective party states for the return of any such runaway juvenile.

Article XVI—Additional Article

The governor is hereby authorized and directed to execute, with any other state or states legally joining in the same, an amendment to the interstate compact on juveniles in substantially the following form:

(a) That this Article shall provide additional remedies, and shall be binding only as among and between those party states which specifically execute the same.

(b) For the purposes of Article XVI(c), "child," as used herein, means any minor within the jurisdictional age limits of any court in the home state.

(c) When any child is brought before a court of a state of which such child is not a resident, and such state is willing to permit such child's return to the home state of such child, such home state, upon being so advised by the state in which such proceeding is pending, shall immediately institute proceedings to determine the residence and jurisdictional facts as to such child in such home state, and upon finding that such child is in fact a resident of said state and subject to the jurisdiction of the court thereof, shall within five days authorize the return of such child to the home state, and to the parent or custodial agency legally authorized to accept such custody in such home state, and at the expense of such home state, to be paid from such funds as such home state may procure, designate, or provide, prompt action being of the essence.

(d) All provisions and procedures of Articles V and VI of the interstate compact on juveniles shall be construed to apply to any juvenile charged with being a delinquent juvenile for the violation of any criminal law. Any juvenile charged with being a delinquent juvenile for violating any criminal law shall be returned to the requesting state upon a requisition to the state where the juvenile may be found. A petition in the case shall be filed in a court of competent jurisdiction in the requesting state where the violation of criminal law is alleged to have been committed. The petition may be filed regardless of whether the juvenile has left the state before or after the filing of the petition. The requisition described in Article V of the compact shall be forwarded by the judge of the county in which the petition has been filed."

§ 2151.65 Single-county and joint-county juvenile facilities.

Upon the advice and recommendation of the juvenile judge, the board of county commissioners may provide by purchase, lease, construction, or otherwise a school, forestry camp, or other facility or facilities where delinquent children, as defined in section 2152.02 of the Revised Code, dependent children, abused children, unruly children, as defined in section 2151.022 [2151.02.2] of the Revised Code, or neglected children or juvenile traffic offenders may be held for training, treatment, and rehabilitation. Upon the joint advice and recommendation of the juvenile judges of two or more adjoining or neighboring counties, the boards of county commissioners of such counties may form themselves into a joint board and proceed to organize a district for the establishment and support of a school, forestry camp, or other facility or facilities for the use of the juvenile courts of such counties, where delinquent, dependent, abused, unruly, or neglected children, or juvenile traffic offenders may be held for treatment, training, and rehabilitation, by using a site or buildings already established in one such county, or by providing for the purchase of a site and the erection of the necessary buildings thereon. Such county or district school, forestry camp, or other facility or facilities shall be maintained as provided in Chapters 2151. and 2152. of the Revised Code. Children who are adjudged to be delinquent, dependent, neglected, abused, unruly, or juvenile traffic offenders may be committed to and held in any such school, forestry camp, or other facility or facilities for training, treatment, and rehabilitation.

The juvenile court shall determine:

(A) The children to be admitted to any school, forestry camp, or other facility maintained under this section;

(B) The period such children shall be trained, treated, and rehabilitated at such facility;

(C) The removal and transfer of children from such facility.

[§ 2151.65.5] § 2151.655 Taxing authority of county may issue general obligation securities to pay cost of acquiring or acquiring sites for schools, detention facilities, forestry camps, or other facilities; agreements for financing of permanent improvements.

(A) The taxing authority of a county may issue general obligation securities of the county under Chapter 133, of the Revised Code to pay such county's share, either separately or as a part of a district, of the cost of acquiring schools, detention facilities, forestry camps, or other facilities, or any combination thereof, under section 2152.41 or 2151.65 of the Revised Code, or of acquiring sites for and constructing, enlarging, or otherwise improving such schools, detention facilities, forestry camps, other facilities, or combinations thereof.

(B) The joint board of county commissioners, as the taxing authority of a detention facility district, or a district organized under section 2151.65 of the Revised Code, or of a combined district organized under sections 2152.41 and 2151.65 of the Revised Code, may submit to the electors of the district the question of issuing general obligation bonds of the district to pay the cost of acquiring, constructing, enlarging, or otherwise improving sites, buildings, and facilities for any purposes for which the district was organized. The election on such question shall be submitted and held under section 133.18 of the Revised Code.

(C)(1) To pay the cost of permanent improvements of the district, the board of trustees of a detention facility district, of a district organized under section 2151.65 of the Revised Code, or of a combined district organized under sections 2152.41 and 2151.65 of the Revised Code may enter into an agreement with the several boards of county commissioners constituting the joint board of county commissioners. The agreement shall provide for each such board of county commissioners to pay the district a share of such costs for a stated term from the proceeds of a tax levied by the board under division (F) or (R) of section 5705.19 of the Revised Code or from funds of the county otherwise lawfully available to pay the county's share of the costs of the district's permanent improvements. County shares shall be allocated on the basis prescribed in the agreement, which may include an allocation in proportion to the taxable value of each county or in proportion to the number of children from each county who are maintained in district facilities.

More than one agreement may be entered into under this division with respect to a district, and more than one agreement may exist at the same time with respect to a district. An agreement entered into under this division may be amended if the amendment is mutually agreed to by the board of trustees of the district and the several boards of county commissioners constituting the joint board of county commissioners.

If a board of county commissioners withdraws from the district before the end of the term of the agreement, the board shall be required to make payments as required in the agreement until all debt charges or loan repayments for which such payments are pledged are paid in full, unless the board of trustees agrees otherwise.

(2) In any such district where the board of trustees has entered into an agreement under division (C)(1) of this section, the joint board of county commissioners, as the taxing authority of a district, may issue self-supporting securities of the district under section 133.152 [133.15.2] of the Revised Code for the purpose of paying the cost of permanent improvements of the district. If such securities are issued, the term of an agreement shall be for no fewer years than the maximum maturity of securities secured by a pledge of payments made under the agreement.

(3) In any such district where the board of trustees has entered into an agreement under division (C)(1) of this section, the joint board of county commissioners, as the taxing authority of a district, may obtain loans from a financial institution to be repaid from amounts to be paid to the district under the agreement by the boards of county commissioners constituting the joint board of county commissioners.

§ 2151.70 Employees of juvenile facilities.

The judge, in a county maintaining a school, forestry camp, or other facility or facilities created under section 2151.65 of the Revised Code, shall appoint the superintendent of any such facility. In the case of a district facility created under such section, the board of trustees shall appoint the superintendent. A superintendent, before entering upon his duties, shall give bond with sufficient surety to the judge or to the board, as the case may be, in such amount as may be fixed by the judge or the board, such bond being conditioned upon the full and faithful accounting of the funds and properties coming into his hands.

Compensation of the superintendent and other necessary employees of a school, forestry camp, or other facility or facilities shall be fixed by the judge in the case of a county facility, or by the board of trustees in the case of a district facility. Such compensation and other expenses of maintaining the facility shall be paid in the manner prescribed in section 2151.13 of the Revised Code in the case of a county facility, or in accordance with rules and regulations provided for in section 2151.77 of the Revised Code in the case of a district facility.

The superintendent of a facility shall appoint all employees of such facility. All such employees, except the superintendent, shall be in the classified civil service.

The superintendent of a school, forestry camp, or other facility shall have entire executive charge of such facility, under supervision of the judge, in the case of a county facility, or under supervision of the board of trustees, in the case of a district facility. The superintendent shall control, manage, and operate the facility, and shall have custody of its property, files, and records.

When an established site and buildings are used for a district school, forestry camp, or other facility or facilities created under section 2151.65 of the Revised Code the joint board of county commissioners organized under section 2151.65 of the Revised Code shall cause the value of such site and buildings to be properly appraised. This appraisal value, or in case of the purchase of a site, the purchase price and the cost of all betterments and additions thereto, shall be paid by the counties comprising the district, in proportion to the taxable property of each county, as shown by its tax duplicate. The current expenses of maintaining the school, forestry camp, or other facility or facilities and the cost of ordinary repairs thereto shall be paid by each such county in accordance with one of the following methods as approved by the joint board of county commissioners:

(A) In proportion to the number of children from such county who are maintained in the school, forestry camp, or other facility or facilities during the year;

(B) By a levy submitted by the joint board of county commissioners under division (A) of section 5705.19 of the Revised Code and approved by the electors of the district;

(C) In proportion to the taxable property of each county, as shown by its tax duplicate;

(D) In any combination of the methods for payment described in division (A), (B), or (C) of this section.

The board of trustees shall, with the approval of the joint board of county commissioners, adopt rules for the management of funds used for the current expenses of maintaining the school, forestry camp, or other facility or facilities.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

County commissioners

A board of county commissioners has the authority pursuant to RC § 305.26 to compound or release, in whole or in part, or otherwise settle payments due the county as a result of an erroneous apportionment of the costs of operating and maintaining district juvenile detention or rehabilitation facilities: OAG No. 84-052 (1984).

Revised Code §§ 2151.34.12 and 2151.77 require that the costs of operating and maintaining district juvenile detention and rehabilitation facilities be apportioned among the counties participating in the district on the basis of the counties' actual use of such facilities where no levy has been approved pursuant to RC § 5705.19(A). Neither a joint board of county commissioners formed pursuant to RC §§ 2151.34 and 2151.65 nor a district board of trustees appointed pursuant to RC §§ 2151.34.3 and 2151.68 has the authority to direct or permit the apportionment of such costs in any other manner: OAG No. 84-052 (1984).

The board of county commissioners of any county within a school, forestry camp, or other facility or facilities district may, upon the recommendation of the juvenile court of such county, withdraw from such district and dispose of its interest in such school, forestry camp, or other facility or facilities selling or leasing its right, title, and interest in the site, buildings, furniture, and equipment to any counties in the district, at such price and upon such terms as are agreed upon among the boards of county commissioners of the counties concerned. Section 307.10 of the Revised Code does not apply to this section. The net proceeds of any such sale or lease shall be paid into the treasury of the withdrawing county.

Any county withdrawing from such district or from a combined district organized under sections 2152.41 and 2151.65 of the Revised Code shall continue to have levied against its tax duplicate any tax levied by the district during the period in which the county was a member of the district for current operating expenses, permanent improvements, or the retirement of bonded indebtedness. Such levy shall continue to be a levy against such duplicate of the county until such time that it expires or is renewed.

Members of the board of trustees of a district school, forestry camp, or other facility or facilities who are residents of a county withdrawing from such district are deemed to have resigned their positions upon the completion of the withdrawal procedure provided by this section. Vacancies then created shall be filled according to sections 2151.68 and 2151.74 of the Revised Code.

§ 2151.79 Designation of fiscal officer of district; duties of county auditors in district.

The county auditor of the county having the greatest population, or, with the unanimous concurrence of the county auditors of the counties composing a facilities district, the auditor of the county wherein the facility is located, shall be the fiscal officer of a district organized under section 2151.65 of the Revised Code or a combined district organized under sections 2152.41 and 2151.65 of the Revised Code. The county auditors of the several counties composing a school, forestry camp, or other facility or facilities district, shall meet at the district school, forestry camp, or other facility or facilities not less than once in each six months, to review accounts and to transact such other duties in connection with the institution as pertain to the business of their office.

[INDEPENDENT LIVING SERVICES]

§ 2151.81 Definitions.

As used in sections 2151.82 to 2151.84 of the Revised Code:

(A) "Independent living services" means services and other forms of support designed to aid children and young adults to successfully make the transition to independent adult living and to achieve emotional and economic self-sufficiency. "Independent living services" may include the following:

- (1) Providing housing;
- (2) Teaching decision-making skills;
- (3) Teaching daily living skills such as securing and maintaining a residence, money management, utilization of community services and systems, personal health care, hygiene and safety, and time management;
- (4) Assisting in obtaining education, training, and employment skills;
- (5) Assisting in developing positive adult relationships and community supports.

(B) "Young adult" means a person eighteen years of age or older but under twenty-one years of age who was in the temporary or permanent custody of, or was provided care in a planned permanent living arrangement by, a public children services agency or private child placing agency on the date the person attained age eighteen.

HISTORY: 149 v H 38. Eff 11-1-2002.

§ 2151.82 Agency duty to provide independent living services.

A public children services agency or private child placing agency, that has temporary or permanent custody of, or is providing care in a planned permanent living arrangement to, a child who is sixteen or seventeen years of age, shall provide independent living services to the child. The services to be provided shall be determined based on an evaluation of the strengths and weaknesses of the child, completed or obtained by the agency. If housing is provided as part of the services, the child shall be placed in housing that is supervised or semi-supervised by an adult.

The services shall be included as part of the case plan established for the child pursuant to section 2151.412 [2151.41.2] of the Revised Code.

HISTORY: 149 v H 38. Eff 11-1-2002.

§ 2151.83 Agreement with young adult to provide independent living services; addendum.

(A) A public children services agency or private child placing agency, on the request of a young adult, shall enter into a jointly prepared written agreement with the young adult that obligates the agency to ensure that independent living services are provided to the young adult and sets forth the responsibilities of the young adult regarding the services. The agreement shall be developed based on the young adult's strengths, needs, and circumstances. The agreement shall be designed to promote the young adult's successful transition to independent adult living and emotional and economic self-sufficiency.

(B) If the young adult appears to be eligible for services from one or more of the following entities, the agency must contact the appropriate entity to determine eligibility:

(1) An entity, other than the agency, that is represented on a county family and children first council established pursuant to section 121.37 of the Revised Code. If the entity is a board of alcohol, drug addiction, and mental health services, an alcohol and drug addiction services board, or a community mental health board, the agency shall contact the provider of alcohol, drug addiction, or mental health services that has been designated by the board to determine the young adult's eligibility for services.

(2) The rehabilitation services commission;

(3) A metropolitan housing authority established pursuant to section 3735.27 of the Revised Code.

If an entity described in this division determines that the young adult qualifies for services from the entity, that entity, the young adult, and the agency to which the young adult made the request for independent living services shall enter into a written addendum to the jointly prepared agreement entered into under division (A) of this section. The addendum shall indicate how services under the agreement and addendum are to be coordinated and allocate the service responsibilities among the entities and agency that signed the addendum.

§ 2151.84 Model agreements.

The department of job and family services shall establish model agreements that may be used by public children services agencies and private child placing agencies required to provide services under an agreement with a young adult pursuant to section 2151.83 of the Revised Code. The model agreements shall include provisions describing the specific independent living services to be provided, the duration of the services and the agreement, the duties and responsibilities of each party under the agreement, and grievance procedures regarding disputes that arise regarding the agreement or services provided under it.

Effect of Amendments

H.B. 95, Acts 2003, effective September 26, 2003, deleted "to the extent funds are provided pursuant to this section" following "living services to be provided" in the introductory paragraph, and "To facilitate the provision of independent living services, the department shall provide funds to meet the requirement of state matching funds needed to qualify for federal funds under the 'Foster Care Independence Act of 1999,' 113 Stat. 1822 (1999), 42 U.S.C. 677, as amended. The department shall seek controlling board approval of any funds transfers necessary to meet this requirement" from the final paragraph following the introductory paragraph.

§ 2151.85 Unmarried minor may seek abortion without notice to parent, guardian or custodian.

(A) A woman who is pregnant, unmarried, under eighteen years of age, and unemancipated and who wishes to have an abortion without the notification of her parents, guardian, or custodian may file a complaint in the juvenile court of the county in which she has a residence or legal settlement, in the juvenile court of any county that borders to any extent the county in which she has a residence or legal settlement, or in the juvenile court of the county in which the hospital, clinic, or other facility in which the abortion would be performed or induced is located, requesting the issuance of an order authorizing her to consent to the performance or inducement of an abortion without the notification of her parents, guardian, or custodian.

The complaint shall be made under oath and shall include all of the following:

- (1) A statement that the complainant is pregnant;
- (2) A statement that the complainant is unmarried, under eighteen years of age, and unemancipated;
- (3) A statement that the complainant wishes to have an abortion without the notification of her parents, guardian, or custodian;
- (4) An allegation of either or both of the following:
 - (a) That the complainant is sufficiently mature and well enough informed to intelligently decide whether to have an abortion without the notification of her parents, guardian, or custodian;
 - (b) That one or both of her parents, her guardian, or her custodian was engaged in a pattern of physical, sexual, or emotional abuse against her, or that the notification of her parents, guardian, or custodian otherwise is not in her best interest.
- (5) A statement as to whether the complainant has retained an attorney and, if she has retained an attorney, the name, address, and telephone number of her attorney.

(B)(1) The court shall fix a time for a hearing on any complaint filed pursuant to division (A) of this section and shall keep a record of all testimony and other oral proceedings in the action. The court shall hear and determine the action and shall not refer any portion of it to a referee. The hearing shall be held at the earliest possible time, but not later than the fifth business day after the day that the complaint is filed. The court shall enter judgment on the complaint immediately after the hearing is concluded. If the hearing required by this division is not held by the fifth business day after the complaint is filed, the failure to hold the hearing shall be considered to be a constructive order of the court authorizing the complainant to consent to the performance or inducement of an abortion without the notification of her parent, guardian, or custodian, and the complainant and any other person may rely on the constructive order to the same extent as if the court actually had issued an order under this section authorizing the complainant to consent to the performance or inducement of an abortion without such notification.

(2) The court shall appoint a guardian ad litem to protect the interests of the complainant at the hearing that is held pursuant to this section. If the complainant has not retained an attorney, the court shall appoint an attorney to represent her. If the guardian ad litem is an attorney admitted to the practice of law in this state, the court also may appoint him to serve as the complainant's attorney.

(C)(1) If the complainant makes only the allegation set forth in division (A)(4)(a) of this section and if the court finds, by clear and convincing evidence, that the complainant is sufficiently mature and well enough informed to decide intelligently whether to have an abortion, the court shall issue an order authorizing the complainant to consent to the performance or inducement of an abortion without the notification of her parents, guardian, or custodian. If the court does not make the finding specified in this division, it shall dismiss the complaint.

(2) If the complainant makes only the allegation set forth in division (A)(4)(b) of this section and if the court finds, by clear and convincing evidence, that there is evidence of a pattern of physical, sexual, or emotional abuse of the complainant by one or both of her parents, her guardian, or her custodian, or that the notification of the parents, guardian, or custodian of the complainant otherwise is not in the best interest of the complainant, the court shall issue an order authorizing the complainant to consent to the performance or inducement of an abortion without the notification of her parents, guardian, or custodian. If the court does not make the finding specified in this division, it shall dismiss the complaint.

(3) If the complainant makes both of the allegations set forth in divisions (A)(4)(a) and (b) of this section, the court shall proceed as follows:

(a) The court first shall determine whether it can make the finding specified in division (C)(1) of this section and, if so, shall issue an order pursuant to that division. If the court issues such an order, it shall not proceed pursuant to division (C)(3)(b) of this section. If the court does not make the finding specified in division (C)(1) of this section, it shall proceed pursuant to division (C)(3)(b) of this section.

(b) If the court pursuant to division (C)(3)(a) of this section does not make the finding specified in division (C)(1) of this section, it shall proceed to determine whether it can make the finding specified in division (C)(2) of this section and, if so, shall issue an order pursuant to that division. If the court does not make the finding specified in division (C)(2) of this section, it shall dismiss the complaint.

(D) The court shall not notify the parents, guardian, or custodian of the complainant that she is pregnant or that she wants to have an abortion.

(E) If the court dismisses the complaint, it immediately shall notify the complainant that she has a right to appeal under section 2505.073 [2505.07.3] of the Revised Code.

(F) Each hearing under this section shall be conducted in a manner that will preserve the anonymity of the complainant. The complaint and all other papers and records that pertain to an action commenced under this section shall be kept confidential and are not public records under section 149.43 of the Revised Code.

(G) The clerk of the supreme court shall prescribe complaint and notice of appeal forms that shall be used by a complainant filing a complaint under this section and by an appellant filing an appeal under section 2505.073 [2505.07.3] of the Revised Code. The clerk of each juvenile court shall furnish blank copies of the forms, without charge, to any person who requests them.

(H) No filing fee shall be required of, and no court costs shall be assessed against, a complainant filing a complaint under this section or an appellant filing an appeal under section 2505.073 [2505.07.3] of the Revised Code.

(I) As used in this section, "unemancipated" means that a woman who is unmarried and under eighteen years of age has not entered the armed services of the United States, has not become employed and self-subsisting, or has not otherwise become independent from the care and control of her parent, guardian, or custodian.

Constitutionality

Plaintiffs lacked standing to bring action which basically asserted that certain judges are making wrong decisions under a constitutional judicial bypass statute because there is no constitutional or statutory authority that permits a federal court to review the decisions of state courts: Cleveland Surgi-Center v. Jones, 2 F.3d 686 (1993).

Since the notice provisions of RC § 2151.85(D) and CPSupR 76(H) violate the rulemaking authority of the Ohio Supreme Court as contained in OConst art IV, § 5(B), RC § 2151.85(D) and CPSupR 76(H) are of no force and effect. Further, since the defective notice provisions of RC § 2151.85(D) cannot be reconciled with the remaining sections of the statute, RC § 2151.85 is, in its entirety, of no force or effect: In re Doe, 57 Ohio Misc. 2d 20, 565 N.E.2d 891 (1990).

An Ohio statute that with certain exceptions, prohibits any person from performing an abortion on an unmarried, unemancipated, minor woman absent notice to one of woman's parents or a court order of approval held constitutional: Ohio v. Akron Ctr. for Reproductive Health, 497 U.S. 502, 111 L. Ed. 2d 405, 110 S. Ct. 2972 (1990).

The pleading requirements of RC § 2151.85(C)(1) and (2) are unconstitutional: Akron Center for Reproductive Health v. Rosen, 633 F. Supp. 1123 (N.D. Ohio 1986).

Generally

Where a court fails to hold a timely hearing on a complaint under RC § 2151.85, the court, in effect, issues a constructive order authorizing proceeding without parental notification: In re Doe, 135 Ohio App. 3d 719, 735 N.E.2d 504 (1999).

The court properly found that the petitioner was not sufficiently mature to make a decision respecting abortion without obtaining parental advice where she was not responsible enough to obtain her own birth control pills, she continued to engage in sexual activity after her birth control pill prescription ran out, and she waited until she was in the second trimester of her pregnancy to decide to have abortion; the court was not obliged to find her indefinite focus on a future career, a desire to work in computers, such indicia of maturity as to invoke RC §§ 2919.12 and 2151.85(A): In re Complaint of Doe, 1998 Ohio App. LEXIS 3330 (1998).

The court erred by failing to consider the physical abuse of the complainant and the threats of future abuse: In re Complaint of Doe, 96 Ohio App. 3d 435, 645 N.E.2d 134 (1994).

Although an unemancipated minor is pregnant, she may be sufficiently mature enough to make the decision to terminate the pregnancy, especially where the evidence establishes such maturity: In re Complaint of Doe, 83 Ohio App. 3d 98, 613 N.E.2d 1112 (1993).

Discretion of court

Denial of an abortion without parental notification was not an abuse of discretion: In re Jane Doe, 141 Ohio App. 3d 20, 749 N.E.2d 807 (2001).

Denial of a complaint for authorization of an abortion without parental notification was an abuse of discretion where the minor was sufficiently mature and well-informed and feared that her tenuous relationship with her parents would be harmed by notification: In re Doe, 134 Ohio App. 3d 569, 731 N.E.2d 751 (1999).

The juvenile court abused its discretion by finding that the juvenile was not sufficiently mature for purposes of RC § 2151.85 where there was overwhelming evidence that she was: In re Complaint of Doe, 83 Ohio App. 3d 98, 613 N.E.2d 1112 (1993).

A court abuses its discretion by refusing permission for an abortion pursuant to RC § 2151.85 where the applicant clearly meets the statutory criteria: In re Complaint of Jane Doe, 83 Ohio App. 3d 904, 615 N.E.2d 1142 (1992).

Absent an abuse of discretion by the juvenile court, the dismissal of a complaint brought by an unemancipated pregnant minor seeking authorization to have an abortion pursuant to RC

Constitutionality
Generally

§ 2151.85 shall not be disturbed: In re Jane Doe 1, 57 Ohio St. 3d 135, 566 N.E.2d 1181 (1991).

Dismissal of complaint

Minor's complaint under Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 2151.85 requesting that the trial court authorize her consent to an abortion without notifying her parents, guardian, or custodian was properly dismissed since the minor failed to demonstrate by clear and convincing evidence any statutory ground under § 2151.85(A)(4)(a), (b), and (C)(1) for bypassing notification to the minor's parents, guardian, or custodian. In re Doe, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2118, 2006 Ohio 2259, (2006).

Where a minor, inter alia, would have been able to have an abortion without notifying her parents within the next month and had obtained medical counseling, the minor satisfied the requirements of RC § 2151.85(A)(4)(a), (B); as a result, the trial court erred in denying the minor's RC § 2151.85(C) petition to obtain an abortion without parental consent. In re Doe, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5812, 2003 Ohio 6509, (2003).

Disqualification of judge

The propriety of a judge who is a trustee of a crisis pregnancy center ruling on future RC § 2151.85 proceedings is not appropriate for disqualification proceedings where there is no pending RC § 2151.85 proceeding: In re Disqualification of Grossmann, 74 Ohio St. 3d 1254, 657 N.E.2d 1356 (1994).

(A)(1) The appointing or hiring officer of any entity that appoints or employs any person responsible for a child's care in out-of-home care shall request the superintendent of BCII to conduct a criminal records check with respect to any person who is under final consideration for appointment or employment as a person responsible for a child's care in out-of-home care, except that section 3319.39 of the Revised Code shall apply instead of this section if the out-of-home care entity is a public school, educational service center, or chartered nonpublic school.

(2) The administrative director of an agency, or attorney, who arranges an adoption for a prospective adoptive parent shall request the superintendent of BCII to conduct a criminal records check with respect to that prospective adoptive parent and all persons eighteen years of age or older who reside with the prospective adoptive parent.

(3) Before a recommending agency submits a recommendation to the department of job and family services on whether the department should issue a certificate to a foster home under section 5103.03 of the Revised Code, the administrative director of the agency shall request that the superintendent of BCII conduct a criminal records check with respect to the prospective foster caregiver and all other persons eighteen years of age or older who reside with the foster caregiver.

(B) If a person subject to a criminal records check does not present proof that the person has been a resident of this state for the five-year period immediately prior to the date upon which the criminal records check is requested or does not provide evidence that within that five-year period the superintendent of BCII has requested information about the person from the federal bureau of investigation in a criminal records check, the appointing or hiring officer, administrative director, or attorney shall request that the superintendent of BCII obtain information from the federal bureau of investigation as a part of the criminal records check. If the person subject to the criminal records check presents proof that the person has been a resident of this state for that five-year period, the officer, director, or attorney may request that the superintendent of BCII include information from the federal bureau of investigation in the criminal records check.

An appointing or hiring officer, administrative director, or attorney required by division (A) of this section to request a criminal records check shall provide to each person subject to a criminal records check a copy of the form prescribed pursuant to division (C)(1) of section 109.572 [109.57.2] of the Revised Code and a standard impression sheet to obtain fingerprint impressions prescribed pursuant to division (C)(2) of section 109.572 [109.57.2] of the Revised Code, obtain the completed form and impression sheet from the person, and forward the completed form and impression sheet to the superintendent of BCII at the time the criminal records check is requested.

Any person subject to a criminal records check who receives pursuant to this division a copy of the form prescribed pursuant to division (C)(1) of section 109.572 [109.57.2] of the Revised Code and a copy of an impression sheet prescribed pursuant to division (C)(2) of that section and who is requested to complete the form and provide a set of fingerprint impressions shall complete the form or provide all the information necessary to complete the form and shall provide the impression sheet with the impressions of the person's fingerprints. If a person subject to a criminal records check, upon request, fails to provide the information necessary to complete the form or fails to provide impressions of the person's fingerprints, the appointing or hiring officer shall not appoint or employ the person as a person responsible for a child's care in out-of-home care, a probate court may not issue a final decree of adoption or an interlocutory order of adoption making the person an adoptive parent, and the department of job and family services shall not issue a certificate authorizing the prospective foster caregiver to operate a foster home.

(C)(1) No appointing or hiring officer shall appoint or employ a person as a person responsible for a child's care in out-of-home care, the department of job and family services shall not issue a certificate under section 5103.03 of the Revised Code authorizing a prospective foster caregiver to operate a foster home, and no probate court shall issue a final decree of adoption or an interlocutory order of adoption making a person an adoptive parent if the person or, in the case of a prospective foster caregiver or prospective adoptive parent, any person eighteen years of age or older who resides with the prospective foster caregiver or prospective adoptive parent previously has been convicted of or pleaded guilty to any of the following, unless the person meets rehabilitation standards established in rules adopted under division (F) of this section:

(a) A violation of section 2903.01, 2903.02, 2903.03, 2903.04, 2903.11, 2903.12, 2903.13, 2903.16, 2903.21, 2903.34, 2905.01, 2905.02, 2905.05, 2907.02, 2907.03, 2907.04, 2907.05, 2907.06, 2907.07, 2907.08, 2907.09, 2907.21, 2907.22, 2907.23, 2907.25, 2907.31, 2907.32, 2907.321 [2907.32.1], 2907.322 [2907.32.2], 2907.323 [2907.32.3], 2909.02, 2909.03, 2911.01, 2911.02, 2911.11, 2911.12, 2919.12, 2919.22, 2919.24, 2919.25, 2923.12, 2923.13, 2923.161 [2923.16.1], 2925.02, 2925.03, 2925.04, 2925.05, 2925.06, or 3716.11 of the Revised

Code, a violation of section 2905.04 of the Revised Code as it existed prior to July 1, 1996, a violation of section 2919.23 of the Revised Code that would have been a violation of section 2905.04 of the Revised Code as it existed prior to July 1, 1996, had the violation been committed prior to that date, a violation of section 2925.11 of the Revised Code that is not a minor drug possession offense, or felonious sexual penetration in violation of former section 2907.12 of the Revised Code;

(b) A violation of an existing or former law of this state, any other state, or the United States that is substantially equivalent to any of the offenses described in division (C)(1)(a) of this section.

(2) The appointing or hiring officer may appoint or employ a person as a person responsible for a child's care in out-of-home care conditionally until the criminal records check required by this section is completed and the officer receives the results of the criminal records check. If the results of the criminal records check indicate that, pursuant to division (C)(1) of this section, the person subject to the criminal records check does not qualify for appointment or employment, the officer shall release the person from appointment or employment.

(D) The appointing or hiring officer, administrative director, or attorney shall pay to the bureau of criminal identification and investigation the fee prescribed pursuant to division (C)(3) of section 109.572 [109.57.2] of the Revised Code for each criminal records check conducted in accordance with that section upon a request pursuant to division (A) of this section. The officer, director, or attorney may charge the person subject to the criminal records check a fee for the costs the officer, director, or attorney incurs in obtaining the criminal records check. A fee charged under this division shall not exceed the amount of fees the officer, director, or attorney pays for the criminal records check. If a fee is charged under this division, the officer, director, or attorney shall notify the person who is the applicant at the time of the person's initial application for appointment or employment, an adoption to be arranged, or a certificate to operate a foster home of the amount of the fee and that, unless the fee is paid, the person who is the applicant will not be considered for appointment or employment or as an adoptive parent or foster caregiver.

(E) The report of any criminal records check conducted by the bureau of criminal identification and investigation in accordance with section 109.572 [109.57.2] of the Revised Code and pursuant to a request made under division (A) of this section is not a public record for the purposes of section 149.43 of the Revised Code and shall not be made available to any person other than the person who is the subject of the criminal records check or the person's representative; the appointing or hiring officer, administrative director, or attorney requesting the criminal records check or the officer's, director's, or attorney's representative; the department of job and family services or a county department of job and family services; and any court, hearing officer, or other necessary individual involved in a case dealing with the denial of employment, a final decree of adoption or interlocutory order of adoption, or a foster home certificate.

(F) The director of job and family services shall adopt rules in accordance with Chapter 119. of the Revised Code to implement this section. The rules shall include rehabilitation standards a person who has been convicted of or pleaded guilty to an offense listed in division (C)(1) of this section must meet for an appointing or hiring officer to appoint or employ the person as a person responsible for a child's care in out-of-home care, a probate court to issue a final decree of adoption or interlocutory order of adoption making the person an adoptive parent, or the department to issue a certificate authorizing the prospective foster caregiver to operate a foster home.

(G) An appointing or hiring officer, administrative director, or attorney required by division (A) of this section to request a criminal records check shall inform each person who is the applicant, at the time of the person's initial application for appointment or employment, an adoption to be arranged, or a foster home certificate, that the person subject to the criminal records check is required to provide a set of impressions of the person's fingerprints and that a criminal records check is required to be conducted and satisfactorily completed in accordance with section 109.572 [109.57.2] of the Revised Code.

(H) The department of job and family services may waive the requirement that a criminal records check based on fingerprints be conducted for an adult resident of a prospective adoptive or foster home or the home of a foster caregiver if the recommending agency documents to the department's satisfaction that the adult resident is physically unable to comply with the fingerprinting requirement and poses no danger to foster children or adoptive children who may be placed in the home. In such cases, the recommending or approving agency shall request that the bureau of criminal identification and investigation conduct a criminal records check using the person's name and social security number.

(I) As used in this section:

(1) "Children's hospital" means any of the following:

(a) A hospital registered under section 3701.07 of the Revised Code that provides general pediatric medical and surgical care, and in which at least seventy-five per cent of annual inpatient discharges for the preceding two calendar years were individuals less than eighteen years of age;

(b) A distinct portion of a hospital registered under section 3701.07 of the Revised Code that provides general pediatric medical and surgical care, has a total of at least one hundred fifty registered pediatric special care and pediatric acute care beds, and in which at least seventy-five per cent of annual inpatient discharges for the preceding two calendar years were individuals less than eighteen years of age;

(c) A distinct portion of a hospital, if the hospital is registered under section 3701.07 of the Revised Code as a children's hospital and the children's hospital meets all the requirements of division (1)(3)(a) of this section.

(2) "Criminal records check" has the same meaning as in section 109.572 [109.57.2] of the Revised Code.

(3) "Minor drug possession offense" has the same meaning as in section 2925.01 of the Revised Code.

(4) "Person responsible for a child's care in out-of-home care" has the same meaning as in section 2151.011 [2151.01.1] of the Revised Code, except that it does not include a prospective employee of the department of youth services or a person responsible for a child's care in a hospital or medical clinic other than a children's hospital.

(5) "Person subject to a criminal records check" means the following:

(a) A person who is under final consideration for appointment or employment as a person responsible for a child's care in out-of-home care;

(b) A prospective adoptive parent;
 (c) A prospective foster caregiver;
 (d) A person eighteen years old or older who resides with a prospective foster caregiver or a prospective adoptive parent.

(6) "Recommending agency" means a public children services agency, private child placing agency, or private noncustodial agency to which the department of job and family services has delegated a duty to inspect and approve foster homes.

(7) "Superintendent of BCII" means the superintendent of the bureau of criminal identification and investigation.

The provisions of § 3 of SB 38 (145 v —) read as follows:
 SECTION 3. Sections 3301.54, 5104.09, and 5126.28 of the Revised Code, as amended by this act, and sections 109.572, 2151.86, 3301.32, 3301.541, 3319.311 [now 3319.39], 3701.881, 5104.012, 5104.013, and 5153.111 of the Revised Code, as enacted by this act, apply only to persons who apply for employment for a position on or after the effective date of this act.

Effect of Amendments

150 v H 106, effective September 16, 2004, added the exception to the end of (A)(1).

150 v H 117, effective September 3, 2004, added "and all persons eighteen years of age or older who reside with the prospective adoptive parent" to the end of (A)(2); rewrote (C); inserted (H) and redesignated former (H) as (I); and corrected internal references.

Comment, Legislative Service Commission

Section 2151.86 of the Revised Code is amended by Am. Sub. H.B. 106 and Am. Sub. H.B. 117 of the 125th General Assembly. Comparison of these amendments in pursuance of section 1.52 of the Revised Code discloses that they are not irreconcilable so that they are required by that section to be harmonized to give effect to each amendment.

[§ 2151.86.1] § 2151.861 Compliance by child day camps with criminal background check provisions†.

(A) The department of job and family services may periodically conduct a random sampling of registered child day camps to determine compliance with section 2151.86 of the Revised Code.

(B)(1) No child day camp shall fail to comply with section 2151.86 of the Revised Code in regards to a person it appoints or employs.

(2) If the department determines that a child day camp has violated division (B)(1) of this section, the department shall do both of the following:

(a) Consider imposing a civil penalty on the child day camp in an amount that shall not exceed ten per cent of the camp's gross revenues for the full month immediately preceding the month in which the violation occurred. If the camp was not operating for the entire calendar month preceding the month in which the violation occurred, the penalty shall be five hundred dollars.

(b) Order the child day camp to initiate a criminal records check of the person who is the subject of the violation within a specified period of time.

(3) If, within the specified period of time, the child day camp fails to comply with an order to initiate a criminal records check of the person who is the subject of the violation or to release the person from the appointment or employment, the department shall do both of the following:

(a) Impose a civil penalty in an amount not less than the amount previously imposed and that shall not exceed twice the amount permitted by division (B)(2)(a) of this section;

(b) Order the child day camp to initiate a criminal records check of the person who is the subject of the violation within a specified period of time.

(C) If the department determines that a child day camp has violated division (B)(1) of this section, the department may post a notice at a prominent place at the camp that states that the camp has failed to conduct criminal records checks of its appointees or employees as required by section 2151.86 of the Revised Code. Once the camp demonstrates to the department that the camp is in compliance with that section, the department shall permit the camp to remove the notice.

(D) The department shall include on the department's web site a list of child day camps that the department has determined from a random sample to be not in compliance with the criminal records check requirements of section 2151.86 of the Revised Code. The department shall remove a camp's name from the list when the camp demonstrates to the department that the camp is in compliance with that section.

(E) For the purposes of divisions (C) and (D) of this section, a child day camp will be considered to be in compliance with section 2151.86 of the Revised Code by doing any of the following:

(1) Requesting that the bureau of criminal identification and investigation conduct a criminal records check regarding the person who is the subject of the violation of division (B)(1) of this section and, if the person does not qualify for the appointment or employment, releasing the person from the appointment or employment;

(2) Releasing the person who is the subject of the violation from the appointment or employment.

(F) The attorney general shall commence and prosecute to judgment a civil action in a court of competent jurisdiction to collect any civil penalty imposed under this section that remains unpaid.

(G) A child day camp may appeal any action the department takes under divisions (B) to (D) of this section to the court of common pleas of the county in which the camp is located.

HISTORY: 150 v H 11, § 1, eff. 5-15-05.

† This section was inadvertently repealed by § 2, 150 v H 11.

§ 2151.87 Child prohibited from possessing, using, purchasing or receiving cigarettes or other tobacco products.

(A) As used in this section:

(1) "Cigarette" and "tobacco product" have the same meanings as in section 2927.02 of the Revised Code.

(2) "Youth smoking education program" means a private or public agency program that is related to tobacco use, prevention, and cessation, that is carried out or funded by the tobacco use prevention and control foundation pursuant to section 183.07 of the Revised Code, that utilizes educational methods focusing on the negative health effects of smoking and using tobacco products, and that is not more than twelve hours in duration.

(B) No child shall do any of the following unless accompanied by a parent, spouse who is eighteen years of age or older, or legal guardian of the child:

(1) Use, consume, or possess cigarettes, other tobacco products, or papers used to roll cigarettes;

(2) Purchase or attempt to purchase cigarettes, other tobacco products, or papers used to roll cigarettes;

(3) Order, pay for, or share the cost of cigarettes, other tobacco products, or papers used to roll cigarettes;

(4) Except as provided in division (E) of this section, accept or receive cigarettes, other tobacco products, or papers used to roll cigarettes.

(C) No child shall knowingly furnish false information concerning that child's name, age, or other identification for the purpose of obtaining cigarettes, other tobacco products, or papers used to roll cigarettes.

(D) A juvenile court shall not adjudicate a child a delinquent or unruly child for a violation of division (B)(1), (2), (3), or (4) or (C) of this section.

(E)(1) It is not a violation of division (B)(4) of this section for a child to accept or receive cigarettes, other tobacco products, or papers used to roll cigarettes if the child is required to do so in the performance of the child's duties as an employee of that child's employer and the child's acceptance or receipt of cigarettes, other tobacco products, or papers used to roll cigarettes occurs exclusively within the scope of the child's employment.

(2) It is not a violation of division (B)(1), (2), (3), or (4) of this section if the child possesses, purchases or attempts to purchase, orders, pays for, shares the cost of, or accepts or receives cigarettes, other tobacco products, or papers used to roll cigarettes while participating in an inspection or compliance check conducted by a federal, state, local, or corporate entity at a location at which cigarettes, other tobacco products, or papers used to roll cigarettes are sold or distributed.

(3) It is not a violation of division (B)(1) or (4) of this section for a child to accept, receive, use, consume, or possess cigarettes, other tobacco products, or papers used to roll cigarettes while participating in a research protocol if all of the following apply:

(a) The parent, guardian, or legal custodian of the child has consented in writing to the child participating in the research protocol.

(b) An institutional human subjects protection review board, or an equivalent entity, has approved the research protocol.

(c) The child is participating in the research protocol at the facility or location specified in the research protocol.

(F) If a juvenile court finds that a child violated division (B)(1), (2), (3), or (4) or (C) of this section, the court may do either or both of the following:

(1) Require the child to attend a youth smoking education program or other smoking treatment program approved by the court, if one is available;

(2) Impose a fine of not more than one hundred dollars.

(G) If a child disobeys a juvenile court order issued pursuant to division (F) of this section, the court may do any or all of the following:

(1) Increase the fine imposed upon the child under division (F)(2) of this section;

(2) Require the child to perform not more than twenty hours of community service;

(3) Suspend for a period of thirty days the temporary instruction permit, probationary driver's license, or driver's license issued to the child.

(H) A child alleged or found to have violated division (B) or (C) of this section shall not be detained under any provision of this chapter or any other provision of the Revised Code.

Generally

RC § 2151.87(E)(2) allows a child to purchase cigarettes or other tobacco products while participating in an inspection or compliance check conducted by a federal, state, local, or corporate entity at a location at which cigarettes or other tobacco products are sold or distributed; the use of a minor to attempt to buy cigarettes is specifically permitted by that statute; such an inspection or compliance check by the appropriate authorities is not against public policy and there is no plain error in admitting the testimony of a confidential informant on this basis. State v. Stackhouse, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 1888, 2003 Ohio 1980, (2003).

§ 2151.99 Penalties.

(A)(1) Except as otherwise provided in division (A)(2) of this section, whoever violates division (D)(2) or (3) of section 2151.313 [2151.31.3] or division (A)(4),† or (H)(2) of section 2151.421 [2151.42.1] of the Revised Code is guilty of a misdemeanor of the fourth degree.

(2) Whoever violates division (A)(4) of section 2151.421 [2151.42.1] of the Revised Code knowing that a child has been abused or neglected and knowing that the person who committed the abuse or neglect was a cleric or another person, other than a volunteer, designated by a church, religious society, or faith acting as a leader, official, or delegate on behalf of the church, religious society, or faith, is guilty of a misdemeanor of the first degree if the person who violates division (A)(4) of this section and the person who committed the abuse or neglect belong to the same church, religious society, or faith.

(B) Whoever violates division (D)(1) of section 2151.313 [2151.31.3] of the Revised Code is guilty of a minor misdemeanor.

(C) Whoever violates division (A)(1) of section 2151.421 [2151.42.1] of the Revised Code shall be punished as follows:

(1) Except as otherwise provided in division (C)(2) of this section, the offender is guilty of a misdemeanor of the fourth degree.

(2) The offender is guilty of a misdemeanor of the first degree if the child who is the subject of the required report that the offender fails to make suffers or faces the threat of suffering the physical or mental wound, injury, disability, or condition that would be the basis of the required report when the child is under the direct care or supervision of the offender who is then acting in the offender's official or professional capacity or when the child is under the direct care or supervision of another person over whom the offender while acting in the offender's official or professional capacity has supervisory control.

Comment, Legislative Service Commission

Section 2151.99 of the Revised Code is amended by Sub. S.B. 137 and Am. Sub. S.B. 17 of the 126th General Assembly. Comparison of these amendments in pursuance of section 1.52 of the Revised Code discloses that they are not irreconcilable so that they are required by that section to be harmonized to give effect to each amendment.

Constitutionality

Only that class of persons capable of paying support money, but failing to do so, may be prosecuted under RC §§ 2151.42 and 2151.99; these sections are not violative of the equal protection clause of USConst amend XIV: State v. Ducey, 25 Ohio App. 2d 50, 54 Ohio Op. 2d 80, 266 N.E.2d 233 (1970).

Imprisonment imposed for a violation of RC § 2151.42, making it an offense for a person charged with the care, support, maintenance, or education of a child to fail to do so, is not imprisonment for debt and, therefore, RC §§ 2151.42 and 2151.99 are not in violation of OConst art I, § 15, prohibiting imprisonment for debt: State v. Ducey, 25 Ohio App. 2d 50, 54 Ohio Op. 2d 80, 266 N.E.2d 233 (1970).

Generally

Different statutes providing different penalties for offenses against minors will not be deemed inconsistent or in conflict with each other where the principal elements thereof are similar but are accompanied by varying circumstances aggravating or affecting the degree of such offenses: In re Cooper, 134 Ohio St. 40, 11 Ohio Op. 416, 15 N.E.2d 634 (1938), [affirming 58 Ohio App. 519.]

Sentencing

By the express terms of RC § 2151.49 the juvenile court is authorized to “suspend sentence” either before or after commitment, which is construed to mean suspension of the execution of the sentence rather than postponement of imposition of sentence: In re Keagy, 76 Ohio App. 95, 31 Ohio Op. 405, 63 N.E.2d 216 (1945).

- 2152.99 Penalty for failing to provide information to foster caregiver.

§ 2152.01 Purposes of dispositions under chapter; application of Chapter 2151.

(A) The overriding purposes for dispositions under this chapter are to provide for the care, protection, and mental and physical development of children subject to this chapter, protect the public interest and safety, hold the offender accountable for the offender's actions, restore the victim, and rehabilitate the offender. These purposes shall be achieved by a system of graduated sanctions and services.

(B) Dispositions under this chapter shall be reasonably calculated to achieve the overriding purposes set forth in this section, commensurate with and not demeaning to the seriousness of the delinquent child's or the juvenile traffic offender's conduct and its impact on the victim, and consistent with dispositions for similar acts committed by similar delinquent children and juvenile traffic offenders. The court shall not base the disposition on the race, ethnic background, gender, or religion of the delinquent child or juvenile traffic offender.

(C) To the extent they do not conflict with this chapter, the provisions of Chapter 2151. of the Revised Code apply to the proceedings under this chapter.

Generally

Juvenile court did not abuse its discretion when it committed defendant to the Ohio Department of Youth Services until his twenty-first birthday and in ordering a serious youthful offender dispositional sentence of concurrent sentences of 15 years to life for murder and two years for child endangering as: (1) the statutory sentencing procedure was followed, (2) the required finding under RC § 2152.13(D)(2)(a)(i) was made and was supported by the record, and (3) while there was testimony that defendant would benefit from the rehabilitation program, given the brutality of the crime committed against a defenseless young child, the concerns about holding defendant accountable and protecting the public were well-founded and reflected the overriding purposes for juvenile dispositions. In re J.B., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 6348, 2005 Ohio 7029, (2005), writ of certiorari denied by 127 S. Ct. 1259, 167 L. Ed. 2d 146, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 2649, 75 U.S.L.W. 3438 (U.S. 2007).

Juvenile court did not commit plain error in using the adult standard applied in light of juvenile norms to defendant juvenile's motion to determine competency where defendant had been charged as a serious youthful offender; while the serious youthful offender statutes treated juveniles as adults in many respects, the primary purposes for juvenile dispositions under RC § 2152.01(A) still applied. In re J.B., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 6348, 2005 Ohio 7029, (2005), writ of certiorari denied by 127 S. Ct. 1259, 167 L. Ed. 2d 146, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 2649, 75 U.S.L.W. 3438 (U.S. 2007).

Juvenile court did not err when it imposed a blended juvenile/adult sentence on a juvenile upon making the RC § 2152.13(D)(2)(a) findings. The Ohio Constitution does not provide a right to a jury trial in juvenile delinquency proceedings: State v. D.H., 169 Ohio App. 3d 798, 865 N.E.2d 90, 2006 Ohio 6953, (2006).

Due process

Ohio's serious youthful offender law does not violate due process as, while the scheme subjects certain juveniles to adult punishment, the statute has been crafted to take into account juvenile-adult distinctions, as: (1) the most severe adult punishments are prohibited, (2) the juvenile court can order adult punishment only after the juvenile court determines that the juvenile system alone cannot adequately fulfill the purposes for disposition outlined in RC § 2152.01(A), (3) while a juvenile as young as 10 can receive a serious youthful offender disposition, the juvenile court can only invoke the adult punishment if the juvenile is at least 14 years old, and if the juvenile has engaged in further serious wrongdoing, and (4) the court must also determine, after a hearing, that the juvenile offender is unlikely to be rehabilitated during the remaining period of juvenile jurisdiction. In re J.B., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 6348, 2005 Ohio 7029, (2005), writ of certiorari denied by 127 S. Ct. 1259, 167 L. Ed. 2d 146, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 2649, 75 U.S.L.W. 3438 (U.S. 2007).

Equal protection

Differences in the manner in which consecutive penalties are imposed in the juvenile and adult systems do not violate equal protection guarantees: In re Chappell, 164 Ohio App. 3d 628, 843 N.E.2d 823, 2005 Ohio 6451, (2005).

RC § 2152.17(F) did not violate the Equal Protection Clause or Ohio Const. art. I, § 2, even though it contained no requirement that the juvenile court provide any findings on the record to impose a consecutive term for the disposition of juveniles and trial courts were required to make certain findings before imposing consecutive prison sentences in the context of adult offenders, as RC § 2152.17(F) did not impinge a fundamental right. A rational basis existed for sentencing juveniles in a "different fashion" than adults because the purposes of felony sentencing and juvenile sentencing were different, and juvenile courts were given wider discretion in the early release of offenders. The 2002 Ohio Revised Code changes might have provided some shift of emphasis to elements of responsibility and accountability, but the primary focus remained on the development of the child. In re Z.S., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 6346, 2005 Ohio 7033, (2005).

RC § 2152.17(F) did not violate defendant's equal protection rights, even though findings similar to those required by RC § 2929.14(E)(4) when sentencing adult offenders to consecutive sentences were not required. The purposes behind the juvenile justice system and the adult justice system were different and juveniles adjudicated delinquent and adults convicted of a crime were not similarly situated groups. In re Joshua R. C., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 5610, 2005 Ohio 6248, (2005).

Polygraph

Evidence must support the use of a polygraph for a particular juvenile before it is a reasonable community control condition: In re D.S., 111 Ohio St. 3d 361, 856 N.E.2d 921, 2006 Ohio 5851, (2006).

§ 2152.02 Definitions.

Effective until 1-1-08.

As used in this chapter:

(A) "Act charged" means the act that is identified in a complaint, indictment, or information alleging that a child is a delinquent child.

(B) "Admitted to a department of youth services facility" includes admission to a facility operated, or contracted for, by the department and admission to a comparable facility outside this state by another state or the United States.

(C)(1) "Child" means a person who is under eighteen years of age, except as otherwise provided in divisions (C)(2) to (6) of this section.

(2) Subject to division (C)(3) of this section, any person who violates a federal or state law or a municipal ordinance prior to attaining eighteen years of age shall be deemed a "child" irrespective of that person's age at the time the complaint with respect to that violation is filed or the hearing on the complaint is held.

(3) Any person who, while under eighteen years of age, commits an act that would be a felony if committed by an adult and who is not taken into custody or apprehended for that act until after the person attains twenty-one years of age is not a child in relation to that act.

(4) Any person whose case is transferred for criminal prosecution pursuant to section 2152.12 of the Revised Code shall be deemed after the transfer not to be a child in the transferred case.

(5) Any person whose case is transferred for criminal prosecution pursuant to section 2152.12 of the Revised Code and who subsequently is convicted of or pleads guilty to a felony in that case, and any person who is adjudicated a delinquent child for the commission of an act, who has a serious youthful offender dispositional sentence imposed for the act pursuant to section 2152.13 of the Revised Code, and whose adult portion of the dispositional sentence is invoked pursuant to section 2152.14 of the Revised Code, shall be deemed after the transfer or invocation not to be a child in any case in which a complaint is filed against the person.

(6) The juvenile court has jurisdiction over a person who is adjudicated a delinquent child or juvenile traffic offender prior to attaining eighteen years of age until the person attains twenty-one years of age, and, for purposes of that jurisdiction related to that adjudication, a person who is so adjudicated a delinquent child or juvenile traffic offender shall be deemed a "child" until the person attains twenty-one years of age.

(D) "Chronic truant" means any child of compulsory school age who is absent without legitimate excuse for absence from the public school the child is supposed to attend for seven or more consecutive school days, ten or more school days in one school month, or fifteen or more school days in a school year.

(F) "Delinquent child" includes any of the following:

(1) Any child, except a juvenile traffic offender, who violates any law of this state or the United States, or any ordinance of a political subdivision of the state, that would be an offense if committed by an adult;

(2) Any child who violates any lawful order of the court made under this chapter or under Chapter 2151. of the Revised Code other than an order issued under section 2151.87 of the Revised Code;

(3) Any child who violates division (C) of section 2907.39 or division (A) of section 2923.211 [2923.21.1] or division (C)(1) or (D) of section 2925.55 of the Revised Code;

(4) Any child who is a habitual truant and who previously has been adjudicated an unruly child for being a habitual truant;

(5) Any child who is a chronic truant.

(G) "Discretionary serious youthful offender" means a person who is eligible for a discretionary SYO and who is not transferred to adult court under a mandatory or discretionary transfer.

(H) "Discretionary SYO" means a case in which the juvenile court, in the juvenile court's discretion, may impose a serious youthful offender disposition under section 2152.13 of the Revised Code.

(I) "Discretionary transfer" means that the juvenile court has discretion to transfer a case for criminal prosecution under division (B) of section 2152.12 of the Revised Code.

(J) "Drug abuse offense," "felony drug abuse offense," and "minor drug possession offense" have the same meanings as in section 2925.01 of the Revised Code.

(K) "Electronic monitoring" and "electronic monitoring device" have the same meanings as in section 2929.01 of the Revised Code.

(L) "Economic loss" means any economic detriment suffered by a victim of a delinquent act or juvenile traffic offense as a direct and proximate result of the delinquent act or juvenile traffic offense and includes any loss of income due to lost time at work because of any injury caused to the victim and any property loss, medical cost, or funeral expense incurred as a result of the delinquent act or juvenile traffic offense. "Economic loss" does not include non-economic loss or any punitive or exemplary damages.

(M) "Firearm" has the same meaning as in section 2923.11 of the Revised Code.

(N) "Juvenile traffic offender" means any child who violates any traffic law, traffic ordinance, or traffic regulation of this state, the United States, or any political subdivision of this state, other than a resolution, ordinance, or regulation of a political subdivision of this state the violation of which is required to be handled by a parking violations bureau or a joint parking violations bureau pursuant to Chapter 4521. of the Revised Code.

(O) A "legitimate excuse for absence from the public school the child is supposed to attend" has the same meaning as in section 2151.011 [2151.01.1] of the Revised Code.

(P) "Mandatory serious youthful offender" means a person who is eligible for a mandatory SYO and who is not transferred to adult court under a mandatory or discretionary transfer.

(Q) "Mandatory SYO" means a case in which the juvenile court is required to impose a mandatory serious youthful offender disposition under section 2152.13 of the Revised Code.

(R) "Mandatory transfer" means that a case is required to be transferred for criminal prosecution under division (A) of section 2152.12 of the Revised Code.

(S) "Mental illness" has the same meaning as in section 5122.01 of the Revised Code.

(T) "Mentally retarded person" has the same meaning as in section 5123.01 of the Revised Code.

(F) "Delinquent child" includes any of the following:

(1) Any child, except a juvenile traffic offender, who violates any law of this state or the United States, or any ordinance of a political subdivision of the state, that would be an offense if committed by an adult;

(2) Any child who violates any lawful order of the court made under this chapter or under Chapter 2151. of the Revised Code other than an order issued under section 2151.87 of the Revised Code;

(3) Any child who violates division (C) of section 2907.39, division (A) of section 2923.211 [2923.21.1], or division (C)(1) or (D) of section 2925.55 of the Revised Code;

(4) Any child who is a habitual truant and who previously has been adjudicated an unruly child for being a habitual truant;

(5) Any child who is a chronic truant.

(G) "Discretionary serious youthful offender" means a person who is eligible for a discretionary SYO and who is not transferred to adult court under a mandatory or discretionary transfer.

(H) "Discretionary SYO" means a case in which the juvenile court, in the juvenile court's discretion, may impose a serious youthful offender disposition under section 2152.13 of the Revised Code.

(I) "Discretionary transfer" means that the juvenile court has discretion to transfer a case for criminal prosecution under division (B) of section 2152.12 of the Revised Code.

(J) "Drug abuse offense," "felony drug abuse offense," and "minor drug possession offense" have the same meanings as in section 2925.01 of the Revised Code.

(K) "Electronic monitoring" and "electronic monitoring device" have the same meanings as in section 2929.01 of the Revised Code.

(L) "Economic loss" means any economic detriment suffered by a victim of a delinquent act or juvenile traffic offense as a direct and proximate result of the delinquent act or juvenile traffic offense and includes any loss of income due to lost time at work because of any injury caused to the victim and any property loss, medical cost, or funeral expense incurred as a result of the delinquent act or juvenile traffic offense. "Economic loss" does not include non-economic loss or any punitive or exemplary damages.

(M) "Firearm" has the same meaning as in section 2923.11 of the Revised Code.

(N) "Juvenile traffic offender" means any child who violates any traffic law, traffic ordinance, or traffic regulation of this state, the United States, or any political subdivision of this state, other than a resolution, ordinance, or regulation of a political subdivision of this state the violation of which is required to be handled by a parking violations bureau or a joint parking violations bureau pursuant to Chapter 4521. of the Revised Code.

(O) A "legitimate excuse for absence from the public school the child is supposed to attend" has the same meaning as in section 2151.011 [2151.01.1] of the Revised Code.

(P) "Mandatory serious youthful offender" means a person who is eligible for a mandatory SYO and who is not transferred to adult court under a mandatory or discretionary transfer.

(Q) "Mandatory SYO" means a case in which the juvenile court is required to impose a mandatory serious youthful offender disposition under section 2152.13 of the Revised Code.

(R) "Mandatory transfer" means that a case is required to be transferred for criminal prosecution under division (A) of section 2152.12 of the Revised Code.

(S) "Mental illness" has the same meaning as in section 5122.01 of the Revised Code.

(T) "Mentally retarded person" has the same meaning as in section 5123.01 of the Revised Code.

(U) "Monitored time" and "repeat violent offender" have the same meanings as in section 2929.01 of the Revised Code.

(V) "Of compulsory school age" has the same meaning as in section 3321.01 of the Revised Code.

(W) "Public record" has the same meaning as in section 149.43 of the Revised Code.

(X) "Serious youthful offender" means a person who is eligible for a mandatory SYO or discretionary SYO but who is not transferred to adult court under a mandatory or discretionary transfer.

(Y) "Sexually oriented offense," "juvenile offender registrant," "child-victim oriented offense," "tier I sex offender/child-victim offender," "tier II sex offender/child-victim offender," "tier III sex offender/child-victim offender," and "public registry-qualified juvenile offender registrant" have the same meanings as in section 2950.01 of the Revised Code.

(Z) "Traditional juvenile" means a case that is not transferred to adult court under a mandatory or discretionary transfer, that is eligible for a disposition under sections 2152.16, 2152.17, 2152.19, and 2152.20 of the Revised Code, and that is not eligible for a disposition under section 2152.13 of the Revised Code.

(AA) "Transfer" means the transfer for criminal prosecution of a case involving the alleged commission by a child of an act that would be an offense if committed by an adult from the juvenile court to the appropriate court that has jurisdiction of the offense.

(BB) "Category one offense" means any of the following:

(1) A violation of section 2903.01 or 2903.02 of the Revised Code;

(2) A violation of section 2923.02 of the Revised Code involving an attempt to commit aggravated murder or murder.

(CC) "Category two offense" means any of the following:

(1) A violation of section 2903.03, 2905.01, 2907.02, 2909.02, 2911.01, or 2911.11 of the Revised Code;

(2) A violation of section 2903.04 of the Revised Code that is a felony of the first degree;

(3) A violation of section 2907.12 of the Revised Code as it existed prior to September 3, 1996.

(DD) "Non-economic loss" means nonpecuniary harm suffered by a victim of a delinquent act or juvenile traffic offense as a result of or related to the delinquent act or juvenile traffic offense, including, but not limited to, pain and suffering; loss of society, consortium, companionship, care, assistance, attention, protection, advice, guidance, counsel, instruction, training, or education; mental anguish; and any other intangible loss.

HISTORY: 148 v S 179, § 3 (Eff 1-1-2002); 149 v S 3 (Eff 1-1-2002); 149 v H 400, Eff 4-3-2003; 149 v H 490, § 1, eff. 1-1-04; 150 v S 5, § 1, eff. 7-31-03; 150 v S 5, § 3, eff. 1-1-04; 150 v H 52, § 1, eff. 6-1-04; 151 v S 53, § 1, eff. 5-17-06; 151 v H 23, § 1, eff. 8-17-06; 152 v S 10, § 1, eff. 1-1-08.

The effective date is set by § 3 of 152 v S 10.

The effective date is set by section 5 of S.B. 5.

The provisions of section 7 of S.B. 5 (150 v —) read as follows:

SECTION 7. * * * (B) Section 2152.02 of the Revised Code, effective January 1, 2004, is presented in Section 3 of this act as a composite of the section as amended by both Am. Sub. H.B. 400 and Am. Sub. H.B. 490 of the 124th General Assembly. The General Assembly, applying the principle stated in division (B) of section 1.52 of the Revised Code that amendments are to be harmonized if reasonably capable of simultaneous operation, finds that the composites are the resulting versions of the sections in effect prior to the effective date of the sections as presented in Section 3 of this act.

Effect of Amendments

152 v S 10, effective January 1, 2008, rewrote (Y); and made minor stylistic changes.

151 v H 23, effective August 17, 2006, in (F)(3), inserted "division (C) of section 2907.39 or".

151 v S 53, effective May 17, 2006, in (F)(3), inserted "or division (C)(1) or (D) of section 2925.55".

150 v H 52, effective June 1, 2004, in (L), inserted "or juvenile traffic offense" three times and "direct and proximate" once, and added the last sentence; and added (DD).

Section 1, S.B. 5, Acts 2003, effective July 31, 2003, and section 3 of S.B. 5, effective January 1, 2004, made identical changes. Each rewrote (Y).

H.B. 490, Acts 2002, effective January 1, 2004, rewrote (K).

Comment, Legislative Service Commission

Section 2152.02 of the Revised Code is amended by Am. Sub. H.B. 23 and Am. Sub. S.B. 53 of the 126th General Assembly. Comparison of these amendments in pursuance of section 1.52 of the Revised Code discloses that they are not irreconcilable so that they are required by that section to be harmonized to give effect to each amendment.

Constitutionality

Differing treatment for juveniles and adult offenders does not necessarily violate equal protection: In re Gillespie, 150 Ohio App. 3d 502, 782 N.E.2d 140, 2002 Ohio 7025, (2002), appeal denied by 98 Ohio St. 3d 1513, 2003 Ohio 1572, 786 N.E.2d 63, 2003 Ohio LEXIS 842 (2003).

Appeal

Revised Code § 2501.02 grants the courts of appeals jurisdiction over appeals from juvenile court judgments and final orders rendered in juvenile traffic offender proceedings: (decided under former analogous section) In re Hartman, 2 Ohio St. 3d 154, 2 Ohio B. 699, 443 N.E.2d 516 (1983).

Bindover for prosecution

Where defendant, age 16, was charged in the juvenile division with aggravated robbery involving use of a deadly weapon in violation of RC § 2911.01(A)(1), the juvenile court properly bound defendant over to the general division for trial. Transfer was required pursuant to RC §§ 2152.10(A), .12(A)(1)(b), as aggravated robbery was a category two offense under RC § 2152.02(CC)(1) for which probable cause was properly found. State v. Washington, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 5902, 2005 Ohio 6546, (2005).

Delinquent child, generally

Juvenile's adjudication as a delinquent under RC § 2152.02(F)(1), based on a finding that if he was an adult he would have committed the crime of felonious assault, in violation of RC § 2903.11, was supported by the weight and the sufficiency of the evidence, as the juvenile had engaged in a pushing match with the victim which resulted in the victim falling off of a raised deck and sustaining "serious physical harm" pursuant to RC § 2901.01(5) to his back, and the juvenile engaged in the conduct knowingly pursuant to RC § 2901.22(B). Although there were conflicting versions of the incident, there was no "serious provocation" that warranted a finding of the lesser degree offense of aggravated assault in violation of RC § 2903.12, as the juvenile had choices besides continuing the pushing match with the victim and he admitted that he was aware of the risks of injury if one of the participants fell from the raised deck. In re Shane L. F., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3825, 2006 Ohio 3876, (2006).

Where a 17-year-old juvenile committed an act which, if committed by an adult, would have constituted underage drinking in violation of RC § 4301.69(E), such supported an adjudication that the juvenile was a delinquent pursuant to RC § 2152.02(F)(1); the underage drinking crime was not only applicable to a minor, as it included an adult who was 18, 19, or 20 years old. In re Shane L. F., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 3825, 2006 Ohio 3876, (2006).

Trial court's adjudication of defendant as a delinquent child for theft of a gun, under RC § 2913.02(A)(1), with a firearm specification, pursuant to RC § 2941.141, and violation of probation, unmanageable, under RC § 2152.02, were supported by sufficient evidence. The codefendants testified that they, along with defendant, stole items from the victim's house, including a gun, some jewelry, and electronic equipment, with the help of the victim's daughters and defendant stipulated to the fact that he was on probation for purposes of the violation of probation, unmanageable charge. In re R.T., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1199, 2006 Ohio 1311, (2006).

Where a three-year-old victim got on top of her sister and started "pumping" her, and she explained to various adults that defendant had engaged in sexual conduct with her, which she described in detail, there was sufficient evidence to support defendant's adjudication as a delinquent, as that was defined in RC § 2152.02(F), based on rape of a minor child under the age of 13 years, in violation of RC § 2907.02(A)(1)(b). In re D.L., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2215, 2005 Ohio 2320, (2005).

Defendant's adjudication as a delinquent child pursuant to RC § 2952.02(F)(1) for underage consumption of alcohol was upheld where such finding was supported by sufficient evidence; though evidence was contradictory as to defendant's alcohol consumption, the testimony of a witness that defendant had consumed at least two shots of Jack Daniels whiskey at a party and the fact that the blood alcohol test indicated defendant had .016 grams of alcohol per 210 liters of breath supported the delinquency adjudication. In re Vanhesteren, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1969, 2004 Ohio 2220, (2004).

The evidence did not show that the juvenile acted with the required degree of culpability to find a violation of RC § 2909.05 where she slammed a door and a glass panel broke: (decided under former analogous section) In re Hinton, 84 Ohio App. 3d 156, 616 N.E.2d 558 (1992).

A "delinquent child" is a child whose conduct would constitute a violation of any criminal law statute: (decided under former analogous section) In re Burgess, 13 Ohio App. 3d 374, 13 Ohio B. 456, 469 N.E.2d 914 (1984).

The violation of RC § 2903.07, vehicular homicide, when committed by a juvenile is an act of delinquency, not a juvenile traffic offense: (decided under former analogous section) In re Fox, 60 Ohio Misc. 31, 14 Ohio Op. 3d 80, 395 N.E.2d 918 (JC 1979).

A juvenile who aids the police in apprehending a drug seller by purchasing an hallucinogen commits no crime and cannot be adjudged a delinquent, nor does the police officer contribute to the delinquency of a minor: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Suchy, 31 Ohio Misc. 265, 58 Ohio Op. 2d 376, 277 N.E.2d 459 (CP 1971).

Proof of possession, use, or control by a juvenile of an hallucinogen is sufficient evidence upon which a Juvenile Court can find such juvenile a delinquent under Chapter 2151. of the Revised Code: (decided under former analogous section) In re Baker, 18 Ohio App. 2d 276, 47 Ohio Op. 2d 411, 248 N.E.2d 620 (1969).

Delinquency has not been declared a crime in Ohio and the Ohio juvenile act is neither criminal nor penal in its nature, but is an administrative police regulation of a corrective character. Proceedings instituted in a juvenile court are not criminal in nature nor are they conducted with the objective of convicting a minor of a crime and punishing him, therefore; they are informal hearings through a medium of the juvenile court to determine whether the child needs intervention of the state as guardian and protector of his person: (decided under former analogous section) In re L., Jr., 92 Ohio L. Ab. 475 (JC 1963).

Ordinarily, a minor child does not commit any act of delinquency so long as he or she acts under and in accordance with instructions of duly constituted law enforcement officers who are acting within the course of their duties as such: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Miclau, 167 Ohio St. 38, 4 Ohio Op. 2d 6, 146 N.E.2d 293 (1957).

No violation of law is involved in the purchase of beer, and a minor by making such a purchase, does not by reason of such purchase become a delinquent child within the meaning of the provisions of subdivision 1 of § 1639-2, General Code: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Zaras, 81 Ohio App. 152, 36 Ohio Op. 460, 78 N.E.2d 74 (1947).

Insurance

Criminal acts exclusion in homeowner's policy barred coverage for wrongful death action where insureds' son was adjudicated delinquent notwithstanding the fact that an adjudication of delinquency is not a criminal conviction: (decided under former analogous section) Allstate Ins. Co. v. Cutcher, 920 F. Supp. 796 (S.D. 1996).

Jurisdiction after age 18

Pursuant to Ohio's statutory scheme, a juvenile adjudicated delinquent prior to age 18 remains a child in the eyes of the juvenile court until age 21. The juvenile court's exercise of its continuing jurisdiction regarding the parole violation was lawful: In re Gillespie, 150 Ohio App. 3d 502, 782 N.E.2d 140, 2002 Ohio 7025, (2002), appeal denied by 98 Ohio St. 3d 1513, 2003 Ohio 1572, 786 N.E.2d 63, 2003 Ohio LEXIS 842 (2003).

Under former RC § 2151.01.1, a child could have reached eighteen at the time of disposition, but still be deemed a child: In re Hennessey, 146 Ohio App. 3d 743, 768 N.E.2d 663, 2001 Ohio 2267, (2001).

Jurisdiction generally

Juvenile court's subject matter jurisdiction in a juvenile delinquency case was established under RC §§ 2151.23(A)(1), 2151.011(B)(5), and 2152.02(F)(1) because the complaint alleged appellant was a delinquent child. In re C.W., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3579, 2005 Ohio 3905, (2005).

In the sense that violation of law by a minor constitutes delinquency, as defined in GC § 1644, the juvenile court has jurisdiction of any crime committed by an infant: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Klingenberg, 113 Ohio St. 418, 149 N.E. 395 (1925).

Juvenile traffic offenders

When the complaint charges the child with being "delinquent," the court cannot sua sponte amend the complaint after the adjudicatory hearing and find the child to be a "juvenile traffic offender": (decided under former analogous section) In re Elliott, 87 Ohio App. 3d 816, 623 N.E.2d 217 (1993).

A complaint alleging a child to be a juvenile traffic offender is neither a criminal nor a civil proceeding: (decided under former analogous section) In re C, 43 Ohio Misc. 98, 72 Ohio Op. 2d 421, 334 N.E.2d 545 (CP 1975).

Marriage of minor

Where the parents of a female person under 16 years of age actively participate in enabling such person to enter into a marriage relationship, such participation constitutes acts tending to cause the child to become a "delinquent child" as defined by RC § 2151.02, and the parents "act in a way tending to cause delinquency in such child": (decided under former analogous section) State v. Gans, 168 Ohio St. 174, 5 Ohio Op. 2d 472, 151 N.E.2d 709 (1958).

Runaways

In accordance with RC § 5119.64, et seq., juvenile runaways who are apprehended by law enforcement officials may not be placed in juvenile detention facilities even though suitable shelter is unavailable. However, if such a youth is determined to be a delinquent child as defined in RC § 2151.02, an unruly child as defined in RC § 2151.02.2, or a juvenile traffic offender as defined in RC § 2151.02.1, he may be processed through the juvenile justice system and placed in a juvenile detention facility. A law enforcement official may hold a runaway juvenile against his will, provided his detention or care is required to protect the person or property of others or those of the child, or because the child may abscond or be removed from the jurisdiction of the court, or because he has no parents, guardian or custodian or other person able to provide supervision and care for him: (decided under former analogous section) OAG No. 77-063 (1977).

In accordance with RC § 5119.64, et seq., juvenile runaways who are apprehended by law enforcement officials may not be placed in juvenile detention facilities even though suitable shelter is unavailable. However, if such a youth is determined to be a delinquent child as defined in RC § 2151.02, an unruly child as defined in RC § 2151.02.2, or a juvenile traffic offender as defined in RC § 2151.02.1, he may be processed through the juvenile justice system and placed in a juvenile detention facility. A law enforcement official may hold a runaway juvenile against his will, provided his detention or care is required to protect the person or property of others or those of the child, or because the child may abscond or be removed from the jurisdiction of the court, or because he has no parents, guardian or custodian or other person able to provide supervision and care for him: (decided under former analogous section) OAG No. 77-063 (1977).

Time limits

The time limits of RC § 2945.71 et seq., for the prosecution of criminal offenders do not apply to an adjudicatory hearing on a complaint alleging a child to be a juvenile traffic offender. The only applicable time limit, outside JuvR 29, is the six months limitation for prosecution of a minor misdemeanor stated in RC § 2901.13(A)(3): (decided under former analogous section) In re TLK, 2 Ohio Op. 3d 324 (CP 1976).

Unruly child

Where a juvenile was charged with delinquency, the court did not err by finding that unruliness was a lesser included offense and then amending the complaint accordingly: (decided under former analogous section) In re Felton, 124 Ohio App. 3d 500, 706 N.E.2d 809 (1997).

[§ 2152.02.1] § 2152.021 Complaint alleging that child is delinquent child or juvenile traffic offender; initiation of serious youthful offender proceedings.

(A)(1) Subject to division (A)(2) of this section, any person having knowledge of a child who appears to be a juvenile traffic offender or to be a delinquent child may file a sworn complaint with respect to that child in the juvenile court of the county in which the child has a residence or legal settlement or in which the traffic offense or delinquent act allegedly occurred. The sworn complaint may be upon information and belief, and, in addition to the allegation that the child is a delinquent child or a juvenile traffic offender, the complaint shall allege the particular facts upon which the allegation that the child is a delinquent child or a juvenile traffic offender is based.

If a child appears to be a delinquent child who is eligible for a serious youthful offender dispositional sentence under section 2152.11 of the Revised Code and if the prosecuting attorney desires to seek a serious youthful offender dispositional sentence under section 2152.13 of the Revised Code in regard to the child, the prosecuting attorney of the county in which the alleged delinquency occurs may initiate a case in the juvenile court of the county by presenting the case to a grand jury for indictment, by charging the child in a bill of information as a serious youthful offender pursuant to section 2152.13 of the Revised Code, by requesting a serious youthful offender dispositional sentence in the original complaint alleging that the child is a delinquent child, or by filing with the juvenile court a written notice of intent to seek a serious youthful offender dispositional sentence.

(2) Any person having knowledge of a child who appears to be a delinquent child for being an habitual or chronic truant may file a sworn complaint with respect to that child and the parent, guardian, or other person having care of the child in the juvenile court of the county in which the child has a residence or legal settlement or in which the child is supposed to attend public school. The sworn complaint may be upon information and belief and shall contain the following allegations:

(a) That the child is a delinquent child for being a chronic truant or an habitual truant who previously has been adjudicated an unruly child for being a habitual truant and, in addition, the particular facts upon which that allegation is based;

(b) That the parent, guardian, or other person having care of the child has failed to cause the child's attendance at school in violation of section 3321.38 of the Revised Code and, in addition, the particular facts upon which that allegation is based.

(B) Any person with standing under applicable law may file a complaint for the determination of any other matter over which the juvenile court is given jurisdiction by section 2151.23 of the Revised Code. The complaint shall be filed in the county in which the child who is the subject of the complaint is found or was last known to be found.

(C) Within ten days after the filing of a complaint or the issuance of an indictment, the court shall give written notice of the filing of the complaint or the issuance of an indictment and of the substance of the complaint or indictment to the superintendent of a city, local, exempted village, or joint vocational school district if the complaint or indictment alleges that a child committed an act that would be a criminal offense if committed by an adult, that the child was sixteen years of age or older at the time of the commission of the alleged act, and that the alleged act is any of the following:

(1) A violation of section 2923.122 [2923.12.2] of the Revised Code that relates to property owned or controlled by, or to an activity held under the auspices of, the board of education of that school district;

(2) A violation of section 2923.12 of the Revised Code, of a substantially similar municipal ordinance, or of section 2925.03 of the Revised Code that was committed on property owned or controlled by, or at an activity held under the auspices of, the board of education of that school district;

(3) A violation of section 2925.11 of the Revised Code that was committed on property owned or controlled by, or at an activity held under the auspices of, the board of education of that school district, other than a violation of that section that would be a minor drug possession offense if committed by an adult;

(4) A violation of section 2903.01, 2903.02, 2903.03, 2903.04, 2903.11, 2903.12, 2907.02, or 2907.05 of the Revised Code, or a violation of former section 2907.12 of the Revised Code, that was committed on property owned or controlled by, or at an activity held under the auspices of, the board of education of that school district, if the victim at the time of the commission of the alleged act was an employee of the board of education of that school district;

(5) Complicity in any violation described in division (C)(1), (2), (3), or (4) of this section that was alleged to have been committed in the manner described in division

(C)(1), (2), (3), or (4) of this section, regardless of whether the act of complicity was committed on property owned or controlled by, or at an activity held under the auspices of, the board of education of that school district.

(D) A public children services agency, acting pursuant to a complaint or an action on a complaint filed under this section, is not subject to the requirements of section 3127.23 of the Revised Code.

(E) For purposes of the record to be maintained by the clerk under division (B) of section 2152.71 of the Revised Code, when a complaint is filed that alleges that a child is a delinquent child, the court shall determine if the victim of the alleged delinquent act was sixty-five years of age or older or permanently and totally disabled at the time of the alleged commission of the act.

Complaint, generally

A delinquency complaint is sufficient under JuvR 10(B) to state a charge of complicity when it alleges that the juvenile knowingly aided another to commit robbery in violation of RC § 2923.03: (decided under former analogous section) In re Howard, 31 Ohio App. 3d 1, 31 Ohio B. 14, 508 N.E.2d 190 (1987).

Due process

Ohio's serious youthful offender law does not violate due process as, while the scheme subjects certain juveniles to adult punishment, the statute has been crafted to take into account juvenile-adult distinctions, as: (1) the most severe adult punishments are prohibited, (2) the juvenile court can order adult punishment only after the juvenile court determines that the juvenile system alone cannot adequately fulfill the purposes for disposition outlined in RC § 2152.01(A), (3) while a juvenile as young as 10 can receive a serious youthful offender disposition, the juvenile court can only invoke the adult punishment if the juvenile is at least 14 years old, and if the juvenile has engaged in further serious wrongdoing, and (4) the court must also determine, after a hearing, that the juvenile offender is unlikely to be rehabilitated during the remaining period of juvenile jurisdiction. In re J.B., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 6348, 2005 Ohio 7029, (2005), writ of certiorari denied by 127 S. Ct. 1259, 167 L. Ed. 2d 146, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 2649, 75 U.S.L.W. 3438 (U.S. 2007).

Motion to dismiss indictment

§§ 2152.021 or 2152.13 prohibits a prosecutor from initiating serious youthful offender proceedings via an indictment when a complaint has previously been filed. In re J.B., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 6348, 2005 Ohio 7029, (2005), writ of certiorari denied by 127 S. Ct. 1259, 167 L. Ed. 2d 146, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 2649, 75 U.S.L.W. 3438 (U.S. 2007).

§ 2152.03 Case to be initiated in or transferred to juvenile court.

When a child is arrested under any charge, complaint, affidavit, or indictment for a felony or a misdemeanor, proceedings regarding the child initially shall be in the juvenile court in accordance with this chapter. If the child is taken before a judge of a county court, a mayor, a judge of a municipal court, or a judge of a court of common pleas other than a juvenile court, the judge of the county court, mayor, judge of the municipal court, or judge of the court of common pleas shall transfer the case to the juvenile court, and, upon the transfer, the proceedings shall be in accordance with this chapter. Upon the transfer, all further proceedings under the charge, complaint, information, or indictment shall be discontinued in the court of the judge of the county court, mayor, municipal judge, or judge of the court of common pleas other than a juvenile court subject to section 2152.12 of the Revised Code. The case relating to the child then shall be within the exclusive jurisdiction of the juvenile court, subject to section 2152.12 of the Revised Code.

Appeal

A common pleas court order transferring proceedings involving an unruly minor to a juvenile court of another county is not a final appealable order where the transferee court has not yet accepted or rejected jurisdiction. A temporary custody order is not a final order: (decided under former analogous section) In re Devlin, 78 Ohio App. 3d 543, 605 N.E.2d 467 (1992).

Applicability

The provisions of this section contemplate only a situation where a juvenile is actually charged with a crime. It does not apply nor would it be practicable to apply it to every juvenile picked up for interrogation by the authorities: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Carder, 9 Ohio St. 2d 1, 38 Ohio Op. 2d 1, 222 N.E.2d 620 (1966).

Arrest out-of-state

A minor who went to California to avoid arrest, after committing a murder in Ohio, was arrested in California, brought back to Ohio by Ohio officers pursuant to instructions from the juvenile court judge of Los Angeles county, and taken to the juvenile detention home, cannot complain that he was not taken directly before the juvenile court upon arrest, as required by RC § 2151.25 and not taken immediately to the place of detention upon being taken into custody, as required by RC § 2151.31: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Stewart, 176 Ohio St. 156, 158, 27 Ohio Op. 2d 42, 198 N.E.2d 439 (1964).

Confession

A voluntary confession to the perpetration of murder obtained from a 16-3/4 year old high school junior, which confession was made before indictment, and while the accused was detained for investigation, is admissible in evidence (1) where the accused had been allowed to consult with an attorney prior to being questioned; (2) where the accused first was advised that he did not have to talk; (3) where the accused when told that his parents and another attorney were there and waiting to see him stated that he did not want to see them; and (4) where there is no showing that the confession was obtained by inquisitorial processes: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Carder, 3 Ohio App. 2d 381, 32 Ohio Op. 2d 524, 210 N.E.2d 714 (1965).

A voluntary confession to the perpetration of murder, obtained from a seventeen-year-old high school senior, which confession was made before indictment on said charge and while the accused was under arrest for a misdemeanor, is admissible in evidence (1) where the accused was first advised that "he would not be compelled to give a statement... if he wanted to give a statement it would be by his own free will and that statement would be used for or against him in court"; (2) where the accused was further advised that "he could secure the services of an attorney"; and (3) where there is no showing that the confession was obtained by inquisitorial processes, without the procedural safeguards of due process, and by such compulsion that the confession is irreconcilable with the possession of mental freedom: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Stewart, 120 Ohio App. 199, 29 Ohio Op. 2d 4, 201 N.E.2d 793 (1963).

Extradition

A person, who may be a child under eighteen years of age, charged with a crime in this state and who fled to another state, may be returned to this state upon requisition of the governor, as provided in GC §§ 109-1 to 109-31 (RC §§ 2963.01 to 2963.27). Upon the return of such person, if he was a child at the time the crime was committed, he should be taken before the juvenile judge or, if taken before any other court, such other court is required to transfer the case to the juvenile judge: (decided under former analogous section) 1945 OAG No. 395 (1945).

Jurisdiction

Absent a proper bindover procedure pursuant to RC § 2151.26, the juvenile court has the exclusive subject matter jurisdiction over any case concerning a child who is alleged to be a delinquent. The exclusive subject matter jurisdiction of the juvenile court cannot be waived: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Wilson, 73 Ohio St. 3d 40, 652 N.E.2d 196, 1995 Ohio 217, (1995).

Unless a child has been transferred from the juvenile court, a court of common pleas does not have jurisdiction over a person under 18. A court of common pleas has jurisdiction to determine defendant's age at a hearing. The state has the burden of proving beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant was an adult at the time of the offense: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Neguse, 71 Ohio App. 3d 596, 594 N.E.2d 1116 (1991).

A 22-year-old can waive jurisdiction of the juvenile court over an offense committed when he was 17: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Tillman, 66 Ohio App. 3d 464, 585 N.E.2d 550 (1990).

The juvenile and general divisions of a court of common pleas possess concurrent jurisdiction over a juvenile accused of a crime, and the juvenile division has not been divested of personal jurisdiction over one whose disposition is returned to it after the accused initially waived his right to be judged in that tribunal:

(decided under former analogous section) State ex rel. Leis v. Black, 45 Ohio App. 2d 191, 74 Ohio Op. 2d 270 (1975).

A juvenile who submits without challenge to the jurisdiction of a municipal court cannot thereafter secure release in a habeas corpus action on the ground that the judgment and sentence of the municipal court is void for want of jurisdiction: (decided under former analogous section) Hemphill v. Johnson, 31 Ohio App. 2d 241, 60 Ohio Op. 2d 404, 287 N.E.2d 828 (1972).

The procedure required by this section applies to fact situations in which the minority is discovered or disclosed prior to the hearing or trial: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Peterson, 9 Ohio Misc. 154, 38 Ohio Op. 2d 220, 223 N.E.2d 838 (MC 1966).

A juvenile like other individuals can waive his rights and where the minor charged with a felony does not object to the jurisdiction of the court of common pleas on the ground of his minority by raising that question before the trial court, he has lost his right to object after sentence by that court: (decided under former analogous section) Mellott v. Alvis, 109 Ohio App. 486, 12 Ohio Op. 2d 23, 162 N.E.2d 623 (1959).

The juvenile court does not have exclusive jurisdiction over a criminal matter involving a minor until the case is transferred to such court: (decided under former analogous section) Harris v. Alvis, 61 Ohio L. Ab. 311, 104 N.E.2d 182 (App 1950).

§ 2152.04 Confinement of delinquent child for purposes of preparing social history.

A child who is alleged to be, or who is adjudicated, a delinquent child may be confined in a place of juvenile detention provided under section 2152.41 of the Revised Code for a period not to exceed ninety days, during which time a social history may be prepared to include court record, family history, personal history, school and attendance records, and any other pertinent studies and material that will be of assistance to the juvenile court in its disposition of the charges against that alleged or adjudicated delinquent child.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

Length of detention

The fact that the maximum sentence under the criminal law for negligent assault was sixty days did not mean that a juvenile could be placed in detention for only sixty days: In re Tiber, 154 Ohio App. 3d 360, 797 N.E.2d 161, 2003 Ohio 5155, (2003).

§ 2152.10 Children eligible for mandatory or discretionary transfer; order of disposition when child not transferred.

(A) A child who is alleged to be a delinquent child is eligible for mandatory transfer and shall be transferred as provided in section 2152.12 of the Revised Code in any of the following circumstances:

(1) The child is charged with a category one offense and either of the following apply:

(a) The child was sixteen years of age or older at the time of the act charged.

(b) The child was fourteen or fifteen years of age at the time of the act charged and previously was adjudicated a delinquent child for committing an act that is a category one or category two offense and was committed to the legal custody of the department of youth services upon the basis of that adjudication.

(2) The child is charged with a category two offense, other than a violation of section 2905.01 of the Revised Code, the child was sixteen years of age or older at the time of the commission of the act charged, and either or both of the following apply:

(a) The child previously was adjudicated a delinquent child for committing an act that is a category one or a category two offense and was committed to the legal custody of the department of youth services on the basis of that adjudication.

(b) The child is alleged to have had a firearm on or about the child's person or under the child's control while committing the act charged and to have displayed the firearm, brandished the firearm, indicated possession of the firearm, or used the firearm to facilitate the commission of the act charged.

(3) Division (A)(2) of section 2152.12 of the Revised Code applies.

(B) Unless the child is subject to mandatory transfer, if a child is fourteen years of age or older at the time of the act charged and if the child is charged with an act that would be a felony if committed by an adult, the child is eligible for discretionary transfer to the appropriate court for criminal prosecution. In determining whether to transfer the child for criminal prosecution, the juvenile court shall follow the procedures in section 2152.12 of the Revised Code. If the court does not transfer the child and if the court adjudicates the child to be a delinquent child for the act charged, the court shall issue an order of disposition in accordance with section 2152.11 of the Revised Code.

Discretionary transfer
Mandatory transfer

Discretionary transfer

Juvenile court abused its discretion by overruling the state's motions to relinquish jurisdiction without considering whether a discretionary transfer was warranted: In re Stanley, 165 Ohio App. 3d 726, 848 N.E.2d 540, 2006 Ohio 1279, (2006).

Mandatory transfer

Where defendant, age 16, was charged in the juvenile division with aggravated robbery involving use of a deadly weapon in violation of RC § 2911.01(A)(1), the juvenile court properly bound defendant over to the general division for trial. Transfer was required pursuant to RC §§ 2152.10(A), .12(A)(1)(b), as aggravated robbery was a category two offense under RC § 2152.02(CC)(1) for which probable cause was properly found. State v. Washington, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 5902, 2005 Ohio 6546, (2005).

§ 2152.11 Range of dispositions of child adjudicated to be delinquent.

(A) A child who is adjudicated a delinquent child for committing an act that would be a felony if committed by an adult is eligible for a particular type of disposition under this section if the child was not transferred under section 2152.12 of the Revised Code. If the complaint, indictment, or information charging the act includes one or more of the following factors, the act is considered to be enhanced, and the child is eligible for a more restrictive disposition under this section:

(1) The act charged against the child would be an offense of violence if committed by an adult.

(2) During the commission of the act charged, the child used a firearm, displayed a firearm, brandished a firearm, or indicated that the child possessed a firearm and actually possessed a firearm.

(3) The child previously was admitted to a department of youth services facility for the commission of an act that would have been aggravated murder, murder, a felony of the first or second degree if committed by an adult, or an act that would have been a felony of the third degree and an offense of violence if committed by an adult.

(B) If a child is adjudicated a delinquent child for committing an act that would be aggravated murder or murder if committed by an adult, the child is eligible for whichever of the following is appropriate:

(1) Mandatory SYO, if the act allegedly was committed when the child was fourteen or fifteen years of age;

(2) Discretionary SYO, if the act was committed when the child was ten, eleven, twelve, or thirteen years of age;

(3) Traditional juvenile, if divisions (B)(1) and (2) of this section do not apply.

(C) If a child is adjudicated a delinquent child for committing an act that would be attempted aggravated murder or attempted murder if committed by an adult, the child is eligible for whichever of the following is appropriate:

(1) Mandatory SYO, if the act allegedly was committed when the child was fourteen or fifteen years of age;

(2) Discretionary SYO, if the act was committed when the child was ten, eleven, twelve, or thirteen years of age;

(3) Traditional juvenile, if divisions (C)(1) and (2) of this section do not apply.

(D) If a child is adjudicated a delinquent child for committing an act that would be a felony of the first degree if committed by an adult, the child is eligible for whichever of the following is appropriate:

(1) Mandatory SYO, if the act allegedly was committed when the child was sixteen or seventeen years of age, and the act is enhanced by the factors described in division (A)(1) and either division (A)(2) or (3) of this section;

(2) Discretionary SYO, if any of the following applies:

(a) The act was committed when the child was sixteen or seventeen years of age, and division (D)(1) of this section does not apply.

(b) The act was committed when the child was fourteen or fifteen years of age.

(c) The act was committed when the child was twelve or thirteen years of age, and the act is enhanced by any factor described in division (A)(1), (2), or (3) of this section.

(d) The act was committed when the child was ten or eleven years of age, and the act is enhanced by the factors described in division (A)(1) and either division (A)(2) or (3) of this section.

(3) Traditional juvenile, if divisions (D)(1) and (2) of this section do not apply.

(E) If a child is adjudicated a delinquent child for committing an act that would be a felony of the second degree if committed by an adult, the child is eligible for whichever of the following is appropriate:

(1) Discretionary SYO, if the act was committed when the child was fourteen, fifteen, sixteen, or seventeen years of age;

(2) Discretionary SYO, if the act was committed when the child was twelve or thirteen years of age, and the act is enhanced by any factor described in division (A)(1), (2), or (3) of this section;

(3) Traditional juvenile, if divisions (E)(1) and (2) of this section do not apply.

(F) If a child is adjudicated a delinquent child for committing an act that would be a felony of the third degree if committed by an adult, the child is eligible for whichever of the following is appropriate:

(1) Discretionary SYO, if the act was committed when the child was sixteen or seventeen years of age;

(2) Discretionary SYO, if the act was committed when the child was fourteen or fifteen years of age, and the act is enhanced by any factor described in division (A)(1), (2), or (3) of this section;

(3) Traditional juvenile, if divisions (F)(1) and (2) of this section do not apply.

(G) If a child is adjudicated a delinquent child for committing an act that would be a felony of the fourth or fifth degree if committed by an adult, the child is eligible for whichever of the following dispositions is appropriate:

(1) Discretionary SYO, if the act was committed when the child was sixteen or seventeen years of age, and the act is enhanced by any factor described in division (A)(1), (2), or (3) of this section;

(2) Traditional juvenile, if division (G)(1) of this section does not apply.

(H) The following table describes the dispositions that a juvenile court may impose on a delinquent child:

OFFENSE CATEGORY (Enhancement Factors)	AGE 16 & 17	AGE 14 & 15	AGE 12 & 13	AGE 10 & 11

(J) Key for table in division (H) of this section:

(1) "Any enhancement factor" applies when the criteria described in division (A)(1), (2), or (3) of this section apply.

(2) The "disposition firearm factor" applies when the criteria described in division (A)(2) of this section apply.

(3) "DSYO" refers to discretionary serious youthful offender disposition.

(4) "F1" refers to an act that would be a felony of the first degree if committed by an adult.

(5) "F2" refers to an act that would be a felony of the second degree if committed by an adult.

(6) "F3" refers to an act that would be a felony of the third degree if committed by an adult.

(7) "F4" refers to an act that would be a felony of the fourth degree if committed by an adult.

(8) "F5" refers to an act that would be a felony of the fifth degree if committed by an adult.

(9) "MSYO" refers to mandatory serious youthful offender disposition.

(10) The "offense of violence factor" applies when the criteria described in division (A)(1) of this section apply.

(11) The "previous DYS admission factor" applies when the criteria described in division (A)(3) of this section apply.

(12) "TJ" refers to traditional juvenile.

Constitutionality

Ohio's serious youthful offender sentencing scheme does not violate the prohibition against cruel and unusual punishment under the Eighth Amendment and Ohio Const. art. I, § 9 as: (1) the scheme does not provide for penalties against juveniles so greatly disproportionate to the offenses committed that those penalties shock the sense of justice in the community, (2) the scheme prohibits the imposition of the most severe adult punishment, (3) the scheme reserves adult punishment only for serious juvenile offenders not capable of being rehabilitated within the juvenile system, and (4) among juveniles who receive an adult sentence, only those who commit further serious wrongdoing and who are at least 14 years old can be ordered to serve the adult sentence. In re J.B., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 6348, 2005 Ohio 7029, (2005), writ of certiorari denied by 127 S. Ct. 1259, 167 L. Ed. 2d 146, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 2649, 75 U.S.L.W. 3438 (U.S. 2007).

Generally

Defendant's right to a jury trial under Blakely v. Washington, 542 U.S. 296 (2004), was not violated where the juvenile court and not the jury made a serious youthful offender finding under RC § 2152.13(D)(2)(a)(i) as the sentence defendant received was derived from the jury's verdict on the murder and child endangering counts, and pursuant to RC § 2152.11(B)(2) and (E)(2), defendant was subject to a serious youthful offender disposition at the discretion of the juvenile court simply by virtue of the delinquency finding for murder and child endangerment; the range of defendant's potential punishment by virtue of the jury verdict alone included the applicable adult punishment set forth in RC ch. 2929 and in making the finding in RC § 2152.13(D)(2)(a)(i), the juvenile court was determining defendant's punishment within the statutorily-prescribed range, taking into account the nature and circumstances of the offense, and the security, programming, and resources available in the juvenile system. In re J.B., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 6348, 2005 Ohio 7029, (2005), writ of certiorari denied by 127 S. Ct. 1259, 167 L. Ed. 2d 146, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 2649, 75 U.S.L.W. 3438 (U.S. 2007).

Advisement of rights

Where it is apparent on appeal that a youth who was adjudicated delinquent knew of his right of appeal and of his right to expungement and the statutory time for expungement had not been met, a claim of error on the part of the lower court in not advising the youth of these rights will be regarded as frivolous and not prejudicial: (decided under former analogous section) In re Haas, 45 Ohio App. 2d 187, 74 Ohio Op. 2d 231 (1975).

Appeal

Juvenile court lacks jurisdiction to proceed with an adjudication of a child after a notice of appeal has been filed from an order of that court. During the pendency of an appeal, any adjudication of a child made by a juvenile court is void. Therefore, the double jeopardy clause of the United States Constitution does not apply, and the court of appeals may review the merits of the appeal: In re S.J., 106 Ohio St. 3d 11, 829 N.E.2d 1207, 2005 Ohio 3215, (2005).

Under RC § 2945.67, the prosecution cannot appeal a final verdict in a delinquency case: In re Lee, 145 Ohio App. 3d 167, 762 N.E.2d 396 (2001).

Case plan

If a juvenile court, in making disposition of an unruly or delinquent child pursuant to RC §§ 2151.35.4 or 2151.35.5, places the child into the temporary custody of the county department of human services in accordance with RC § 2151.35.3, the juvenile court is required to hold periodic reviews pursuant to RC § 2151.41.7 and JuvR 36(A): (decided under former analogous section) OAG No. 99-041 (1999).

If a juvenile court, in making disposition of an unruly or delinquent child pursuant to RC §§ 2151.35.4 or 2151.35.5, places the child into the temporary custody of the county department of human services in accordance with RC § 2151.35.3 and the department provides services to that child, the county department of human services is required to develop and file with the court a case plan pursuant to RC § 2151.41.2 and to hold semiannual reviews of the case plan pursuant to RC § 2151.41.6: (decided under former analogous section) OAG No. 99-041 (1999).

Double jeopardy

A second dispositional hearing and order did not violate double jeopardy where the first disposition was void due to noncompliance with statutory provisions: In re Futrell, 153 Ohio App. 3d 20, 790 N.E.2d 810, 2003 Ohio 2685, (2003).

Driver's license

The juvenile court has the authority to suspend a juvenile's driver license until the juvenile's twenty-first birthday: (decided under former analogous section) In re Mason, 1997 Ohio App. LEXIS 5757 (9th Dist. 1997).

A juvenile court lacks authority to permanently revoke a juvenile's driver's license: (decided under former analogous section) In re Finlaw, 69 Ohio App. 3d 474, 590 N.E.2d 1340 (1990).

The juvenile court has the authority to impose probation with conditions such as the revocation of a juvenile's driver's license to age 21, but may not revoke a driver's license for life: (decided under former analogous section) In re Weber, 61 Ohio App. 3d 636, 573 N.E.2d 730 (1989).

Early release

A juvenile court has no authority pursuant to RC § 2151.38(B) or (C) to release a child committed to the Department of Youth Services under RC § 2151.35.5(A)(4)-(6) for institutional care after expiration of the applicable minimum period of institutionalization. The effect of RC § 2151.38(A), therefore, is that the juvenile court's jurisdiction to release a child terminates when the child has completed the minimum period of institutionalization: (decided under former analogous section) OAG No. 93-079 (1993).

If a request for early release is made pursuant to one of the procedures specified in RC § 2151.38(B) prior to expiration of the minimum period of institutionalization imposed under RC § 2151.35.5(A)(4)-(6), and the hearing is rescheduled or continued beyond the expiration of the minimum period of institutionalization, the juvenile court does not acquire or retain jurisdiction to grant an early release after that date. The court's jurisdiction over releases after the minimum period of confinement is limited to that set out in RC § 2151.38(C): (decided under former analogous section) OAG No. 93-079 (1993).

If a juvenile court schedules an early release hearing pursuant to RC § 2151.38(B) after expiration of the applicable minimum period of institutionalization imposed under RC § 2151.35.5(A)(4)-(6) and orders the Department of Youth Services (DYS) to deliver the child for the hearing and to present a treatment plan for post-institutional care as described in RC § 2151.38(B)(2)(c), DHS should raise the issue of lack of jurisdiction by motion in that proceeding: (decided under former analogous section) OAG No. 93-079 (1993).

Escape

Revised Code § 2921.34(C)(3), providing that a term of confinement for escape be served consecutive to any other sentence of confinement, applies to juvenile escapees: (decided under former analogous section) In re Woodson, 98 Ohio App. 3d 678, 649 N.E.2d 320 (1994).

When an offender on electronically monitored house arrest leaves or otherwise interferes with the monitoring device for the purpose of breaking his detention, he has committed the offense of escape: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Long, 82 Ohio App. 3d 168, 611 N.E.2d 504 (1992).

Expense of private facility

A juvenile court lacks jurisdiction to order that a delinquent child be cared for in a private mental health facility at the expense of the department of mental health and of an organization of community mental health boards: (decided under former analogous section) In re Hoodlet, 72 Ohio App. 3d 115, 593 N.E.2d 478 (1991).

When, pursuant to RC § 2151.35.5, a juvenile court commits a delinquent child to an out-of-state private residential facility, the cost of educating the child is paid with funds from the state subsidy provided in RC § 2151.35.7; if such subsidy is insufficient, any remaining educational expense is to be paid by the court as provided in RC § 2151.36: (decided under former analogous section) OAG No. 89-006 (1989).

Fees and costs

The juvenile court has discretion under RC § 2151.35.5(A)(11) to make an alternative disposition that is not specifically enumerated in RC § 2151.35.5(A)(1)-(10) but does not have discretion to assess the costs associated with the disposition: (decided under former analogous section) In re Chinkin, 1992 Ohio App. LEXIS 2167 (1992).

Forfeiture

Forfeiture proceedings apply to juveniles found to be delinquent, and juvenile courts have jurisdiction over such proceedings: (decided under former analogous section) In re Harman, 63 Ohio Misc. 2d 529, 635 N.E.2d 96 (CP 1994).

Furloughs

Where the Department of Youth Services wishes to grant a home furlough to a child who has been committed to the legal custody of the Department of Youth Services for institutionalization or institutionalization in a secure facility under RC § 2151.35.5(A)(4) or (5), the Department may not, for the purpose of such furlough, allow the child to leave the institution in which he has been placed, prior to the expiration of the minimum period prescribed by the statutory provision under which he was committed, unless the court which committed the child approves of such early release in accordance with RC § 2151.38(B); once such a child has been institutionalized or institutionalized in a secure facility for the minimum period prescribed by the statutory provision under which he was committed, the Department may, in accordance with RC §§ 2151.38(C) and 5139.06, allow the child to leave the institution in which he was placed and return home, without prior approval of the court which committed the child: (decided under former analogous section) OAG No. 88-062 (1988).

Where the Department of Youth Services wishes to grant a home furlough to a child who has been committed to the legal custody of the Department of Youth Services for institutionalization in a secure facility under RC § 2151.35.5(A)(6), the Department may not, for the purpose of such furlough, allow the child to leave the institution in which he has been placed, prior to the child's attainment of the age of twenty-one years, unless the court which committed the child approves of such early release in accordance with RC § 2151.38(B): (decided under former analogous section) OAG No. 88-062 (1988).

Insanity

In delinquency proceedings, a juvenile may not raise the defense of insanity: (decided under former analogous section) In re Chambers, 116 Ohio App. 3d 312, 688 N.E.2d 25 (1996).

Jurisdiction

The juvenile court had jurisdiction to revoke the suspension of permanent commitment even though the juvenile had been released from official probation: (decided under former analogous section) In re Bracewell, 126 Ohio App. 3d 133, 709 N.E.2d 938 (1998).

A juvenile court does not have jurisdiction over a delinquency complaint where the alleged offender has reached the age of 21 before the charge was brought and the acts occurred before the offender reached 15: (decided under former analogous section) In re C., 61 Ohio Misc. 2d 610, 580 N.E.2d 1182 (CP 1991).

Where a child, as defined in RC § 2151.01.1(B)(1), who has been adjudicated a delinquent beyond a reasonable doubt, leaves the jurisdiction of the juvenile court so that such court cannot dispose of his case, the juvenile court has authority to treat such person as an adult and to impose upon such person the penalty prescribed in the statute he violated and which constituted the basis for the adjudication of delinquency: (decided under former analogous section) In re Cox, 36 Ohio App. 2d 65, 65 Ohio Op. 2d 51, 301 N.E.2d 907 (1973).

Marriage of child in custody

A minor youth who has been committed to the Department of Youth Services pursuant to RC §§ 2151.35.5, and 5139.05 who wishes to get married must first obtain consent, as required by the applicable provisions of RC § 3101.01 and JuvR 42, from one or both parents, from one of the alternative authorities named in RC § 3101.01, or from the juvenile court as provided in JuvR 42(A). Pursuant to RC § 3101.01 and JuvR 42(A), the Department of Youth Services has no authority to either consent or withhold consent to the marriage of a minor committed to the legal custody of the Department: (decided under former analogous section) OAG No. 89-046 (1989).

Out-of-state school

The court cannot place a child in a specific school when it commits a child to the department of youth services pursuant to RC § 2151.35.5. The same prohibition applies to the disposition of parole violators. Thus an order requiring the department to pay the child's expenses at an out-of-state school is unlawful: (decided under former analogous section) In re Sanders, 72 Ohio App. 3d 655, 595 N.E.2d 974 (1991).

Place of detention

According to RC § 2151.35.5, the court was not empowered to order a delinquent child to serve any time in an adult correctional facility even though he was chronologically an adult when "sentenced": (decided under former analogous section) In re Campbell, 1997 Ohio App. LEXIS 2809 (11th Dist. 1997).

The trial court had authority to grant temporary custody of the delinquent child to the children services board and to order placement in a residential treatment facility: (decided under former analogous section) In re Lawson, 98 Ohio App. 3d 456, 648 N.E.2d 889 (1994).

There is no authority for a juvenile court to commit a delinquent juvenile to a jail for adult offenders, absent a finding that housing in an appropriate juvenile facility is unavailable or that the public safety and protection so require: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Grady, 3 Ohio App. 3d 174, 3 Ohio B. 199, 444 N.E.2d 51 (1981).

A final order of disposition of a child found to be delinquent, as prescribed by RC § 2151.35.5, may not include, as punishment or otherwise, confinement (or detention) in a juvenile detention home: (decided under former analogous section) In re Bolden, 37 Ohio App. 2d 7, 66 Ohio Op. 2d 26, 306 N.E.2d 166 (1973).

Prior adjudication of delinquency

A prior adjudication of delinquency based on a theft offense constitutes a previous conviction of a theft offense under RC § 2913.02 for purposes of disposition: (decided under former analogous section) In re Russell, 12 Ohio St. 3d 304, 12 Ohio B. 377, 466 N.E.2d 553 (1984).

Probation

While a court may impose a previously suspended commitment under RC § 2151.35.5, it must comply with JuvR 35 concerning probation before doing so: (decided under former analogous section) In re Royal, 132 Ohio App. 3d 496, 725 N.E.2d 685 (1999).

Court could properly commit a delinquent minor for a probation violation even though a suspended commitment was not imposed at the time of the initial disposition: (decided under former analogous section) In re Cunningham, 1996 Ohio App. LEXIS 573 (10th Dist. 1996).

Juvenile Rule 35(B), not 29(D), governs probation revocation proceedings: (decided under former analogous section) In re Motley, 110 Ohio App. 3d 641, 674 N.E.2d 1268 (1996).

When placing a juvenile on probation, the court need not first impose and suspend a commitment to DYS [Department of Youth Services] in order to later make a DYS disposition after the juvenile violates probation: (decided under former analogous section) In re Kelly, 1995 Ohio App. LEXIS 4961 (10th Dist. 1995).

Although juvenile courts may prescribe unique probation conditions, the conditions must relate to the offense involved and must not unduly infringe on the minor's constitutional rights: (decided under former analogous section) In re Miller, 82 Ohio App. 3d 81, 611 N.E.2d 451 (1992).

Restitution

A delinquent juvenile may be ordered to make restitution for medical bills incurred by the victim of an assault: (decided under former analogous section) In re Lambert, 63 Ohio App. 3d 121, 577 N.E.2d 1184 (1989).

A juvenile court's order requiring restitution but leaving the amount and method of payment to a later hearing is not an appealable order: (decided under former analogous section) In re Holmes, 70 Ohio App. 2d 75, 24 Ohio Op. 3d 93, 434 N.E.2d 747 (1980).

When a minor is employed pursuant to a juvenile court restitution order, the arrangement is subject to RC Chapter 4109., except to the extent that it comes within the exceptions set forth in RC § 4109.06: (decided under former analogous section) OAG No. 87-104 (1987).

Searches

A warrantless search performed pursuant to a condition of parole requiring a parolee to submit to random searches of his or her person, motor vehicle, or place of residence by a parole officer at any time is constitutional: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Benton, 82 Ohio St. 3d 316, 695 N.E.2d 757, 1998 Ohio 386, (1998).

Sentencing

A juvenile court is authorized to impose consecutive terms of commitment upon a delinquent minor for separate delinquent acts whether or not they arise from the same set of operative facts: (decided under former analogous section) In re Caldwell, 76 Ohio St. 3d 156, 666 N.E.2d 1367, 1996 Ohio 410, (1996).

Revised Code §§ 2151.35.5 and 2151.01 read together, grant the trial court the discretion in a delinquency proceeding to order that its commitment orders be carried out consecutively: (decided under former analogous section) In re Quanzell W., 1995 Ohio App. LEXIS 4535 (6th Dist. 1995).

Where the juvenile refused to participate in the treatment program, the court did not violate JuvR 35(B) by rescinding its stay and committing the juvenile for a minimum period of six months: (decided under former analogous section) In re William H., 105 Ohio App. 3d 761, 664 N.E.2d 1361 (1995).

A court may properly find that indefinite commitment is in a juvenile's best interest where the parents seem unwilling to ensure that the juvenile gets necessary counseling if left in their custody. A disposition of intensive probation on one count and indefinite commitment on another count is not inconsistent: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Matha, 107 Ohio App. 3d 756, 669 N.E.2d 504 (1995).

When a minor is twice adjudicated delinquent and displays behavior from which the public needs protection, and which indicates that the delinquent is in need of a program of supervision, care and rehabilitation, a consecutive commitment order is an appropriate disposition under RC § 2151.35.5(A)(11): (decided under former analogous section) In re Bremner, 1993 Ohio App. LEXIS 1796 (8th Dist. 1993).

Ordering a juvenile who has twice been adjudicated delinquent to serve a second indefinite term of commitment consecutive to a prior commitment order arising from distinct and unrelated offenses during a different time frame is within the discretion of the juvenile court under RC § 2151.35.5(A)(10): (decided under former analogous section) In re Samkas, 80 Ohio App. 3d 240, 608 N.E.2d 1172 (1992).

Revised Code § 2151.35.5(A)(9) which allows the juvenile court to "make any further disposition that the court finds proper" does not authorize the court to exercise unlimited discretion in sentencing a delinquent child: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Grady, 3 Ohio App. 3d 174, 3 Ohio B. 199, 444 N.E.2d 51 (1981).

Transportation costs

Where the State of Ohio is responsible for the payment of transportation costs under RC § 2151.56, art. IV(b) or RC § 2151.56, art. V(b), the person or entity with legal custody of such juvenile is the party within the state which is responsible for the transportation costs of the juvenile's return, unless the juvenile court, in its disposition of a delinquent juvenile under RC § 2151.35.5(A), transferred the responsibility for the physical care and custody of the delinquent juvenile to another person or entity, which is then responsible for the payment of such costs: (decided under former analogous section) OAG No. 89-107 (1989).

(A)(1)(a) After a complaint has been filed alleging that a child is a delinquent child for committing an act that would be aggravated murder, murder, attempted aggravated murder, or attempted murder if committed by an adult, the juvenile court at a hearing shall transfer the case if the child was sixteen or seventeen years of age at the time of the act charged and there is probable cause to believe that the child committed the act charged. The juvenile court also shall transfer the case at a hearing if the child was fourteen or fifteen years of age at the time of the act charged, if section 2152.10 of the Revised Code provides that the child is eligible for mandatory transfer, and if there is probable cause to believe that the child committed the act charged.

(b) After a complaint has been filed alleging that a child is a delinquent child by reason of committing a category two offense, the juvenile court at a hearing shall transfer the case if section 2152.10 of the Revised Code requires the mandatory transfer of the case and there is probable cause to believe that the child committed the act charged.

(2) The juvenile court also shall transfer a case in the circumstances described in division (C)(5) of section 2152.02 of the Revised Code or if either of the following applies:

(a) A complaint is filed against a child who is eligible for a discretionary transfer under section 2152.10 of the Revised Code and who previously was convicted of or pleaded guilty to a felony in a case that was transferred to a criminal court.

(b) A complaint is filed against a child who is domiciled in another state alleging that the child is a delinquent child for committing an act that would be a felony if committed by an adult, and, if the act charged had been committed in that other state, the child would be subject to criminal prosecution as an adult under the law of that other state without the need for a transfer of jurisdiction from a juvenile, family, or similar noncriminal court to a criminal court.

(B) Except as provided in division (A) of this section, after a complaint has been filed alleging that a child is a delinquent child for committing an act that would be a felony if committed by an adult, the juvenile court at a hearing may transfer the case if the court finds all of the following:

(1) The child was fourteen years of age or older at the time of the act charged.

(2) There is probable cause to believe that the child committed the act charged.

(3) The child is not amenable to care or rehabilitation within the juvenile system, and the safety of the community may require that the child be subject to adult sanctions. In making its decision under this division, the court shall consider whether the applicable factors under division (D) of this section indicating that the case should be transferred outweigh the applicable factors under division (E) of this section indicating that the case should not be transferred. The record shall indicate the specific factors that were applicable and that the court weighed.

(C) Before considering a transfer under division (B) of this section, the juvenile court shall order an investigation, including a mental examination of the child by a public or private agency or a person qualified to make the examination. The child may waive the examination required by this division if the court finds that the waiver is competently and intelligently made. Refusal to submit to a mental examination by the child constitutes a waiver of the examination.

(D) In considering whether to transfer a child under division (B) of this section, the juvenile court shall consider the following relevant factors, and any other relevant factors, in favor of a transfer under that division:

(1) The victim of the act charged suffered physical or psychological harm, or serious economic harm, as a result of the alleged act.

(2) The physical or psychological harm suffered by the victim due to the alleged act of the child was exacerbated because of the physical or psychological vulnerability or the age of the victim.

(3) The child's relationship with the victim facilitated the act charged.

(4) The child allegedly committed the act charged for hire or as a part of a gang or other organized criminal activity.

(5) The child had a firearm on or about the child's person or under the child's control at the time of the act charged, the act charged is not a violation of section 2923.12 of the Revised Code, and the child, during the commission of the act charged, allegedly used or displayed the firearm, brandished the firearm, or indicated that the child possessed a firearm.

(6) At the time of the act charged, the child was awaiting adjudication or disposition as a delinquent child, was under a community control sanction, or was on parole for a prior delinquent child adjudication or conviction.

(7) The results of any previous juvenile sanctions and programs indicate that rehabilitation of the child will not occur in the juvenile system.

(8) The child is emotionally, physically, or psychologically mature enough for the transfer.

(9) There is not sufficient time to rehabilitate the child within the juvenile system.

(E) In considering whether to transfer a child under division (B) of this section, the juvenile court shall consider the following relevant factors, and any other relevant factors, against a transfer under that division:

(1) The victim induced or facilitated the act charged.

(2) The child acted under provocation in allegedly committing the act charged.

(3) The child was not the principal actor in the act charged, or, at the time of the act charged, the child was under the negative influence or coercion of another person.

(4) The child did not cause physical harm to any person or property, or have reasonable cause to believe that harm of that nature would occur, in allegedly committing the act charged.

(5) The child previously has not been adjudicated a delinquent child.

(6) The child is not emotionally, physically, or psychologically mature enough for the transfer.

(7) The child has a mental illness or is a mentally retarded person.

(8) There is sufficient time to rehabilitate the child within the juvenile system and the level of security available in the juvenile system provides a reasonable assurance of public safety.

(F) If one or more complaints are filed alleging that a child is a delinquent child for committing two or more acts that would be offenses if committed by an adult, if a motion is made alleging that division (A) of this section applies and requires that the case or cases involving one or more of the acts charged be transferred for †, and if a motion also is made requesting that the case or cases involving one or more of the acts charged be transferred pursuant to division (B) of this section, the juvenile court, in deciding the motions, shall proceed in the following manner:

(1) Initially, the court shall decide the motion alleging that division (A) of this section applies and requires that the case or cases involving one or more of the acts charged be transferred.

(2) If the court determines that division (A) of this section applies and requires that the case or cases involving one or more of the acts charged be transferred, the court shall transfer the case or cases in accordance with the †† that division. After the transfer pursuant to division (A) of this section, the court shall decide, in accordance with division (B) of this section, whether to grant the motion requesting that the case or cases involving one or more of the acts charged be transferred pursuant to that division. Notwithstanding division (B) of this section, prior to transferring a case pursuant to division (A) of this section, the court is not required to consider any factor specified in division (D) or (E) of this section or to conduct an investigation under division (C) of this section.

(3) If the court determines that division (A) of this section does not require that the case or cases involving one or more of the acts charged be transferred, the court shall decide in accordance with division (B) of this section whether to grant the motion requesting that the case or cases involving one or more of the acts charged be transferred pursuant to that division.

(G) The court shall give notice in writing of the time, place, and purpose of any hearing held pursuant to division (A) or (B) of this section to the child's parents, guardian, or other custodian and to the child's counsel at least three days prior to the hearing.

(H) No person, either before or after reaching eighteen years of age, shall be prosecuted as an adult for an offense committed prior to becoming eighteen years of age, unless the person has been transferred as provided in division (A) or (B) of this section or unless division (J) of this section applies. Any prosecution that is had in a criminal court on the mistaken belief that the person who is the subject of the case was eighteen years of age or older at the time of the commission of the offense shall be deemed a nullity, and the person shall not be considered to have been in jeopardy on the offense.

(I) Upon the transfer of a case under division (A) or (B) of this section, the juvenile court shall state the reasons for the transfer on the record, and shall order the child to enter into a recognizance with good and sufficient surety for the child's appearance before the appropriate court for any disposition that the court is authorized to make for a similar act committed by an adult. The transfer abates the jurisdiction of the juvenile court with respect to the delinquent acts alleged in the complaint, and, upon the transfer, all further proceedings pertaining to the act charged shall be discontinued in the juvenile court, and the case then shall be within the jurisdiction of the court to which it is transferred as described in division (H) of section 2151.23 of the Revised Code.

(J) If a person under eighteen years of age allegedly commits an act that would be a felony if committed by an adult and if the person is not taken into custody or apprehended for that act until after the person attains twenty-one years of age, the juvenile court does not have jurisdiction to hear or determine any portion of the case charging the person with committing that act. In those circumstances, divisions (A) and (B) of this section do not apply regarding the act, and the case charging the person with committing the act shall be a criminal prosecution commenced and heard in the appropriate court having jurisdiction of the offense as if the person had been eighteen years of age or older when the person committed the act. All proceedings pertaining to the act shall be within the jurisdiction of the court having jurisdiction of the offense, and that court has all the authority and duties in the case as it has in other criminal cases in that court.

Constitutionality

Because RC § 2151.26 does not affect a suspect class or a fundamental right and reflects the state's interest in protecting its citizens from potentially violent youths and reducing violent crime by juveniles, it is constitutional: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Lee, 1998 Ohio App. LEXIS 4250 (11th Dist. 1998).

Revised Code § 2151.26 and JuvR 30 are constitutional in that they impose a burden on the state, do not use the terms "reasonable grounds" in a constitutionally vague way, and do not violate due process in the way they determine the needs of the safety of the community: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Parsons, 1991 Ohio App. LEXIS 1008 (9th Dist. 1991).

A minor criminal defendant, by entering a plea of guilty, does not waive his objections to constitutional deficiencies in the hearing wherein the Juvenile Court relinquished jurisdiction to the Court of Common Pleas: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Riggins, 68 Ohio App. 2d 1, 22 Ohio Op. 3d 1, 426 N.E.2d 504 (1980).

The transfer of a case by the juvenile court to the common pleas court, pursuant to RC § 2151.26, permitting a child to be tried as an adult, does not violate any constitutional rights of such child: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Anderson, 28 Ohio App. 2d 234, 57 Ohio Op. 2d 345, 277 N.E.2d 64 (1971).

The provision of the juvenile court act of the District of Columbia, that in order to waive its exclusive jurisdiction over a juvenile, the court must make a "full investigation" and that its records be available to persons having a legitimate interest in the protection of the child, when read in the context of the constitutional principles relating to due process and the assistance of counsel, entitle the juvenile to a hearing on the question of such waiver, to access by his counsel to records which presumably are considered by the court, and to a statement of the reasons for the court's decision sufficient to enable meaningful appellate review thereof: (decided under former analogous section) Kent v. United States, 40 Ohio Op. 2d 270, 383 U.S. 541, 16 L. Ed. 2d 84, 86 S. Ct. 1045 (1966).

Generally

Trial court was not required to find that the juvenile was guilty of the charged offense, only that the evidence presented supported a finding of probable cause. Juvenile court's acceptance of the juvenile's stipulations to his psychological evaluation and his family records during the amenability hearing did not take the place of the required hearing. The stipulations did not constitute "admissions" under JuvR 29: State v. Goodwin, 166 Ohio App. 3d 709, 852 N.E.2d 1282, 2006 Ohio 2311, (2006).

Since a bindover proceeding is not adjudicative of guilt or innocence, statutory and constitutional questions as to admissibility of evidence are premature and need not be addressed. A juvenile is not entitled to appointment of an independent psychologist to assist in determining whether the juvenile should submit to or waive a mental examination: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Whisenant, 127 Ohio App. 3d 75, 711 N.E.2d 1016 (1998).

The mandatory bindover provisions of RC § 2151.26(B) are substantive and control over JuvR 30: (decided under former analogous section) In re Langston, 119 Ohio App. 3d 1, 694 N.E.2d 468 (1997).

In a bindover proceeding, the court may consider the violent nature of the offense: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Lopez, 112 Ohio App. 3d 659, 679 N.E.2d 1155 (1996).

For purposes of honesty and appellate review, a juvenile court deciding whether or not to transfer jurisdiction should articulate its findings and rationale. The violent nature of an offense may compel transfer: (decided under former analogous section) In re Snitzky, 73 Ohio Misc. 2d 52, 657 N.E.2d 1379 (CP 1995).

In determining a juvenile's amenability to rehabilitation, a juvenile court may consider the nature and seriousness of the alleged act: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Campbell, 74 Ohio App. 3d 352, 598 N.E.2d 1244 (1991).

In ordering a bind-over, a juvenile court is not required to make written findings as to the factors listed in JuvR 30 (E): (decided under former analogous section) State v. Douglas, 20 Ohio St. 3d 34, 20 Ohio B. 282, 485 N.E.2d 711 (1985).

Once a juvenile is bound over in any county in Ohio pursuant to RC § 2151.26 and JuvR 30, that juvenile is bound over for all felonies committed in other counties of this state, as well as for future felonies he may commit: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Adams, 69 Ohio St. 2d 120, 23 Ohio Op. 3d 164, 431 N.E.2d 326 (1982).

The duty upon the juvenile court before ordering a relinquishment of jurisdiction for purposes of criminal prosecution is, after investigation, to find there are reasonable grounds to believe that the child is one who will not be readily brought to yield, submit and respond to care, supervision and rehabilitation in any facility designed for such care of delinquent children and that the requirement as to legal restraint exists: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Whiteside, 6 Ohio App. 3d 30, 6 Ohio B. 140, 452 N.E.2d 332 (1982).

The latitude a juvenile court possesses within which to determine whether it should retain or waive jurisdiction "assumes procedural regularity sufficient in the particular circumstances to satisfy the basic requirements of due process and fairness, as well as compliance with the statutory requirement of a 'full investigation'": (decided under former analogous section) Kent v. United States, 40 Ohio Op. 2d 270, 383 U.S. 541, 16 L. Ed. 2d 84, 86 S. Ct. 1045 (1966).

The determination of the juvenile court whether to waive its exclusive jurisdiction over a juvenile charged with what will be serious criminal offenses if he permits the minor to be tried as though an adult is a critically important action determining vitally important statutory rights of the juvenile: (decided under former analogous section) Kent v. United States, 40 Ohio Op. 2d 270, 383 U.S. 541, 16 L. Ed. 2d 84, 86 S. Ct. 1045 (1966).

Revised Code §§ 2151.25 and 2151.26 provide the procedure to be followed where a juvenile is charged with an act which could be a felony if committed by an adult: (decided under former analogous section) Mellott v. Alvis, 109 Ohio App. 486, 12 Ohio Op. 2d 23, 162 N.E.2d 623 (1959).

Access of media, public

The public does not have a qualified constitutional right of access to juvenile delinquency proceedings. Such proceedings are not presumed open or presumed closed. The burden of proof is on a party seeking closure: (decided under former analogous section) State ex rel. Plain Dealer Publ'g Co. v. Geauga County Court of Common Pleas, 90 Ohio St. 3d 79, 734 N.E.2d 1214, 2000 Ohio 35, (2000).

A two-stage proceeding is required where a motion to transfer a child for prosecution as an adult is filed. The preliminary hearing is presumptively open to the public, while the amenability hearing is presumptively closed: (decided under former analogous section) In re D.R., 63 Ohio Misc. 2d 273, 624 N.E.2d 1120 (CP 1993).

Appeal

If the denial of appellant's motion for a competency evaluation in his juvenile case was a final, appealable order, then the appeal should have been dismissed as untimely since notice of appeal was not filed within 30 days of service of notice of the judgment. If, on the other hand, the order was interlocutory, then there still was no appellate jurisdiction because the subsequent bindover judgment, too, was not a final, appealable order. There was no obvious error in the earlier dismissal of the appeal, and appellant's motion for reconsideration was not well-taken. In re Thompson, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2284, 2006 Ohio 2437, (2006).

When a juvenile court relinquished jurisdiction of defendant's case, its weighing of factors for and against relinquishment was to be done at the bindover hearing and that weighing could appear anywhere in the record, rather than only in the court's journal entry, so, when defendant did not file a transcript of his RC § 2152.12(B) hearing, an appellate court had to presume the validity of the juvenile court's proceedings and find that the juvenile court did not abuse its discretion in transferring the case to adult court or fail to weigh required factors. State v. Luna, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5867, 2006 Ohio 5907, (2006).

In cases involving challenges to certification of juveniles to adult courts, counsel is required to include specific language in the text of the praecipe to the clerk of courts requesting all pertinent documents from both the juvenile division and the general division of the court of common pleas to establish that the case is a final appealable order: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Houston, 70 Ohio App. 3d 152, 590 N.E.2d 839 (1990).

The court of common pleas may not review the factual findings of the juvenile court, under RC § 2151.26(A), on the issue of the child's amenability to care or rehabilitation; such issue must be presented after trial on appeal to the court of appeals: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Whiteside, 6 Ohio App. 3d 30, 6 Ohio B. 140, 452 N.E.2d 332 (1982).

An order by a juvenile court, pursuant to RC § 2151.26, transferring a child to the court of common pleas for criminal prosecution, is not a final appealable order: (decided under former analogous section) In re Becker, 39 Ohio St. 2d 84, 68 Ohio Op. 2d 50, 314 N.E.2d 158 (1974).

The order of a juvenile court pursuant to this section for a child charged with a felony to appear before the common pleas court, is a final order under RC § 2505.02: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Yoss, 10 Ohio App. 2d 47, 39 Ohio Op. 2d 81, 225 N.E.2d 275 (1967).

Bail

A juvenile court may admit a juvenile to bail in a case where the state has moved for a bindover. RC § 2151.31 and JuvR 7, taken together, amount to a presumption against detention: (decided under former analogous section) In re K.G., 89 Ohio Misc. 2d 16, 693 N.E.2d 1186 (CP 1997).

Complicity

State v. Hanning (2000), 89 OS3d 86, 728 NE2d 1059, does not apply to mandatory bindover cases under RC § 2151.26(B)(3): (decided under former analogous section) Agee v. Russell, 92 Ohio St. 3d 540, 751 N.E.2d 1043, 2001 Ohio 1279, (2001).

The mandatory bindover provision of RC § 2151.26(B)(4)(b) does not apply unless the child, himself or herself, had a firearm on or about the child's person or under the child's control while committing the act charged and the child displayed the firearm, brandished the firearm, indicated possession of the firearm, or used the firearm to facilitate the commission of the act charged. The complicity statute, RC § 2923.03, does not apply to the juvenile bindover criteria set forth in RC § 2151.26: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Hanning, 89 Ohio St. 3d 86, 728 N.E.2d 1059, 2000 Ohio 436, (2000).

Complicity to aggravated murder constitutes a category one offense for purposes of mandatory bindover even though it was a co-defendant who possessed and used a firearm: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Agee, 133 Ohio App. 3d 441, 728 N.E.2d 442 (1999).

If the charge of a particular offense would invoke the mandatory bindover provisions of RC § 2151.26, then the charge of complicity in that offense, pursuant to RC § 2923.03, would also invoke those mandatory bindover provisions: (decided under former analogous section) OAG No. 97-014 (1997).

Discovery

In a case involving, as a preliminary matter, the question of the transfer of a juvenile proceeding to a common pleas court for the purpose of trying a juvenile as an adult for an alleged criminal offense, a juvenile court may limit discovery in the juvenile court to evidence relevant to the probable cause hearing. State v. Gilbert, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2239, 2005 Ohio 2350, (2005).

During a probable cause hearing held in juvenile court to determine, under Ohio R. Juv. P. 30(A), if there was probable cause to believe defendant committed an alleged crime, before determining if, under Ohio R. Juv. P. 30(C), defendant was amenable to rehabilitation in the juvenile system, defendant moved for discovery, pursuant to Ohio R. Juv. P. 24. While the probable cause hearing was not an adjudicatory hearing, under Ohio R. Juv. P. 2(B), in the sense that evidence was put to the trier of fact or that jeopardy attached, it was "critically important," and had to measure up to the essentials of due process and fair treatment. Defendant had the right to discover evidence the prosecutor would offer to establish probable cause. As the juvenile court had discretion to limit discovery, under Ohio R. Juv. P. 24(B), when the juvenile court merely deleted discovery of evidentiary materials the prosecution intended to use at trial, this was not an abuse of discretion. State v. Gilbert, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2239, 2005 Ohio 2350, (2005).

In the absence of an order limiting discovery pursuant to JuvR 24(B), a juvenile facing a bindover hearing is entitled to discovery coextensive with the issues to be determined at that hearing: (decided under former analogous section) In re A.M., 139 Ohio App. 3d 303, 743 N.E.2d 937 (2000).

Motions for discovery are to be filed in accord with JuvR 22 prior to the adjudicatory hearing. A probable cause hearing pursuant to RC § 2151.26 and JuvR 30 is not an adjudicatory hearing as defined in JuvR 2: (decided under former analogous section) In re Hunter, 99 Ohio Misc. 2d 107, 716 N.E.2d 802 (CP 1999).

The discovery provisions of JuvR 24 apply to bindover proceedings: (decided under former analogous section) In re A.M., 92 Ohio Misc. 2d 4, 699 N.E.2d 574 (CP 1998).

Discretionary transfer

Trial court did not abuse its discretion by transferring jurisdiction to the adult court. The court-appointed psychologists did not provide a specific diagnosis of the juvenile's mental condition. There would be no course of medication or treatment without a diagnosis, and the juvenile could not be forced to participate in treatment. Due to the 14-year-old's resistance to treatment and the brutality of the murder, the court reasonably found that there was insufficient time for rehabilitation in the juvenile system: State v. West, 167 Ohio App. 3d 598, 856 N.E.2d 285, 2006 Ohio 3518, (2006).

Juvenile court abused its discretion by overruling the state's motions to relinquish jurisdiction without considering whether a discretionary transfer was warranted: In re Stanley, 165 Ohio App. 3d 726, 848 N.E.2d 540, 2006 Ohio 1279, (2006).

RC § 2152.12(B) does not specifically require a juvenile judge to list the factors set forth in RC § 2152.12(D) and (E) in its judgment relinquishing jurisdiction of a case, and the statute reveals that the factors should be weighed at the bindover hearing and can appear anywhere in the record, rather than in only the court's journal entry. State v. Luna, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5867, 2006 Ohio 5907, (2006).

Juvenile court did not err in transferring jurisdiction over a 14-year-old defendant's murder case to the adult court. The juvenile court's findings that defendant was not amenable to rehabilitation in the juvenile system in light of the gruesome nature of offense, which involved the brutal stabbing of defendant's aunt while she was sleeping, and that it was likely that defendant would not participate in the optional treatment were supported by evidence. State v. West, 167 Ohio App. 3d 598, 856 N.E.2d 285, 2006 Ohio 3518, (2006).

Juvenile court enjoys wide latitude in determining whether to relinquish jurisdiction of a juvenile, and its ultimate decision will not be reversed absent an abuse of discretion. State v. E.C., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2769, 2005 Ohio 2967, (2005).

Juvenile court's decision to waive its jurisdiction over appellant, who was charged with aggravated burglary, escape, disrupting public service, felonious assault, kidnapping, receiving stolen property, and aggravated robbery, was not an abuse of discretion because it followed the proper procedural requirements of Ohio R. Juv. P. 30 and RC § 2151.26(F) (repealed) and gave its reasons, which were that (1) she had been adjudicated a delinquent and was awaiting disposition; (2) her relationship with the victims facilitated her alleged acts; (3) the victims suffered physical and psychological harm; (4) the results of her prior juvenile sanctions showed rehabilitations would not occur in the juvenile system; (5) she was emotionally, physically, and psychologically mature enough for transfer; and (6) there was insufficient time for her rehabilitation in the juvenile system. State v. E.C., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2769, 2005 Ohio 2967, (2005).

Where defendant committed, inter alia, aggravated murder and aggravated robbery one month short of his 16th birthday, the R.C. § 2152.12(D) factors favoring transfer to the general division of the court for trial as an adult were obvious, overwhelming, and outweighed the R.C. § 2152.12(E) factors against transfer. In re Lynch, 789 N.E.2d 1206, 2003 Ohio 2690, (2003).

Any evidence that reasonably supports a juvenile court's decision to relinquish jurisdiction will suffice to sustain the judgment: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Hopfer, 112 Ohio App. 3d 521, 679 N.E.2d 321 (1996).

In deciding whether to relinquish jurisdiction over a child, a juvenile court may consider the seriousness of the alleged offense when determining, pursuant to JuvR 30(C)(1), if the juvenile is "not amenable to care or rehabilitation" in the juvenile justice system: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Watson, 47 Ohio St. 3d 93, 547 N.E.2d 1181 (1989).

A hearing under RC § 2151.26 is a preliminary stage of the juvenile judicial process and contemplates that the court should have considerable latitude within which to determine whether it should retain jurisdiction: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Carmichael, 35 Ohio St. 2d 1, 64 Ohio Op. 2d 1, 298 N.E.2d 568 (1973).

Domicile

For purposes of former RC § 2151.26(B)(2), there was clear and convincing evidence that the juvenile was domiciled in another state: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Simpson, 148 Ohio App. 3d 221, 772 N.E.2d 707, 2002 Ohio 3077, (2002).

Double jeopardy

A juvenile court judge's opinion as to whether a juvenile committed the alleged offense is not related to whether the juvenile is amenable to rehabilitation. Jeopardy does not attach to a probable cause determination at a JuvR 30 preliminary hearing: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Payne, 118 Ohio App. 3d 699, 693 N.E.2d 1159 (1997).

Where a juvenile court adjudicatory hearing had already begun and the juvenile admitted the allegations, double jeopardy protections prevented a bindover for prosecution: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Reddick, 113 Ohio App. 3d 788, 682 N.E.2d 38 (1996).

A plea of no contest to the charges of assault and aggravated robbery when defendant was tried as an adult does not constitute waiver of his right to assert that his conviction was obtained in violation of the fifth-fourteenth amendments prohibition of double jeopardy: (decided under former analogous section) Sellers v. Morris, 840 F.2d 352 (6th Cir. 1988).

The probable cause hearing required by RC § 2151.26 prior to bind-over of a juvenile for prosecution as an adult is not an adjudicatory proceeding to which jeopardy attaches. Thus the juvenile's subsequent trial as an adult does not place him in double jeopardy: (decided under former analogous section) Keener v. Taylor, 22 Ohio Op. 3d 248, 640 F.2d 839 (6th Cir. 1981).

A bindover decision must be made prior to an adjudication of delinquency in order to avoid double jeopardy problems: (decided under former analogous section) Breed v. Jones, 421 U.S. 519, 44 L. Ed. 2d 346, 95 S. Ct. 1779 (1975).

Due process

A prosecutor is under a duty imposed by the due process clauses of the Ohio and United States Constitutions and JuvR 24 to disclose to a juvenile respondent all evidence in the state's possession favorable to the juvenile respondent and material either to guilt or punishment that is known at the time of a mandatory bindover hearing held pursuant to RC § 2151.26 and that may become known to the prosecuting attorney after the bindover. In determining whether reversible error is committed where the state fails to disclose evidence in its possession that is favorable to a juvenile respondent for use by the defense at a mandatory bindover proceeding, the defense has the burden to prove that the violation was material, i.e., that there is a reasonable probability that, had the evidence been disclosed to the defense, the result of the mandatory bindover hearing would have been different. The state must provide credible evidence of every element of an offense to support a finding that probable cause exists to believe that the juvenile committed the offense before ordering mandatory waiver of juvenile court jurisdiction pursuant to RC § 2151.26(B): (decided under former analogous section) State v. Iacona, 93 Ohio St. 3d 83, 752 N.E.2d 937, 2001 Ohio 1292, (2001).

Evidence sufficient

Binding over of juvenile for trial as an adult was proper where the court considered all relevant factors, including the seriousness of his shooting of two people and then following one to a back room to kill him; as well, abundant and competent evidence including juvenile's long-term behavior problems and escalating inability to control his actions demonstrated that he was not amenable to rehabilitation. State v. Moorers, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5081, 2003 Ohio 5698, (Oct. 24, 2003), appeal denied by 101 Ohio St. 3d 1489, 2004 Ohio 1293, 805 N.E.2d 539, 2004 Ohio LEXIS 581 (2004).

Evidence supported the trial court's decision that defendant was not amenable to care or rehabilitation in the juvenile system and should be bound over for trial for murder as an adult, with neither of two expert witnesses explaining how defendant's Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder led to his conduct. State v. Lallathin, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3142, 2003 Ohio 3478, (2003), appeal denied by 100 Ohio St. 3d 1433, 2003 Ohio 5396, 797 N.E.2d 513, 2003 Ohio LEXIS 2749 (2003).

False imprisonment

Where the court of common pleas had some jurisdiction at the time of the bindover order, the entry of sentence did not give rise to an action for false imprisonment where the charges, although erroneous, appeared valid on the face of the commitment order: Fryerson v. Ohio Dep't of Rehab. & Corr., 120 Ohio Misc. 2d 50, 778 N.E.2d 153, 2002 Ohio 5757, (2002), affirmed by 2003 Ohio 2730, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 2464 (Ohio Ct. App., Franklin County May 29, 2003).

Firearm

Juvenile defendant in robbery case who possessed no firearm during the robbery but merely aided and abetted co-defendant who did possess a firearm was not subject to transfer under RC § 2951.26: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Hanning, 1999 Ohio App. LEXIS 400 (10th Dist. 1999).

Because the definition of "firearm" in RC § 2923.11 is not void for vagueness, its use in RC § 2151.26(B) is constitutional: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Kelly, 1998 Ohio App. LEXIS 5630 (3rd Dist. 1998).

Revised Code § 2151.26(B)(4)(b) requires the state to establish probable cause to believe that the juvenile somehow employed a firearm to facilitate commission of the act charged: (decided under former analogous section) In re B.S., 103 Ohio Misc. 2d 34, 725 N.E.2d 362 (CP 1998).

Grand jury

When a minor is transferred from the Juvenile Court to the Court of Common Pleas on a charge which would constitute a felony if committed by an adult, the grand jury is empowered to return an indictment under the facts submitted to it and is not confined to returning indictments only on charges originally filed in the Juvenile Court: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Adams, 69 Ohio St. 2d 120, 23 Ohio Op. 3d 164, 431 N.E.2d 326 (1982).

Habeas corpus

Habeas corpus was not available on a claim of improper bindover of a juvenile where the petitioner had an adequate remedy at law by appeal: Smith v. Bradshaw, 109 Ohio St. 3d 50, 845 N.E.2d 516, 2006 Ohio 1829, (2006).

Trial court erred in denying an inmate's motion to supplement his writ of habeas corpus petition and amend the same under Ohio R. Civ. P. 15(A) to include an allegation of jurisdictional error based on an improper bindover, where absent a proper bindover procedure under former RC § 2151.26 (now RC § 2152.12) due to a juvenile court's purported failure to administer a physical examination as required thereunder and by former Ohio R. Juv. P. 30, the jurisdiction of a juvenile court was exclusive and could not be waived. Moreover, when a court's judgment was void because the court lacked subject-matter jurisdiction, habeas corpus was generally an appropriate remedy despite the availability of appeal. Snitzky v. Wilson, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 6744, 2004 Ohio 7229, (2004), appeal dismissed by 2005 Ohio 5869, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 5288 (Ohio Ct. App., Trumbull County Nov. 4, 2005).

An allegation of improper bindover of a juvenile raises a viable habeas corpus claim: Johnson v. Timmerman-Cooper, 93 Ohio St. 3d 614, 757 N.E.2d 1153, 2001 Ohio 1803, (2001).

Once the juvenile was properly bound over, the common pleas court had jurisdiction to proceed. The fact that the juvenile was then prosecuted on different charges did not merit habeas corpus relief: (decided under former analogous section) State ex rel. Fryerson v. Tate, 84 Ohio St. 3d 481, 705 N.E.2d 353, 1999 Ohio 465, (1999).

Habeas corpus is not available to challenge the constitutionality of mandatory bindover provisions: (decided under former analogous section) In re Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus of Baker, 116 Ohio App. 3d 580, 688 N.E.2d 1068 (1996).

A petition alleging that the court lacked jurisdiction over the petitioner due to an improper bindover states a potentially good cause of action in habeas corpus: (decided under former analogous section) State ex rel. Harris v. Anderson, 76 Ohio St. 3d 193, 667 N.E.2d 1, 1996 Ohio 412, (1996).

Habeas corpus is not available to contest bindover proceedings where there is an adequate remedy at law: (decided under former analogous section) Gaskins v. Shiplevy, 76 Ohio St. 3d 380, 667 N.E.2d 1194, 1996 Ohio 387, (1996).

Without a proper bindover procedure under RC § 2151.26, a juvenile court's jurisdiction is exclusive and cannot be waived. When a court's judgment is void because it lacked jurisdiction, habeas is still an appropriate remedy despite the availability of appeal: (decided under former analogous section) Gaskins v. Shiplevy, 74 Ohio St. 3d 149, 656 N.E.2d 1282, 1995 Ohio 262, (1995).

Hearings

Where there was no indication in a juvenile court bindover order that a juvenile's waiver of a probable cause and amenability hearing was knowingly, competently, and intelligently made, a later delinquency charge against him on a new criminal matter required an appropriate bindover proceeding under RC § 2152.12 and Ohio R. Juv. P. 3. The hearing on the bindover issue was a critical phase that was mandatory under RC ch. 2152 and Ohio R. Juv. P. 30. State v. Brown, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4330, 2006 Ohio 4393, (Aug. 25, 2006).

Under JuvR 30, a preliminary probable cause hearing is mandatory if the juvenile court believes that it might want to relinquish its jurisdiction over the child: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Smith, 29 Ohio App. 3d 194, 29 Ohio B. 237, 504 N.E.2d 1121 (1985).

Indigence

An indigent juvenile offender is entitled to a record in a hearing conducted for the purpose of determining whether the juvenile court may waive jurisdiction and bind the offender over to the court of common pleas for criminal prosecution: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Ross, 23 Ohio App. 2d 215, 52 Ohio Op. 2d 332, 262 N.E.2d 427 (1970).

Jurisdiction

Common pleas court did not have subject matter jurisdiction to convict defendant of rape because it was undisputed that defendant was under the age of 18 during a period of time listed in the indictment, that he was indicted in the common pleas court, that he was not bound over from juvenile court, and that he never appeared in juvenile court. State v. Spannahake, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 1361, 2006 Ohio 1489, (2006).

Trial court did not err in failing to treat defendant as a serious youthful offender who, if convicted, would have been subject to a blended juvenile-adult sentence as there was no statutory mechanism for the trial court to return a case to a juvenile court once the juvenile court had relinquished jurisdiction. Under RC § 2152.12(I) and 2151.23(H), once a juvenile court has transferred a case to the Ohio Common Pleas Court, it has no further jurisdiction to hear or to determine a child's case, and the courts have held that when a juvenile has been bound over to the Ohio Common Pleas Court, the Ohio Common Pleas Court has no jurisdiction to review the bindover order for error. State v. Harris, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 653, 2006 Ohio 716, (2006).

Where defendant, age 16, was charged in the juvenile court with carrying concealed weapons in violation of RC § 2923.12 and aggravated robbery involving use of a deadly weapon in violation of RC § 2911.01(A)(1) and where defendant was bound over to the general division of the common pleas court on both offenses based on the aggravated robbery offense of which defendant was later acquitted, all further proceedings in the juvenile division on the carrying concealed weapons charge were discontinued under RC § 2152.12(I), thus terminating the juvenile division's jurisdiction under RC § 2151.23(H). State v. Washington, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 5902, 2005 Ohio 6546, (2005).

Pursuant to Ohio's statutory scheme, a juvenile adjudicated delinquent prior to age 18 remains a child in the eyes of the juvenile court until age 21. The juvenile court's exercise of its continuing jurisdiction regarding the parole violation was lawful: In re Gillespie, 150 Ohio App. 3d 502, 782 N.E.2d 140, 2002 Ohio 7025, (2002), appeal denied by 98 Ohio St. 3d 1513, 2003 Ohio 1572, 786 N.E.2d 63, 2003 Ohio LEXIS 842 (2003).

Absent a proper bindover procedure pursuant to RC § 2151.26, the juvenile court has the exclusive subject matter jurisdiction over any case concerning a child who is alleged to be a delinquent. The exclusive subject matter jurisdiction of the juvenile court cannot be waived: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Wilson, 73 Ohio St. 3d 40, 652 N.E.2d 196, 1995 Ohio 217, (1995).

A juvenile court does not have jurisdiction over a delinquency complaint where the alleged offender has reached the age of 21 before the charge was brought and the acts occurred before the offender reached 15: (decided under former analogous section) In re C., 61 Ohio Misc. 2d 610, 580 N.E.2d 1182 (CP 1991).

Unless a child has been transferred from the juvenile court, a court of common pleas does not have jurisdiction over a person under 18. A court of common pleas has jurisdiction to determine defendant's age at a hearing. The state has the burden of proving beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant was an adult at the time of the offense: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Neguse, 71 Ohio App. 3d 596, 594 N.E.2d 1116 (1991).

Transfer of a charge amounting to a felony in an adult from Juvenile Court to Common Pleas Court under RC § 2151.26 and JuvR 30 does not discharge jurisdiction in Juvenile Court over a pending charge amounting to a misdemeanor in an adult unless the misdemeanor stems from the same act constituting the felony and is an offense included in it: (decided under former analogous section) State ex rel. Duganitz v. Court, 23 Ohio Op. 3d 572 (App. 1981).

Where the defendant was charged with receiving stolen property which initially came into his possession as a juvenile but was retained by him six months into his majority, the defendant was properly charged as an adult: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Stevens, 65 Ohio Misc. 4, 19 Ohio Op. 3d 29, 413 N.E.2d 862 (MC 1979).

The juvenile court having once waived jurisdiction to handle a case under the juvenile code must order further proceedings under the regular procedural provisions of the criminal law: (decided under former analogous section) In re Davis, 87 Ohio L. Ab. 222, 22 Ohio Op. 2d 108, 179 N.E.2d 198 (JC 1961).

The juvenile code vests jurisdiction of the juvenile court over the infant, not the crime: (decided under former analogous section) In re Evans, 67 Ohio App. 66, 21 Ohio Op. 93, 35 N.E.2d 887 (1941).

Mandatory transfer

Where a juvenile court treated the offenses of carrying concealed weapons and aggravated robbery, in violation of RC §§ 2923.12(A) and 2911.01(A)(1) respectively, as mandatory bind-over offenses per RC §§ 2152.01(A) and 2152.12(A), although the weapons charge was a non-mandatory bind-over offense that required that findings be made pursuant to RC § 2152.12(B)(3) and Ohio R. Juv. P. 30(C), a meritorious issue on appeal was raised as to whether the error deprived the trial court of jurisdiction to convict defendant of the weapons charge; accordingly, the court set aside defendant's counsel's Anders brief, which had pointed out that potential issue, and indicated that new counsel would be appointed for purposes of pursuing the appeal. State v. Washington, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 41, 2005 Ohio 58, (2005).

Where defendant, age 16, was charged in the juvenile division with aggravated robbery involving use of a deadly weapon in violation of RC § 2911.01(A)(1), the juvenile court properly bound defendant over to the general division for trial. Transfer was required pursuant to RC §§ 2152.10(A), 12(A)(1)(b), as aggravated robbery was a category two offense under RC § 2152.02(CC)(1) for which probable cause was properly found. State v. Washington, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 5902, 2005 Ohio 6546, (2005).

In a case where bindover is mandatory, the juvenile court lacks subject matter jurisdiction to accept the juvenile's admission to delinquency charges: In re Graham, 147 Ohio App. 3d 452, 770 N.E.2d 1123, 2002 Ohio 2407, (2002).

Mental and physical examination

The juvenile court failed to accomplish a legal transfer of jurisdiction where there was no evidence in the record that the physical examination of the juvenile required by former RC § 2151.26 and JuvR 30 was performed: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Golphin, 81 Ohio St. 3d 543, 692 N.E.2d 608, 1998 Ohio 336, (1998).

In relinquishment proceedings in the juvenile court pursuant to Juv. R. 30, a juvenile is not entitled to the appointment of a private psychiatric examiner of the court's choosing and at the state's expense, instead of the court's psychologist: (decided under former analogous section) State ex rel. a Juvenile v. Hoose, 43 Ohio App. 3d 109, 539 N.E.2d 704 (1988).

According to RC § 2151.26(C), the decision to submit to or waive the mental and physical examination authorized by RC § 2151.26(A)(1)(c) rests ultimately with the child. The only requirement is that any waiver must be competently and intelligently made: (decided under former analogous section) State ex rel. Doe v. Tracy, 51 Ohio App. 3d 198, 555 N.E.2d 674 (1988).

The commitment of a fifteen year old to a state institution pursuant to RC § 2151.26 for the purpose of examination is not an act for which a writ of prohibition will issue: (decided under former analogous section) State ex rel. Harris v. Common Pleas Court, 25 Ohio App. 2d 78, 54 Ohio Op. 2d 115, 266 N.E.2d 589 (1970).

Under the provision of this section a child who is charged with committing a felony is entitled to a hearing at which he may present evidence as to his mental condition: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Yoss, 10 Ohio App. 2d 47, 39 Ohio Op. 2d 81, 225 N.E.2d 275 (1967).

Motion for reconsideration

Until the juvenile court either begins to hear evidence in an adjudicatory hearing or divests itself of jurisdiction by transferring the child for prosecution as an adult, the determination of the child's amenability is subject to reconsideration upon motion filed by a party: (decided under former analogous section) In re K.W., 73 Ohio Misc. 2d 20, 657 N.E.2d 611 (CP 1995).

Notice

The notice requirements of RC § 2151.26(D) are satisfied when the notice described therein is given to the child's counsel and to the child's "custodian." The juvenile court does not err in finding that the child's grandmother is the child's "custodian" where the record contains evidence that the grandmother stated to police that she had legal custody of the child: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Parks, 51 Ohio App. 3d 194, 555 N.E.2d 671 (1988).

Under the bind-over procedure set out in RC Chapter 2151., the notice of hearing requirement of RC § 2151.26(C) is mandatory and cannot be waived by the juvenile by his failure to object to non-compliance: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Taylor, 26 Ohio App. 3d 69, 26 Ohio B. 243, 498 N.E.2d 211 (1985).

Prior law

Pursuant to this section, as it existed immediately prior to November 19, 1969, where the evidence before a juvenile court was sufficient to support a finding that there was probable cause to believe a delinquent child had committed an act which could be a felony if committed by an adult, that court could properly bind the child over to the court of common pleas: (decided under former analogous section) In re Jackson, 21 Ohio St. 2d 215, 50 Ohio Op. 2d 447, 257 N.E.2d 74 (1970).

Probable cause

Juvenile court did not err in finding that there were sufficient facts to establish probable cause that defendant, a juvenile, committed offenses charged against him, arising from a car-jacking incident and a subsequent attempt to escape from the police, such that the bind-over to the trial court was proper pursuant to RC § 2151.26(B) and Ohio R. Juv. P. 30; the juvenile court did not have to find that defendant was guilty of the charged offenses to support its bind-over determination. State v. Goodwin, 166 Ohio App. 3d 709, 852 N.E.2d 1282, 2006 Ohio 2311, (2006).

Juvenile court's relinquishment of jurisdiction over a 17-year-old charged with murder and aggravated arson pursuant to the mandatory bindover provisions of RC § 2152.12(A) was proper as a juvenile court at a bindover hearing needed to find only the existence of probable cause; the juvenile court had to evaluate the quality of the State's evidence and any evidence presented by the juvenile attacking probable cause. State v. Kitchen, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 4519, 2003 Ohio 5017, (2003), appeal denied by 101 Ohio St. 3d 1423, 2004 Ohio 123, 802 N.E.2d 154, 2004 Ohio LEXIS 148 (2004).

Prohibition

Prohibition will not issue to prevent a common pleas court from trying a juvenile who has been transferred for prosecution as an adult. Any error complained of in a transfer order must be raised in an appeal from the judgment of the court of common pleas: (decided under former analogous section) State ex rel. Torres v.

Simmons, 68 Ohio St. 2d 118, 22 Ohio Op. 3d 340, 428 N.E.2d 862 (1981).

Recording of proceedings

Where the juvenile court complied with RC § 2152.12 and JuvR 30 in transferring a juvenile for criminal prosecution, the trial court had subject matter jurisdiction to hear the case despite the juvenile court's failure to record the proceeding pursuant to JuvR 37(A): State v. Mock, 136 Ohio Misc. 2d 21, 846 N.E.2d 108, 2005 Ohio 7142, (2005).

Sentencing

In appropriate circumstances, a juvenile offender whose case has been transferred to the court of common pleas for prosecution as an adult pursuant to RC § 2151.26 may, upon conviction, be ordered or committed to a community-based correctional facility established pursuant to RC §§ 2301.51-2301.58: (decided under former analogous section) OAG No. 97-013 (1997).

Time limits

The separate and different treatment of juveniles under the speedy trial requirements of Ohio law has a reasonable and valid basis and is neither arbitrary nor capricious: (decided under former analogous section) State v. Trapp, 52 Ohio App. 2d 189, 6 Ohio Op. 3d 175, 368 N.E.2d 1278 (1977).

When a minor is held by the juvenile court for acts which would be a felony, and the juvenile court relinquishes jurisdiction over the minor, the 90-day time limit of RC § 2945.71 for bringing him to trial as an adult felon starts to run at the time the juvenile court relinquishes jurisdiction: (decided under former analogous section) State ex rel. Williams v. Court of Common Pleas of Lucas County, 42 Ohio St. 2d 433, 71 Ohio Op. 2d 410, 329 N.E.2d 680 (1975).

Vacation of judgment

A juvenile court lacks jurisdiction to consider a CivR 60(B) motion where it has transferred a case for criminal prosecution, even where an indictment has not yet issued: (decided under former analogous section) In re Williams, 111 Ohio App. 3d 120, 675 N.E.2d 1254 (1996).

§ 2152.13 Serious youthful offender dispositional sentence.

(A) A juvenile court may impose a serious youthful offender dispositional sentence on a child only if the prosecuting attorney of the county in which the delinquent act allegedly occurred initiates the process against the child in accordance with this division, and the child is an alleged delinquent child who is eligible for the dispositional sentence. The prosecuting attorney may initiate the process in any of the following ways:

(1) Obtaining an indictment of the child as a serious youthful offender;

(2) The child waives the right to indictment, charging the child in a bill of information as a serious youthful offender;

(3) Until an indictment or information is obtained, requesting a serious youthful offender dispositional sentence in the original complaint alleging that the child is a delinquent child;

(4) Until an indictment or information is obtained, if the original complaint does not request a serious youthful offender dispositional sentence, filing with the juvenile court a written notice of intent to seek a serious youthful offender dispositional sentence within twenty days after the later of the following, unless the time is extended by the juvenile court for good cause shown:

(a) The date of the child's first juvenile court hearing regarding the complaint;

(b) The date the juvenile court determines not to transfer the case under section 2152.12 of the Revised Code.

After a written notice is filed under division (A)(4) of this section, the juvenile court shall serve a copy of the notice on the child and advise the child of the prosecuting attorney's intent to seek a serious youthful offender dispositional sentence in the case.

(B) If an alleged delinquent child is not indicted or charged by information as described in division (A)(1) or (2) of this section and if a notice or complaint as described in division (A)(3) or (4) of this section indicates that the prosecuting attorney intends to pursue a serious youthful offender dispositional sentence in the case, the juvenile court shall hold a preliminary hearing to determine if there is probable cause that the child committed the act charged and is by age eligible for, or required to receive, a serious youthful offender dispositional sentence.

(C)(1) A child for whom a serious youthful offender dispositional sentence is sought has the right to a grand jury determination of probable cause that the child committed the act charged and that the child is eligible by age for a serious youthful offender dispositional sentence. The grand jury may be impaneled by the court of common pleas or the juvenile court.

Once a child is indicted, or charged by information or the juvenile court determines that the child is eligible for a serious youthful offender dispositional sentence, the child is entitled to an open and speedy trial by jury in juvenile court and to be provided with a transcript of the proceedings. The time within which the trial is to be held under Title XXIX [29] of the Revised Code commences on whichever of the following dates is applicable:

(a) If the child is indicted or charged by information, on the date of the filing of the indictment or information.

(b) If the child is charged by an original complaint that requests a serious youthful offender dispositional sentence, on the date of the filing of the complaint.

(c) If the child is not charged by an original complaint that requests a serious youthful offender dispositional sentence, on the date that the prosecuting attorney files the written notice of intent to seek a serious youthful offender dispositional sentence.

(2) If the child is detained awaiting adjudication, upon indictment or being charged by information, the child has the same right to bail as an adult charged with the offense the alleged delinquent act would be if committed by an adult. Except as provided in division (D) of section 2152.14 of the Revised Code, all provisions of Title XXIX [29] of the Revised Code and the Criminal Rules shall apply in the case and to the child. The juvenile court shall afford the child all rights afforded a person who is prosecuted for committing a crime including the right to counsel and the right to raise the issue of competency. The child may not waive the right to counsel.

(D)(1) If a child is adjudicated a delinquent child for committing an act under circumstances that require the juvenile court to impose upon the child a serious youthful offender dispositional sentence under section 2152.11 of the Revised Code, all of the following apply:

(a) The juvenile court shall impose upon the child a sentence available for the violation, as if the child were an adult, under Chapter 2929. of the Revised Code, except that the juvenile court shall not impose on the child a sentence of death or life imprisonment without parole.

(b) The juvenile court also shall impose upon the child one or more traditional juvenile dispositions under sections 2152.16, 2152.19, and 2152.20, and, if applicable, section 2152.17 of the Revised Code.

(c) The juvenile court shall stay the adult portion of the serious youthful offender dispositional sentence pending the successful completion of the traditional juvenile dispositions imposed.

(2)(a) If a child is adjudicated a delinquent child for committing an act under circumstances that allow, but do not require, the juvenile court to impose on the child a serious youthful offender dispositional sentence under section 2152.11 of the Revised Code, all of the following apply:

(i) If the juvenile court on the record makes a finding that, given the nature and circumstances of the violation and the history of the child, the length of time, level of security, and types of programming and resources available in the juvenile system alone are not adequate to provide the juvenile court with a reasonable expectation that the purposes set forth in section 2152.01 of the Revised Code will be met, the juvenile court may impose upon the child a sentence available for the violation, as if the child were an adult, under Chapter 2929. of the Revised Code, except that the juvenile court shall not impose on the child a sentence of death or life imprisonment without parole.

(ii) If a sentence is imposed under division (D)(2)(a)(i) of this section, the juvenile court also shall impose upon the child one or more traditional juvenile dispositions under sections 2152.16, 2152.19, and 2152.20 and, if applicable, section 2152.17 of the Revised Code.

(iii) The juvenile court shall stay the adult portion of the serious youthful offender dispositional sentence pending the successful completion of the traditional juvenile dispositions imposed.

(b) If the juvenile court does not find that a sentence should be imposed under division (D)(2)(a)(i) of this section, the juvenile court may impose one or more traditional juvenile dispositions under sections 2152.16, 2152.19, 2152.20, and, if applicable, section 2152.17 of the Revised Code.

(3) A child upon whom a serious youthful offender dispositional sentence is imposed under division (D)(1) or (2) of this section has a right to appeal under division (A)(1), (3), (4), (5), or (6) of section 2953.08 of the Revised Code the adult portion of the serious youthful offender dispositional sentence when any of those divisions apply. The child may appeal the adult portion, and the court shall consider the appeal as if the adult portion were not stayed.

Constitutionality

Ohio's serious youthful offender sentencing scheme does not violate the prohibition against cruel and unusual punishment under the Eighth Amendment and Ohio Const. art. I, § 9 as: (1) the scheme does not provide for penalties against juveniles so greatly disproportionate to the offenses committed that those penalties shock the sense of justice in the community, (2) the scheme prohibits the imposition of the most severe adult punishment, (3) the scheme reserves adult punishment only for serious juvenile offenders not capable of being rehabilitated within the juvenile system, and (4) among juveniles who receive an adult sentence, only those who commit further serious wrongdoing and who are at least 14 years old can be ordered to serve the adult sentence. In re J.B., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 6348, 2005 Ohio 7029, (2005), writ of certiorari denied by 127 S. Ct. 1259, 167 L. Ed. 2d 146, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 2649, 75 U.S.L.W. 3438 (U.S. 2007).

Ohio's serious youthful offender law does not violate due process as, while the scheme subjects certain juveniles to adult punishment, the statute has been crafted to take into account juvenile-adult distinctions, as: (1) the most severe adult punishments are prohibited, (2) the juvenile court can order adult punishment only after the juvenile court determines that the juvenile system alone cannot adequately fulfill the purposes for disposition outlined in RC § 2152.01(A), (3) while a juvenile as young as 10 can receive a serious youthful offender disposition, the juvenile court can only invoke the adult punishment if the juvenile is at least 14 years old, and if the juvenile has engaged in further serious wrongdoing, and (4) the court must also determine, after a hearing, that the juvenile offender is unlikely to be rehabilitated during the remaining period of juvenile jurisdiction. In re J.B., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 6348, 2005 Ohio 7029, (2005), writ of certiorari denied by 127 S. Ct. 1259, 167 L. Ed. 2d 146, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 2649, 75 U.S.L.W. 3438 (U.S. 2007).

When, in sentencing a serious youthful offender, a juvenile court made findings under RC § 2929.14(B), the fact that the statute was subsequently found unconstitutional did not render the sentence imposed invalid, under the Sixth Amendment or Ohio Const. art. I, §§ 5 or 10, because the trial court's authority to impose the sentence was derived from RC § 2152.13(D)(2)(a), which only referred the court to the unconstitutional statute. State v. D.H., 169 Ohio App. 3d 798, 865 N.E.2d 92, 2006 Ohio 6953, (2006).

Generally

Pursuant to the clear and convincing standard of review, pursuant to RC § 2953.08(C)(2), the non-minimum sentence imposed on defendant, a juvenile, met the requirements of RC § 2929.14(B) and it complied with the statutory mandates of RC ch. 2929, based on consideration of the adult portion of defendant's serious youthful offender disposition sentence under RC § 2152.13(D)(3), which was reviewed as if it were not stayed for purposes of appeal. The trial court stated that it did not impose the shortest prison term authorized for the offenses because the shortest prison term would have demeaned the seriousness of defendant's conduct and would not have adequately protected the public from future crime. In re J.R., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 3727, 2005 Ohio 4090, (2005).

When appellant was properly classified as a serious youthful offender, upon his guilty plea to rape, and a blended sentence was imposed, consisting of a commitment to the Department of Youth Services, followed by a sentence in an adult facility, and the adult part of appellant's sentence was more than the statutory minimum for his crime, the trial court had to make the findings required by RC § 2929.14(B) to impose a greater than minimum sentence, and its failure to do so required reversal of the sentence. In re Wells, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 6189, 2005 Ohio 6861, (2005).

Under RC § 2152.13(D)(1), a juvenile court has the authority to sentence a serious juvenile offender under RC ch. 2929, which provides the criminal penalties and sentencing procedures in adult criminal cases, and the section's structure requires that a trial court make certain findings under RC §§ 2929.03, 2929.04, 2929.11, 2929.12, 2929.13, and 2929.14 to determine a particular sentence. Compliance with those sentencing statutes is required, so the trial court must set forth the statutorily mandated findings and, when necessary, articulate on the record the particular reasons for making those findings, under RC § 2929.19(B)(2). In re Wells, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 6189, 2005 Ohio 6861, (2005).

Admissions

Juvenile did not make his admission to charges knowingly, voluntarily, and intelligently pursuant to Ohio R. Juv. P. 29(D) because the juvenile court failed to inform him, on the record, why he was required to enter new admissions and pleas under Ohio R. Crim. P. 11, based on the fact that he had been previously misinformed as to the consequences for the entry of his pleas and admissions pursuant to RC § 2152.13(D)(2). There was no indication given to the juvenile upon his second set of admissions and pleas as to why the first set were considered null and void. In re Smith, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2625, 2006 Ohio 2788, (June 5, 2006).

Evidence sufficient

Trial court's finding that appellant was a serious youthful offender under RC § 2152.13 was not against the manifest weight of evidence. Appellant struck the victim violently without any provocation causing a fracture of the skull and a brain bleed, he violated his house arrest, he assaulted an individual at school, and he was suspended from school on numerous occasions and for various reasons, including fighting. State v. McGraph, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4634, 2006 Ohio 4696, (2006).

Motion to dismiss indictment

Juvenile court did not violate RC §§ 2152.021 and 2152.13 when it denied defendant's motion to dismiss an indictment charging defendant with child endangering and murder because the prosecutor obtained an indictment under RC § 2152.13(A)(1) and § 2142.13(A)(3) and (4) were not applicable. Nothing in RC §§ 2152.021 or 2152.13 prohibits a prosecutor from initiating serious youthful offender proceedings via an indictment when a complaint has previously been filed. In re J.B., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 6348, 2005 Ohio 7029, (2005), writ of certiorari denied by 127 S. Ct. 1259, 167 L. Ed. 2d 146, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 2649, 75 U.S.L.W. 3438 (U.S. 2007).

Right to jury trial

Defendant's right to a jury trial under Blakely v. Washington, 542 U.S. 296 (2004), was not violated where the juvenile court and not the jury made a serious youthful offender finding under RC § 2152.13(D)(2)(a)(i) as the sentence defendant received was derived from the jury's verdict on the murder and child endangering counts, and pursuant to RC § 2152.11(B)(2) and (E)(2), defendant was subject to a serious youthful offender disposition at the discretion of the juvenile court simply by virtue of the delinquency finding for murder and child endangerment. The range of defendant's potential punishment by virtue of the jury verdict alone included the applicable adult punishment set forth in RC ch. 2929 and in making the finding in RC § 2152.13(D)(2)(a)(i), the juvenile court was determining defendant's punishment within the statutorily-prescribed range, taking into account the nature and circumstances of the offense, and the security, programming, and resources available in the juvenile system. In re J.B., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 6348, 2005 Ohio 7029, (2005), writ of certiorari denied by 127 S. Ct. 1259, 167 L. Ed. 2d 146, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 2649, 75 U.S.L.W. 3438 (U.S. 2007).

In a juvenile delinquency proceeding, when appellant was sentenced as a serious youthful offender, the findings that the trial court made in doing so, under RC § 2152.13(D)(2)(a), did not violate the Sixth Amendment, as applied in Blakely, or Ohio Const. art. I, §§ 5 or 10, because appellant was tried in juvenile court, where he had no constitutional right to a jury trial. State v. D.H., 169 Ohio App. 3d 798, 865 N.E.2d 92, 2006 Ohio 6953, (2006).

§ 2152.14 Motion to invoke adult portion of dispositional sentence.

(A)(1) The director of youth services may request the prosecuting attorney of the county in which is located the juvenile court that imposed a serious youthful offender dispositional sentence upon a person to file a motion with that juvenile court to invoke the adult portion of the dispositional sentence if all of the following apply to the person:

- (a) The person is at least fourteen years of age.
- (b) The person is in the institutional custody, or an escapee from the custody, of the department of youth services.
- (c) The person is serving the juvenile portion of the serious youthful offender dispositional sentence.
- (2) The motion shall state that there is reasonable cause to believe that either of the following misconduct has occurred and shall state that at least one incident of misconduct of that nature occurred after the person reached fourteen years of age:

(a) The person committed an act that is a violation of the rules of the institution and that could be charged as any felony or as a first degree misdemeanor offense of violence if committed by an adult.

(b) The person has engaged in conduct that creates a substantial risk to the safety or security of the institution, the community, or the victim.

(B) If a person is at least fourteen years of age, is serving the juvenile portion of a serious youthful offender dispositional sentence, and is on parole or aftercare from a department of youth services facility, or on community control, the director of youth services, the juvenile court that imposed the serious youthful offender dispositional sentence on the person, or the probation department supervising the person may request the prosecuting attorney of the county in which is located the juvenile court to file a motion with the juvenile court to invoke the adult portion of the dispositional sentence. The prosecuting attorney may file a motion to invoke the adult portion of the dispositional sentence even if no request is made. The motion shall state that there is reasonable cause to believe that either of the following occurred and shall state that at least one incident of misconduct of that nature occurred after the person reached fourteen years of age:

(1) The person committed an act that is a violation of the conditions of supervision and that could be charged as any felony or as a first degree misdemeanor offense of violence if committed by an adult.

(2) The person has engaged in conduct that creates a substantial risk to the safety or security of the community or of the victim.

(C) If the prosecuting attorney declines a request to file a motion that was made by the department of youth services or the supervising probation department under division (A) or (B) of this section or fails to act on a request made under either division by the department within a reasonable time, the department of youth services or the supervising probation department may file a motion of the type described in division (A) or (B) of this section with the juvenile court to invoke the adult portion of the serious youthful offender dispositional sentence. If the prosecuting attorney declines a request to file a motion that was made by the juvenile court under division (B) of this section or fails to act on a request from the court under that division within a reasonable time, the juvenile court may hold the hearing described in division (D) of this section on its own motion.

(D) Upon the filing of a motion described in division (A), (B), or (C) of this section, the juvenile court may hold a hearing to determine whether to invoke the adult portion of a person's serious juvenile offender dispositional sentence. The juvenile court shall not invoke the adult portion of the dispositional sentence without a hearing. At the hearing the person who is the subject of the serious youthful offender disposition has the right to be present, to receive notice of the grounds upon which the adult sentence portion is sought to be invoked, to be represented by counsel including counsel appointed under Juvenile Rule 4(A), to be advised on the procedures and protections set forth in the Juvenile Rules, and to present evidence on the person's own behalf, including evidence that the person has a mental illness or is a mentally retarded person. The person may not waive the right to counsel. The hearing shall be open to the public. If the person presents evidence that the person has a mental illness or is a mentally retarded person, the juvenile court shall consider that evidence in determining whether to invoke the adult portion of the serious youthful offender dispositional sentence.

(E)(1) The juvenile court may invoke the adult portion of a person's serious youthful offender dispositional sentence if the juvenile court finds all of the following on the record by clear and convincing evidence:

(a) The person is serving the juvenile portion of a serious youthful offender dispositional sentence.

(b) The person is at least fourteen years of age and has been admitted to a department of youth services facility, or criminal charges are pending against the person.

(c) The person engaged in the conduct or acts charged under division (A), (B), or (C) of this section, and the person's conduct demonstrates that the person is unlikely to be rehabilitated during the remaining period of juvenile jurisdiction.

(2) The court may modify the adult sentence the court invokes to consist of any lesser prison term that could be imposed for the offense and, in addition to the prison term or in lieu of the prison term if the prison term was not mandatory, any community control sanction that the offender was eligible to receive at sentencing.

(F) If a juvenile court issues an order invoking the adult portion of a serious youthful offender dispositional sentence under division (E) of this section, the juvenile portion of the dispositional sentence shall terminate, and the department of youth services shall transfer the person to the department of rehabilitation and correction or place the person under another sanction imposed as part of the sentence. The juvenile court shall state in its order the total number of days that the person has been held in detention or in a facility operated by, or under contract with, the department of youth services under the juvenile portion of the dispositional sentence. The time the person must serve on a prison term imposed under the adult portion of the dispositional sentence shall be reduced by the total number of days specified in the order plus any additional days the person is held in a juvenile facility or in detention after the order is issued and before the person is transferred to the custody of the department of rehabilitation and correction. In no case shall the total prison term as calculated under this division exceed the maximum prison term available for an adult who is convicted of violating the same sections of the Revised Code.

Any community control imposed as part of the adult sentence or as a condition of a judicial release from prison shall be under the supervision of the entity that provides adult probation services in the county. Any post-release control imposed after the offender otherwise is released from prison shall be supervised by the adult parole authority.

CASE NOTES AND OAG

Constitutionality

Ohio's serious youthful offender sentencing scheme does not violate the prohibition against cruel and unusual punishment under the Eighth Amendment and Ohio Const. art. I, § 9 as: (1) the scheme does not provide for penalties against juveniles so greatly disproportionate to the offenses committed that those penalties shock the sense of justice in the community, (2) the scheme prohibits the imposition of the most severe adult punishment, (3) the scheme reserves adult punishment only for serious juvenile offenders not capable of being rehabilitated within the juvenile system, and (4) among juveniles who receive an adult sentence, only those who commit further serious wrongdoing and who are at least 14 years old can be ordered to serve the adult sentence. In re J.B., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 6348, 2005 Ohio 7029, (2005), writ of certiorari denied by 127 S. Ct. 1259, 167 L. Ed. 2d 146, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 2649, 75 U.S.L.W. 3438 (U.S. 2007).

Ohio's serious youthful offender law does not violate due process as, while the scheme subjects certain juveniles to adult punishment, the statute has been crafted to take into account juvenile-adult distinctions, as: (1) the most severe adult punishments are prohibited, (2) the juvenile court can order adult punishment only after the juvenile court determines that the juvenile system alone cannot adequately fulfill the purposes for disposition outlined in RC § 2152.01(A), (3) while a juvenile as young as 10 can receive a serious youthful offender disposition, the juvenile court can only invoke the adult punishment if the juvenile is at least 14 years old, and if the juvenile has engaged in further serious wrongdoing, and (4) the court must also determine, after a hearing, that the juvenile offender is unlikely to be rehabilitated during the remaining period of juvenile jurisdiction. In re J.B., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 6348, 2005 Ohio 7029, (2005), writ of certiorari denied by 127 S. Ct. 1259, 167 L. Ed. 2d 146, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 2649, 75 U.S.L.W. 3438 (U.S. 2007).

Lack of an amenability hearing at the original disposition hearing or at a hearing to determine whether the adult portion of a serious youthful offender's sentence should be invoked does not violate due process as: (1) the juvenile court must consider, at the time it imposes an adult sentence and at the time it invokes the adult sentence, whether the juvenile system can adequately rehabilitate a defendant, and (2) before invoking the adult punishment, the juvenile court must hold a full hearing, at which the defendant can present evidence in favor of remaining within the juvenile system. In re J.B., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 6348, 2005 Ohio 7029, (2005), writ of certiorari denied by 127 S. Ct. 1259, 167 L. Ed. 2d 146, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 2649, 75 U.S.L.W. 3438 (U.S. 2007).

(A)(1) If a child is adjudicated a delinquent child for committing an act that would be a felony if committed by an adult, the juvenile court may commit the child to the legal custody of the department of youth services for secure confinement as follows:

(a) For an act that would be aggravated murder or murder if committed by an adult, until the offender attains twenty-one years of age;

(b) For a violation of section 2923.02 of the Revised Code that involves an attempt to commit an act that would be aggravated murder or murder if committed by an adult, a minimum period of six to seven years as prescribed by the court and a maximum period not to exceed the child's attainment of twenty-one years of age;

(c) For a violation of section 2903.03, 2905.01, 2909.02, or 2911.01 or division (A) of section 2903.04 of the Revised Code or for a violation of any provision of section 2907.02 of the Revised Code other than division (A)(1)(b) of that section when the sexual conduct or insertion involved was consensual and when the victim of the violation of division (A)(1)(b) of that section was older than the delinquent child, was the same age as the delinquent child, or was less than three years younger than the delinquent child, for an indefinite term consisting of a minimum period of one to three years, as prescribed by the court, and a maximum period not to exceed the child's attainment of twenty-one years of age;

(d) If the child is adjudicated a delinquent child for committing an act that is not described in division (A)(1)(b) or (c) of this section and that would be a felony of the first or second degree if committed by an adult, for an indefinite term consisting of a minimum period of one year and a maximum period not to exceed the child's attainment of twenty-one years of age.

(e) For committing an act that would be a felony of the third, fourth, or fifth degree if committed by an adult or for a violation of division (A) of section 2923.211 [2923.21.1] of the Revised Code, for an indefinite term consisting of a minimum period of six months and a maximum period not to exceed the child's attainment of twenty-one years of age.

(2) In each case in which a court makes a disposition under this section, the court retains control over the commitment for the minimum period specified by the court in divisions (A)(1)(a) to (e) of this section. During the minimum period, the department of youth services shall not move the child to a nonsecure setting without the permission of the court that imposed the disposition.

(B)(1) Subject to division (B)(2) of this section, if a delinquent child is committed to the department of youth services under this section, the department may release the child at any time after the minimum period specified by the court in division (A)(1) of this section ends.

(2) A commitment under this section is subject to a supervised release or to a discharge of the child from the custody of the department for medical reasons pursuant to section 5139.54 of the Revised Code, but, during the minimum period specified by the court in division (A)(1) of this section, the department shall obtain court approval of a supervised release or discharge under that section.

(C) If a child is adjudicated a delinquent child, at the dispositional hearing and prior to making any disposition pursuant to this section, the court shall determine whether the delinquent child previously has been adjudicated a delinquent child for a violation of a law or ordinance. If the delinquent child previously has been adjudicated a delinquent child for a violation of a law or ordinance, the court, for purposes of entering an order of disposition of the delinquent child under this section, shall consider the previous delinquent child adjudication as a conviction of a violation of the law or ordinance in determining the degree of the offense the current act would be had it been committed by an adult. This division also shall apply in relation to the imposition of any financial sanction under section 2152.19 of the Revised Code.

Generally

Because defendant juvenile committed a felony of the second degree, an act not described in RC § 2152.16(A)(1)(b) or (c), the minimum period for her commitment to the Ohio Department of Youth Services should have been one year, not four. The trial court's disregard of the statutory requirements when imposing the sentence rendered the attempted sentence a nullity and the case was remanded for resentencing. In re T.J., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4329, 2006 Ohio 4406, (2006).

Where defendant, a juvenile, admitted that he committed a series of burglaries, for which he was committed to a juvenile detention facility, and he thereafter admitted that he violated the terms of his probation at the facility, he was deemed a probation violator by a magistrate and he was committed to the custody of the Ohio Department of Youth Services, pursuant to the trial court's authority under RC § 2152.16. Although the juvenile claimed that he was an at-risk youth who came from a chaotic home environment and who had mental health issues, that did not entitle him to a placement at a private residential facility, as he suggested. In re Hayes, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 18, 2006 Ohio 32, (2006).

Admissions

Where a juvenile's remorse was questionable and the juvenile was informed of the maximum penalty under RC § 2152.16(A)(1)(e) for gross sexual imposition, the trial court complied with Ohio R. Juv. P. 29(D); there was no indication that the juvenile was prejudiced by the failure to be informed of the penalties for disorderly conduct. In re Wisdom, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 949, 2005 Ohio 930, (2005).

Authority of court

Juvenile court's transfer of a delinquent juvenile's placement from a residential treatment program to the Division of Youth Services was within the court's authority under RC § 2152.16(A)(1), as it had continuing jurisdiction once the juvenile was adjudicated as delinquent pursuant to RC §§ 2151.23 and 2151.38. In re D.B., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2738, 2006 Ohio 2891, (2006).

Child sex abuse

Where the juvenile, who sexually assaulted a five-year-old, was committed to the custody of the Department of Youth Services (DYS) for a minimum period of 36 months and a maximum period not to exceed his 21st birthday, but, the commitment was suspended and the juvenile was placed on probation conditioned upon the successful completion of a rehabilitation program, the trial court's order was within the statutory guidelines of RC § 2152.16(A). In re C.M., 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1684, 2004 Ohio 1927, (2004).

Pursuant to RC § 2152.16(A)(1)(c), a delinquency adjudication was proper where a 10-year old juvenile defendant was found to have sexually assaulted a 5-year old victim. In re N.K., 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 6427, 2003 Ohio 7059, (2003).

Discretion of court

Juvenile court did not err in committing defendant to the Ohio Department of Youth Services until he reached the age of 21 as the juvenile court found that a serious youthful offender disposition was necessary and the sentences were within the ranges authorized by law for juveniles found delinquent for committing those crimes. While there was testimony that defendant was a good candidate for a rehabilitation program, there was also testimony that defendant was benefitting from the structure in juvenile detention and had suffered no detrimental effects from that confinement, and defendant committed a brutal physical assault of a defenseless young child that resulted in that child's death. In re J.B., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 6348, 2005 Ohio 7029, (2005), writ of certiorari denied by 127 S. Ct. 1259, 167 L. Ed. 2d 146, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 2649, 75 U.S.L.W. 3438 (U.S. 2007).

In light of the seriousness of the two sexual imposition offenses that the trial court found that appellant had committed, and the fact that the trial court suspended appellant's commitment to the Ohio Department of Youth Services (ODYS) conditioned upon his completion of counseling, and his agreeing to have no contact, direct or indirect, with the victims in this case, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in committing appellant to the ODYS for a minimum period of six months and a maximum period not to extend beyond his 21st birthday. In re A.L., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4255, 2006 Ohio 4329, (2006).

Juvenile court's decision to commit a juvenile who had been adjudicated as a delinquent to the Department of Youth Services pursuant to RC § 2152.16(A)(1)(c) was not an abuse of discretion, as the juvenile's prior placement in a residential treatment program had not proved effectual; the evidence supported a finding that the juvenile was no longer benefitting from that environment, that he was acting out and not complying with the treatment center's rules, and that he had been put on notice of the consequences of his failure to follow the rules. In re D.B., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 2738, 2006 Ohio 2891, (2006).

§ 2152.17 Commitment for specification; consecutive periods of commitment.

(A) Subject to division (D) of this section, if a child is adjudicated a delinquent child for committing an act, other than a violation of section 2923.12 of the Revised Code, that would be a felony if committed by an adult and if the court determines that, if the child was an adult, the child would be guilty of a specification of the type set forth in section 2941.141 [2941.14.1], 2941.144 [2941.14.4], 2941.145 [2941.14.5], 2941.146 [2941.14.6], 2941.1412 [2941.14.12], 2941.1413 [2941.14.13], or 2941.1414 [2941.14.14] of the Revised Code, in addition to any commitment or other disposition the court imposes for the underlying delinquent act, all of the following apply:

(1) If the court determines that the child would be guilty of a specification of the type set forth in section 2941.141 [2941.14.1] of the Revised Code, the court may commit the child to the department of youth services for the specification for a definite period of up to one year.

(2) If the court determines that the child would be guilty of a specification of the type set forth in section 2941.145 [2941.14.5] of the Revised Code or if the delinquent act is a violation of division (A)(1) or (2) of section 2903.06 of the Revised Code and the court determines that the child would be guilty of a specification of the type set forth in section 2941.1414 [2941.14.14] of the Revised Code, the court shall commit the child to the department of youth services for the specification for a definite period of not less than one and not more than three years, and the court also shall commit the child to the department for the underlying delinquent act under sections 2152.11 to 2152.16 of the Revised Code.

(3) If the court determines that the child would be guilty of a specification of the type set forth in section 2941.144 [2941.14.4], 2941.146 [2941.14.6], or 2941.1412 [2941.14.12] of the Revised Code or if the delinquent act is a violation of division (A)(1) or (2) of section 2903.06 of the Revised Code and the court determines that the child would be guilty of a specification of the type set forth in section 2941.1413 [2941.14.13] of the Revised Code, the court shall commit the child to the department of youth services for the specification for a definite period of not less than one and not more than five years, and the court also shall commit the child to the department for the underlying delinquent act under sections 2152.11 to 2152.16 of the Revised Code.

(B) Division (A) of this section also applies to a child who is an accomplice to the same extent the firearm specifications would apply to an adult accomplice in a criminal proceeding.

(C) If a child is adjudicated a delinquent child for committing an act that would be aggravated murder, murder, or a first, second, or third degree felony offense of violence if committed by an adult and if the court determines that, if the child was an adult, the child would be guilty of a specification of the type set forth in section 2941.142 [2941.14.2] of the Revised Code in relation to the act for which the child was adjudicated a delinquent child, the court shall commit the child for the specification to the legal custody of the department of youth services for institutionalization in a secure facility for a definite period of not less than one and not more than three years, subject to division (D)(2) of this section, and the court also shall commit the child to the department for the underlying delinquent act.

(D)(1) If the child is adjudicated a delinquent child for committing an act that would be an offense of violence that is a felony if committed by an adult and is committed to the legal custody of the department of youth services pursuant to division (A)(1) of section 2152.16 of the Revised Code and if the court determines that the child, if the child was an adult, would be guilty of a specification of the type set forth in section 2941.1411 [2941.14.11] of the Revised Code in relation to the act for which the child was adjudicated a delinquent child, the court may commit the child to the custody of the department of youth services for institutionalization in a secure facility for up to two years, subject to division (D)(2) of this section.

(2) A court that imposes a period of commitment under division (A) of this section is not precluded from imposing an additional period of commitment under division (C) or (D)(1) of this section, a court that imposes a period of commitment under division (C) of this section is not precluded from imposing an additional period of commitment under division (A) or (D)(1) of this section, and a court that imposes a period of commitment under division (D)(1) of this section is not precluded from imposing an additional period of commitment under division (A) or (C) of this section.

(E) The court shall not commit a child to the legal custody of the department of youth services for a specification pursuant to this section for a period that exceeds five years for any one delinquent act. Any commitment imposed pursuant to division (A), (B), (C), or (D)(1) of this section shall be in addition to, and shall be served consecutively with and prior to, a period of commitment ordered under this chapter for the underlying delinquent act, and each commitment imposed pursuant to division (A), (B), (C), or (D)(1) of this section shall be in addition to, and shall be served consecutively with, any other period of commitment imposed under those divisions. If a commitment is imposed under division (A) or (B) of this section and a commitment also is imposed under division (C) of this section, the period imposed under division (A) or (B) of this section shall be served prior to the period imposed under division (C) of this section.

In each case in which a court makes a disposition under this section, the court retains control over the commitment for the entire period of the commitment.

The total of all the periods of commitment imposed for any specification under this section and for the underlying offense shall not exceed the child's attainment of twenty-one years of age.

(F) If a child is adjudicated a delinquent child for committing two or more acts that would be felonies if committed by an adult and if the court entering the delinquent child adjudication orders the commitment of the child for two or more of those acts to the legal custody of the department of youth services for institutionalization in a secure facility pursuant to section 2152.13 or 2152.16 of the Revised Code, the court may order that all of the periods of commitment imposed under those sections for those acts be served consecutively in the legal custody of the department of youth services, provided that those periods of commitment shall be in addition to and commence immediately following the expiration of a period of commitment that the court imposes pursuant to division (A), (B), (C), or (D)(1) of this section. A court shall not commit a delinquent child to the legal custody of the department of youth services under this division for a period that exceeds the child's attainment of twenty-one years of age.

† The effective date differs from that specified in section 3 of the Act. See provisions of OConst art II, § 1c.

The provisions of § 3, H.B. 52 (150 v —), read as follows:

SECTION 3. Section 2152.17 of the Revised Code is presented in this act as a composite of the section as amended by both Sub.

H.B. 130 and Sub. H.B. 393 of the 124th General Assembly. Section 4511.01 of the Revised Code is presented in this act as a composite of the section as amended by Am. Sub. S.B. 123 and Am. Sub. S.B. 231, both of the 124th General Assembly. The General Assembly, applying the principle stated in division (B) of section 1.52 of the Revised Code that amendments are to be harmonized if reasonably capable of simultaneous operation, finds that the composites are the resulting versions of the sections in effect prior to the effective date of the sections as presented in this act.

The provisions of §§ 3, 4, 5 of HB 130 (149 v —) read as follows:

SECTION 3. Section 2152.17 of the Revised Code, as amended by this act, shall take effect January 1, 2002.

SECTION 4. The amendment of section 2151.355 of the Revised Code is not intended to supersede the earlier repeal, with delayed effective date, of that section.

SECTION 5. (A) Section 2151.355 of the Revised Code is presented in this act as a composite of the section as amended by both Am. Sub. S.B. 181 and Am. Sub. S.B. 222 of the 123rd General Assembly. The General Assembly, applying the principle stated in division (B) of section 1.52 of the Revised Code that amendments are to be harmonized if reasonably capable of simultaneous operation, finds that the composite is the resulting version of the section in effect prior to the effective date of the section as presented in this act.

(B) Section 2152.17 of the Revised Code, as presented in this act, includes matter that was amended into former section 2151.355 of the Revised Code by Am. Sub. S.B. 222 of the 123rd General Assembly. Paragraphs of former section 2151.355 of the Revised Code containing Am. Sub. S.B. 222 amendments were transferred to section 2152.17 of the Revised Code by Am. Sub. S.B. 179 of the 123rd General Assembly as part of its general revision of the juvenile sentencing laws. The General Assembly, applying the principle stated in division (B) of section 1.52 of the Revised Code that amendments are to be harmonized if reasonably capable of simultaneous operation, finds that the version of section 2152.17 of the Revised Code presented in this act is the resulting version of the section in effect prior to the effective date of the section as presented in this act.

Effect of Amendments

151 v H 95, effective August 3, 2006, deleted (G), pertaining to adjudication of a delinquent child.

150 v H 52, effective June 1, 2004, inserted "or if the delinquent ... 2941.1414 of the Revised Code" in (A)(2); inserted "or if the delinquent ... 2941.1413 of the Revised Code" in (A)(3); and corrected internal references.

Constitutionality

Imposition of two consecutive terms of commitment to the Department of Youth Services was not a violation of a juvenile's rights under Blakely and U.S. Const. amend. VI and Ohio Const. art. I, § 10, as the sentencing decision in the juvenile delinquency matter was not based on RC § 2929.14, which had been deemed unconstitutional due to judicial fact-finding under Foster, but instead, it was based on RC § 2152.17(F), which provided a juvenile court with judicial discretion to impose consecutive terms. There was no disparity between the sentencing in adult criminal matters and juvenile delinquency proceedings with respect to imposition of consecutive terms following Foster and the removal of judicial fact-finding, and the juvenile's equal protection argument under U.S. Const. amend. XIV failed. In re C.D.L., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4107, 2006 Ohio 4150, (2006).

RC § 2152.17(F) did not violate the Equal Protection Clause or Ohio Const. art. I, § 2, even though it contained no requirement that the juvenile court provide any findings on the record to impose a consecutive term for the disposition of juveniles and trial courts were required to make certain findings before imposing consecutive prison sentences in the context of adult offenders, as RC § 2152.17(F) did not impinge a fundamental right; a rational basis existed for sentencing juveniles in a "different fashion" than adults because the purposes of felony sentencing and juvenile sentencing were different, and juvenile courts were given wider discretion in the early release of offenders. The 2002 Ohio Revised Code changes might have provided some shift of emphasis to elements of responsibility and accountability, but the primary focus remained on the development of the child. In re Z.S., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 6346, 2005 Ohio 7033, (2005).

Where a juvenile claimed that RC § 2152.17(F) violated the equal protection clauses of U.S. Const. amend. XIV and Ohio Const. art. I, § 2, but failed to raise the issue before the trial court, the juvenile waived the issue on appeal. In re S.C., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 852, 2005 Ohio 810, (2005).

Differences in the manner in which consecutive penalties are imposed in the juvenile and adult systems do not violate equal protection guarantees. In re Chappel, 164 Ohio App. 3d 628 (2005).

RC § 2152.17(F) did not violate defendant's equal protection rights, even though findings similar to those required by RC § 2929.14(E)(4) when sentencing adult offenders to consecutive sentences were not required. The purposes behind the juvenile justice system and the adult justice system were different and juveniles adjudicated delinquent and adults convicted of a crime were not similarly situated groups. In re Joshua R. C., 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 5610, 2005 Ohio 6248, (2005).

Sentence proper

Trial court properly imposed a two-year term of incarceration on defendant, a juvenile, based on a gun specification pursuant to RC § 2152.17(A), as defendant committed a felonious assault with a gun which, if committed by an adult, would have been a felony in violation of RC § 2941.145. Although the exact language of § 2941.145 was not used, defendant was on notice that he was charged with using a deadly weapon in facilitating the offense and that he faced up to three years in prison for that specification. In re Wise, — Ohio App. 3d —, — N.E. 2d —, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 1285, 2007 Ohio 1393, (Mar. 26, 2007).

§ 2152.18 Court not to designate institution; reduction due to days held in detention; documents to be provided to department; notice to school district and principal; notice to victims concerning recovery.

(A) When a juvenile court commits a delinquent child to the custody of the department of youth services pursuant to this chapter, the court shall not designate the specific institution in which the department is to place the child but instead shall specify that the child is to be institutionalized in a secure facility.

(B) When a juvenile court commits a delinquent child to the custody of the department of youth services pursuant to this chapter, the court shall state in the order of commitment the total number of days that the child has been held in detention in connection with the delinquent child complaint upon which the order of commitment is based. The department shall reduce the minimum period of institutionalization that was ordered by both the total number of days that the child has been so held in detention as stated by the court in the order of commitment and the total number of any additional days that the child has been held in detention subsequent to the order of commitment but prior to the transfer of physical custody of the child to the department.

(C)(1) When a juvenile court commits a delinquent child to the custody of the department of youth services pursuant to this chapter, the court shall provide the department with the child's medical records, a copy of the report of any mental examination of the child ordered by the court, the Revised Code section or sections the child violated and the degree of each violation, the warrant to convey the child to the department, a copy of the court's journal entry ordering the commitment of the child to the legal custody of the department, a copy of the arrest record pertaining to the act for which the child was adjudicated a delinquent child, a copy of any victim impact statement pertaining to the act, and any other information concerning the child that the department reasonably requests. The court also shall complete the form for the standard predisposition investigation report that the department furnishes pursuant to section 5139.04 of the Revised Code and provide the department with the completed form.

The department may refuse to accept physical custody of a delinquent child who is committed to the legal custody of the department until the court provides to the department the documents specified in this division. No officer or employee of the department who refuses to accept physical custody of a delinquent child who is committed to the legal custody of the department shall be subject to prosecution or contempt of court for the refusal if the court fails to provide the documents specified in this division at the time the court transfers the physical custody of the child to the department.

(2) Within twenty working days after the department of youth services receives physical custody of a delinquent child from a juvenile court, the court shall provide the department with a certified copy of the child's birth certificate and the child's social security number or, if the court made all reasonable efforts to obtain the information but was unsuccessful, with documentation of the efforts it made to obtain the information.

(3) If an officer is preparing pursuant to section 2947.06 or 2951.03 of the Revised Code or Criminal Rule 32.2 a presentence investigation report pertaining to a person, the department shall make available to the officer, for use in preparing the report, any records or reports it possesses regarding that person that it received from a juvenile court pursuant to division (C)(1) of this section or that pertain to the treatment of that person after the person was committed to the custody of the department as a delinquent child.

(D)(1) Within ten days after an adjudication that a child is a delinquent child, the court shall give written notice of the adjudication to the superintendent of a city, local, exempted village, or joint vocational school district, and to the principal of the school the child attends, if the basis of the adjudication was the commission of an act that would be a criminal offense if committed by an adult, if the act was committed by the delinquent child when the child was fourteen years of age or older, and if the act is any of the following:

(a) An act that would be a felony or an offense of violence if committed by an adult, an act in the commission of which the child used or brandished a firearm, or an act that is a violation of section 2907.06, 2907.07, 2907.08, 2907.09, 2907.24, or 2907.241 [2907.24.1] of the Revised Code and that would be a misdemeanor if committed by an adult;

(b) A violation of section 2923.12 of the Revised Code or of a substantially similar municipal ordinance that would be a misdemeanor if committed by an adult and that was committed on property owned or controlled by, or at an activity held under the auspices of, the board of education of that school district;

(c) A violation of division (A) of section 2925.03 or 2925.11 of the Revised Code that would be a misdemeanor if committed by an adult; that was committed on property owned or controlled by, or at an activity held under the auspices of, the board of education of that school district, and that is not a minor drug possession offense;

(d) An act that would be a criminal offense if committed by an adult and that results in serious physical harm to persons or serious physical harm to property while the child is at school, on any other property owned or controlled by the board, or at an interscholastic competition, an extracurricular event, or any other school program or activity;

(e) Complicity in any violation described in division (D)(1)(a), (b), (c), or (d) of this section that was alleged to have been committed in the manner described in division (D)(1)(a), (b), (c), or (d) of this section, regardless of whether the act of complicity was committed on property owned or controlled by, or at an activity held under the auspices of, the board of education of that school district.

(2) The notice given pursuant to division (D)(1) of this section shall include the name of the child who was adjudicated to be a delinquent child, the child's age at the time the child committed the act that was the basis of the adjudication, and identification of the violation of the law or ordinance that was the basis of the adjudication.

(3) Within fourteen days after committing a delinquent child to the custody of the department of youth services, the court shall give notice to the school attended by the child of the child's commitment by sending to that school a copy of the court's journal entry ordering the commitment. As soon as possible after receipt of the notice described in this division, the school shall provide the department with the child's school transcript. However, the department shall not refuse to accept a child committed to it, and a child committed to it shall not be held in a county or district detention facility, because of a school's failure to provide the school transcript that it is required to provide under this division.

(4) Within fourteen days after discharging or releasing a child from an institution under its control, the department of youth services shall provide the court and the superintendent of the school district in which the child is entitled to attend school under section 3313.64 or 3313.65 of the Revised Code with the following:

- (a) An updated copy of the child's school transcript;
- (b) A report outlining the child's behavior in school while in the custody of the department;
- (c) The child's current individualized education program, as defined in section 3323.01 of the Revised Code, if such a program has been developed for the child;
- (d) A summary of the institutional record of the child's behavior.

The department also shall provide the court with a copy of any portion of the child's institutional record that the court specifically requests, within five working days of the request.

(E) At any hearing at which a child is adjudicated a delinquent child or as soon as possible after the hearing, the court shall notify all victims of the delinquent act who may be entitled to a recovery under any of the following sections of the right of the victims to recover, pursuant to section 3109.09 of the Revised Code, compensatory damages from the child's parents; of the right of the victims to recover, pursuant to section 3109.10 of the Revised Code, compensatory damages from the child's parents for willful and malicious assaults committed by the child; and of the right of the victims to recover an award of reparations pursuant to sections 2743.51 to 2743.72 of the Revised Code.

HISTORY: 148 v S 179, § 3 (Eff 1-1-2002); 149 v H 247 (Eff 5-30-2002); 149 v H 393, Eff 7-5-2002; 150 v H 106, § 1, eff. 9-16-04.

The provisions of § 7, H.B. 106 (150 v —) read as follows:

SECTION 7. Section 2152.18 of the Revised Code is presented in this act as a composite of the section as amended by both Sub. H.B. 247 and Sub. H.B. 393 of the 124th General Assembly. The General Assembly, applying the principle stated in division (B) of section 1.52 of the Revised Code that amendments are to be harmonized if reasonably capable of simultaneous operation, finds that the composite is the resulting version of the section in effect prior to the effective date of the section as presented in this act.

Effect of Amendments

150 v H 106, effective September 16, 2004, rewrote (D)(4).

CASE NOTES AND OAG

Credit for days held in detention

Although the trial court was correct in not awarding credit for the time that defendant, a juvenile, was at the treatment and rehabilitation facility for treatment, it erred by failing to credit defendant for the time that he served after the guardian ad litem filed a motion for a further dispositional hearing, which was essentially a probation revocation hearing. In re Kiser, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 5905, 2006 Ohio 5970, (2006).

Record reflected that defendant's detention from August 9, 2005 to October 24, 2005 was in connection with the complaint for which she was committed to the Ohio Department of Youth Services in October 2005. Therefore, defendant should have been credited with 142 days of pre-adjudication detention, pursuant to RC § 2152.18(B); defendant had only been credited with 63 of the 142 days of detention credit she was entitled to receive. In re T.J., 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 4329, 2006 Ohio 4406, (2006).

Former RC § 2151.355(F)(6) (now RC § 2152.18(B)) required a juvenile court to grant credit toward a delinquent child's commitment to the department of youth services for time served by the child in a rehabilitation or treatment facility only if the time was served awaiting the adjudication or disposition of, or execution of a final court order in connection with, the delinquency complaint or a related charge of a probation violation: In re Thomas, 100 Ohio St. 3d 89, 796 N.E.2d 908, 2003 Ohio 5162, (2003).

§ 2152.19 Additional orders of disposition; motor vehicle license suspension; victim restitution, impact statement; truancy warnings; searches.

Effective until 1-1-08.

(A) If a child is adjudicated a delinquent child, the court may make any of the following orders of disposition, in addition to any other disposition authorized or required by this chapter:

(1) Any order that is authorized by section 2151.353 [2151.35.3] of the Revised Code for the care and protection of an abused, neglected, or dependent child;

(2) Commit the child to the temporary custody of any school, camp, institution, or other facility operated for the care of delinquent children by the county, by a district organized under section 2152.41 or 2151.65 of the Revised Code, or by a private agency or organization, within or without the state, that is authorized and qualified to provide the care, treatment, or placement required, including, but not limited to, a school, camp, or facility operated under section 2151.65 of the Revised Code;

(3) Place the child in a detention facility or district detention facility operated under section 2152.41 of the Revised Code, for up to ninety days;

(4) Place the child on community control under any sanctions, services, and conditions that the court prescribes. As a condition of community control in every case and in addition to any other condition that it imposes upon the child, the court shall require the child to abide by the law during the period of community control. As referred to in this division, community control includes, but is not limited to, the following sanctions and conditions:

(a) A period of basic probation supervision in which the child is required to maintain contact with a person appointed to supervise the child in accordance with sanctions imposed by the court;

(b) A period of intensive probation supervision in which the child is required to maintain frequent contact with a person appointed by the court to supervise the child while the child is seeking or maintaining employment and participating in training, education, and treatment programs as the order of disposition;

(c) A period of day reporting in which the child is required each day to report to and leave a center or another approved reporting location at specified times in order to participate in work, education or training, treatment, and other approved programs at the center or outside the center;

(d) A period of community service of up to five hundred hours for an act that would be a felony or a misdemeanor of the first degree if committed by an adult, up to two hundred hours for an act that would be a misdemeanor of the second, third, or fourth degree if committed by an adult, or up to thirty hours for an act that would be a minor misdemeanor if committed by an adult;

(e) A requirement that the child obtain a high school diploma, a certificate of high school equivalence, vocational training, or employment;

(f) A period of drug and alcohol use monitoring;
(g) A requirement of alcohol or drug assessment or counseling, or a period in an alcohol or drug treatment program with a level of security for the child as determined necessary by the court;

(h) A period in which the court orders the child to observe a curfew that may involve daytime or evening hours;

(i) A requirement that the child serve monitored time;
(j) A period of house arrest without electronic monitoring or continuous alcohol monitoring;

(k) A period of electronic monitoring or continuous alcohol monitoring without house arrest, or house arrest with electronic monitoring or continuous alcohol monitoring or both electronic monitoring and continuous alcohol monitoring, that does not exceed the maximum sentence of imprisonment that could be imposed upon an adult who commits the same act.

A period of house arrest with electronic monitoring or continuous alcohol monitoring or both electronic monitoring and continuous alcohol monitoring, imposed under this division shall not extend beyond the child's twenty-first birthday. If a court imposes a period of house arrest with electronic monitoring or continuous alcohol monitoring or both electronic monitoring and continuous alcohol monitoring, upon a child under this division, it shall require the child: to remain in the child's home or other specified premises for the entire period of house arrest with electronic monitoring or continuous alcohol monitoring or both except when the court permits the child to leave those premises to go to school or to other specified premises. Regarding electronic monitoring, the court also shall require the child to be monitored by a central system that can determine the child's location at designated times; to report periodically to a person designated by the court; and to enter into a written contract with the court agreeing to comply with all requirements imposed by the court, agreeing to pay any fee imposed by the court for the costs of the house arrest with electronic monitoring, and agreeing to waive the right to receive credit for any time served on house arrest with electronic monitoring toward the period of any other dispositional order imposed upon the child if the child violates any of the requirements of the dispositional order of house arrest with electronic monitoring. The court also may impose other reasonable requirements upon the child.

Unless ordered by the court, a child shall not receive credit for any time served on house arrest with electronic monitoring or continuous alcohol monitoring or both toward any other dispositional order imposed upon the child for the act for which was imposed the dispositional order of house arrest with electronic monitoring or continuous alcohol monitoring. As used in this division and division (A)(4)(I) of this section, "continuous alcohol monitoring" has the same meaning as in section 2929.01 of the Revised Code.

(l) A suspension of the driver's license, probationary driver's license, or temporary instruction permit issued to the child for a period of time prescribed by the court, or a suspension of the registration of all motor vehicles registered in the name of the child for a period of time prescribed by the court. A child whose license or permit is so suspended is ineligible for issuance of a license or permit during the period of suspension. At the end of the period of suspension, the child shall not be reissued a license or permit until the child has paid any applicable reinstatement fee and complied with all requirements governing license reinstatement.

(5) Commit the child to the custody of the court;

(6) Require the child to not be absent without legitimate excuse from the public school the child is supposed to attend for five or more consecutive days, seven or more school days in one school month, or twelve or more school days in a school year;

(7)(a) If a child is adjudicated a delinquent child for being a chronic truant or an habitual truant who previously has been adjudicated an unruly child for being a habitual truant, do either or both of the following:

(i) Require the child to participate in a truancy prevention mediation program;

(ii) Make any order of disposition as authorized by this section, except that the court shall not commit the child to a facility described in division (A)(2) or (3) of this section unless the court determines that the child violated a lawful court order made pursuant to division (C)(1)(e) of section 2151.354 [2151.35.4] of the Revised Code or division (A)(6) of this section.

(b) If a child is adjudicated a delinquent child for being a chronic truant or a habitual truant who previously has been adjudicated an unruly child for being a habitual truant and the court determines that the parent, guardian, or other person having care of the child has failed to cause the child's attendance at school in violation of section 3321.38 of the Revised Code, do either or both of the following:

(i) Require the parent, guardian, or other person having care of the child to participate in a truancy prevention mediation program;

(ii) Require the parent, guardian, or other person having care of the child to participate in any community service program, preferably a community service program that requires the involvement of the parent, guardian, or other person having care of the child in the school attended by the child.

(8) Make any further disposition that the court finds proper, except that the child shall not be placed in any of the following:

(a) A state correctional institution, a county, multi-county, or municipal jail or workhouse, or another place in which an adult convicted of a crime, under arrest, or charged with a crime is held;

(b) A community corrections facility, if the child would be covered by the definition of public safety beds for purposes of sections 5139.41 to 5139.43 of the Revised Code if the court exercised its authority to commit the child to the legal custody of the department of youth services for institutionalization or institutionalization in a secure facility pursuant to this chapter.

(B) If a child is adjudicated a delinquent child, in addition to any order of disposition made under division (A) of this section, the court, in the following situations and for the specified periods of time, shall suspend the child's temporary instruction permit, restricted license, probationary driver's license, or nonresident operating privilege, or suspend the child's ability to obtain such a permit:

(1) If the child is adjudicated a delinquent child for violating section 2923.122 [2923.12.2] of the Revised Code, impose a class four suspension of the child's license, permit, or privilege from the range specified in division (A)(4) of section 4510.02 of the Revised Code or deny the child the issuance of a license or permit in accordance with division (F)(1) of section 2923.122 [2923.12.2] of the Revised Code.

(2) If the child is adjudicated a delinquent child for committing an act that if committed by an adult would be a drug abuse offense or for violating division (B) of section 2917.11 of the Revised Code, suspend the child's license, permit, or privilege for a period of time prescribed by the court. The court, in its discretion, may terminate the suspension if the child attends and satisfactorily completes a drug abuse or alcohol abuse education, intervention, or treatment program specified by the court. During the time the child is attending a program described in this division, the court shall retain the child's temporary instruction permit, probationary driver's license, or driver's license, and the court shall return the permit or license if it terminates the suspension as described in this division.

(C) The court may establish a victim-offender mediation program in which victims and their offenders meet to discuss the offense and suggest possible restitution. If the court obtains the assent of the victim of the delinquent act committed by the child, the court may require the child to participate in the program.

(D)(1) If a child is adjudicated a delinquent child for committing an act that would be a felony if committed by an adult and if the child caused, attempted to cause, threatened to cause, or created a risk of physical harm to the victim of the act, the court, prior to issuing an order of disposition under this section, shall order the preparation of a victim impact statement by the probation department of the county in which the victim of the act resides, by the court's own probation department, or by a victim assistance program that is operated by the state, a county, a municipal corporation, or another governmental entity. The court shall consider the victim impact statement in determining the order of disposition to issue for the child.

(2) Each victim impact statement shall identify the victim of the act for which the child was adjudicated a delinquent child, itemize any economic loss suffered by the victim as a result of the act, identify any physical injury suffered by the victim as a result of the act and the seriousness and permanence of the injury, identify any change in the victim's personal welfare or familial relationships as a result of the act and any psychological impact experienced by the victim or the victim's family as a result of the act, and contain any other information related to the impact of the act upon the victim that the court requires.
